
23:27-28 It was common for Jews to decorate the exteriors of family tombs as a memorial to the deceased, and as a way of marking the presence of the dead so that unaware passersby would not accidently become unclean by contact with the tomb. The description of scribes and Pharisees as whitewashed tombs is a clever metaphor indicating that their pleasant outward appearance conceals inner ugliness and death.

DESTRUCTION OF THE TEMPLE PREDICTED

24 As Jesus left and was going out of the temple, † his disciples † came up and called his attention to its buildings. 2 He replied to them, “Do you see all these things? Truly I tell you, not one stone will be left here on another that will not be thrown down.”

SIGNS OF THE END OF THE AGE

3 While he was sitting on the Mount of Olives, the disciples approached him privately and said, “Tell us, when will these things happen? And what is the sign of your coming and of the end of the age?” †

4 Jesus replied to them: “Watch out that no one deceives † you. 5 For many will come in my name, saying, ‘I am the Messiah,’ and they will deceive many. † 6 You are going to hear of wars and rumors of wars. See that you are not alarmed, because these things must take place, but the end is not yet. 7 For nation will rise up against nation, and kingdom against kingdom. There will be famines † † and earthquakes in various places. † 8 All these events are the beginning of labor pains. †

PERSECUTIONS PREDICTED

9 “Then they will hand you over to be persecuted, and they will kill you. You will be hated by all nations because of my name. † 10 Then many will fall away, betray one another, and hate one another. 11 Many false prophets † will rise up and deceive many. 12 Because lawlessness † will multiply, the love of many will grow cold. 13 But the one who endures to the end will be saved. 14 This good news of the kingdom will be proclaimed in all the world † as a testimony to all nations, † and then the end will come. †

THE GREAT TRIBULATION

15 “So when you see the abomination of desolation, † spoken of by the prophet Daniel, † standing in the holy place” † (let the reader understand), 16 “then those in Judea must flee to the mountains. 17 A man on the housetop † must not come down to get things out of his house, † 18 and a man in the field must not go back to get his coat. 19 Woe to pregnant women and nursing mothers in those days! 20 Pray that your escape may not be in winter or on a Sabbath. 21 For at that time there will be great distress, † † the kind that hasn’t taken place from the beginning of the world until now and never will again.
22 Unless those days were cut short, no one would † be saved. But those days will be cut short because of the elect. †

23 “If anyone tells you then, ‘See, here is the Messiah! ’ † or, ‘Over here! ’ do not believe it. † 24 For false messiahs and false prophets will arise and perform great signs and wonders to lead astray, † if possible, even the elect. 25 Take note: I have told you in advance. 26 So if they tell you, ‘See, he’s in the wilderness! ’ don’t go out; or, ‘See, he’s in the storerooms! ’ do not believe it. 27 For as the lightning comes from the east and flashes as far as the west, so will be the coming of the Son of Man. † 28 Wherever the carcass is, there the vultures † will gather. †

THE COMING OF THE SON OF MAN

29 “Immediately after the distress † of those days, the sun will be darkened, and the moon will not shed its light; the stars will fall from the sky, and the powers of the heavens will be shaken. 30 Then the sign of the Son of Man will appear in the sky, and then all the peoples of the earth † will mourn; † and they will see the Son of Man coming on the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. † 31 He will send out his angels with a loud trumpet, † and they will gather his elect from the four winds, † from one end of the sky to the other.

THE PARABLE OF THE FIG TREE

32 “Learn this lesson † from the fig tree: As soon as its branch becomes tender and sprouts leaves, you know that summer is near. 33 In the same way, when you see all these things, recognize † that he † is near — at the door. † 34 Truly I tell you, this generation will certainly not pass away until all these things take place. † 35 Heaven and earth will pass away, † but my words will never pass away. †

NO ONE KNOWS THE DAY OR HOUR

36 “Now concerning that day and hour no one knows — neither the angels of heaven nor the Son † — except the Father alone. † 37 As the days of Noah were, so the coming of the Son of Man will be. 38 For in those days before the flood they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day Noah boarded the ark. † 39 They didn’t know until the flood came and swept them all away. This is the way the coming of the Son of Man will be. 40 Then two men will be in the field; one will be taken and one left. 41 Two women will be grinding grain with a hand mill; one will be taken and one left. † 42 Therefore be alert, since you don’t know what day † your Lord is coming. †

43 But know this: If the homeowner had known what time † the thief was coming, he would have stayed alert and not let his house be broken into. † 44 This is why you are also to be ready, because the Son of Man is coming at an hour you do not expect. †

FAITHFUL SERVICE TO CHRIST

45 "Who then is a faithful and wise servant, † whom his master has put in charge of his household, to give them food at the proper time? † 46 Blessed is that servant whom the master finds doing his job when he comes. † 47 Truly I tell you, he will put him in charge of all his possessions. 48 But if that wicked servant says in his heart, 'My master is delayed,' 49 and starts to beat his fellow servants, and eats and drinks with drunkards, † 50 that servant's master will come on a day he does not expect him and at an hour he does not know. 51 He will cut him to pieces and assign him a place with the hypocrites, where there will be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

24:15 The temple in Jerusalem had suffered a long history of desecrations and violence (e.g., as perpetrated against it by Nebuchadnezzar in 587 BC and Antiochus Epiphanes in 167 BC). Within a decade of Jesus's crucifixion, Roman Emperor Caligula tried to set up an image of himself in the Jerusalem temple (ca AD 40). Jesus quotes from the prophet Daniel in order to warn his disciples to be watchful for the desecration Daniel prophesied (Dn 9:27); desecrations such as those seen in Israel's history, only much worse. This would be among the signs marking the end of the age.

24:29-31 Jesus's listeners would have closely associated the destruction of Jerusalem and the temple with the end of the world, but Jesus appears to be using the impending disaster—the razing of Jerusalem and temple by the Romans in AD 70—to indicate what the last days will be like. By verse 29, Jesus appears to be no longer talking about historical events near to his own time but is speaking eschatologically about the end of the age and his second coming.

24:34 Because Jesus spoke prophetically of events in the near and distant future, the word generation must be understood in that context. The near future upheaval that the followers of Jesus would face—persecution, war, destruction at the hands of the Romans (vv. 1-28)—were but signs of the coming tribulation of those days (v. 29). Jesus's contemporary generation would see all of these signs come to pass, as Jesus said, and would be assured that his words were true.

THE PARABLE OF THE TEN VIRGINS

25 "At that time the kingdom of heaven will be like ten virgins † who took their lamps † and went out to meet the groom. † 2 Five of them were foolish and five were wise. † 3 When the foolish took their lamps, they didn't take oil with them; 4 but the wise ones took oil in their flasks with their lamps. 5 When the groom was delayed, they all became drowsy and fell asleep.
6 "In the middle of the night there was a shout: 'Here's the groom! Come out to meet him.'
7 "Then all the virgins got up and trimmed their lamps. 8 The foolish ones said to the wise ones, 'Give us some of your oil, because our lamps are going out.' 9 "The wise ones answered, 'No, there won't be enough for us and for you. Go instead to those who sell oil, and buy some for yourselves.'
10 "When they had gone to buy some, the groom arrived, and those who were ready went in with him to the wedding banquet, and the door was shut. † 11 Later the rest of the virgins also came and said, 'Master, master, open up for us! '
12 "He replied, 'Truly I tell you, I don't know you! '
13 "Therefore be alert, because you don't know either the day or the hour. †

THE PARABLE OF THE TALENTS

14 "For it is just like a man about to go on a journey. † He called his own servants and entrusted his possessions to them. 15 To one he gave five talents, † to another two talents, and to another one talent, depending on each one's ability.

Then he went on a journey. † Immediately 16 the man who had received five talents went, put them to work, and earned five more. 17 In the same way the man with two earned two more. 18 But the man who had received one talent went off, dug a hole in the ground, and hid his master's money.
19 "After a long time the master of those servants came and settled accounts with them. 20 The man who had received five talents approached, presented five more talents, and said, 'Master, you gave me five talents. See, I've earned five more talents.'
21 "His master said to him, 'Well done, good and faithful servant! You were faithful over a few things; I will put you in charge of many things. Share your master's joy.' †
22 "The man with two talents also approached. He said, 'Master, you gave me two talents. See, I've earned two more talents.' 23 "His master said to him, 'Well done, good and faithful servant! You were faithful over a few things; I will put you in charge of many things. Share your master's joy.'
24 "The man who had received one talent also approached and said, 'Master, I know you. You're a harsh man, reaping where you haven't sown and gathering where you haven't scattered seed. † 25 So I was afraid and went off and hid your talent in the ground. See, you have what is yours.'
26 "His master replied to him, 'You evil, lazy servant! † If you knew that I reap where I haven't sown and gather where I haven't scattered, 27 then † you should have deposited my money with the bankers, and I would have received my money † back with interest when I returned.
28 " 'So take the talent from him and give it to the one who has ten talents.
29 For to everyone who has, more will be given, and he will have more than enough. But from the one who does not have, even what he has will be taken away from him. † 30 And throw this good-for-nothing servant into the outer darkness, † where there will be weeping and gnashing of teeth.'

THE SHEEP AND THE GOATS

31 "When the Son of Man comes in his glory, and all the angels † † with him, then he will sit on his glorious throne. † 32 All the nations † † will be gathered before him, and he will separate them one from another, just as a shepherd separates the sheep from the goats. † 33 He will put the sheep on his right and the goats on the left. 34 Then the King will say to those on his right, 'Come, you who are blessed by my Father; inherit the kingdom † prepared for you from the foundation of the world. †

35 " 'For I was hungry and you gave me something to eat; I was thirsty and you gave me something to drink; I was a stranger and you took me in; 36 I was naked and you clothed me; I was sick and you took care of me; I was in prison and you visited me.' †

37 "Then the righteous will answer him, 'Lord, when did we see you hungry and feed you, or thirsty and give you something to drink? 38 When did we see you a stranger and take you in, or without clothes and clothe you? 39 When did we see you sick, or in prison, and visit you? '

40 "And the King will answer them, 'Truly I tell you, whatever you did for one of the least of these brothers and sisters of mine, you did for me.' †

41 "Then he will also say to those on the left, 'Depart from me, you who are cursed, into the eternal fire prepared for the devil and his angels! † 42 For I was hungry and you gave me nothing to eat; I was thirsty and you gave me nothing to drink; 43 I was a stranger and you didn't take me in; I was naked and you didn't clothe me, sick and in prison and you didn't take care of me.'

44 "Then they too will answer, 'Lord, when did we see you hungry, or thirsty, or a stranger, or without clothes, or sick, or in prison, and not help you? '

45 "Then he will answer them, 'Truly I tell you, whatever you did not do for one of the least of these, you did not do for me.' †

46 "And they will go away into eternal punishment, but the righteous into eternal life." †

25:1-13 Jesus instructs his disciples to be alert, watching for the signs that will precede and introduce the end of the age described in Matthew 24. Jesus compares watchful disciples to wise bridesmaids (lit virgins), who are prepared and waiting for the wedding processional of the groom so the formal wedding celebration can begin.

THE PLOT TO KILL JESUS

26 When Jesus had finished saying all these things, † he told his disciples, 2 "You know † that the Passover takes place after two days, and the Son of Man will be handed over to be crucified." † 3 Then the chief priests † and the elders of the people assembled in the courtyard of the high priest, who was named Caiaphas, † 4 and they conspired to arrest Jesus in a treacherous way and kill him. † 5 "Not during the festival," they said, "so there won't be rioting among the people."

THE ANOINTING AT BETHANY

6 While Jesus was in Bethany at the house of Simon † the leper, † 7 a woman approached him with an alabaster jar of very expensive perfume. She poured it on his head as he was reclining at the table. 8 When the disciples † saw it, they were indignant. "Why this waste?" they asked. 9 "This might have been sold for a great deal and given to the poor." 10 Aware of this, Jesus said to them, "Why are you bothering this woman? She has done a noble thing for me. 11 You always have the poor with you, but you do not always have me. † 12 By pouring this perfume on my body, she has prepared me for burial. 13 Truly I tell you, wherever this gospel † is proclaimed in the whole world, what she has done will also be told in memory of her." 14 Then † one of the Twelve, the man called Judas Iscariot, went to the chief priests † 15 and said, "What are you willing to give me if I hand him over to you?" So they weighed out thirty pieces of silver for him. † 16 And from that time he started looking for a good opportunity to betray him.

BETRAYAL AT THE PASSOVER

17 On the first day of Unleavened Bread † the disciples came to Jesus and asked, “Where do you want us to make preparations for you to eat the Passover? ”
18 “Go into the city to a certain man,” he said, “and tell him, ‘The Teacher says:
My time is near; I am celebrating the Passover at your place † with my disciples.’ ” † 19 So the disciples did as Jesus had directed them and prepared the Passover. 20 When evening came, he was reclining at the table with the Twelve. 21 While they were eating, he said, “Truly I tell you, one of you will betray me.” †
22 Deeply distressed, each one began to say to him, “Surely not I, Lord? ” 23 He replied, “The one who dipped his hand with me in the bowl — he will betray me. 24 The Son of Man will go just as it is written about him, † but woe to that man by whom the Son of Man is betrayed! It would have been better for him if he had not been born.”
25 Judas, his betrayer, replied, “Surely not I, Rabbi? ” †
“You have said it,” he told him.

THE FIRST LORD’S SUPPER

26 As they were eating, † Jesus took bread, blessed and broke it, gave it to the disciples, † and said, “Take and eat it; this is my body.” † 27 Then he took a cup, and after giving thanks, he gave it to them and said, “Drink from it, all of you. 28 For this is my blood of the covenant, † which is poured out for many for the forgiveness of sins. † 29 But I tell you, I will not drink from this fruit of the vine from now on until that day when I drink it new with you in my Father’s kingdom.” † 30 After singing a hymn, they went out to the Mount of Olives. †

PETER’S DENIAL PREDICTED

31 Then Jesus said to them, “Tonight all of you will fall away because of me, for it is written:
I will strike the shepherd,
and the sheep of the flock will be scattered. † †
32 But after I have risen, I will go ahead of you to Galilee.” †

33 Peter told him, “Even if everyone falls away because of you, I will never fall away.”
34 “Truly I tell you,” Jesus said to him, “tonight, before the rooster crows, you will deny me three times.” † 35 “Even if I have to die with you,” Peter told him, “I will never deny you,” and all the disciples said the same thing.

THE PRAYER IN THE GARDEN

36 Then Jesus came with them to a place called Gethsemane, † and he told the disciples, “Sit here while I go over there and pray.” 37 Taking along Peter and the two sons of Zebedee, he began to be sorrowful and troubled. † 38 He said to them, “I am deeply grieved † to the point of death. Remain here and stay awake with me.” † 39 Going a little farther, † he fell facedown and prayed, “My Father, if it is possible, let this cup pass from me. Yet not as I will, but as you will.” † 40 Then he came to the disciples and found them sleeping. He asked Peter, “So, couldn’t you stay awake with me one hour? 41 Stay awake and pray, so that you won’t enter into temptation. The spirit is willing, but the flesh is weak.” 42 Again, a second time, he went away and prayed, “My Father, if this † cannot pass † unless I drink it, your will be done.” † 43 And he came again and found them sleeping, because they could not keep their eyes open.
44 After leaving them, he went away again and prayed a third time, saying the same thing once more. 45 Then he came to the disciples and said to them, “Are you still sleeping and resting? See, the time is near. The Son of Man is betrayed into the hands of sinners. † 46 Get up; let’s go. See, my betrayer is near.”

JUDAS’S BETRAYAL OF JESUS

47 While he was still speaking, Judas, one of the Twelve, suddenly arrived. † A large mob with swords and clubs was with him from the chief priests and elders of the people. 48 His betrayer had given them a sign: “The one I kiss, he’s the one; arrest him.” 49 So immediately he went up to Jesus and said, “Greetings, Rabbi! ” and kissed him.
50 “Friend,” † Jesus asked him, “why have you come? ” †

Then they came up, took hold of Jesus, and arrested him. 51 At that moment one of those with Jesus reached out his hand and drew his sword. He struck the high priest's servant and cut off his ear. † 52 Then Jesus told him, "Put your sword back in its place because all who take up the sword will perish by the sword. † 53 Or do you think that I cannot call on my Father, and he will provide me here and now with more than twelve legions of angels? † 54 How, then, would the Scriptures be fulfilled † that say it must happen this way? " 55 At that time Jesus said to the crowds, "Have you come out with swords and clubs, as if I were a criminal, † to capture me? Every day I used to sit, teaching in the temple, and you didn't arrest me. † 56 But all this has happened so that the writings of the prophets † would be fulfilled." Then all the disciples † deserted him and ran away.

JESUS FACES THE SANHEDRIN

57 Those † who had arrested Jesus led him away to Caiaphas † the high priest, where the scribes and the elders had convened. 58 Peter was following him at a distance right to the high priest's courtyard. He went in and was sitting with the servants to see the outcome. † 59 The chief priests and the whole Sanhedrin were looking for false testimony against Jesus so that they could put him to death, † 60 but they could not find any, even though many false witnesses † came forward. † Finally, two † who came forward 61 stated, "This man said, 'I can destroy the temple of God † and rebuild it in three days.' " 62 The high priest stood up and said to him, "Don't you have an answer to what these men are testifying against you? " 63 But † Jesus kept silent. † The high priest said to him, "I charge you under oath † by the living God: Tell us if you are the Messiah, the Son of God." † 64 "You have said it," Jesus told him. "But I tell you, in the future † you will see the Son of Man seated at the right hand of Power and coming on the clouds of heaven." † †

65 Then the high priest tore his robes and said, “He has blasphemed! † Why do we still need witnesses? See, now you’ve heard the blasphemy. † 66 What is your decision? ”

They answered, “He deserves death! ” † 67 Then they spat in his face † and beat him; others slapped him 68 and said, “Prophesy to us, Messiah! Who was it that hit you? ” †

PETER DENIES HIS LORD

69 Now Peter was sitting outside in the courtyard. † A servant girl approached him and said, “You were with Jesus the Galilean too.”

70 But he denied it in front of everyone: “I don’t know what you’re talking about.”

71 When he had gone out to the gateway, another woman saw him and told those who were there, “This man was with Jesus the Nazarene! ” †

72 And again he denied it with an oath: † “I don’t know the man! ”

73 After a little while those standing there approached and said to Peter, “You really are one of them, since even your accent † gives you away.”

74 Then he started to curse and to swear with an oath, “I don’t know the man! ” Immediately a rooster crowed, 75 and Peter remembered the words Jesus had spoken, “Before the rooster crows, you will deny me three times.” † And he went outside and wept bitterly.

26:2 Passover was the feast in which Israel commemorated God's rescue of his people from the judgment of death (Ex 12:1-28) and slavery in Egypt (Ex 12:29-42). The Passover lamb was killed on the fourteenth day of Nisan. After sunset, which marked the beginning of the next day according to Jewish timekeeping, the Passover meal was eaten. Jesus probably spoke these words on Tuesday, celebrating Passover on Thursday, shortly before his arrest.

26:7 The woman was probably a servant or member of the household. It was customary for guests to be given a little oil for their heads to refresh them with pleasant fragrance. This woman, however, pours extremely valuable perfume on Jesus's head, out of her devotion to him. The disciples are shocked and disapprove. Jesus, however, commends her for her devotion, identifying her sacrificial act with his impending death and burial (v. 12).

26:26-30 Jesus uses the traditional Passover formulas to teach his disciples the significance of his impending death. Jesus interprets the elements of the Passover ritual with reference to himself. The bread and cup of wine symbolize his body and blood, the sacrificial death of the Messiah for the forgiveness of sins. Just as God allowed a lamb to die in the place of the captive firstborn of every Hebrew household in Egypt (Ex 12:1-28), so God allows the Messiah to die in the place of all who rely on his blood, so that they might be rescued from spiritual death.

26:55-56 Sending an armed mob to arrest a man late in the evening, essentially in secret, and then holding court in the middle of the night, was highly irregular. But apparently the Pharisees and elders did it because of their fear of the messianic fervor in Jerusalem (see the note at 21:6-11). They did not anticipate how quickly the crowds would turn on Jesus once it was clear he was not the type of messiah they were expecting. Jesus indicates, however, that everything has happened this way so that the writings of the prophets would be fulfilled.

JESUS HANDED OVER TO PILATE

27 When daybreak came, all the chief priests and the elders of the people plotted against Jesus to put him to death. † 2 After tying him up, they led him away and handed him over to Pilate, † the governor. †

JUDAS HANGS HIMSELF

3 Then Judas, his betrayer, seeing that Jesus had been condemned, was full of remorse and returned the thirty pieces of silver to the chief priests and elders. †

4 “I have sinned by betraying innocent blood,” he said.
“What’s that to us? ” they said. “See to it yourself! ” 5 So he threw the silver into the temple † and departed. Then he went and hanged himself.
6 The chief priests took the silver and said, “It’s not permitted † to put it into the temple treasury, since it is blood money.” 7 They conferred together and bought the potter’s field with it as a burial place for foreigners. 8 Therefore that field has been called “Blood Field” to this day. 9 Then what was spoken through the prophet Jeremiah was fulfilled: They took † the thirty pieces of silver, the price of him whose price was set by the Israelites, 10 and they gave † them for the potter’s field, as the Lord directed me. † †

JESUS FACES THE GOVERNOR

11 Now Jesus stood before the governor. † “Are you the King of the Jews? ” the governor asked him.
Jesus answered, “You say so.” † 12 While he was being accused by the chief priests and elders, he didn’t answer. †
13 Then Pilate said to him, “Don’t you hear how much they are testifying against you? ” 14 But he didn’t answer him on even one charge, so that the governor was quite amazed. †

JESUS OR BARABBAS

15 At the festival † the governor’s custom was to release to the crowd a prisoner they wanted. 16 At that time they had a notorious prisoner called Barabbas. †
17 So when they had gathered together, Pilate said to them, “Who is it you want me to release for you — Barabbas, or Jesus who is called Christ? ” † 18 For he knew it was because of envy that they had handed him over.
19 While he was sitting on the judge’s bench, his wife sent word to him, “Have nothing to do with that righteous man, for today I’ve suffered terribly in a dream because of him.” †
20 The chief priests and the elders, however, persuaded the crowds to ask for Barabbas and to execute Jesus. 21 The governor asked them, “Which of the two do you want me to release for you? ”
“Barabbas! ” they answered.

22 Pilate asked them, “What should I do then with Jesus, who is called Christ? ”
They all answered, “Crucify him! ” †
23 Then he said, “Why? What has he done wrong? ”
But they kept shouting all the more, “Crucify him! ” †
24 When Pilate saw that he was getting nowhere, but that a riot was starting instead, he took some water, washed his hands in front of the crowd, and said, “I am innocent of this man’s blood. † See to it yourselves! ” †
25 All the people answered, “His blood be on us † and on our children! ”
26 Then he released Barabbas to them and, after having Jesus flogged, handed him over to be crucified. †

MOCKED BY THE MILITARY

27 Then † the governor’s soldiers took Jesus into the governor’s residence and gathered the whole company † around him. † 28 They stripped him and dressed him in a scarlet robe. † 29 They twisted together a crown of thorns, put it on his head, and placed a staff in his right hand. And they knelt down before him and mocked him: “Hail, King of the Jews! ” 30 Then they spat on him, took the staff, and kept hitting him on the head. 31 After they had mocked him, they stripped him of the robe, put his own clothes on him, and led him away to crucify him. †

CRUCIFIED BETWEEN TWO CRIMINALS

32 As they were going out, they found a Cyrenian man named Simon. They forced him to carry his cross. † 33 When they came to a place called Golgotha † (which means Place of the Skull), 34 they gave him wine † mixed with gall to drink. But when he tasted it, he refused to drink it. 35 After crucifying him, they divided his clothes by casting lots. † † 36 Then they sat down and were guarding him there. 37 Above his head they put up the charge against him in writing: THIS IS JESUS, THE KING OF THE JEWS.
38 Then two criminals † were crucified with him, one on the right and one on the left. † 39 Those who passed by were yelling insults at † him, shaking their heads † 40 and saying, “You who would destroy the temple and rebuild it in three days, save yourself! If you are the Son of God, come down from the cross!” † 41 In the same way the chief priests, with the scribes and elders, † mocked him and said, 42 “He saved others, but he cannot save himself! He is the King of Israel! † Let him † come down now from the cross, and we will believe in him. 43 He trusts in God; let God rescue him now — if he takes pleasure in him! † For he said, ‘I am the Son of God.’ ” 44 In the same way even the criminals who were crucified with him taunted him. †

THE DEATH OF JESUS

45 From noon until three in the afternoon † darkness came over the whole land. † † 46 About three in the afternoon Jesus cried out with a loud voice, “Elí, Elí, lemá † sabachtháni?” that is, “My God, my God, why have you abandoned me?” † † 47 When some of those standing there heard this, they said, “He’s calling for Elijah.”
48 Immediately one of them ran and got a sponge, filled it with sour wine, put it on a stick, and offered him a drink. † 49 But the rest said, “Let’s see if Elijah comes to save him.”
50 But Jesus cried out again with a loud voice and gave up his spirit. † 51 Suddenly, the curtain of the sanctuary † was torn in two from top to bottom, the earth quaked, and the rocks were split. 52 The tombs were also opened † and many bodies of the saints who had fallen asleep were raised. 53 And they came out of the tombs after his resurrection, entered the holy city, and appeared to many.
54 When the centurion and those with him, who were keeping watch over Jesus, saw the earthquake and the things that had happened, they were terrified and said, “Truly this man was the Son of God! ” † 55 Many women who had followed Jesus from Galilee and looked after him were there, watching from a distance. †

GOD’S PURPOSES IN A

CHRISTIAN'S PARTICIPATION IN MISSIONS

Perhaps you've heard the story of the young William Carey? In 1792, this shoe cobbler and pastor of a small church in the midlands of England wrote an inquiry and made a plea for the pastors in his region to send missionaries into the world. Carey publicly challenged his senior colleagues to mobilize their churches to go and disciple the nations. One of the leading pastors in that assembly cut Carey off, by saying, "Young man, sit down! You are an enthusiast. When God pleases to convert the heathen, he'll do it without consulting you or me."

Today William Carey is known as the "father of modern missions." He led a movement that lasted over a hundred years and laid Christian foundations around the world. Yet, the older colleague's question reflected a dominant worldview that haunts the church to this day. How dare Carey think that God needed or even wanted him to participate in his mission? Indeed, what kind of God needs people to carry out his work in the world?

GOD'S MISSION

Carey discovered the biblical worldview of the mission of God as he read his Bible. He was overwhelmed with the reality that God's mission was for "all the peoples on earth [to] be blessed" (Gn 12:3-4), that God would be renown among all nations. This, in fact, is the theme of the Bible. It's the central agenda behind the church, the reason for Christianity.

But what did God mean when he said all peoples would be blessed? Over and over again in Scripture God explained this blessing to Israel. He promised Israel that if they followed him, he would walk among them and be their God (Lv 26:12). Yet Israel never really understood this agenda. God delayed his wrath on Israel in order to be glorified (Is 48:11), repeatedly reminding Israel that his mission for them was bigger than themselves. He said, "It is not enough for you to be my servant raising up the tribes of Jacob and restoring the protected ones of Israel. I will also make you a light for the nations, to be my salvation to the ends of the earth" (Is 49:6). But the worldview of Israel's citizens was stuck because the people focused only on themselves. How ironic that God still used them to shine the light of Jesus the Messiah on the Gentiles.

Young Carey was right. He understood the true meaning of the good news about Jesus. God's greatest desire is to be known by all peoples, even the entire creation—including "the rulers and authorities in the heavens" (Eph 3:10). The most amazing thing about this mission of God is that he uses his followers, the church, to participate in and carry out the mission.

Like the ancient Israelites, Carey's generation was self-centered about God's mission. In their minds, God had finished his Great Commission by their day. The call of Jesus to disciple all nations was not for them. After all, they had enough of their own problems to deal with. Sending their best disciples to the ends of the earth to minister the gospel to the uncivilized "heathen" was not on their agenda. William Carey's worldview, by contrast, was transformed by the Bible. He captured God's agenda and the reality that we cannot opt out of serving in God's mission to the nations.

But do we share in this mission today? Or could it be that we too have adopted a self-centered version of a biblical worldview, like Israel and like Carey's colleagues? Have we replaced God's mission to be known and worshiped by his creation with a goal of making ourselves happy, successful, and fulfilled?

THE BASICS

What are the basics concerning God's mission? The root of the Latin term missio means "sending" or "to send." What begins in Genesis 1 with God sending the Creator (Jn 1:3) and Spirit (Gn 1:1-2) continues throughout Scripture as one sending of God after another. God sends Abraham to Canaan to establish the nation of Israel (Gn 12). The OT is the story of God's mission through Israel that culminates with the sending of God himself through Immanuel—God with us (Is 7:14; Mt 1:23). The NT is the story of Jesus establishing the church and the Holy Spirit sending the church on mission to the nations. In Revelation we see the mission accomplished on that final day when the Lamb of God is worshiped among all peoples. This is the mission of God—past, present, and future—as revealed in his Word. The Bible teaches us about God's mission and where we fit in it.

Whose mission is it? It is God's mission. He is the One who accomplishes the mission. The Bible is his revelation to us.

What is this mission of God? It is a blessing for all peoples. Revelation 5:9 indicates it is for "every tribe and language and people and nation." This is the "mystery" that the apostle Paul speaks of frequently. The God of Abraham is the God of all peoples, of all creation (Eph 3:3-6,10)!

Why is this the mission of God? Because God desires to be . . . no, God will be worshiped and praised among all nations. God's name will be hallowed; he will be famous; his kingdom will come (Mt 6:9-10); and he will be glorified (Is 48:11). The reason for the mission to all peoples is God's glory.

How does God accomplish his mission? God sends (e.g., Gn 1:27; 3:23,8-9; 11:8; 12:2; Ex 6:7). God loves by sending his Son (Jn 3:16). He compels us to love him (Mt 22:37-38). And he expects us to love each other (22:39). Yes, God's mission is all about God's love.

God's mission strategy is people-to-people. He is a relational God who works relationally, and we are created in his image. There is no place for the lone-ranger Christian in God's mission. From the beginning, it has been a people-to-people mission. God worked in the past through Abraham and his physical descendants (Gn 12:2-3); remarkably, he works in the present through Abraham's spiritual descendants (Gl 3:7,29; Eph 3:6)—the church (Eph 3:10)—and in the end he will continue to work through worshipers from all nations for eternity (Rv 7:9). God accomplishes his mission through people.

What is the primary task of this mission of God? Discipling. In the well-known commission text, Matthew 28:18-20, God directs us toward this task. We are to disciple all nations; that is, we are to teach all nations to become followers of Jesus. Right there in the same command he tells us how. Jesus says we enlist them into the community of faith by "teaching" and "baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit" (vv. 19-20). We introduce them to Jesus. We engage them into fellowship with Jesus. We proclaim the good news, the gospel, and they join us in following Jesus. But we do not stop there. We teach them not simply the teachings of Jesus, but how to obey them. To wholeheartedly follow everything he commanded. This is the primary task of the mission of God. Teaching each other to obey.

How can we do this among all nations? By following God's plan, his strategy for multiplication. We can no longer simply rely on priests to serve in a single temple in Jerusalem or employ pastors to perform the ministry of established churches. We must equip all believers to do the work of the mission of God through the church. Yes, some will be called as equippers to train church members to do the mission (Eph 4:11-12); but all are called to be witnesses (Ac 1:8) and disciple makers (Mt 28:18-20).

THE BIBLICAL WORLDVIEW

God's Word from Genesis to Revelation is the story of God conducting his mission. It reveals a biblical worldview, God's worldview, of his mission and our role in it. When William Carey read the Bible in 1792, he could not escape the reality that God commands all believers to participate in his global mission. This is God's intent. It is not a sign of a weak God who needs us. It is the reality of a sovereign God who demands for us to serve alongside him. This is for his glory, not ours. Yes, we are blessed when we embrace this mission of God. He becomes our God, we become his people, and we serve his mission. It doesn't get any better than that.

there, facing the tomb.

THE CLOSELY GUARDED TOMB

62 The next day, which followed the preparation day, the chief priests and the Pharisees gathered before Pilate † 63 and said, "Sir, we remember that while this deceiver was still alive he said, 'After three days I will rise again.' † 64 So stone and placing the guard. †

27:11-13 Throughout his trials, Jesus is selective as to who and what charges he answers. He affirms to the Sanhedrin that he is Messiah, the Son of God (26:63-64), and he confesses to Pilate that he is the King of the Jews. Jesus, however, never answers any of the false accusations made against him; he remains silent. Jesus knows that his mission is to die for the sins of the world. He is not seeking to exonerate himself or escape his fate. Though innocent, he accepts the treatment of a guilty man so that he can die on the cross for a guilty world.

27:15-18 The custom of releasing a prisoner on a holy day, or in the midst of a festival, was common in ancient Rome. Unlike modern governmental pardons, it had little to do with guilt or innocence. The practice was intended to placate the nations that Rome occupied. Pilate attempts to steer the crowd toward freeing Jesus because he knows that Jesus was arrested because of envy.

27:28-29 Roman soldiers in Jerusalem liked to mock condemned prisoners, especially revolutionaries, by dressing them as kings and offering false homage. Since Jesus had been charged as King of the Jews, he was an easy target of the soldiers' mockery.

27:35 Crucifixion was a means of execution designed to expose victims to shame and humiliation. It was a viciously cruel practice in which various positions were used to maximize the torture. Death was caused by loss of blood, exposure, exhaustion, and suffocation. Victims often took days to die, leading ancient writers to regard crucifixion as the most barbaric punishment practiced by the Romans.

RESURRECTION MORNING

28 After the Sabbath, † as the first day of the week was dawning, Mary Magdalene and the other Mary went to view the tomb. 2 There was a violent earthquake, because an angel of the Lord descended from heaven and approached the tomb. He rolled back the stone and was sitting on it. † 3 His appearance was like lightning, and his clothing was as white as snow. † 4 The guards were so shaken by fear of him that they became like dead men.
5 The angel told the women, "Don't be afraid, because I know you are looking for Jesus who was crucified. † 6 He is not here. For he has risen, just as he said.
Come and see the place where he lay. † 7 Then go quickly and tell his disciples, † 'He has risen from the dead and indeed he is going ahead of you to Galilee; you will see him there.' Listen, I have told you." † 8 So, departing quickly from the tomb with fear and great joy, they ran to tell his disciples the news. 9 Just then † Jesus met them and said, "Greetings!" They came up, took hold of his feet, and worshiped him. † 10 Then Jesus told them, "Do not be afraid. Go and tell my brothers to leave for Galilee, and they will see me there." †

THE SOLDIERS BRIBED TO LIE

11 As they were on their way, some of the guards came into the city and reported to the chief priests everything that had happened. 12 After the priests † had assembled with the elders and agreed on a plan, they gave the soldiers a large sum of money 13 and told them, "Say this, 'His disciples came during the night and stole him while we were sleeping.' 14 If this reaches the governor's ears, we will deal with † him and keep you out of trouble." † 15 They took the money and did as they were instructed, and this story has been spread among Jewish people to this day. †

THE GREAT COMMISSION

16 The eleven disciples traveled to Galilee, to the mountain where Jesus had directed them. † 17 When they saw him, they worshiped, † but some doubted. 18 Jesus came near and said to them, "All authority has been given to me in heaven and on earth. † 19 Go, therefore, and make disciples † of † all nations, † baptizing † them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit, 20 teaching them to observe everything I have commanded you. And remember, † I am with you always, † to the end of the age." †

28:16-20 Matthew concludes his Gospel with the Great Commission. He has already highlighted stories about Gentiles to whom God has revealed the good news of the Messiah (e.g., 2:1-12; 8:5-13; 15:21-28), and now Jesus instructs his followers to continue that work in a deliberate fashion. He commands them to take the good news to the nations, to the ends of the earth. This represents a radical movement in the overarching story of the Bible. No longer will God's covenant relationship be solely with Israel, but he will bless all who respond to Jesus in repentance and faith. MARK

INTRODUCTION

Mark's Gospel emphasizes actions and deeds. Jesus is on the go—healing, casting out demons, performing miracles, hurrying from place to place, and teaching. In Mark everything happens "immediately." As soon as one episode ends, another begins. The rapid pace slows down when Jesus enters Jerusalem (11:1). Thereafter, events are marked by days, and his final day by hours.

CIRCUMSTANCES OF WRITING

AUTHOR: The Gospel of Mark is anonymous. Eusebius, the early church historian, writing in AD 326, preserved the words of Papias, an early church father. Papias quoted "the elder," probably John, as saying that Mark recorded Peter's preaching about the things Jesus said and did, but not in order. Thus, Mark was considered the author of this Gospel even in the first century.

The Mark who wrote this Gospel was John Mark, the son of a widow named Mary, in whose house the church in Jerusalem sometimes gathered (Ac 12:12-17) and where Jesus possibly ate the Last Supper with his disciples. Mark was the cousin of Barnabas (Col 4:10), and he accompanied Barnabas and Paul back to Antioch after their famine relief mission to Jerusalem (Ac 12:25). Mark next went with Barnabas and Paul on part of the first missionary journey as an assistant (Ac 13:5), but at Perga, Mark turned back (Ac 13:13).

When the apostle Peter wrote to the churches in Asia Minor shortly before his martyrdom, he sent greetings from Mark, whom he called "my son" (1Pt 5:13). Then shortly before his execution, Paul asked Timothy to "Bring Mark with you, for he is useful to me in the ministry" (2Tm 4:11). After Paul's execution, Mark is said to have moved to Egypt, established churches, and served them in Alexandria (Eusebius, Eccl. Hist., 2:16). Some have suggested the young man in Mark 14:51-52 was Mark himself.

BACKGROUND: According to the early church fathers, Mark wrote his Gospel in Rome just before or just after Peter's martyrdom. Further confirmation of the Roman origin of Mark's Gospel is found in Mark 15:21 where Mark noted that Simon, a Cyrenian who carried Jesus's cross, was the father of Alexander and Rufus, men apparently known to the believers in Rome.

Because Mark wrote primarily for Roman Gentiles, he explained Jewish customs, translated Aramaic words and phrases into Greek, used Latin terms rather than their Greek equivalents, and rarely quoted from the OT. Most Bible scholars are convinced that Mark was the earliest Gospel and served as one of the sources for Matthew and Luke.

CONTRIBUTION TO THE BIBLE

Many concepts of the Messiah existed in Jesus's day, and several individuals laid claim to the title. What Mark contributes is a clarification of the concept of Messiah and a redefining of the term. Peter's insightful confession at Caesarea Philippi in 8:29 became the turning point at which Jesus began to explain that the divine conception of the Messiah involved rejection, suffering, death, and then resurrection (8:31). Mark also shows us the human side of Jesus. In fact, more than the other Gospel writers, Mark emphasizes Jesus's human side and his emotions. Thus Mark gives us a strong picture of both the humanity and the divinity of Jesus.

STRUCTURE

Mark's Gospel begins with a Prologue (1:1-13), which is then followed by three major sections. The first (1:14–8:21) tells of Jesus's Galilean ministry. There Jesus healed and cast out demons and worked miracles. The second section (8:22–10:52) is transitional. Jesus began his journey that would take him to Jerusalem. The final section (11:1–16:8) involves a week in Jerusalem. From the time Jesus entered the city he was at odds with the religious leaders, who quickly brought about his execution. A brief appendix (16:9-20) in which some of Jesus's appearances, his commissioning of his disciples, and his ascension are recorded is attached to the Gospel.

CHRISTIAN WORLDVIEW ELEMENTS

TEACHINGS ABOUT GOD

Jesus emphasized God as "your Father" in this Gospel. He is also the Father of Jesus, and from his opening words Mark declared Jesus to be "the Son of God" (1:1). The Holy Spirit is present, empowering Jesus's ministry and mission. This is seen especially in his triumph over every unholy spirit.

TEACHINGS ABOUT HUMANITY

Jesus encountered both the sick and the sinful in this Gospel. He healed the sick and forgave the sinful. Multitudes (at the feeding of the five thousand and the triumphal entry) and small groups (the apostles) were transformed by Jesus. Yet other large crowds (at Jesus's trial and crucifixion) and small groups (Jewish religious leaders) utterly rejected him. Mark emphasized that humans could not remain neutral about Jesus. They had to decide either for him or against him.

TEACHINGS ABOUT SALVATION

A higher percentage of this book is given over to the events of Jesus's suffering and death than any other Bible book. By quoting the three times that Jesus predicted his death, Mark emphasized the necessity of the cross, that he "must" die (8:31; 9:31; 10:33). At the Last Supper, Jesus explained his death was as a substitute: "for many" (14:24).

THE MESSIAH’S HERALD

1 The beginning † of the gospel † of Jesus Christ, the Son of God. † †
2 As it is written in Isaiah † the prophet: † †

See, I am sending my messenger † ahead of you; he will prepare your way. † † †

3 A voice of one crying out in the wilderness: † Prepare the way for the Lord; †
make his paths straight! † †

4 John came baptizing † † in the wilderness † and proclaiming a baptism of repentance † for the forgiveness † of sins. † 5 The whole Judean countryside and all the people of Jerusalem † were going out to him, and they were baptized by him in the Jordan † River, confessing † their sins. † 6 John wore a camel-hair garment with a leather belt around his waist and ate locusts † and wild honey. †

7 He proclaimed, “One who is more powerful † than I am is coming after me. † I am not worthy † to stoop down and untie the strap of his sandals. † 8 I baptize you with † water, † but he will baptize you with the Holy Spirit.” †

THE BAPTISM OF JESUS

9 In † those days Jesus came from Nazareth † in Galilee † and was baptized in the Jordan by John. 10 As soon as he came up out of the water, he saw the heavens † being torn open and the Spirit descending on him like a dove. 11 And a voice † came from heaven: † "You are my beloved † Son; † with you I am well-pleased." †

THE TEMPTATION OF JESUS

12 Immediately † the Spirit † drove † him into the wilderness. † 13 He was in the wilderness forty days, being tempted † by Satan. † He was with the wild animals, † and the angels † were serving him.

MINISTRY IN GALILEE

14 After † John was arrested, † Jesus went to Galilee, † proclaiming † the good news † † † of God: † 15 "The time † is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God † has come † near. † Repent † and believe † the good news! "

THE FIRST DISCIPLES

16 As † he passed alongside the Sea of Galilee, † he saw Simon † and Andrew, † Simon's brother, casting a net into the sea † — for they were fishermen. 17 "Follow me," † Jesus told them, "and I will make you fish for † † people." † 18 Immediately they left their nets and followed † him. † 19 Going on a little farther, he saw James † the son of Zebedee † and his brother John † in a boat putting their nets in order. 20 Immediately he called them, and they left their father Zebedee in the boat with the hired men and followed him. †

DRIVING OUT AN UNCLEAN SPIRIT

21 They † went into Capernaum, † and right away he entered the synagogue † on the Sabbath † and began to teach. † 22 They were astonished † at his teaching † because he was teaching them as one who had authority, and not like the scribes.

23 Just then a man with an unclean † spirit † was in their synagogue. † He cried out, 24 “What do you have to do with us, Jesus of Nazareth? † Have you come to destroy † us? I know who you are — the Holy † One of God! ” † 25 Jesus rebuked † him saying, “Be silent, † and come out of him! ” 26 And the unclean spirit threw him into convulsions, † shouted with a loud voice, and came out of him.
27 They were all amazed, † and so they began to ask † each other: “What is this? A new teaching † with authority! † † He commands even the unclean † spirits, † and they obey him.” 28 At once the news about him spread throughout the entire vicinity of Galilee. †

HEALINGS AT CAPERNAUM

29 As † soon as they left the synagogue, † they went into Simon † and Andrew’s † house † with James † and John. † 30 Simon’s mother-in-law was lying in bed with a fever, and they told him about her at once. 31 So he went to her, took her by the hand, and raised her up. † The fever † left her, † and she began to serve † them. † 32 When † evening came, after the sun had set, they brought to him all those who were sick † and demon-possessed. † 33 The whole town was assembled at the door, 34 and he healed † many who were sick with various diseases † and drove out † many demons. † And he would not permit the demons to speak, because they knew him. †

PREACHING IN GALILEE

35 Very † early in the morning, while it was still dark, he got up, went out, and made his way to a deserted place; † and there he was praying. † 36 Simon † and his companions searched for him, 37 and when they found him they said, “Everyone is looking for you.”
38 And he said to them, “Let’s go on to the neighboring villages so that I may preach † there too. This is why I have come.”

A MAN CLEANSED

39 He went into all of Galilee, † preaching in their synagogues † and driving out demons. 40 Then † a man with leprosy † † came to him and, on his knees, † † begged him: “If you are willing, you can make me clean.” † 41 Moved with compassion, † † Jesus reached out his hand and touched † him.
“I am willing,” he told him. “Be made clean.” 42 Immediately the leprosy † left him, and he was made clean. 43 Then he sternly warned † him and sent him away † at once, 44 telling him, “See that you say nothing to anyone; † but go and show † yourself to the priest, † and offer † what Moses commanded for your cleansing, † as a testimony † to them.” † 45 Yet he went out and began to proclaim † it widely and to spread the news, † with the result that Jesus could no longer enter a town openly. But he was out in deserted places, and they came to him from everywhere.

1:1 Mark introduces his writing as the gospel of Jesus Christ, the Son of God. Here gospel (Gk euangelion, "good news") refers to the message concerning Jesus. Jesus (Gk Iesous), the Greek equivalent of the Hebrew name Joshua (Hb Yehoshua), was a common name in first-century Palestine. The designation Christ (i.e., "messiah," "anointed one") is a formal title applied to Jesus rather than an actual name given by his parents (8:29; 9:41; 12:35; 13:21; 14:61; 15:32). Son of God serves as the main theological theme of this Gospel. Ancient writers often introduced the main theme of their works in the beginning, as does Mark. He also emphasizes this theme through repetition (1:11; 3:11; 5:7; 9:7; 12:6; 13:23; 14:61; 15:39).

1:4-5 John's wilderness ministry prepared people for Jesus's coming (1:2-3,7-8; see also Lk 7:27; Jn 1:29-51). John came baptizing . . . and proclaiming a baptism of repentance for the forgiveness of sins. Repentance involves a change of mind in regard to one's sins that results in a change of behavior (Lk 15:17-21; 19:8). John's ministry resulted in people from rural and urban settings flocking to him, confessing their sins. Western culture's view of people as basically good contrasts sharply with Mark's presentation of the human condition. Jesus will also call sinners to repent (Mk 1:15).

1:7 From John's perspective, Jesus is so great that he (John) is not worthy to perform a task commonly reserved for slaves in ancient times—that of removing their master's sandals.

1:15 Mark summarizes the content of Jesus's preaching: The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God has come near. Repent and believe the good news! The kingdom of God, the central theme of Jesus's teaching, refers to the rule or reign of God. The kingdom has arrived in the person of Jesus.

1:17 Jesus's command to Simon and Andrew to follow him was unique, for Jewish students typically chose the rabbi they would study under. Furthermore, Jesus's announcement that he will make [them] fish for people would have called to mind OT texts that portray God as one who fishes for people for the purpose of judgment (e.g., Jr 16:16; Ezk 29:4-5; 38:4; Am 4:2; Hab 1:14-17). The context of 1:17 presents the image of fishing in more positive terms—that is, for salvation.

1:23-28 Mark's Gospel contains several examples of exorcism (1:34,39; 5:1-20; 9:14-29). Jesus, rather than the exorcised spirits, is always the focus of such stories. Here Jesus cleanses a man with an unclean spirit. According to the OT, uncleanness causes people to be unfit for God's presence. But Jesus has come to purify the unclean.

1:35-36 Jesus prayed in a deserted place early in the morning, while it was still dark. Mark's Gospel records Jesus at prayer on two other occasions, after the feeding of the five thousand (6:46) and in the garden of Gethsemane (13:32-42). Though possessing great power and authority, Jesus was dependent on God the Father.

1:40-45 After healing a man with leprosy, Jesus sends him to the priest. The man is to offer what Moses commanded for [his] cleansing (see Lv 14:2-31). Jesus's intent in sending the man to the priest is to have him pronounced clean so he can be reinstituted into society, as a testimony to them.

THE SON OF MAN FORGIVES AND HEALS

2 When † he entered Capernaum † again after some days, it was reported that he was at home. 2 So many people gathered together that there was no more room, not even in the doorway, and he was speaking the word † to them. 3 They came to him bringing a paralytic, † carried by four of them.

4 Since they were not able to bring him to † Jesus because of the crowd, they removed the roof above him, and after digging through it, they lowered the mat on which the paralytic was lying. 5 Seeing their faith, † Jesus told the paralytic, "Son, your sins † are forgiven." †

6 But some of the scribes † were sitting there, questioning † in their hearts:
7 "Why does he speak like this? He's blaspheming! † Who can forgive † sins † but God alone? " †

8 Right away † Jesus perceived in his spirit † that they were thinking like this within themselves and said to them, "Why are you thinking these things in your hearts? 9 Which is easier: † to say to the paralytic, † 'Your sins are forgiven,' or to say, 'Get up, take your mat, and walk'? † 10 But so that you may know that the Son of Man † has authority † on earth to forgive sins" † — he told the paralytic — 11 "I tell you: get up, † take your mat, and go home."
12 Immediately he got up, took the mat, and went out in front of everyone. As a result, they were all astounded † and gave glory † to God, † saying, "We have never seen anything like this! " †

THE CALL OF LEVI

13 Jesus † went out again beside the sea. The whole crowd was coming to him, and he was teaching † them. 14 Then, passing by, he saw Levi † the son of Alphaeus sitting at the toll booth, † and he said to him, "Follow me," † and he got up and followed † him.

15 While he was reclining at the table in Levi's house, many tax collectors † and sinners † were eating † with Jesus and his disciples, for there were many who were following him. 16 When the scribes † who were Pharisees † † saw that he was eating † with sinners † and tax collectors, † they asked his disciples, "Why does he eat † with tax collectors and sinners? "

17 When Jesus heard this, he told them, "It is not those who are well who need † a doctor, † but those who are sick. † I didn't come to call the righteous, † but sinners." †

A QUESTION ABOUT FASTING

18 Now † John's † disciples † and the Pharisees † † were fasting. † People came and asked him, "Why do John's disciples and the Pharisees' disciples fast, but your disciples do not fast? "

19 Jesus said to them, "The wedding guests cannot fast while the groom † is with them, can they? As long as they have the groom with them, they cannot fast. 20 But the time † will come † when the groom will be taken away from them, † and then they will fast † on that day. 21 No one sews a patch of unshrunk cloth on an old garment. Otherwise, the new patch pulls away from the old cloth, † and a worse tear is made. 22 And no one puts new wine † into old wineskins. Otherwise, the wine will burst † the skins, and the wine is lost as well as the skins. No, new wine is put into fresh wineskins."

LORD OF THE SABBATH

23 On † the Sabbath he was going through the grainfields, and his disciples † began to make their way, picking some heads of grain. 24 The Pharisees † said to him, "Look, why are they doing what is not lawful † on the Sabbath? "

25 He said to them, "Have you never read what David † and those who were with him did when he was in need † and hungry † — 26 how he entered the house of God in the time of Abiathar † the high priest † and ate the bread of the Presence † — which is not lawful for anyone to eat except the priests † — and also gave some to his companions? " 27 Then he told them, "The Sabbath was made for † man and not man for the Sabbath. † 28 So then, the Son of Man † is Lord † even of the Sabbath." †

2:10 Jesus employed the title Son of Man to describe himself more often than any other name. While its OT background is clear (Dn 7:13-14), Jesus's hearers did not seem to make the connection. This may be because the term can simply refer to a human (cp. Ezk 2:1; 3:1). Jesus may have used the title's ambiguous meaning in order to conceal his identity.

2:18-22 Just as no one puts on a sad face at a wedding, so no one sews a patch of unshrunk cloth on an old garment and no one puts new wine into old wineskins. It would be inappropriate for Jesus's disciples to fast while he was with them. The presence of the Messiah is, rather, a time to celebrate. There will, however, come a day when the Messiah will be taken away from them. Then temporary mourning and fasting will be appropriate.

3 Jesus † entered the synagogue † again, and a man was there who had a shriveled † hand. 2 In order to accuse † him, they were watching him closely † to see whether he would heal † him on the Sabbath. † 3 He told the man with the shriveled hand, "Stand before us." 4 Then he said to them, "Is it lawful † to do good † on the Sabbath or to do evil, † to save life † or to kill?" † But they were silent. † 5 After looking around at them with anger, † he was grieved at the hardness † of their hearts and told the man, "Stretch out your hand." So he stretched it out, and his hand was restored. † 6 Immediately the Pharisees † went out and started plotting † with the Herodians † against him, how they might kill † him.

MINISTERING TO THE MULTITUDE

7 Jesus † departed with his disciples to the sea, and a large crowd followed from Galilee, † and a large crowd followed from Judea, † 8 Jerusalem, † Idumea, beyond the Jordan, † and around Tyre † and Sidon. † The large crowd came to him because they heard about everything he was doing. 9 Then he told his disciples to have a small boat † ready for him, so that the crowd wouldn't crush him. 10 Since he had healed † many, all who had diseases were pressing toward him to touch † him. 11 Whenever the unclean † spirits † saw him, they fell down † before him and cried out, “You are the Son of God!” † 12 And he would strongly warn † them not to make him known. †

THE TWELVE APOSTLES

13 Jesus † went up the mountain † and summoned those he wanted, and they came to him. 14 He appointed twelve, whom he also named apostles, † † to be with him, to send them out to preach, † 15 and to have authority to † drive out demons. 16 He appointed the Twelve: † † To Simon, † he gave the name Peter; † 17 and to James † the son of Zebedee, † and to his brother John, † he gave the name “Boanerges” (that is, “Sons of Thunder” †); 18 Andrew; † Philip † and Bartholomew; Matthew † and Thomas; † James the son of Alphaeus, and Thaddaeus; Simon the Zealot, 19 and Judas Iscariot, † who also betrayed him.

A HOUSE DIVIDED

20 Jesus entered a house, and the crowd gathered again so that they were not even able to eat. † 21 When his family † heard this, they set out to restrain him, because they said, “He’s out of his mind.” †

22 The scribes † who had come down from Jerusalem said, “He is possessed by Beelzebul,” † and, “He drives out † demons † by the ruler † of the demons.” †

23 So he summoned † them and spoke to them in parables: † “How can Satan † drive out Satan? † 24 If a kingdom † is divided against itself, that kingdom cannot stand. 25 If a house is divided against itself, that house cannot stand. 26 And if Satan opposes himself and is divided, he cannot stand but is finished. 27 But no one can enter a strong man’s house and plunder his possessions unless he first ties up † the strong man. Then he can plunder his house.

28 “Truly I tell you, people will be forgiven for all sins and whatever blasphemies † they utter. 29 But whoever blasphemes † against the Holy Spirit never has forgiveness, † but is guilty † of an eternal sin” † † — 30 because they were saying, “He has an unclean spirit.” †

3:22 The scribes attribute Jesus's power to Beelzebul, the ruler of the demons (described as the prince of demons in the Testament of Solomon 2:9–4:2). Beelzebul is an alternative name for Satan (v. 23). The name, as used by Mark, is not found in the OT, and scholars do not know its origin. It may be a deliberate corruption of the name of a Philistine deity.

3:23 The parable was a common teaching tool used in many ancient cultures. Approximately thirty-five percent of Jesus's teaching in the Synoptic Gospels is expressed in parabolic form. A parable makes comparisons and draws contrasts. It may be defined as "an expanded analogy used to convince and persuade" (Klyne Snodgrass, Stories with Intent, 9).

3:31-35 Jesus's comments about his true family would have caught the attention of his listeners. In first-century Judaism, one's ties to his biological family were regarded as the strongest of bonds. Jesus realigns loyalties according to those who do the will of God.

THE PARABLE OF THE SOWER

4 Again † he began to teach † by the sea, and a very large crowd gathered around him. So he got into a boat on the sea and sat down, while the whole crowd was by the sea on the shore. 2 He taught them many things in parables, † and in his teaching † he said to them: 3 "Listen!
Consider the sower who went out to sow. † 4 As he sowed, some seed fell along the path, † and the birds came and devoured † it. 5 Other seed fell on rocky ground where it didn't have much soil, and it grew up quickly, † since the soil wasn't deep. 6 When the sun came up, it was scorched, and since it had no root, it withered away. † 7 Other seed fell among thorns, and the thorns came up and choked it, and it didn't produce fruit. 8 Still other seed fell on good ground and it grew up, producing fruit that increased † thirty, sixty, and a hundred times." † 9 Then he said, "Let anyone who has ears to hear listen." †

WHY JESUS USED PARABLES

10 When he was alone, those around him with the Twelve, † asked him about the parables. † 11 He answered them, "The secret † of the kingdom of God † has been given to you, but to those outside, † everything comes in parables 12 so that they may indeed look,

and yet not perceive;
they may indeed listen, and yet not understand; † otherwise, they might turn back and be forgiven." † † †

THE PARABLE OF THE SOWER EXPLAINED

13 Then † he said to them: "Don't you understand this parable? † How then will you understand all of the parables? 14 The sower sows † the word. † 15 Some are like the word sown on the path. † When they hear, immediately Satan † comes and takes away the word † sown in them. † 16 And others are like seed sown on rocky ground. When they hear the word, immediately they receive it with joy. † 17 But they have no root; they are short-lived. When distress † or persecution comes because of the word, they immediately fall away. † 18 Others are like seed sown among thorns; these are the ones who hear the word, 19 but the worries † of this age, † the deceitfulness † † of wealth, † and the desires † for other things enter in and choke the word, and it becomes unfruitful. † 20 And those like seed sown on good ground hear the word, † welcome it, and produce fruit † thirty, sixty, and a hundred times what was sown."

USING YOUR LIGHT

21 He † also said to them, "Is a lamp brought in to be put under a basket or under a bed? † Isn't it to be put on a lampstand? † 22 For there is nothing hidden that will not be revealed, † and nothing concealed that will not be brought to light. 23 If anyone has ears to hear, let him listen." † 24 And he said to them, "Pay attention to what you hear. By the measure † you use, † it will be measured to you — and more will be added † to you. 25 For whoever has, more will be given to him, and whoever does not have, even what he has will be taken away from him." †

THE PARABLE OF THE GROWING SEED

26 "The kingdom of God † is like this," he said. "A man scatters seed on the ground. 27 He sleeps † and rises † night † and day; the seed sprouts and grows, although he doesn't know how. 28 The soil produces a crop † by itself — first the blade, then the head, and then the full grain † on the head. 29 As soon as the crop is ready, he sends for the sickle, † because the harvest † has come."

THE PARABLE OF THE MUSTARD SEED

30 And † he said, "With what can we compare the kingdom of God, † or what parable † can we use to describe it? 31 It's like a mustard seed † that, when sown upon the soil, is the smallest of all the seeds on the ground. 32 And when sown, † it comes up and grows taller than all the garden plants, † and produces large branches, so that the birds of the sky † can nest in its shade."

USING PARABLES

USING PARABLES

33 He was speaking the word † to them with many parables † like these, as they were able to understand. † 34 He did not speak to them without a parable. Privately, however, he explained everything to his own disciples. †

WIND AND WAVE OBEY JESUS

35 On † that day, when evening had come, he told them, "Let's cross over to the other side of the sea." 36 So they left the crowd and took him along since he was in the boat. And other boats were with him. 37 A great windstorm † arose, and the waves † were breaking over the boat, so that the boat was already being swamped. 38 He was in the stern, sleeping † on the cushion. So they woke him up † and said to him, "Teacher! Don't you care that we're going to die?" †

39 He got up, rebuked † the wind, and said to the sea, "Silence! † Be still!" The wind ceased, and there was a great calm. 40 Then he said to them, "Why are you afraid? † Do you still have no faith?"

41 And they were terrified † † and asked one another, "Who then is this? Even the wind and the sea obey † him!" †

4:10-12 Drawing on the prophet Isaiah, Jesus explains a key reason why he taught in parables—to hide kingdom truth from those outside it (see also Mt 13:10-15; Lk 8:9-10). Thus, parables are used to give those who understand yet more understanding, while those who do not understand remain unenlightened.

DEMONS DRIVEN OUT BY JESUS

5 They † came to the other side of the sea, to the region of the Gerasenes. † 2 As soon as he got out of the boat, a man with an unclean † spirit † came out of the tombs † and met him. 3 He lived in the tombs, † and no one was able to restrain him anymore — not even with a chain † — 4 because he often had been bound with shackles and chains, but had torn the chains apart and smashed † the shackles. No one was strong enough to subdue † him. 5 Night † and day among the tombs † and on the mountains, † he was always crying out and cutting himself with stones.

6 When he saw Jesus from a distance, he ran and knelt down before him. 7 And he cried out with a loud voice, "What do you have to do with me, Jesus, Son † of the Most High God? † I beg you before God, don't torment † me! " 8 For he had told him, "Come out of the man, you unclean † spirit! " †

9 "What is your name? " he asked him.

"My name is Legion," † he answered him, "because we are many." 10 And he begged him earnestly not to send them out of the region.

11 A large herd of pigs † was there, feeding † on the hillside. 12 The demons † begged him, "Send us to the pigs, so that we may enter them." 13 So he gave them permission, and the unclean † spirits † came out and entered the pigs. The herd of about two thousand rushed down the steep bank into the sea and drowned there.

14 The men who tended them † ran off † and reported it in the town and the countryside, and people went to see what had happened. 15 They came to Jesus and saw the man who had been demon-possessed, † † sitting there, dressed and in his right mind; † and they were afraid. † 16 Those who had seen it described to them what had happened to the demon-possessed † man and told about the pigs. 17 Then they began to beg him to leave their region.

18 As he was getting into the boat, the man who had been demon-possessed begged him earnestly that he might remain with him. 19 Jesus did not let him but told him, "Go home to your own people, and report to them how much the Lord † has done † for you and how he has had mercy on you." 20 So he went out and began to proclaim † in the Decapolis † how much Jesus had done for him, and they were all amazed. †

A GIRL RESTORED AND A WOMAN HEALED

21 When † Jesus had crossed over again by boat † to the other side, a large crowd † gathered around him while he was by the sea. 22 One of the synagogue leaders, named Jairus, † came, and when he saw Jesus, he fell at his feet †
23 and begged him earnestly, "My little daughter is dying. Come and lay your hands on † her so that she can get well † † and live." 24 So Jesus went with him, and a large crowd was following and pressing against him.

25 Now a woman suffering from bleeding † for twelve years 26 had endured † much under many doctors. † She had spent everything she had and was not helped at all. On the contrary, she became worse. 27 Having heard about Jesus, she came up behind him in the crowd and touched † his clothing. † 28 For she said, "If I just touch his clothes, I'll be made well." † 29 Instantly her flow of blood ceased, and she sensed in her body that she was healed † of her affliction.

30 At once Jesus realized in himself that power † had gone out from him. He turned around in the crowd † and said, "Who touched my clothes? " †

31 His disciples said to him, "You see the crowd pressing against you, and yet you say, 'Who touched me? ' "

32 But he was looking around to see who had done this. 33 The woman, with fear and trembling, knowing what had happened to her, came and fell down † before him, and told him the whole truth. † 34 "Daughter," he said to her, "your faith † has saved you. † Go in peace and be healed † from your affliction." †

35 While he was still speaking, people came from the synagogue leader's house and said, "Your daughter is dead. Why bother the teacher † anymore? "

36 When Jesus overheard † what was said, he told the synagogue leader, "Don't be afraid. † Only believe." 37 He did not let anyone accompany him except Peter, † James, † and John, † James's brother. 38 They came to the leader's house, and he saw a commotion — people weeping and wailing loudly. 39 He went in and said to them, "Why are you making a commotion and weeping? †

The child † is not dead but asleep." † 40 They laughed at him, but he put them all outside. He took the child's father, † mother, and those who were with him, and entered the place where the child was. 41 Then he took the child † by the hand and said to her, "Talitha koum" † (which is translated, "Little girl, I say to you, get up" †). 42 Immediately the girl got up † and began to walk. † (She was twelve years old.) At this they were utterly astounded. † 43 Then he gave them strict orders that no one should know about this † and told them to give her something to eat.

5:22,35-36 Synagogue leaders served as rulers of a synagogue. They were normally selected from a board of elders—men who guided the activities of the synagogue. The position of synagogue leader was sometimes held for life and passed to one's son. In some synagogues, a leader was merely a figurehead; in others, he played a key role in decision-making.

5:25-26 See "Issues in Medical Ethics," p. 1507.

5:41 That Mark translates the Aramaic command, Talitha koum, for his readers, strongly suggests that he expected Gentile readers (see also 7:34). Additional evidence supporting this idea includes his explanation of certain Jewish religious practices (7:3-4).

REJECTION AT NAZARETH

6 He † left there and came to his hometown, † and his disciples † followed him. 2 When the Sabbath † came, he began to teach † in the synagogue, † and many who heard him were astonished. "Where did this man get these things?” they said. “What is this wisdom † that has been given to him, and how are these miracles † performed by his hands? 3 Isn’t this the carpenter, † the son of Mary, † and the brother of James, † Joses, Judas, † and Simon? And aren’t his sisters here with us?” So they were offended † by him.

4 Jesus said to them, “A prophet † is not without honor † except in his hometown, among his relatives, and in his household.” 5 He was not able to do a miracle † there, except that he laid his hands on † a few sick † people and healed † them. 6 And he was amazed † at their unbelief. † He was going around the villages teaching. †

COMMISSIONING THE TWELVE

7 He † summoned † the Twelve † and began to send † them out in pairs and gave them authority over unclean † spirits. † 8 He instructed them to take nothing for the road except a staff — no bread, no traveling bag, † no money in their belts, 9 but to wear sandals and not put on an extra shirt. † 10 He said to them, “Whenever you enter a house, stay there until you leave that place. 11 If any place does not welcome † you or listen to you, when you leave there, shake the dust off your feet † as a testimony † against them.” † 12 So they went out and preached † that people should repent. † 13 They drove out many demons, † anointed † many sick † people with oil † and healed them. †

JOHN THE BAPTIST BEHEADED

14 King † Herod † heard about it, because Jesus’s name † had become well known. Some † said, “John the Baptist † has been raised from the dead, † and that’s why miraculous powers † are at work † in him.” 15 But others said, “He’s Elijah.” † Still others said, “He’s a prophet, like one of the prophets from long ago.” †

16 When Herod † heard of it, he said, “John, † the one I beheaded, has been raised!” †

17 For † Herod himself had given orders to arrest John and to chain † him in prison on account of Herodias, † his brother Philip's wife, because he had married her. † 18 John had been telling Herod, "It is not lawful † for you to have your brother's wife." † 19 So Herodias held a grudge against him and wanted to kill † him. But she could not, 20 because Herod feared † John and protected him, knowing he was a righteous † and holy † man. When Herod heard him he would be very perplexed, † † and yet he liked to listen to him. †

21 An opportune time came on his birthday, when Herod gave a banquet † for his nobles, † military commanders, † and the leading men of Galilee. †
22 When Herodias's own daughter † came in and danced, † she pleased Herod and his guests. The king said to the girl, "Ask me whatever you want, and I'll give it to you." 23 He promised her with an † oath: † "Whatever you ask me I will give you, up to half my kingdom." † 24 She went out and said to her mother, "What should I ask for? "
"John the Baptist's † head," she said.
25 At once she hurried to the king and said, "I want you to give me John the Baptist's † head on a platter † immediately." 26 Although the king was deeply distressed, † because of his oaths † and the guests † he did not want to refuse † her. 27 The king immediately sent for an executioner and commanded him to bring John's head. So he went and beheaded him in prison, 28 brought his head on a platter, and gave it to the girl. Then the girl gave it to her mother.
29 When John's disciples † heard about it, they came and removed his corpse and placed it in a tomb. †

FEEDING OF THE FIVE THOUSAND

30 The † apostles † gathered around Jesus and reported to him all that they had done and taught. 31 He said to them, "Come away by yourselves to a remote place and rest for a while." For many people were coming and going, and they did not even have time to eat.
32 So they went away in the boat by themselves to a remote place, 33 but many saw them leaving and recognized them, and they ran on foot from all the towns and arrived ahead of them. †

34 When he went ashore, he saw a large crowd and had compassion † on them, because they were like sheep † without a shepherd. Then he began to teach them many things.
35 When it grew late, his disciples † approached him and said, “This place is deserted, † and it is already late. 36 Send them away so that they can go into the surrounding countryside and villages to buy themselves something to eat.”
37 “You give them something to eat,” he responded.
They said to him, “Should we go and buy two hundred denarii † worth of bread and give them something to eat? ” 38 He asked them, “How many loaves do you have? Go and see.”
When they found out they said, “Five, and two fish.” 39 Then he instructed them to have all the people sit down in groups on the green grass. 40 So they sat down in groups of hundreds and fifties. 41 He took the five loaves and the two fish, and looking up to heaven, he blessed and broke the loaves. He kept giving them to his disciples to set before the people. He also divided the two fish among them all. 42 Everyone ate and was satisfied. † 43 They picked up twelve baskets full of pieces of bread and fish. 44 Now those who had eaten the loaves were five thousand men.

WALKING ON THE WATER

45 Immediately † he made his disciples get into the boat and go ahead of him to the other side, to Bethsaida, † while he dismissed the crowd. 46 After he said good-bye to them, he went away to the mountain † to pray. † 47 Well into the night, the boat was in the middle of the sea, and he was alone on the land. 48 He saw them straining † at the oars, † because the wind was against them. Very early in the morning † he came toward them walking on the sea and wanted to pass by them. 49 When they saw him walking on the sea, they thought it was a ghost † and cried out, 50 because they all saw him and were terrified. † Immediately he spoke with them and said, “Have courage! † It is I. † Don’t be afraid.” † 51 Then he got into the boat with them, and the wind ceased. They were completely astounded, 52 because they had not understood about the loaves. Instead, their hearts were hardened. †

MIRACULOUS HEALINGS

53 When they had crossed over, they came to shore at Gennesaret † and anchored there.
54 As they got out of the boat, people immediately recognized him. 55 They hurried throughout that region and began to carry the sick † on mats to wherever they heard he was. 56 Wherever he went, into villages, towns, or the country, they laid the sick in the marketplaces and begged him that they might touch just the end † of his robe. † And everyone who touched it was healed.

6:11 Jews would shake the dust off their feet after returning to Israel from Gentile territory. This could be understood as a prophetic warning to those who do not know the God of Israel, or as a kind of cleansing from them.

6:26 In Bible times, people felt a great sense of responsibility to keep their oaths (Nm 30:2; Jdg 11:29-40). This fact, coupled with Herod's concern that he would lose the respect of his guests if he denied the girl's request, resulted in John's execution.

6:37 A denarius equaled one day's wages for a common laborer. Two hundred denarii would have equaled roughly eight months of labor.

6:41 Prior to performing the miracle, Jesus prayed. His act of looking up to heaven illustrates a prayerful gesture practiced by pious Jews (7:34; Lk 18:13; Jn 11:41). Jesus's posture here does not represent a unique manner of praying, as some suggest.

6:49-50 The disciples' initial understanding of Jesus's walking on water (they thought it was a ghost and cried out . . . and were terrified) reveals how ancient people would have viewed this supernatural event.

THE TRADITIONS OF THE ELDERS

7 The † Pharisees † and some of the scribes † who had come from Jerusalem † gathered around him. 2 They observed that some of his disciples were eating bread with unclean † — that is, unwashed — hands. 3 (For the Pharisees and all the Jews do not eat unless they give their hands a ceremonial washing, keeping the tradition of the elders. 4 When they come from the marketplace, † they do not eat unless they have washed. † And there are many other customs they have received and keep, like the washing of cups, pitchers, kettles, and dining couches. † †) 5 So the Pharisees † and the scribes † asked him, "Why don't your disciples live according to the tradition of the elders, † instead of eating bread with ceremonially unclean † hands?" 6 He answered them, "Isaiah † prophesied † correctly about you hypocrites, † as it is written: †

This people honors † me with their lips, but their heart is far from me.
7 They worship me in vain, teaching † as doctrines † human commands. † †

8 Abandoning the command of God, you hold on to human tradition." † 9 He also said to them, "You have a fine way of invalidating God's command in order to set up † your tradition! 10 For Moses † said: Honor your father and your mother; † † and Whoever speaks evil of father or mother must be put to death. † † 11 But you say, 'If anyone tells his father or mother: Whatever benefit † you might have received from me is corban' " (that is, an offering † devoted to God), 12 "you no longer let him do anything for his father or mother.
13 You nullify the word of God † by your tradition that you have handed † down. And you do many other similar things." 14 Summoning † the crowd again, he told them, "Listen to me, all of you, and understand: † 15 Nothing that goes into a person from outside can defile him but the things that come out of a person are what defile him." †

17 When he went into the house away from the crowd, his disciples asked him about the parable. 18 He said to them, "Are you also as lacking in understanding? Don't you realize that nothing going into a person from the outside can defile him? 19 For it doesn't go into his heart but into the stomach † and is eliminated" (thus he declared all foods clean † †). 20 And he said, "What comes out of a person is what defiles him. 21 For from within, out of people's hearts, come evil thoughts, sexual immoralities, † thefts, murders, † 22 adulteries, † greed, † evil actions, deceit, † self-indulgence, † envy, † slander, † pride, † and foolishness. † 23 All these evil things come from within and defile a person."

A GENTILE MOTHER'S FAITH

24 He got up and departed from † there to the region of Tyre. † † He entered a house and did not want anyone to know it, but he could not escape notice.
25 Instead, immediately after hearing about him, a woman whose little daughter had an unclean spirit † came and fell at his feet. † 26 The woman was a Gentile, † † a Syrophoenician by birth, and she was asking him to cast the demon † out of her daughter. 27 He said to her, "Let the children be fed first, because it isn't right to take the children's bread and throw it to the dogs." † 28 But she replied to him, "Lord, † even the dogs under the table eat the children's crumbs."
29 Then he told her, "Because of this reply, you may go. The demon has left your daughter." 30 When she went back to her home, she found her child lying on the bed, and the demon was gone.

JESUS DOES EVERYTHING WELL

31 Again, leaving the region of Tyre, † he went by way of Sidon to the Sea of Galilee, † through † the region of the Decapolis. † 32 They brought to him a deaf † man who had difficulty speaking † and begged Jesus to lay his hand on † him. 33 So he took him away from the crowd in private. After putting his fingers in the man's ears and spitting, † he touched his tongue. 34 Looking up to heaven, † he sighed deeply and said to him, "Ephphatha! " † (that is, "Be opened! ”). 35 Immediately his ears were opened, † his tongue was loosened, and he began to speak clearly. † 36 He ordered them to tell no one, † but the more he ordered them, the more they proclaimed it. † 37 They were extremely astonished and said, “He has done everything well. †

He even makes the deaf † hear and the mute speak.” †

7:3,5 The tradition of the elders was a collection of oral teachings that developed over time among the Jews. These teachings were not inspired Scripture; rather, they included expansions on the Torah motivated by a two-fold concern: to apply the Torah’s teachings to everyday life and to build a safety net around the Torah to keep people from violating it. Some Pharisees and scribes showed greater concern for the tradition of men than the commands of God.

7:10-12 Jesus provides an example of the Pharisees and scribes’ invalidation of God’s command in order to maintain their human traditions. Scripture required Jews to honor their parents, which practically speaking, included caring for their physical needs with their wealth (Ex 20:12; Dt 5:16). But in order to avoid this responsibility, some Jews declared their wealth corban, or an offering devoted to God. Following this human tradition—or only claiming to—allowed them to set aside God’s command to honor their parents.

7:19 In the parenthetical comment, thus he declared all foods clean, Mark explains the significance of Jesus’s teaching about ritual purity. OT food laws (e.g., Lv 11:1-47) are not binding for God’s people because Jesus has come to fulfill the law (Mt 5:17).

7:32-35 Jesus’s healing of the deaf man, who also had speech difficulty, included the act of spitting (see also 8:23; Jn 9:6). Some have suggested that Jesus spat into his own hand then touched the man’s tongue with his moistened finger. Others suggest that he spat directly onto the man’s tongue, similar to his actions in 8:23. The ancients took a variety of views concerning saliva. Some Gentiles and Jews believed it represented a person’s force, and thus had the potential to convey power; others saw it as having a therapeutic function; and still others regarded it as disgusting.

FEEDING FOUR THOUSAND

8 In † those days there was again a large crowd, and they had nothing to eat. He called † the disciples † and said to them, 2 "I have compassion † on the crowd, because they've already stayed with me three days and have nothing to eat. 3 If I send them home hungry, they will collapse on the way, † and some of them have come a long distance." 4 His disciples answered him, "Where can anyone get enough bread here in this desolate place to feed † these people?"
5 "How many loaves do you have?" he asked them.
"Seven," they said. 6 He commanded the crowd to sit down on the ground.
Taking the seven loaves, he gave thanks, broke † them, and gave them to his disciples to set before the people. So they served them to the crowd. 7 They also had a few small fish, and after he had blessed them, he said these were to be served as well. 8 They ate and were satisfied. Then they collected seven large baskets of leftover pieces. 9 About four thousand were there. He dismissed them. 10 And he immediately got into the boat with his disciples and went to the district of Dalmanutha.

THE LEAVEN OF THE PHARISEES AND HEROD

11 The † Pharisees † came and began to argue with him, demanding of him a sign † from heaven † to test † him. 12 Sighing deeply in his spirit, † he said,
"Why does this generation † demand a sign? Truly I tell you, † no sign will be given to this generation." 13 Then he left them, got back into the boat, and went to the other side.
14 The disciples had forgotten to take bread and had only one loaf with them in the boat. 15 Then † he gave them strict orders: "Watch out! Beware of the leaven † † of the Pharisees and the leaven of Herod." † 16 They were discussing among themselves that they did not have any bread. 17 Aware of this, he said to them, "Why are you discussing the fact you have no bread? Don't you understand or comprehend? Do you have hardened hearts? † 18 Do you have eyes and not see; do you have ears and not hear? † † And do you not remember? † 19 When I broke the five loaves for the five thousand, how many baskets full of leftovers did you collect? ” “Twelve,” they told him.

20 “When I broke the seven loaves for the four thousand, how many baskets full of pieces did you collect? ”
“Seven,” they said.
21 And he said to them, “Don’t you understand yet? ” †

HEALING A BLIND MAN

22 They came to Bethsaida. † They brought a blind † man to him and begged him to touch him. 23 He took the blind man by the hand and brought him out of the village. Spitting † on his eyes and laying his hands on † him, he asked him, “Do you see anything? ”
24 He looked up and said, “I see people — they look like trees walking.” †
25 Again Jesus placed his hands on the man’s eyes. The man looked intently and his sight was restored and he saw everything clearly. 26 Then he sent † him home, saying, “Don’t even go into the village.” † †

PETER’S CONFESSION OF THE MESSIAH

27 Jesus † went out with his disciples to the villages of Caesarea Philippi. And on the road he asked his disciples, “Who do people say that I am? ”
28 They answered him, “John the Baptist; † others, Elijah; still others, one of the prophets.” †
29 “But you,” he asked them, “who do you say that I am? ”
Peter † answered him, “You are the Messiah.” † 30 And he strictly warned † them to tell no one about him.

HIS DEATH AND RESURRECTION PREDICTED

31 Then † he began to teach them that it was necessary for the Son of Man † to suffer many things and be rejected † by the elders, † chief priests, and scribes, † be killed, and rise † after three days. † 32 He spoke openly about this. Peter took him aside and began to rebuke him. 33 But turning around and looking at his disciples, he rebuked Peter and said, "Get behind me, Satan! † You are not thinking about God's concerns † but human concerns."

TAKE UP YOUR CROSS

34 Calling the crowd along with his disciples, he said to them, "If anyone wants to follow after me, let him deny himself, † take up his cross, † and follow me. † 35 For whoever wants to save † his life will lose it, † but whoever loses † his life † because of me † and the gospel † will save it. † 36 For what does it benefit † someone to gain † the whole world † and yet lose † his life? † 37 What can anyone give in exchange for his life? † 38 For whoever is ashamed † of me and my words † in this adulterous and sinful † generation, † the Son of Man will also be ashamed of him when he comes in the glory † of his Father † with the holy † angels." †

8:11-13 The Pharisees demanded that Jesus perform a sign from heaven. They were probably not looking for a miracle, for they were already aware of miraculous acts performed by Jesus (3:22). Rather, it seems they wanted confirmation from God himself that Jesus's authority came from him.

9 Then he said to them, "Truly I tell you, † there are some standing here who will not taste death † until they see the kingdom of God come in power." †

THE TRANSFIGURATION

2 After † six days † Jesus took Peter, James, and John † and led them up a high mountain † by themselves to be alone. He was transfigured † in front of them, 3 and his clothes † became dazzling — extremely white † as no launderer on earth could whiten † them. 4 Elijah † appeared to them with Moses, † and they were talking with Jesus. 5 Peter said to Jesus, “Rabbi, † it’s good † for us to be here. Let us set up three shelters: † one for you, one for Moses, and one for Elijah” — 6 because he did not know what to say, † since they were terrified. †

7 A cloud † appeared, overshadowing † them, and a voice † came from the cloud: † “This is my beloved † Son; † listen to him! ” †

8 Suddenly, looking around, they no longer saw anyone with them except Jesus.

9 As † they were coming down the mountain, † he ordered them to tell no one what they had seen † until the Son of Man † had risen † from the dead. †

10 They kept this word † to themselves, questioning what “rising from the dead” meant.

11 Then they asked him, “Why do the scribes † say that Elijah must come first? ” †

12 “Elijah does come first and restores † all things,” † he replied. “Why then is it written † that the Son of Man must suffer † many things and be treated with contempt? † 13 But I tell you that Elijah has come, and they did whatever they pleased to him, just as it is written † about him.”

THE POWER OF FAITH OVER A DEMON

14 When † they came to the disciples, they saw a large crowd around them and scribes disputing † with them. 15 When the whole crowd saw him, they were amazed and ran to greet him. 16 He asked them, “What are you arguing with them about? ”

17 Someone from the crowd answered him, “Teacher, † I brought my son to you. He has a spirit † that makes him unable to speak. † 18 Whenever it seizes him, it throws him down, and he foams at the mouth, grinds his teeth, and becomes rigid. I asked your disciples to drive it out, but they couldn't."

19 He replied to them, "You unbelieving † generation, how long will I be with you? How long must I put up with you? Bring him to me." 20 So they brought the boy to him. When the spirit saw him, it immediately threw the boy into convulsions. He fell to the ground and rolled around, foaming at the mouth. 21 "How long has this been happening to him?" Jesus asked his father.

"From childhood," he said. 22 "And many times it has thrown him into fire or water to destroy † him. But if you can do anything, have compassion † on us and help us."

23 Jesus said to him, "'If you can'? † Everything is possible † for the one who believes." †

24 Immediately the father of the boy cried out, "I do believe; help my unbelief!"

25 When Jesus saw that a crowd was quickly gathering, he rebuked † the unclean † spirit, saying to it, "You mute and deaf † spirit, I command you: Come out of him and never enter him again."

26 Then it came out, shrieking and throwing him † into terrible convulsions. †

The boy became like a corpse, so that many said, "He's dead." 27 But Jesus, taking him by the hand, raised him, † and he stood up.

28 After he had gone into the house, his disciples asked him privately, "Why couldn't we drive it out?"

29 And he told them, "This kind can come out by nothing but prayer." † †

THE SECOND PREDICTION OF HIS DEATH

30 Then † they left that place and made their way through Galilee, but he did not want anyone to know it. † 31 For he was teaching † his disciples and telling them, "The Son of Man † is going to be betrayed † into the hands of men. They will kill him, and after he is killed, he will rise † three days later." † 32 But they did not understand this statement, and they were afraid to ask him. †

WHO IS THE GREATEST?

33 They † came to Capernaum. † When he was in the house, † he asked them, "What were you arguing about on the way?" † 34 But they were silent, † because on the way they had been arguing with one another about who was the greatest. † 35 Sitting down, he called the Twelve † and said to them, "If anyone wants to be first, he must be last and servant of all." † 36 He took a child, † had him stand among them, and taking him in his arms, he said to them, 37 "Whoever welcomes † one little child such as this in my name † welcomes me. And whoever welcomes me does not welcome me, but him who sent † me." †

IN HIS NAME

38 John † said to him, "Teacher, † we saw someone † driving out demons † in your name, † and we tried to stop him because he wasn't following us." † 39 "Don't stop him," said Jesus, "because there is no one who will perform a miracle † in my name who can soon afterward speak evil of me. 40 For whoever is not against us is for us. † 41 And whoever gives you a cup of water to drink † in my name, because you belong to Christ † — truly I tell you, † he will never lose his reward. †

43 "And if your hand causes you to fall away, cut it off. † It is better for you to

9:4 The appearance of Moses and Elijah, two of the greatest figures of Israel's history, probably represents Jesus's fulfillment of the Law and the Prophets (Mt 5:17). They also point to Jesus's significance, since Moses was regarded as the model prophet (Dt 18:18) and Elijah was the forerunner of the Messiah (Mal 4:5-6; Mt 11:7-10).

9:7 God speaks directly to the disciples present with Jesus. Jewish tradition viewed this type of communication from God as rare. Mark's inclusion of the event draws attention to Jesus as God's beloved Son, One who is greater than Moses and Elijah.

9:36-37 While children were loved and well-treated, they occupied the lowest position on the social scale. Jesus reorients his disciples' perspective, encouraging them to welcome the humble and lowly just as they would welcome him. Indeed, those who welcome the humble are welcoming the greatest of all—God.

9:43,45,47 Jesus speaks of cutting off one's hand and foot and gouging out one's eye. Like many great teachers in ancient times, Jesus employs hyperbole. Such exaggerated commands are not to be taken literally. Their intent is to encourage listeners to deal with sin swiftly, for eternal existence is at stake.

THE QUESTION OF DIVORCE

custom he taught † them again.
2 Some Pharisees † came to test † him, asking, “Is it lawful † for a man to

3 He replied to them, “What did Moses † command you? ”

away.” †
5 But Jesus told them, “He wrote this command for you because of the hardness of your hearts. † 6 But from the beginning † of creation † God † made them male and female. † † 7 For this reason a man will leave † his father and mother † 8 and the two will become one flesh. † † So they are no longer two, but one flesh. 9 Therefore what God has joined together, let no one separate.” † 10 When they were in the house again, the disciples questioned him about this matter. 11 He said to them, “Whoever divorces his wife † and marries † another commits adultery † against her. 12 Also, if she divorces her husband † and marries another, she commits adultery.”

BLESSING THE CHILDREN

13 People † were bringing little children † to him in order that he might touch tell you, † whoever does not receive † † the kingdom of God like a little on † them and blessed † them.

THE RICH YOUNG RULER

17 As † he was setting out on a journey, † a man ran up, knelt down † before him, and asked him, “Good † teacher, † what must I do to inherit † eternal life? ” †

18 “Why do you call me good?” Jesus asked him. “No one is good except God alone. † 19 You know the commandments: Do not murder; † do not commit adultery; † do not steal; † do not bear false witness; † do not defraud; † honor † your father and mother.” † † 20 He said to him, “Teacher, † I have kept all these from my youth.”
21 Looking at him, Jesus loved him † and said to him, “You lack one thing: Go, sell all you have and give to the poor, † and you will have treasure † in heaven. † Then come, † follow me.” † 22 But he was dismayed by this demand, and he went away grieving, † because he had many possessions. †

POSSESSIONS AND THE KINGDOM

23 Jesus looked around and said to his disciples, “How hard it is for those who have wealth † to enter the kingdom of God!” † 24 The disciples were astonished at his words. Again Jesus said to them, “Children, † how hard it is † to enter the kingdom of God! 25 It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich † person to enter the kingdom of God.”
26 They were even more astonished, saying to one another, “Then who can be saved?” †
27 Looking at them, Jesus said, “With man it is impossible, † but not with God, because all things are possible with God.”
28 Peter † began to tell him, “Look, we have left everything and followed you.”
29 “Truly I tell you,” † Jesus said, “there is no one who has left house or brothers or sisters or mother or father † or children or fields for my sake and for the sake of the gospel, †

GENDER EQUALITY AND CHURCH HISTORY

In the beginning, God created the heavens and the earth, day and night, land and sea, animals and birds, man and woman (Gn 1:2). He created male and female in his image. Gender was the unique design of God the Creator. God declared that his plan for two sexes was “very good” (Gn 1:31).

Since humanity’s fall into sin and throughout history, however, men and women have struggled with their identities and challenged their roles. Christians today must seek truth from God’s Word to know who they are and to understand their purposes in life. God does not desire for his children to blur the lines of gender or embrace the views of secular culture. He wants Christians to believe biblical principles and to live godly lives that embody his purposes.

The body of Christ, the church, has faced challenges with gender roles throughout history. Men and women were both involved in the ministry of the early church though they fulfilled different roles. As the church has grown and diversified, men and women have assumed various leadership roles. Evangelical churches have considered gender roles differently. Most reserve positions of spiritual authority for men, in accordance with a traditional interpretation of biblical guidelines (1Tm 3:1-7).

God has a perfect design for the sexes. His human creations rebelled against that design, resulting in confusion and consequences. Even when the culture seeks to redefine God’s gender roles in the home and the church, Christians in the past, present, and future have the responsibility to follow biblical teachings and live counterculturally in the world. This article discusses God’s gender design and describes the Christian’s lifestyle response in today’s world.

GOD’S DESIGN

God created man, male and female, in his own image (Gn 1:27). From the beginning, men and women were designed to be distinct, equal in worth and dignity but different in role and function. Man was created by God from the dust of the ground and assigned the tasks of working the field and naming the animals (Gn 2:7-17). Woman was then created by God from the rib of man to be his helper, to complement or complete him (Gn 2:18-25). Later in the OT, the Lord clarified to the prophet Isaiah his creative design for male and female. All of God’s children are created for his glory; we are meant to be his witnesses (Is 43:6-13).

In the NT, numerous passages confirm God’s unique design for men and women (Eph 5:22-33; Col 3:18-19; 1Pt 3:1-7). Man did not create himself, and culture did not conceive the idea of gender. Man and woman are distinct creations of God, who had a distinct plan for each gender.

MAN’S REBELLION

Though God had a perfect plan for each of his creations, man chose to disobey God and follow his own desires. Tempted by a serpent, the woman sinned against God when she ate of the forbidden fruit and then persuaded her husband to eat too (Gn 3:6).

Both man and woman were created by God in his likeness, and both chose to rebel against him. As a result, both man and woman received God’s judgment (Gn 3:8-24). God confronted the man about his sin. Man responded with fear, guilt, and shame. He blamed the woman for the sinful act, and she in turn blamed the serpent. God pronounced a curse on the serpent and declared judgment on mankind. Their rebellion against God resulted in equal but different consequences for the man and woman.

WOMAN’S CONSEQUENCE

When the woman and man chose to disobey God and rebel against his creative plan, they experienced painful consequences. As a result of sin, women throughout the generations would have more pain in childbirth (Gn 3:16), while men would have more difficulty in work (Gn 3:17-19).

Perhaps the most difficult consequence of the fall, however, was a change in the relationship between man and woman. Sin turned what God intended to be a complementary relationship into a competitive one. Instead of husbands and wives seeking to nurture one another, sin encourages them to desire power and position in the relationship. Thus, the woman will “desire” her husband, his roles and responsibilities. Because of sin, his role as servant leader can be distorted also, resulting in autocratic and tyrannical rule, causing the wife to resent his leadership of the family.

CULTURE'S DISTORTION

Since the garden of Eden, people in the world have lived according to their personal desires and sinful human natures. Individuals seek to define their own roles and relationships, ignoring the mandate of God. The sexual revolution has extended rebellion against God's plan to issues of gender and family. The current culture confuses equality of worth and significance with equivalence of roles, denying the biblical guidelines of male headship. The women's movement has introduced the idea of gender sameness into our culture, but it has not delivered the happiness and fulfillment it once promised. A worldview that refuses to accept any difference between men and women diminishes the distinctive contributions God intended each gender to make in the family and culture.

The world's viewpoint has distorted the personal lives of men and women as well as the marriage relationship and the family system. Modern Western culture claims that marriage can be between any two people who love each other, regardless of gender. Moreover, the dramatic increase in the rate of divorce reflects a lack of permanency in marriage. While the Bible clearly teaches that marriage is the uniting of one man to one woman in lifetime covenant commitment (Gn 2:24; Mt 19:5), the world has little vision for such relationships. The Bible teaches a better way, that God's design for the family is the foundational institution of human society (Dt 6:6-9).

Christians are commanded by God to be in the world but not of it (Jn 17:13-16). Despite strong cultural influences that act to shape us all, Christians are to adhere to God's plan for gender and his purposes in life. The Bible teaches that gender differences are a part of God's perfect purpose for men and women. Men and women are to complement or to complete one another, not to compete with each other for significance.

THE CHRISTIAN'S RESPONSIBILITY

God wants men and women to live in complementary unions, not competitive relationships. Lives submitted to God's design are his clearest example of gender equality—men and women are equal in worth and value yet distinct in role and function.

SUFFERING AND SERVICE

35 James † and John, † the sons of Zebedee, † approached him and said, "Teacher, † we want you to do whatever we ask you."
36 "What do you want me to do for you?" he asked them.
37 They answered him, "Allow us to sit at your right and at your left in your glory." †
38 Jesus said to them, "You don't know what you're asking. † Are you able to drink the cup † I drink or to be baptized with the baptism † I am baptized with?" † 39 "We are able," they told him.
Jesus said to them, "You will drink the cup I drink, and you will be baptized with the baptism I am baptized with. † 40 But to sit at my right or left is not mine to give; instead, it is for those for whom it has been prepared."
41 When the ten disciples heard this, they began to be indignant with James and John. † 42 Jesus called them over and said to them, "You know that those who are regarded as rulers of the Gentiles lord it over † them, and those in high positions act as tyrants over them. 43 But it is not so among you. † On the contrary, whoever wants to become great among you will be your servant, † 44 and whoever wants to be first among you will be a slave to all. † 45 For even the Son of Man † did not come to be served, but to serve, † and to give his life † as a ransom † for many." † †

A BLIND MAN HEALED

46 They † came to Jericho. † And as he was leaving Jericho with his disciples and a large crowd, Bartimaeus (the son of Timaeus), a blind † beggar, † was sitting by the road. † 47 When he heard that it was Jesus of Nazareth, † he began to cry out, "Jesus, Son of David, † have mercy † on me!" † 48 Many warned him to keep quiet, but he was crying out all the more, “Have mercy on me, † Son of David! ” 49 Jesus stopped and said, “Call him.”

So they called the blind man and said to him, “Have courage! † Get up; he’s calling for you.” 50 He threw off his coat, † jumped up, and came to Jesus.
51 Then Jesus answered him, “What do you want † me to do for you? ” “Rabboni,” † † the blind man said to him, “I want to see.”
52 Jesus said to him, “Go, your faith has saved you.” † Immediately he could see and began to follow Jesus on the road.

10:2 The grounds or basis for divorce was commonly debated in Jesus’s day. Debate often centered on the meaning of the phrase “something improper” in Deuteronomy 24:1 (Hb erwat dabar, lit, “the nakedness of a thing”). Adultery was not likely in view as it was covered elsewhere (Lv 20:10).

10:6 Jesus articulates the Jewish (and later Christian) understanding of gender, male and female. God created two distinct sexes that complement one another. Modern views of gender (e.g., transgenderism) cannot be reconciled with Jesus’s teaching.

10:25 Jesus uses a proverb to communicate the idea of impossibility. A camel was the largest animal encountered by most people in ancient Israel, while a needle represented an exceedingly small opening. Theophylact, an eleventh-century exegete, suggested that the needle refers to a gate in Jerusalem that required camels to crouch down in order to enter. This interpretation, however, should be rejected.

10:47-48 Bartimaeus references Jesus as Son of David, a name associated with the Messiah. This is the only instance in Mark’s Gospel in which Jesus is addressed by this name.

THE TRIUMPHAL ENTRY

11 When † they approached Jerusalem, † at Bethphage and Bethany † near the Mount of Olives, he sent two of his disciples 2 and told them, “Go into the village ahead of you. As soon as you enter it, you will find a colt tied there, on which no one has ever sat. Untie it and bring it. 3 If anyone says to you, ‘Why are you doing this? ’ say, ‘The Lord needs it and will send it back here right away.’ ”
4 So they went and found a colt outside in the street, tied by a door. They untied it, 5 and some of those standing there said to them, “What are you doing, untying the colt? ” 6 They answered them just as Jesus had said; so they let them go.
7 They brought the donkey to Jesus and threw their clothes on it, and he sat on it. 8 Many people spread their clothes on the road, † and others spread leafy branches cut from the fields. † 9 Those who went ahead and those who followed shouted:
Hosanna!
Blessed is he who comes in the name † of the Lord! † † 10 Blessed is the coming kingdom † of our father David! † Hosanna † in the highest heaven!
11 He went into Jerusalem † and into the temple. † After looking around at everything, since it was already late, he went out to Bethany † with the Twelve.

THE BARREN FIG TREE IS CURSED

12 The † next day when they went out from Bethany, he was hungry. 13 Seeing in the distance a fig † tree with leaves, he went to find out if there was anything on it. When he came to it, he found nothing but leaves; for it was not the season for figs. 14 He said to it, "May no one ever eat fruit † from you again!" † And his disciples † heard it.

CLEANSING THE TEMPLE

15 They came to Jerusalem, † and he went into the temple † and began to throw out those buying and selling. He overturned the tables of the money changers † and the chairs of those selling doves, 16 and would not permit anyone to carry goods through the temple. 17 He was teaching them: "Is it not written, † My house † will be called a house of prayer † for all nations? † But you have made it a den of thieves!" † †

18 The chief priests and the scribes † heard it and started looking for a way to kill him. For they were afraid † of him, because the whole crowd was astonished by his teaching.

19 Whenever evening came, they would go out of the city.

THE BARREN FIG TREE IS WITHERED

20 Early † in the morning, as they were passing by, they saw the fig tree withered from the roots up. 21 Then Peter † remembered and said to him, "Rabbi, † look! The fig tree that you cursed † has withered."

22 Jesus replied to them, "Have faith in God. † 23 Truly I tell you, † if anyone says to this mountain, 'Be lifted up and thrown into the sea,' and does not doubt † in his heart, but believes † that what he says will happen, it will be done for him. † 24 Therefore I tell you, everything you pray † and ask for † — believe that you have received † † it and it will be yours. 25 And whenever you stand † praying, if you have anything against anyone, forgive † him, so that your Father † in heaven † will also forgive † you your wrongdoing." †

THE AUTHORITY OF JESUS CHALLENGED

27 They † came again to Jerusalem. † As he was walking in the temple, † the chief priests, the scribes, † and the elders † came 28 and asked him, “By what authority † are you doing these things? Who gave you this authority to do these things? ” 29 Jesus said to them, “I will ask you one question; † then answer me, and I will tell you by what authority I do these things. 30 Was John’s baptism † from heaven or of human origin? Answer me.”
31 They discussed it among themselves: “If we say, ‘From heaven,’ he will say, ‘Then why didn’t you believe † him? ’ 32 But if we say, ‘Of human origin’ ” — they were afraid of the crowd, because everyone thought that John was truly a prophet. † 33 So they answered Jesus, “We don’t know.” And Jesus said to them, “Neither will I tell you by what authority I do these

11:15-18 Worshipers traveling to the temple needed appropriate coinage to purchase animals or to pay the temple tax (Ex 30:11-16). Pagan coinage could not be used as it featured graven images. Such coins were exchanged for imageless Tyrian (the closest coin to the old Hebrew shekel) or Jewish temple coins. Jesus [threw] out those buying and selling because they conducted business in the temple, a house of prayer. This most likely involved corrupt transactions, since Jesus says they have made it a den of thieves.

THE PARABLE OF THE VINEYARD OWNER

12 He † began to speak to them in parables: “A man planted a vineyard, † put a fence around it, dug out a pit for a winepress, and built a watchtower. Then he leased it to tenant farmers and went away. 2 At harvest time he sent † a servant † to the farmers to collect some of the fruit † of the vineyard from them. 3 But they took him, beat † him, and sent him away empty-handed. † 4 Again he sent another servant to them, and they † hit him on the head and treated him shamefully. † 5 Then he sent another, and they killed that one. He also sent many others; some they beat, and others they killed. 6 He still had one to send, a beloved † son. Finally † he sent him to them, saying, 'They will respect my son.' 7 But those tenant farmers said to one another, 'This is the heir. Come, let's kill him, and the inheritance will be ours.' 8 So they seized him, killed him, and threw him out of the vineyard. 9 What then will the owner † † of the vineyard do? He will come and kill the farmers and give the vineyard to others. 10 Haven't you read this Scripture: †

The † stone that the builders rejected
has become the cornerstone. † 11 This came about from the Lord † and is wonderful in our eyes? " †

12 They were looking for a way to arrest him but feared the crowd because they knew he had spoken this parable against them. So they left him and went away.

GOD AND CAESAR

13 Then † they sent some of the Pharisees † and the Herodians † to Jesus to trap him in his words. † 14 When they came, they said to him, "Teacher, we know you are truthful and don't care what anyone thinks, nor do you show partiality † but teach the way of God truthfully. Is it lawful to pay taxes † to Caesar or not? Should we pay or shouldn't we? "

15 But knowing their hypocrisy, † he said to them, "Why are you testing † me? Bring me a denarius † † to look at." 16 They brought a coin. "Whose image † and inscription † is this? " he asked them.
"Caesar's," they replied.
17 Jesus told them, "Give to Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and to God the things that are God's." † And they were utterly amazed † at him.

THE SADDUCEES AND THE RESURRECTION

18 Sadducees, † who say there is no resurrection, † came to him and questioned him: 19 “Teacher, † Moses † wrote for us that if a man’s brother dies, leaving a wife behind but no child, † that man should take the wife † and raise up offspring for his brother. † † 20 There were seven brothers. The first married a woman, and dying, left no offspring. 21 The second also took her, and he died, leaving no offspring. And the third likewise.

HOW SHOULD CHRISTIANS RELATE TO GOVERNMENT?

Politics brings to mind campaigns and elections, propaganda and partisanship, powerbrokers and policy disputes. Scripture is not an instructional handbook for dealing with these elements of day-to-day political life, but it provides an overarching framework for thinking about the world of politics.

What is politics? Derived from the Greek word polis, politics is about life in community, about how people organize their collective life together. It entails reflection on perennial political questions: What are the aims of government? Which forms of government best serve those aims? How should power and authority be wielded? What are the duties and responsibilities of citizens?

When reflecting on these questions, Christians find principles and insights in Scripture, and in theological tradition that may be Calvinist, Lutheran, Roman Catholic, Baptist, Wesleyan, or Anabaptist, among others. As a result, Christians do not speak with one voice on all political matters. Nonetheless, common themes predominate whenever believers strive to reconcile tradition with the Bible.

FOUNDATIONS FOR CHRISTIAN POLITICAL THINKING

Christian political thinking begins with the notion that God’s sovereign authority undergirds and frames earthly political life. God’s power is first seen in creation. His creation of the universe was good in every way, and humans, created in his image (Genesis 1), represent his greatest handiwork. Thus, they share inherent worth and dignity.

Human communal existence was God’s design from the beginning—“it is not good for the man to be alone” (Gn 2:18). Community starts in the form of man and woman, the family, but extends as families form communities, and communities form nations (Gn 4; 9–10).

Adam and Eve’s willful choice to defy God changed everything, including how people live life together (Gn 3). Henceforth, humans live rebellious and sinful lives. Because of hearts, minds, and wills devoted to self, sinfulness in the form of pride becomes humanity’s predominant spiritual and political characteristic. This inordinate love of oneself prompts a quest to satisfy insatiable desires. Greed, envy, and lust soon breed rancor. Rancor triggers conflict (Jms 3; 4).

Thus, political problems are due to fallen human nature—not human nature as it was initially created. The pervasiveness, intractability, and the consequences of sin plague earthly existence. Humans are responsible for this condition but are unable to change it. While conscious of what ought to be done, they generally lack the heart to do it (Rm 2; 7).

Attributing the discord and dissension to something other than our fallen nature is mistaken, offering false hope and exculpating the guilty. Sin—not ignorance, corruption, repression, class conflict, or faulty laws and institutions—is the problem. These all reflect wrongdoing and are deleterious, but they are symptoms rather than the disease.

To mitigate the ravages of sin, civil society becomes indispensable. Civic authority, "God's servant for [humanity's] good" (Rm 13:4), aims to preserve social order so that the necessities of life are secured among quarrelsome people. God establishes rulers, kings, and princes, giving them "sovereignty, power, strength, and glory" (Dn 2:37; Pr 8). They wield the sword (Rm 13:4) to "punish those who do what is evil and to praise those who do what is good" (1Pt 2:14). The tools at their disposal—sanction, punishment, taxation, legislation, education, and military action—maintain a semblance of peace on earth.

Because these tools are coercive, politics is often described as the quest for power. The real question, however, is "power to what end?" Any judgment about whether power is abused or well used depends on a judgment about its aim. So, while politics often succumbs to power struggles, the competing aims are far more fundamental than mere differences in power.

Maintaining order and securing safety are the initial tasks for civil authorities, but more can be done; governments should "pursue justice" (Dt 16:20). Humanity's desire to live well, indeed to flourish, reflects a consciousness that something better is possible. Cain established the first city, not simply to preserve life—God already promised him security—but no doubt to make a better life for himself (Gn 4). Without justice, our grasp of common goods—peace and prosperity, stability and security, liberty and fraternity—remains tenuous.

The challenge is empowering governments to do what they are capable of doing—preserving order and securing justice—while restraining them from doing what they cannot do well or should not do at all. Scripture, therefore, suggests government's role must be limited. Because the root problem, sin, is a spiritual condition requiring a spiritual solution, governments that aim to cure the disease rather than palliate its symptoms exceed their role. Governments cannot change fallen human nature, guarantee happiness, or, most importantly, secure spiritual redemption.

POLITICAL REALISM

Given that humanity's predicament is chronic, Christians generally embrace political realism. Every civic institution, social structure, and economic system will be exploited by those tainted by iniquity. No single ruler, form of government, or humanly constructed blueprint will eradicate civil strife. Neither the sovereign claims of kings and emperors, nor the utopian dreams of modern revolutionaries, nor the universal consent of the governed fulfill exaggerated political expectations. Sin and strife are permanent features of life on earth until God makes all things new (see Rv 21), thus making politics all the more intriguing, important, and worthy of attention.

Thankfully, justice will prevail in the end, and it can prevail, on occasion, in the interim. There is hope in the present because civic authorities, a providential gift from God, serve as instruments of justice. They provide for temporal needs both when the redeemed, those with the Holy Spirit working in them, do good in the world and when God, in his mysterious ways, uses nonbelievers to bring about his holy will—such as he did through his anointing of the Persian king Cyrus to free the Jews from Babylon (Is 45–46). Ultimately, Jesus Christ, who lived, died, and rose again for the salvation of humanity, will establish his kingdom. His final victory insures that truth, beauty, goodness, and justice triumph (Is 9:6-7; Rv 21–22).

KINGDOM CITIZENS ON EARTH

In the meantime, believers are citizens of both a temporal kingdom and God's kingdom. The two demand and deserve allegiance; they also entail duties and responsibilities.

Biblical directives strengthen the grip of earthly citizenship. Christ-followers are to obey rulers (Ti 3:1), render "petitions, prayers, intercessions, and thanksgivings . . . for kings and all those who are in authority" (1Tm 2:1-2), and pay "taxes to those you owe taxes, tolls to those you owe tolls, respect to those you owe respect, and honor to those you owe honor" (Rm 13:7). In principled obedience, the faithful are to "pursue the well-being of the city" (Jr 29:7), "speak up, judge righteously, and defend the cause of the oppressed and needy" (Pr 31:9). Believers must "turn away from evil and do what is good" and pursue peace (Ps 34:14). These biblical admonitions steel believers against despair and defeatism, against the temptation to retreat when estranged from an often gloomy and discouraging world.

The devout know life on earth is no longer tragic; rather, it is a place providing ample opportunities to love God and neighbor (Mt 22:34-40). The latter entails the pursuit of justice, the preservation of order, and the promotion of peace on earth. To do otherwise denies the full lordship of Christ.

At the same time, citizenship in the celestial city binds man's will to God's, radically placing conscience in control. The Bible insists, "[Christians] must obey God rather than people" (Ac 5:29) whenever temporal dictates contravene what God requires or requires what God prohibits (Dn 3; 6). Because earthly government is limited to earthly affairs, it should neither meddle in spiritual matters nor impinge on religious freedom.

Christians also embrace a higher law tradition, providing insight into how one ought to live. The definition of justice and goodness is not a human construct; it resides in the mind and will of God, who "judges the world with righteousness" and sets the standard by which all human laws are judged (Ps 9:8). Those standards are known by all—they are "written on [human] hearts" (Rm 2:15)—and thus valuable in urging nations to do their God-given duty. A faithful prophetic presence bears witness to the higher law to which human affairs are accountable.

THE FUTURE OF POLITICS

Only in God's coming kingdom will perfect justice be experienced. For now, Christians remain in a temporal kingdom where justice can prevail in particular times and in particular places. It prevails when wise and prudent leaders make good choices in the face of imperfect options. The wise leader and the faithful citizen seek both the common good and the greatest good while keeping in mind human depravity, the vagaries of life, and the complexity of the human heart. They must also recognize that while civil society is indispensable, no political panacea will save the world. There is no final political solution; there is only God's redemption in Christ.

DAVID L. WEEKS

22 None of the seven † left offspring. Last of all, the woman died too. 23 In the resurrection, when they rise, † whose wife will she be, since the seven had married her? " 24 Jesus spoke to them, "Isn't this the reason why you're mistaken: you don't know the Scriptures † or the power † of God? † 25 For when they rise † from the dead, † they neither marry nor are given in marriage † but are like angels † in heaven. 26 And as for the dead being raised — haven't you read in the book of Moses, in the passage about the burning bush, how God said to him: I † am the God of Abraham † and the God of Isaac † and the God of Jacob? † † 27 He is not the God of the dead but of the living. You are badly mistaken."

THE PRIMARY COMMANDS

28 One † of the scribes † approached. When he heard them debating and saw that Jesus answered them well, he asked him, “Which command is the most important of all? ” 29 Jesus answered, “The most important † is Listen, O Israel! The Lord † our God, the Lord † is one. † 30 Love † the Lord your God † with all your heart, with all your soul, with all your mind, † and with all your strength. † † † 31 The second is, Love your neighbor † as yourself. † †
There is no other command † greater than these.”
32 Then the scribe said to him, “You are right, teacher. You have correctly said that he is one, and there is no one † else except him. † 33 And to love † him with all your heart, with all your understanding, † and with all your strength, and to love your neighbor as yourself, is far more important than all the burnt offerings and sacrifices.” † 34 When Jesus saw that he answered wisely, he said to him, “You are not far from the kingdom of God.” † And no one dared † to question him any longer.

THE QUESTION ABOUT THE CHRIST

35 While † Jesus was teaching in the temple, he asked, † “How can the scribes † say that the Messiah † is the son of David? † 36 David † himself says by the Holy Spirit: †

The Lord † declared to my Lord, ‘Sit at my right hand † until I put your enemies under your feet.’ † † 37 David himself calls him ‘Lord’; how then can he be his son? ” And the large crowd was listening to him with delight.

WARNING AGAINST THE SCRIBES

38 He † also said in his teaching, “Beware of the scribes, who want to go around in long robes † and who want greetings in the marketplaces, † 39 the best seats † in the synagogues, † and the places of honor † at banquets. † 40 They devour † widows’ † houses and say long prayers † just for show. These will receive harsher judgment.”

THE WIDOW'S GIFT

41 Sitting † across from the temple treasury, † he watched how the crowd dropped money into the treasury. Many rich † people were putting in large sums. 42 Then a poor † widow came and dropped in two tiny coins worth very little. 43 Summoning his disciples, † he said to them, "Truly I tell you, † this poor widow has put more into the treasury than all the others. † 44 For they all gave out of their surplus, † but she out of her poverty † has put in everything she had † — all she had to live on." †

12:12 In ancient times, teachers sometimes employed parables to criticize or critique the behavior of others (2Sm 12:1-12). Jesus used parables in his encounters with Israel's religious leaders to draw attention to their rejection of him or their sinful behavior (Mt 21:28-46 [see esp. v. 45]; see also Lk 15:1-3a).

12:13-17 See "Church and State," p. 1374.

12:14 The Pharisees and Herodians seek to trap Jesus with the question, Is it lawful to pay taxes to Caesar or not? Jews in Judea had been required to pay a poll tax since AD 6 when the Romans designated Judea as a province directly under Roman rule. The tax was exceedingly unpopular among the Judeans. As a Galilean, Jesus was probably not required to pay it, for Galilee was not under direct Roman rule. He thus approaches the question as an outsider. Answering "no" could label him a revolutionary. Answering "yes" could be seen as support of a pagan government that oppresses the Jews.

12:18 Though the Sadducees valued many books within the Hebrew Bible, they only regarded the Pentateuch (the first five books of the OT) as binding or authoritative. They rejected the resurrection of the dead because, in their view, the Pentateuch offered no support for the doctrine. Writings outside the Pentateuch appear to contain references to the resurrection of the dead (Is 26:19; Dn 12:2).

13 As † he was going out of the temple, † one of his disciples said to him, "Teacher, † look! What massive stones! What impressive buildings! " †

2 Jesus said to him, "Do you see these great buildings? † Not one stone will be left upon another — all will be thrown down."

SIGNS OF THE END OF THE AGE

3 While he was sitting on the Mount of Olives † across from the temple, † Peter, † James, † John, † and Andrew † asked him privately, 4 "Tell us, when will these things happen? And what will be the sign when all these things are about to be accomplished? "

5 Jesus told them, "Watch out that no one deceives you. 6 Many will come in my name, † saying, 'I am he,' † and they will deceive † many. 7 When you hear of wars and rumors of wars, † don't be alarmed; † these things must take place, † but it is not yet the end. 8 For nation will rise up against nation, and kingdom against kingdom. † There will be earthquakes in various places, and famines. † These are the beginning † of birth pains. †

9 "But you, be on your guard! They will hand you over to local courts, † † and you will be flogged † in the synagogues. † You will stand before governors and kings † because of me, † as a witness † to them. † 10 And it is necessary that the gospel † be preached to all nations. 11 So when they arrest you and hand you over, don't worry beforehand what you will say, but say whatever is given to you at that time, for it isn't you speaking, but the Holy Spirit.

12 “Brother will betray † brother to death, † and a father his child. Children will rise up against parents and have them put to death. 13 You will be hated by everyone because of my name, † but the one who endures to the end will be saved. †

14 “When you see the abomination of desolation † † standing where it should not be” (let the reader understand), “then those in Judea † must flee to the mountains. 15 A man on the housetop must not come down or go in to get anything out of his house, † 16 and a man in the field must not go back to get his coat. † 17 Woe † to pregnant women and nursing mothers in those days!
18 “Pray † it † won’t happen in winter. 19 For those will be days of tribulation, † the kind that hasn’t been from the beginning † of creation † until now and never will be again. 20 If the Lord † had not cut those days short, † no one would be saved. But he cut those days short for the sake of the elect, † whom he chose. † 21 “Then if anyone tells you, ‘See, here is the Messiah! † See, there! ’ do not believe it. 22 For false messiahs and false prophets will arise and will perform signs and wonders † to lead astray, if possible, the elect. 23 And you must watch! I have told you everything in advance.

THE COMING OF THE SON OF MAN

24 “But in those days, after that tribulation: † The sun will be darkened, and the moon will not shed its light; 25 the stars † will be falling from the sky, and the powers in the heavens will be shaken. † 26 Then they will see the Son of Man † coming † in clouds † with great power † and glory. † 27 He will send out the angels † and gather his elect † from the four winds, from the ends of the earth to the ends of heaven. †

THE PARABLE OF THE FIG TREE

28 “Learn † this lesson † from the fig † tree: As soon as its branch becomes tender and sprouts leaves, you know that summer is near. † 29 In the same way, when you see these things happening, recognize † that he † is near — at the door.
30 “Truly I tell you, † this generation will certainly not pass away until all these things take place. 31 Heaven and earth † will pass away, † but my words will never pass away. †

NO ONE KNOWS THE DAY OR HOUR

32 “Now concerning that day † or hour no one knows — neither the angels † in heaven nor the Son † — but only the Father. † 33 “Watch! Be alert! † For you don’t know when the time † is coming. † 34 “It is like † a man on a journey, who left his house, gave authority to his servants, † gave each one his work, and commanded the doorkeeper to be alert.
35 Therefore be alert, † since you don’t know when the master † of the house is coming — whether in the evening or at midnight or at the crowing of the rooster or early in the morning. 36 Otherwise, when he comes suddenly he might find you sleeping. † 37 And what I say to you, I say to everyone: Be alert! ”

13:14 The abomination of desolation is referenced multiple times in Daniel (Dn 9:27; 11:31; 12:11; see also Mt 24:15). The initial fulfillment of this event took place in the winter of 167 BC when Antiochus IV

Epiphanes transformed the Jewish temple in Jerusalem into a place of worship for the Greek god, Zeus. The Greeks sacrificed pigs on the holy altar for a three-year period. In Mark's Gospel, Jesus uses the phrase in reference to the future (2Th 2:3-10; Rv 13:1-10,14-15).

THE PLOT TO KILL JESUS

14 It † was two days before the Passover † and the Festival † of Unleavened Bread. † The chief priests and the scribes † were looking for a cunning † way to arrest Jesus and kill him. † 2 "Not during the festival," they said, "so that there won't be a riot among the people."

THE ANOINTING AT BETHANY

3 While † he was in Bethany † at the house of Simon the leper, † † as he was reclining at the table, † a woman came with an alabaster jar of very expensive perfume of pure nard. She broke the jar and poured it on his head. † 4 But some were expressing indignation to one another: "Why has this perfume been wasted? 5 For this perfume might have been sold for more than three hundred denarii † † and given to the poor." † And they began to scold her.

6 Jesus replied, "Leave her alone. Why are you bothering her? She has done a noble thing † for me. 7 You always have the poor † with you, and you can do what is good for them whenever you want, but you do not always have me. †

8 She has done what she could; she has anointed my body † in advance for burial. † 9 Truly I tell you, † wherever the gospel † is proclaimed in the whole world, † what she has done will also be told in memory of her."

10 Then † Judas Iscariot, † one of the Twelve, † went to the chief priests † to betray Jesus † to them. 11 And when they heard this, they were glad and promised to give him money. † So he started looking for a good opportunity to betray † him.

PREPARATION FOR PASSOVER

12 On † the first day of Unleavened Bread, when they sacrifice the Passover lamb, † his disciples † asked him, "Where do you want us to go and prepare the Passover so that you may eat it? "

13 So he sent two of his disciples and told them, “Go into the city, and a man carrying a jar of water will meet you. Follow him. 14 Wherever he enters, tell the owner of the house, ‘The Teacher † says, “Where is my guest room where I may eat the Passover with my disciples?” ’ 15 He will show you a large room upstairs, furnished and ready. Make the preparations for us there.” 16 So the disciples † went out, entered the city, and found it just as he had told them, and they prepared the Passover.

BETRAYAL AT THE PASSOVER

17 When † evening came, he arrived with the Twelve. † 18 While they were reclining and eating, Jesus said, “Truly I tell you, one of you will betray me — one who is eating with me.”
19 They began to be distressed and to say to him one by one, “Surely not I? ” 20 He said to them, “It is one of the Twelve — the one who is dipping bread in the bowl with me. 21 For the Son of Man † will go just as it is written † about him, † but woe † to that man by whom the Son of Man is betrayed! It would have been better for him if he had not been born.”

THE FIRST LORD’S SUPPER

22 As † they were eating, he took bread, † blessed and broke † it, gave it to them, † and said, “Take it; this is my body.” † 23 Then he took a cup, and after giving thanks, † he gave it to them, and they all drank from it. 24 He said to them, “This is my blood of the covenant, † † which is poured out † for many. † 25 Truly I tell you, † I will no longer drink of the fruit of the vine † until that day when I drink it new † † in the kingdom of God.” † 26 After singing a hymn, they went out to the Mount of Olives. †

PETER’S DENIAL PREDICTED

27 Then † Jesus said to them, “All of you will fall away, † because it is written: †
I will strike the shepherd, and the sheep † will be scattered. † †
28 But after I have risen, † I will go ahead of you to Galilee.” †

29 Peter † told him, “Even if everyone falls away, I will not.”
30 “Truly I tell you,” Jesus said to him, “today, this very night, before the rooster crows twice, you will deny me three times.” †
31 But he kept insisting, “If I have to die with you, I will never deny you.” And they all said the same thing.

THE PRAYER IN THE GARDEN

32 Then † they came to a place named Gethsemane, and he told his disciples, † “Sit here while I pray.” † 33 He took Peter, † James, † and John † with him, and he began to be deeply distressed and troubled. 34 He said to them, “I am deeply grieved † to the point of death. Remain here and stay awake.” † 35 He went a little farther, fell to the ground, and prayed that if it were possible, the hour † might pass from him. 36 And he said, “Abba, † Father! † All things are possible † for you. Take this cup † away from me. Nevertheless, not what I will, but what you will.” 37 Then he came and found them sleeping. He said to Peter, “Simon, † are you sleeping? † Couldn’t you stay awake one hour? 38 Stay awake and pray † so that you won’t enter into temptation. † † The spirit † is willing, but the flesh † is weak.” 39 Once again he went away and prayed, saying the same thing. 40 And again he came and found them sleeping, because they could not keep their eyes open. They did not know what to say to him. † 41 Then he came a third time and said to them, “Are you still sleeping and resting? Enough! The time has come. See, the Son of Man † is betrayed into the hands of sinners. † 42 Get up; † let’s go. See, my betrayer is near.”

43 While † he was still speaking, Judas, † one of the Twelve, † suddenly arrived. With him was a mob, with swords and clubs, from the chief priests, the scribes, † and the elders. † 44 His betrayer had given them a signal. “The one I kiss,” he said, “he’s the one; arrest him and take him away under guard.” 45 So when he came, immediately he went up to Jesus and said, “Rabbi!” † and kissed him. 46 They took hold of him and arrested him. 47 One of those who stood by drew his sword, struck the high priest’s servant, and cut off his ear.

48 Jesus said to them, “Have you come out with swords and clubs, as if I were a criminal, † to capture me? 49 Every day I was among you, teaching in the temple, † and you didn’t arrest me. But the Scriptures † must be fulfilled.” †
50 Then they all deserted him and ran away. † 51 Now a certain young man, wearing nothing but a linen cloth, was following him. They caught hold of him, 52 but he left the linen cloth behind and ran away naked. †

JESUS FACES THE SANHEDRIN

53 They † led Jesus away to the high priest, † and all the chief priests, the elders, and the scribes † assembled. † 54 Peter † followed him at a distance, right into the high priest’s courtyard. He was sitting with the servants, † † warming himself by the fire.
55 The chief priests and the whole Sanhedrin † were looking for testimony against Jesus to put him to death, † but they could not find any. 56 For many were giving false testimony † against him, and the testimonies did not agree.
57 Some stood up and gave false testimony against him, stating, 58 “We heard him say, ‘I will destroy this temple made with human hands, † and in three days I will build another not made by hands.’ ” 59 Yet their testimony did not agree † even on this.
60 Then the high priest stood up before them all and questioned Jesus, “Don’t you have an answer to what these men are testifying against you? ” 61 But he kept silent and did not answer. † Again the high priest questioned him, “Are you the Messiah, † the Son † of the Blessed † One? ”
62 “I am,” † said Jesus, “and you will see the Son of Man † seated at the right hand † of Power and coming with the clouds † of heaven.” † †
63 Then the high priest † tore his robes † and said, “Why do we still need witnesses? † 64 You have heard the blasphemy. † What is your decision? ” They all condemned him as deserving death. †
65 Then some began to spit on him, to blindfold him, and to beat him, saying, “Prophesy! ” † The temple servants † also took him and slapped him.

PETER DENIES HIS LORD

66 While † Peter † was in the courtyard below, one of the high priest's maidservants came. 67 When she saw Peter warming himself, she looked at him and said, "You also were with Jesus, the man from Nazareth." † 68 But he denied it: "I don't know or understand what you're talking about."
Then he went out to the entryway, † and a rooster crowed. † 69 When the maidservant saw him again, she began to tell those standing nearby,
"This man is one of them."
70 But again he denied it. After a little while those standing there said to Peter again, "You certainly are one of them, since you're also a Galilean." † † 71 Then he started to curse and swear, † "I don't know this man you're talking about! "
72 Immediately a rooster crowed a second time, † and Peter remembered when Jesus had spoken the word to him, "Before the rooster crows twice, you will deny me three times." And he broke down and wept.

14:3-8 Mark records the action of an unidentified woman who pours expensive perfume of pure nard on Jesus's head. While the gift of oil was a common feature of hospitality toward an honored guest, the expense of nard caused the woman's action to stand out. A whole jar of nard, a highly valued plant product from India, would cost a day laborer a year's wage (three hundred denarii). This is why some people scolded the woman, but Jesus interprets her action with reference to his burial. John identifies this woman as Mary, the sister of Martha and Lazarus (Jn 12:3).

14:44-45 Judas identified Jesus to the mob with a kiss. A kiss was a normal form of greeting in the first century (Lk 7:45; Ac 20:37; Rm 16:16), even between a rabbi and his students. Judas's act would not have caused Jesus's disciples to suspect his corrupt intentions toward their Lord.

14:53-65 The Sanhedrin was the Jewish Supreme Court led by the high priest. Though some Pharisees participated in it, the Sadducees held the majority of seats. Mark suggests they were looking for testimony that would result in Jesus's death, but they could not find any (v. 55). The law strictly required that two witnesses provide consistent testimony before a death penalty could be given (Nm 35:30; Dt 17:6; 19:15). The witnesses failed to meet this requirement.

JESUS FACES PILATE

15 As † soon as it was morning, having held a meeting with the elders, † scribes, † and the whole Sanhedrin, the chief priests † tied Jesus up, led him away, and handed him over to Pilate. †

2 So Pilate asked him, "Are you the King † of the Jews? " †
He answered him, "You say so."

3 And the chief priests accused him of many things. 4 Pilate † questioned him again, "Aren't you going to answer? Look how many things they are accusing you of! " 5 But Jesus still did not answer, and so Pilate was amazed.

JESUS OR BARABBAS

6 At † the festival † Pilate † used to release for the people a prisoner whom they requested. 7 There was one named Barabbas, who was in prison with rebels who had committed murder † during the rebellion. † 8 The crowd came up and began to ask Pilate to do for them as was his custom. 9 Pilate answered them, "Do you want me to release the King † of the Jews † for you? " 10 For he knew it was because of envy † that the chief priests had handed him over. 11 But the chief priests stirred up the crowd so that he would release Barabbas to them instead. 12 Pilate asked them again, “Then what do you want me to do with the one you call the King of the Jews? ” 13 Again they shouted, “Crucify him! ”

14 Pilate said to them, “Why? What has he done wrong? ”
But they shouted all the more, “Crucify him! ”
15 Wanting to satisfy the crowd, Pilate released Barabbas to them; and after having Jesus flogged, he handed him over to be crucified.

MOCKED BY THE MILITARY

16 The † soldiers led him away into the palace (that is, the governor’s residence †) and called the whole company together. 17 They dressed him in a purple † robe, twisted together a crown † of thorns, and put it on him. 18 And they began to salute him, “Hail, † King † of the Jews! ” 19 They were hitting him on the head with a stick and spitting on him. Getting down on their knees, † they were paying him homage. 20 After they had mocked † him, they stripped him of the purple robe and put his clothes on him.

CRUCIFIED BETWEEN TWO CRIMINALS

They led him out to crucify him. 21 They † forced a man coming in from the country, who was passing by, to carry Jesus’s cross. † He was Simon of Cyrene, † the father of Alexander and Rufus. † 22 They † brought Jesus to the place called Golgotha (which means Place of the Skull †). 23 They tried to give him wine † mixed with myrrh, † but he did not take it.
24 Then they crucified him and divided his clothes, casting lots † for them to decide what each would get. 25 Now it was nine in the morning † when they crucified him. 26 The inscription of the charge written against him was: THE KING † OF THE JEWS. † 27 They † crucified two criminals † † with him, one on his right and one on his left. † 29 Those † who passed by were yelling insults † at † him, shaking their heads, † and saying, “Ha! The one who would destroy the temple and rebuild it in three days, † 30 save yourself by coming down from the cross! ” † 31 In the same way, the chief priests with the scribes † were mocking him among themselves and saying, “He saved others, but he cannot save himself! 32 Let the Messiah, † the King † of Israel, † come down now from the cross, † so that we may see and believe.” † Even those who were crucified with him taunted him.

THE DEATH OF JESUS

33 When † it was noon, † darkness came over the whole land until three in the afternoon. † † 34 And at three Jesus cried out with a loud voice, “Eloi, Eloi, lemá sabachtháni?” which is translated, “My God, my God, why have you abandoned me?” † †

35 When some of those standing there heard this, they said, “See, he’s calling for Elijah.”

36 Someone ran and filled a sponge with sour wine, fixed it on a stick, offered him a drink, † and said, “Let’s see if Elijah comes to take him down.”

37 Jesus let out a loud cry and breathed his last. 38 Then the curtain † of the temple was torn in two from top to bottom. 39 When the centurion, who was standing opposite him, saw the way he † breathed his last, he said, “Truly this man was the Son of God!” † †

40 There † were also women watching from a distance. Among them were Mary Magdalene, † Mary the mother of James the younger and of Joses, and Salome. 41 In Galilee † these women followed him and took care of him. Many other women had come up with him to Jerusalem. †

THE BURIAL OF JESUS

42 When † it was already evening, because it was the day of preparation (that is, the day before the Sabbath), 43 Joseph of Arimathea, a prominent member of the Sanhedrin who was himself looking forward † to the kingdom of God, † came and boldly went to Pilate † and asked for Jesus’s body. † 44 Pilate was surprised that he was already dead. Summoning the centurion, he asked him whether he had already died. 45 When he found out from the centurion, he gave the corpse to Joseph. 46 After he bought some linen cloth, Joseph took him down and wrapped him in the linen. Then he laid him in a tomb † cut out of the rock and rolled a stone † against the entrance to the tomb. 47 Mary Magdalene † and Mary the mother of Joses were watching where he was laid.

15:6-10 The custom of releasing a prisoner on a holy day, or in the midst of a festival, was common in ancient Rome. Unlike modern governmental pardons, it had little to do with guilt or innocence. The practice was intended to placate the nations Rome occupied. Pilate attempts to steer the crowd toward freeing Jesus, because he knows that Jesus was arrested because of envy.

15:16-20 Roman soldiers in Jerusalem liked to mock condemned prisoners, especially revolutionaries, by dressing them as kings and offering false homage. Since Jesus had been charged as King of the Jews, he was an easy target of the soldiers' mockery.

15:24 Crucifixion was a means of execution designed to expose victims to shame and humiliation. It was a viciously cruel practice in which various positions were used to maximize torture. Death was caused by loss of blood, exposure, exhaustion, and suffocation. Victims often took days to die, leading ancient writers to regard crucifixion as the most barbaric punishment practiced by the Romans.

15:34 Mark includes Jesus's cry in Aramaic and its translation for his Gentile readers. Jesus quotes the first verse of Psalm 22, which describes a righteous man who experiences suffering at the hands of the ungodly. See also "Language and Meaning," p. 29.

RESURRECTION MORNING

16 When † the Sabbath was over, Mary Magdalene, † Mary the mother of James, and Salome bought spices, so that they could go and anoint him. 2 Very early in the morning, on the first day of the week, † they went to the tomb † at sunrise. 3 They were saying to one another, "Who will roll away the stone from the entrance to the tomb for us?” 4 Looking up, they noticed that the stone — which was very large — had been rolled away.

5 When † they entered the tomb, † they saw a young man † dressed † in a white † robe sitting on the right side; they were alarmed. 6 “Don’t be alarmed,” he told them. “You are looking for Jesus of Nazareth, † who was crucified. He has risen! † He is not here. See the place where they put him. 7 But go, tell his disciples and Peter, † ‘He is going ahead of you to Galilee; † you will see him there just as he told you.’ ”

8 They went out and ran from the tomb, † because trembling and astonishment overwhelmed them. And they said nothing to anyone, † since they were afraid. [Some of the earliest mss conclude with 16:8.] †

THE LONGER ENDING OF MARK: APPEARANCES OF THE RISEN LORD

TEXTUAL CRITICISM

Paul reminds Timothy that “all Scripture is inspired by God” (2Tm 3:16). It is created by God.

Textual criticism concerns not the writing of the original scriptural text but its transmission. The Scriptures have been transmitted by hundreds of scribes through the centuries, and through it all God’s providential guidance has been demonstrated in many ways. Caesar’s Gallic War (58–50 BC) has only nine or ten good manuscripts, and the oldest is nine-hundred years later than Caesar’s day. Thucydides’s History of the Peloponnesian War (460–400 BC) is known from eight manuscripts, the earliest of which dates to AD 900. F. F. Bruce comments, “No classical scholar would listen to an argument that the authenticity of Herodotus or Thucydides is in doubt because the earliest manuscripts of their works which are of any use to us are over 1,300 years later than the originals” (The New Testament Documents). We have around 5,800 Greek handwritten manuscripts of the NT produced before the invention of the printing press, and more manuscripts continue to be discovered. The oldest of these are probably the papyrus fragments, P52 and P90 (excerpts of the Gospel of John). Both come from approximately sixty years after the original composition of that Gospel.

Textual criticism is the application of reasoned considerations in choosing among various variant readings in manuscripts in order to determine the most authentic version of a text. Textual critics study the making and transmission of ancient manuscripts, describing the most important documents (witnesses) and the history of textual criticism itself. Also called “lower criticism,” textual criticism is the first or basic step in biblical study. The Bible student needs to have a reliable biblical text before commencing its interpretation. In translations, crucial variants are indicated with a footnote, for example, Mark 16:8: “Other mss include vv. 9-20 as a longer ending.” Nevertheless, the vast majority of variants merely involve differences in spelling and the absence or inclusion of the Greek article (“the”).

HISTORY OF TEXTUAL CRITICISM

When Paul asked Timothy to bring him "the scrolls, especially the parchments" (2Tm 4:13), he requested manuscripts written on papyrus and parchment, which were rolled up as scrolls or bound as codices. Papyrus plants grew in the shallow waters of the Nile in Egypt. Parchment was made from the skins of cattle, sheep, goats, and antelopes. Probably over 350 skins of sheep or goats were needed to make Codex Sinaiticus, a fourth-century AD manuscript that contains the whole NT and most of the OT. Codices were made of sheets folded in the middle and then sewn together—the precursor of paper books today. Because of their love of studying God's Word, Christians preferred the codex over the scroll since students could more easily locate a passage. Moreover, only a codex could contain the whole NT, it was cheaper to produce than a scroll, and the effect would appear more similar to the original NT letters that Paul probably kept in a notebook of codex form, as used by artisans. Eventually paper was used instead of papyrus and parchment.

Ancient manuscripts could be written in capital letters (majuscules) or smaller, cursive letters (minuscules). Handwriting styles enable paleographers to date a manuscript within a generation (half a century). The more reliable manuscripts are older, having been produced closest in time to the original manuscript. In addition, when manuscripts from different geographical areas without any genealogical relationship (one manuscript not being a copy of the other manuscript) agree, that normally points to a reading that goes back to an older common ancestor. Most evangelical scholars prefer these types of criteria ("external evidence") for reconstructing the original text because they are more objective. To confirm such objective criteria, however, a text critic can suggest reasoned guesses as to why differences may have occurred on the basis of probable errors that scribes tended to make, or intentional alterations that reflect textual harmonization or filling out details and descriptions (e.g., changing "Jesus" to "Jesus Christ"). Such considerations are regarded factors of "internal evidence."

By the fourth century AD, manuscripts usually were produced by commercial book manufacturers (scriptoria). A reader or lector would read aloud the exemplar text, and several trained scribes would write down the text. A corrector, or copy editor, would then check each copy. Ancient Christians and Jews had such an elevated view of the biblical text that instead of scraping off any original words, they would copy a later text in the margin. Sometimes, centuries later, scribes would also add variants better known to them in the margins of the original.

By the fifth century, copies of Bibles were produced by individual monks in monastic scriptoria. The end of the book of Revelation demonstrates the importance of accuracy; it notes that if anyone adds to the words of the prophecy, "God will add to him the plagues that are written in this book" and, if anyone takes away from the words of the prophecy, "God will take away his share of the tree of life and the holy city" (Rv 22:18-20). The NT was copied by hand until Gutenberg's invention of the moveable type print; in 1456, the Latin Vulgate Bible was produced. In 1516 the first printed Greek NT was made available to the public. The Geneva Bible of 1560 was the first English Bible with verse divisions.

TEXTUAL TRADITIONS

The OT has two principal text types: the Masoretic (Hebrew) and the Septuagint (Greek). The goal of the Masoretes was "to transmit the Hebrew text in a form unchanged from that which they had received" (R. K. Harrison, Introduction to the Old Testament). Every consonant was considered sacred. Hebrew scribes counted words and letters to ensure accuracy and memorized the appropriate vowels to be vocalized between the consonants. The Masoretic scholars inserted these vowels in the written text by the sixth century AD. When the Dead Sea Scrolls were discovered with OT manuscripts dating centuries earlier, they testified "independently to the traditions lying behind the Masoretic form, and have furnished powerful support for the general trustworthiness of the Masoretic text" (Harrison, ibid.). The oldest known translation of the OT is the "Greek of the Seventy" (or 72) translators, the Septuagint (LXX). It began with the Pentateuch at Alexandria, Egypt, under Ptolemy II Philadelphus around 250 BC. The OT was fully translated by the second century BC. The NT writers quoted both the Masoretic and Septuagint texts.

Around the region of the Mediterranean, in important cities, the early church developed schools that became centers for authoritative Christian leaders. Renowned for its scholarship, as well as having an excellent climate to preserve papyri, Alexandria in Egypt became an important center of learning and of Christian thought before the siege of the Muslim Arabs in the seventh century AD. Textual criticism began in Alexandria with the study of the Greek epic poetry of Homer. The goal was to identify the oldest Homeric manuscripts. The early church father Origen, in his early years, used the "Alexandrian" text type of the NT. Codices Sinaiticus and Vaticanus, and the Coptic versions, exemplify this text type. In contrast, in Italy, Gaul, and Carthage, the "Western" text was used. Western texts are known for their paraphrases, free addition and occasional omission of words, sentences, and incidents. Thus, most text critics consider the Western texts to be less reliable in terms of their fidelity to the original text, although they may also include early textual traditions. For instance, Codex Bezae's book of Acts is almost one-tenth longer than the normal text. Since Christians in Ephesus often traveled to Rome, they too tended to use the Western text type.

When Origen moved to Caesarea (after AD 230), he used the "Caesarean" text, which is a compromise between the Alexandrian and Western text types. Scholars in Antioch and the historian Eusebius in Caesarea also used it. When Armenia became the first nation to accept Christianity as its official religion (fourth century AD), the NT was translated into Armenian using the Caesarean text type (especially for Matthew and Mark).

Lucian of Antioch, who died in AD 312, combined the text at Antioch with the Western and Alexandrian texts, creating the basis for the "Byzantine" text; it became the prevailing text throughout the Byzantine Church when Emperor Constantine adopted it in AD 380. Most scholars consider the Byzantine text a later, derivative text. Its aim was to make the Greek smoother and more attractive to the ordinary reader, but the result impoverished its sense and force. Since the center of Christianity shifted to Constantinople in the fourth century, and the patriarch John Chrysostom (who had been in Antioch) preferred this text type, the Byzantine text nevertheless became the universal standard of the church, especially after the seventh century. The oldest Greek Byzantine text may be found in the Gospels of Codex Alexandrinus (fifth century). Eventually the Byzantine text came to be called the Textus Receptus ("Received Text") or "majority text" because the majority of witnesses produced in the Middle Ages were of the Byzantine text type. It even became the basis for the King James Version. Most text critics would agree with Bruce Metzger, however, that the Alexandrian text type is "far superior" to the Western and Byzantine texts since the quality of witnesses should be "weighed" rather than "counted" (The Text of the New Testament).

CONCLUSION

Contrary to some popular perceptions—that our modern Bibles were produced through the making of copies of copies, that gradually eroded the trustworthiness of the Bible over the centuries—our Bibles are constructed from the best and earliest manuscripts. And since we continue to discover new ancient manuscripts, the text is getting more accurate, not less. This fact, together with the huge supply of textual evidence available to us—which dramatically supersedes the evidence for any other ancient texts—means that we enjoy great confidence in the reliability of the text of Scripture.

16:1 Anointing a corpse with oil reduced the odor of decomposition. Anointing with aromatics (spices), however, was reserved for the burial of kings (2Ch 16:14; Sg 4:10). Thus, the anointing of Jesus's body with spices affirms the women's belief that he was indeed the King of Israel. The dignity of such an anointing may have been intended to remove the disgrace of crucifixion.

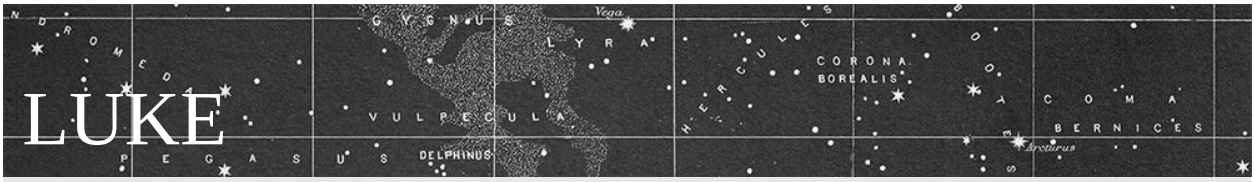
16:5 The white robe would be understood to belong to a heavenly being. Contrary to popular depictions today, the Bible does not describe angels as having wings (except in the case of the seraphim; cp. Is 6:2). Generally in the Bible, angels are described with human-like features.



LUKE

INTRODUCTION

The Gospel of Luke is the longest book in the NT. Focusing on the life and ministry of Jesus Christ, this Gospel is part one of a two-part history, the book of Acts being part two. Both were dedicated to "most honorable Theophilus" (Lk 1:3; Ac 1:1).

CIRCUMSTANCES OF WRITING

AUTHOR: The author of the Third Gospel is not named. Considerable evidence points to Luke as its author. Much of that proof is found in the book of Acts, which identifies itself as a sequel to Luke (Ac 1:1-3). A major line of evidence has to do with the so-called "we" sections of the book (Ac 16:10-17; 20:5-15; 21:1-18; 27:1-37; 28:1-16). Most of Acts is narrated in third-person plural ("they," "them"), but some later sections having to do with the ministry of the apostle Paul unexpectedly shift to first-person plural ("we," "us"). This indicates that the author had joined the apostle Paul for the events recorded in those passages. Since there are no "we" passages in the Gospel of Luke, that fits with the author stating that he used eyewitness testimony to the life of Jesus (1:2), indicating he was not such an eyewitness himself.

Among Paul's well-known coworkers, the most likely candidate is Luke, the doctor (see Col 4:14; Phm 24). That is also the unanimous testimony of the earliest Christian writers (e.g., Justin Martyr, the Muratorian Canon, and Tertullian). Since Luke is not named among the workers who were "of the circumcised" (i.e., a Jew; Col 4:11), he was almost certainly a Gentile. That explains the healthy emphasis on Gentiles in Luke (6:17; 7:1-10). Luke also reflects an interest in medical matters (e.g., 4:38; 14:2).

BACKGROUND: Traditionally, the Gospel of Luke is believed to have been written after both Matthew and Mark. Those who date Matthew and Mark in the 60s or 70s AD have tended to push the dating of Luke back to the 70s or 80s AD.

Since Luke wrote both the Third Gospel and the book of Acts (Ac 1:1-3), it is relevant to consider the dating of both books together. The events at the end of Acts occurred around AD 62–63. That is the earliest point at which Acts could have been written. If Acts was written in the early 60s AD from Rome, where Paul was imprisoned for two years (Ac 28:30), the Third Gospel could date from an earlier stage of that period of imprisonment. The other reasonable possibility is during Paul's earlier two-year imprisonment in Caesarea (Ac 24:27). From that location, Luke would have been able to travel and interview the eyewitnesses to Jesus's life and ministry who were still alive.

The Third Gospel is addressed to "most honorable Theophilus" (Lk 1:3), about whom nothing else is known other than that he is also the recipient of the book of Acts (Ac 1:1). The Greek name Theophilus means "lover of God" or "friend of God" and implies that he was a Gentile, probably Greek. He seems to have been a relatively new believer, recently instructed about Jesus and the Christian faith (Lk 1:4). The title "most honorable" indicates that, at the least, he was a person of high standing and financial substance. It may also reflect that he was an official with some governmental authority and power.

CONTRIBUTION TO THE BIBLE

Nearly sixty percent of the material in the Gospel of Luke is unique. Thus, there is a great deal that readers of Scripture would not know if the Third Gospel were not in the Bible. Notable among the larger distinctive portions are: (1) much of the material in Luke 1–2 about the births of John the Baptist and Jesus, (2) the only biblical material on Jesus's childhood and pre-ministry adult life (2:40-52), (3) a genealogy for Jesus (3:23-38) that is significantly different from the one in Matthew 1:1-17, (4) most of the "travelogue" section about Jesus's journey to Jerusalem (Lk 9:51–19:44), (5) a considerably different slant on the destruction of the temple (21:5-38) from the Olivet Discourse in Matthew 24–25 and Mark 13, and (6) quite a bit of fresh material in the post-resurrection appearances, including the Emmaus Road, a distinctive statement of the Great Commission, and the only description in the Gospels of Jesus's ascension into heaven (Lk 24:13-53).

STRUCTURE

Luke's distinctive "narrative about the events" (1:1) of the life of Jesus is written in "orderly sequence" (1:3), though not strict chronological sequence in many cases (as the notes will explain at various points). Generally, after the key events leading up to the beginning of Christ's public ministry (1:5–4:13), the flow of the book is from his early ministry in and around Galilee (4:14–9:50), through an extended description of ministry related to his journey to Jerusalem (9:51–19:44), climaxing in the events of Passion Week and post-resurrection appearances in and around Jerusalem (19:45–24:53).

TEACHINGS ABOUT GOD

In this Gospel, God initiates everything concerning salvation. The glory of God is especially emphasized from the song of the angels (2:14) to the triumphal entry (19:38). Equally important is the glory of Jesus himself, from the transfiguration (9:32) to his resurrection splendor (24:26). Jesus is, of course, the virgin-born Son of God in this book. The Spirit is active from Jesus's conception to the great power of his ministry (1:35; 4:14). The Spirit is also the gift Jesus promised to his followers (11:13).

TEACHINGS ABOUT HUMANITY

This Gospel focuses on humanity in two ways. First, Jesus is the ideal or perfect Human. Luke shows what a Spirit-filled person, wholly obedient to God, is like. (Note the centurion's confession at Jesus's death: "This man really was righteous!" 23:47). Second, Luke painted a vivid portrait of a number of individuals Jesus influenced, showing the value of each human life.

TEACHINGS ABOUT SALVATION

The turning point in this Gospel is 9:51, when "he determined to journey to Jerusalem." Jerusalem was the proper place for Jesus to offer himself as a sacrifice. In his own words, "Wasn't it necessary for the Messiah to suffer these things and enter into his glory?" (24:26). On the night he was betrayed, he taught his disciples that his death was a substitute and that it brought about the new covenant (see Jr 31:31-34).

THE DEDICATION TO THEOPHILUS

1 Many have undertaken to compile a narrative about the events that have been fulfilled † among us, † 2 just as the original eyewitnesses † and servants of the word † handed them down to us. 3 It also seemed good to me, since I have carefully investigated everything from the very first, to write to you in an orderly sequence, most honorable † Theophilus, † 4 so that you may know the certainty of the things about which you have been instructed. † †

GABRIEL PREDICTS JOHN'S BIRTH

5 In the days of King Herod † of Judea, there was a priest of Abijah's division † named Zechariah. His wife was from the daughters of Aaron, and her name was Elizabeth. 6 Both were righteous in God's sight, † living without blame † according to all the commands and requirements of the Lord. 7 But they had no children because Elizabeth could not conceive, and both of them were well along in years. †

8 When his division was on duty † and he was serving as priest before God, 9 it happened that he was chosen by lot, † according to the custom of the priesthood, to enter the sanctuary of the Lord and burn incense. † 10 At the hour of incense the whole assembly of the people was praying outside. 11 An angel of the Lord † appeared to him, standing to the right of the altar of incense. † 12 When Zechariah saw him, he was terrified and overcome with fear. † 13 But the angel said to him: "Do not be afraid, † Zechariah, because your prayer has been heard. † Your wife Elizabeth will bear you a son, and you will name him John. † 14 There will be joy and delight for you, and many will rejoice at his birth. 15 For he will be great in the sight of the Lord and will never drink wine or beer. † He will be filled with the Holy Spirit † while still in his mother's womb. † 16 He will turn many of the children of Israel to the Lord their God. † 17 And he will go before him in the spirit and power of Elijah, to turn the hearts of fathers to their children, † and the disobedient to the understanding of the righteous, to make ready for the Lord a prepared people." †

18 "How can I know this? " Zechariah asked the angel. "For I am an old man, and my wife is well along in years."

19 The angel answered him, "I am Gabriel, † who stands in the presence of God, † and I was sent to speak to you and tell you this good news. 20 Now listen. You will become silent and unable to speak until the day these things take place, because you did not believe my words, which will be fulfilled in their proper time.”

21 Meanwhile, the people were waiting for Zechariah, amazed that he stayed so long in the sanctuary. 22 When he did come out, he could not speak to them. Then they realized that he had seen a vision in the sanctuary. He was making signs to them † and remained speechless. 23 When the days of his ministry were completed, he went back home.
24 After these days his wife Elizabeth conceived and kept herself in seclusion for five months. She said, 25 “The Lord has done this for me. He has looked with favor in these days to take away my disgrace † among the people.”

GABRIEL PREDICTS JESUS’S BIRTH

26 In the sixth month, the angel Gabriel † was sent by God to a town in Galilee called Nazareth, † 27 to a virgin engaged † † to a man named Joseph, of the house of David. † The virgin’s name was Mary. 28 And the angel came to her and said, “Greetings, favored woman! The Lord is with you.” † 29 But she was deeply troubled † by this statement, wondering what kind of greeting this could be. 30 Then the angel told her: “Do not be afraid, Mary, † for you have found favor with God. † 31 Now listen: You will conceive and give birth to a son, and you will name him Jesus. † 32 He will be great and will be called the Son of the Most High, † and the Lord God will give him the throne of his father David. †
33 He will reign over the house of Jacob † forever, and his kingdom will have no end.” †
34 Mary asked the angel, “How can this be, since I have not had sexual relations with a man? ” †
35 The angel replied to her: “The Holy Spirit will come upon you, † and the power of the Most High will overshadow you. Therefore, the holy one to be born will be called the Son of God. † 36 And consider your relative Elizabeth — even she has conceived a son in her old age, and this is the sixth month for her who was called childless. 37 For nothing will be impossible with God.” †
38 “I am the Lord’s servant,” said Mary. “May it be done to me according to your word.” Then the angel left her.

MARY'S VISIT TO ELIZABETH

39 In those days Mary set out and hurried to a town in the hill country of Judah 40 where she entered Zechariah's house and greeted Elizabeth. 41 When Elizabeth heard Mary's greeting, the baby leaped inside her, and Elizabeth was filled with the Holy Spirit. † 42 Then she exclaimed with a loud cry: "Blessed are you among women, and your child will be blessed! † 43 How could this happen to me, that the mother of my Lord should come to me? 44 For you see, when the sound of your greeting reached my ears, the baby leaped for joy inside me. 45 Blessed is she who has believed that the Lord would fulfill what he has spoken to her! "

MARY'S PRAISE

46 And Mary said:

My soul praises the greatness of † the Lord, †
47 and my spirit rejoices † in God my Savior, † 48 because he has looked with favor on the humble condition of his servant.
Surely, from now on all generations will call me blessed, † 49 because the Mighty One † has done great things for me, † and his name † is holy.
50 His mercy is from generation to generation † on those who fear him.
51 He has done a mighty deed with his arm; † he has scattered the proud because of the thoughts of their hearts; † 52 he has toppled the mighty from their thrones and exalted the lowly. † 53 He has satisfied the hungry with good things † and sent the rich away empty.
54 He has helped his servant Israel, remembering his mercy

55 to Abraham and his descendants † forever, † just as he spoke to our ancestors.

56 And Mary stayed with her about three months; then she returned to her home.

THE BIRTH AND NAMING OF JOHN

57 Now the time had come for Elizabeth to give birth, and she had a son. 58 Then her neighbors and relatives heard that the Lord had shown her his great mercy, † and they rejoiced with her.

59 When they came to circumcise the child on the eighth day, † they were going to name him Zechariah, after his father. 60 But his mother responded, “No. He will be called John.” †

61 Then they said to her, “None of your relatives has that name.” 62 So they motioned to his father † to find out what he wanted him to be called. 63 He asked for a writing tablet and wrote: “His name is John.” And they were all amazed. 64 Immediately his mouth was opened † and his tongue set free, and he began to speak, praising God. 65 Fear came on all those who lived around them, and all these things were being talked about throughout the hill country of Judea. 66 All who heard about him † took it to heart, saying, “What then will this child become? ” For, indeed, the Lord’s hand was with him.

ZECHARIAH’S PROPHECY

67 Then his father Zechariah was filled with the Holy Spirit † and prophesied: †

68 Blessed is the Lord, the God of Israel, † because he has visited and provided redemption for his people. † 69 He has raised up a horn of salvation for us † in the house of his servant David, † 70 just as he spoke by the mouth of his holy prophets in ancient times; † 71 salvation from our enemies and from the hand of those who hate us.

72 He has dealt mercifully with our fathers † and remembered his holy covenant † — 73 the oath that he swore to our father Abraham. †
He has given us the privilege, 74 since we have been rescued from the hand of our enemies, to serve him without fear 75 in holiness and righteousness in his presence all our days.
76 And you, child, will be called a prophet of the Most High, † for you will go before the Lord to prepare his ways, † 77 to give his people knowledge of salvation through the forgiveness of their sins. †
78 Because of our God's merciful compassion, the dawn from on high † will visit us 79 to shine on those who live in darkness and the shadow of death, †
to guide our feet into the way of peace.

80 The child grew up and became spiritually strong, † and he was in the wilderness until the day of his public appearance to Israel.

1:1 Luke's statement that many have undertaken to compile a narrative suggests that many before him compiled accounts of Jesus's life and ministry. Luke was not an eyewitness himself (v. 2). Instead, he conducted a careful investigation of many sources (v. 3). We do not know all sources employed, but most NT scholars contend that Luke at least used Mark's Gospel. See "Biblical Inspiration and Inerrancy," p. XXXI.

1:3 Theophilus (Gk Theophilus, "loved by God" or "one who loves God") was a common name in antiquity. Most honorable was sometimes employed as a formal title in reference to people of social standing (Ac 23:26; 24:3). Other times it was used as a polite form of address. Publishing a literary work was costly in ancient times; Theophilus likely served as the patron or sponsor for the Gospel of Luke and Acts (Ac 1:1). It was common for a patron's name to appear in the introduction of an ancient writing.

1:5 King Herod of Judea served as the client king of the Romans from 37 BC through AD 4. He was known as a great builder and ruthless leader. His most famous building project was the temple in Jerusalem. Fear of losing his throne led him to murder his wife, Mariamne, and three of his sons. Jesus and John the Baptist were born shortly before Herod's death. Here Judea probably refers to Judea, Galilee, Samaria, and a large portion of Perea and Coele-Syria.

1:9 Due to the great number of priests, being chosen to enter the sanctuary of the Lord and burn incense was a once in a lifetime privilege. Priests burned incense during the morning and evening sacrifices. The rising smoke symbolized the prayers of God's people rising up to him (Ps 141:2; Rv 5:8; 8:3-4).

1:27 In Jewish culture, the engagement period usually lasted one year before the wedding. Luke does not indicate the ages of Joseph and Mary at the time of their betrothal, but Jewish females could be pledged as early as their twelfth year. Most Jewish men married between the ages of eighteen and twenty, while most Jewish women married in their early teens, usually thirteen to sixteen.

1:31 Jesus (Gk Iesous), the Greek equivalent of the Hebrew name "Joshua" (Hb Yehoshua), was a common name in first-century Palestine. It means "Yahweh saves."

1:32-33 The throne of his father David refers to the covenant God made to David (2Sm 7; Ps 89), in which he promised to raise up his "seed" whose kingdom will have no end. This promise became the basis for Israel's expectation of a Messiah.

1:52-53 The OT looks forward to a time when God will bring about justice for the lowly and hungry. God will reverse social and political fortunes. This theme is also found in the Wisdom literature of Second Temple Judaism: “The Lord overthrows the thrones of rulers, and enthrones the lowly in their place” (Sir 10:14).

1:59-63 Elizabeth insists that her newborn son be called John. This choice was unusual as it was customary to use the name of the infant’s father or grandfather, rather than a non-family name.

1:63 A writing tablet was a wooden board with a depressed area into which one poured melted wax. A person could scratch writing into the dried wax with a stylus.

1:67-79 Like Mary’s Praise (1:46-55), Zechariah’s Prophecy is nationalistic, incorporating attention to Israel’s physical salvation—a theme of many psalms and other writings within Judaism. Zechariah also points forward to the roles of Jesus and John and this work is thus similar to the royal psalms that focus on God’s salvation coming through his Messiah (e.g., Pss 2; 110).

THE BIRTH OF JESUS

2 In those days a decree went out from Caesar Augustus † that the whole empire † should be registered. 2 This first registration took place while † Quirinius was governing Syria. † 3 So everyone went to be registered, each to his own town.
4 Joseph also went up from the town of Nazareth † in Galilee, to Judea, to the city of David, which is called Bethlehem, † because he was of the house and family line of David, † 5 to be registered along with Mary, who was engaged to him † and was pregnant. 6 While they were there, the time came for her to give birth. 7 Then she gave birth to her firstborn son, and she wrapped him tightly in cloth and laid him in a manger, † because there was no guest room available for them.

THE SHEPHERDS AND THE ANGELS

8 In the same region, shepherds were staying out in the fields and keeping watch at night over their flock. 9 Then an angel of the Lord † stood before them, † and the glory of the Lord † shone around them, and they were terrified. † 10 But the angel said to them, “Don’t be afraid, † for look, I proclaim to you good news of great joy that will be for all the people: † 11 Today in the city of David a Savior † was born for you, who is the Messiah, † the Lord. † 12 This will be the sign for you: † You will find a baby wrapped tightly in cloth and lying in a manger.”

13 Suddenly there was a multitude of the heavenly host † with the angel, praising God and saying:

14 Glory to God in the highest heaven, † and peace on earth † to people he favors! † † †

15 When the angels had left them and returned to heaven, the shepherds said to one another, “Let’s go straight to Bethlehem and see what has happened, which the Lord has made known to us.” 16 They hurried off and found both Mary and Joseph, and the baby who was lying in the manger. 17 After seeing them, they reported the message they were told about this child, 18 and all who heard it were amazed † at what the shepherds said to them. 19 But Mary was treasuring up all these things in her heart † and meditating on them. 20 The shepherds returned, glorifying and praising God † for all the things they had seen and heard, which were just as they had been told.

THE CIRCUMCISION AND PRESENTATION OF JESUS

21 When the eight days were completed for his circumcision, † he was named Jesus † — the name given by the angel before he was conceived. 22 And when the days of their purification according to the law of Moses were finished, † they brought him up to Jerusalem to present him to the Lord 23 (just as it is written in the law of the Lord, Every firstborn male will be dedicated † to the Lord † †) 24 and to offer a sacrifice (according to what is stated in the law of the Lord, a pair of turtledoves or two young pigeons † †).

SIMEON’S PROPHETIC PRAISE

25 There was a man in Jerusalem whose name was Simeon. This man was righteous and devout, † looking forward to Israel’s consolation, † and the Holy Spirit was on him. 26 It had been revealed to him by the Holy Spirit † that he would not see death before he saw the Lord’s Messiah. † 27 Guided by the Spirit, he entered the temple. When the parents brought in the child Jesus to perform for him what was customary under the law, [28] Simeon took him up in his arms, praised God, and said, [29] Now, Master,

you can dismiss your servant in peace,
as you promised.
[30] For my eyes have seen your salvation. † [31] You have prepared it in the presence of all peoples — [32] a light for revelation to the Gentiles † † and glory to your people Israel. †

[33] His father and mother † were amazed at what was being said about him. [34] Then Simeon blessed them and told his mother Mary: "Indeed, this child is destined to cause the fall and rise of many in Israel † and to be a sign that will be opposed † — [35] and a sword will pierce your own soul — that the thoughts † of many hearts may be revealed."

ANNA'S TESTIMONY

[36] There was also a prophetess, † Anna, a daughter of Phanuel, of the tribe of Asher. † She was well along in years, having lived with her husband seven years after her marriage, † † [37] and was a widow for eighty-four years. † She did not leave the temple, serving God night and day with fasting and prayers. †
[38] At that very moment, † she came up and began to thank God and to speak about him to all who were looking forward to the redemption of Jerusalem. † †

THE FAMILY'S RETURN TO NAZARETH

[39] When they had completed everything according to the law of the Lord, they returned to Galilee, to their own town of Nazareth. † [40] The boy grew up and became strong, filled with wisdom, and God's grace was on him. †

IN HIS FATHER'S HOUSE

42 When he was twelve years old, they went up according to the custom of the festival. † 43 After those days were over, † as they were returning, the boy Jesus stayed behind in Jerusalem, but his parents † did not know it.
44 Assuming he was in the traveling party, they went a day's journey. Then they began looking for him among their relatives and friends. 45 When they did not find him, they returned to Jerusalem to search for him. 46 After three days, they found him in the temple sitting among the teachers, listening to them and asking them questions. 47 And all those who heard him were astounded at his understanding and his answers. 48 When his parents saw him, they were astonished, and his mother said to him, † "Son, why have you treated us like this? Your father and I have been anxiously searching for you." †
49 "Why were you searching for me?" he asked them. "Didn't you know that it was necessary for me to be in my Father's house?" † 50 But they did not understand what he said to them. †

IN FAVOR WITH GOD AND WITH PEOPLE

51 Then he went down with them and came to Nazareth and was obedient to them. His mother kept all these things in her heart. † 52 And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and with people. †

2:1-4 Caesar Augustus served as emperor from 31 BC to AD 14. Luke mentions a census that took place during the governorship of Quirinius. A census was used to determine either the number of available fighting men for military service, or to obtain an accurate record used for taxation purposes. Ancient records refer to a census that took place in AD 6 (Josephus, Ant. 18.26; see also Ac 5:37). Biblical scholars, however, argue that Jesus was born around 5 BC, although no ancient record mentions a census that took place at this time. One plausible explanation, supported by some inscriptional evidence, is that Quirinius may have been governor of Syria twice. The first census may have taken place during his first term while the second occurred during his second (AD 6). Another possibility is that the phrase this first registration took place while Quirinius was governing Syria could be translated to mean that "this registration was before Quirinius was governing Syria" (see the related footnote for this variation). Such a translation would alleviate the historical difficulty of Luke's account.

2:7 The Greek term katalyma, guest room, likely refers to a room in a private home (see 22:11), rather than a commercial inn (Gk pandocheion, 10:34). Since animals were sometimes kept in rooms within private residences, a manger, or feeding trough, would not have been out of place in such a room.

2:13-14 See "A Biblical View of Angels," p. 1531.

2:22 In cases in which a son was born, the OT prescribed a period of purification for forty days—seven days before the circumcision and thirty-three days after (Lv 12:1-8). The child's mother must not touch anything sacred or go to the sanctuary during this time. A sacrifice was made for her purification after that (Lk 2:24).

2:37 See "A Biblical View of Retirement," p. 175.

THE MESSIAH'S HERALD

3 In the fifteenth year of the reign of Tiberius Caesar, while Pontius Pilate was governor of Judea, † Herod was tetrarch † of Galilee, † his brother Philip tetrarch of the region of Iturea and Trachonitis, and Lysanias tetrarch of Abilene, 2 during the high priesthood of Annas † and Caiaphas, † God's word came to John the son of Zechariah in the wilderness. † 3 He went into all the vicinity of the Jordan, † proclaiming a baptism of repentance for the forgiveness of sins, † 4 as it is written in the book of the words of the prophet Isaiah:

A voice of one crying out in the wilderness:
Prepare the way for the Lord;
make his paths straight!
5 Every valley will be filled, and every mountain and hill will be made low; † the crooked will become straight, the rough ways smooth,

6 and everyone will see the salvation of God. † †
7 He then said to the crowds who came out to be baptized by him, “Brood of vipers! † Who warned you to flee from the coming wrath? † 8 Therefore produce fruit † consistent with repentance. And don’t start saying to yourselves, ‘We have Abraham as our father,’ † for I tell you that God is able to raise up children for Abraham from these stones. 9 The ax is already at the root of the trees. Therefore, every tree that doesn’t produce good fruit will be cut down and thrown into the fire.” †
10 “What then should we do? ” † the crowds were asking him.
11 He replied to them, “The one who has two shirts must share with someone who has none, and the one who has food must do the same.” †
12 Tax collectors † also came to be baptized, and they asked him, “Teacher, what should we do? ” † 13 He told them, “Don’t collect any more than what you have been authorized.”
14 Some soldiers also questioned him, “What should we do? ”
He said to them, “Don’t take money from anyone by force or false accusation, and be satisfied with your wages.”
15 Now the people were waiting expectantly, and all of them were questioning in their hearts whether John might be the Messiah. † 16 John answered them all, †
“I baptize you with water, but one who is more powerful than I am is coming. I am not worthy to untie the strap of his sandals. He will baptize you with † the Holy Spirit and fire. 17 His winnowing shovel † is in his hand to clear his threshing floor and gather the wheat into his barn, † but the chaff he will burn with fire that never goes out.” † 18 Then, along with many other exhortations, he proclaimed good news to the people. 19 But when John rebuked Herod the tetrarch † because of Herodias, his brother’s wife, and all the evil things he had done, † 20 Herod added this to everything else — he locked up John in prison. †

21 When all the people were baptized, † Jesus also was baptized. As he was praying, † heaven opened, † 22 and the Holy Spirit descended on him in a physical appearance like a dove. And a voice came from heaven: “You are my beloved Son; with you I am well-pleased.” †

3:1-2 Demonstrating a concern to establish his narrative within world history, Luke references the fifteenth year of the reign of Tiberius Caesar. Tiberius Caesar, stepson of Augustus, reigned from AD 14–37. If Luke followed the Roman method for measuring time, the fifteenth year could have been anywhere between the fall of AD 27 and that of 29. Pontius Pilate was the Roman governor of Judea from

AD 26–36. Herod Antipas was the tetrarch of Galilee and Perea (4 BC–AD 39) and son of Herod the Great. All later references to Herod in this Gospel are to Herod Antipas (3:19-20; 8:3; 9:7-9; 13:31; 23:7-12). Philip was another son of Herod the Great. He ruled territories northeast of Palestine, Iturea, and Traconius (4 BC–AD 33). Annas was an important Jewish high priest (AD 6–15) and the father-in-law of Caiaphas, who served as high priest at the time of Jesus's crucifixion (Jn 18:13-14). Though formally removed from the high priesthood in AD 15 by Valerius Gratus, Annas continued to exercise great influence. Little is known of Lysanius.

3:19 John criticized Herod Antipas for divorcing his first wife, the daughter of the Arabian king Aretas, in order to marry Herodias in AD 26. Herodias was first married to Herod Antipas's brother, Philip. Jews in Herod's day would have regarded his behavior as scandalous.

3:23-38 To emphasize Jesus's connection to the whole of humanity, Luke traces his genealogy back to Adam, the first man (see "Creation: A Young Earth Perspective ," p. 9.) In contrast, Matthew traces Jesus's genealogy back to Abraham, the Jewish patriarch (Mt 1:1-2,17). Ancient genealogies, Jewish or non-Jewish, did not necessarily include every name in a family line. Both Luke and Matthew demonstrate that Jesus's lineage is in keeping with messianic expectation, as the seed of David.

THE TEMPTATION OF JESUS

4 Then Jesus † left the Jordan, † full of the Holy Spirit, † and was led by the Spirit † in the wilderness 2 for forty days † to be tempted by the devil. He ate nothing during those days, and when they were over, he was hungry. 3 The devil said to him, "If you are the Son of God, tell this stone to become bread."
4 But Jesus answered him, "It is written: Man must not live on bread alone." † † †
5 So he took him up † and showed him all the kingdoms of the world † in a moment of time. 6 The devil said to him, "I will give you their splendor and all this authority, because it has been given over to me, † and I can give it to anyone I want. 7 If you, then, will worship me, † all will be yours." 8 And Jesus answered him, † "It is written: Worship the Lord your God, and serve † him only." † 9 So he took him to Jerusalem, had him stand on the pinnacle of the temple, and said to him, "If you are the Son of God, throw yourself down from here. 10 For it is written:
He will give his angels orders concerning you, to protect you, † † 11 and they will support you with their hands,
so that you will not strike your foot against a stone.” † †

12 And Jesus answered him, “It is said: Do not test the Lord your God.” † †

13 After the devil had finished every temptation, he departed from him for a time.

MINISTRY IN GALILEE

14 Then Jesus returned to Galilee in the power of the Spirit, † and news about him spread throughout the entire vicinity. † 15 He was teaching in their synagogues, † being praised † by everyone.

REJECTION AT NAZARETH

16 He came to Nazareth, where he had been brought up. † As usual, he entered the synagogue on the Sabbath day † and stood up to read. † 17 The scroll of the prophet Isaiah was given to him, and unrolling the scroll, he found the place where it was written:

18 The Spirit of the Lord is on me, because he has anointed me to preach good news to the poor.
He has sent me †
to proclaim release † to the captives and recovery of sight to the blind, to set free the oppressed,
19 to proclaim the year of the Lord’s favor. † †

20 He then rolled up the scroll, gave it back to the attendant, and sat down. † And the eyes of everyone in the synagogue were fixed on him. 21 He began by saying to them, “Today as you listen, this Scripture has been fulfilled.” †

22 They were all speaking well of him † and were amazed by the gracious words that came from his mouth; yet they said, “Isn’t this Joseph’s son? ” †

23 Then he said to them, “No doubt you will quote this proverb † to me: ‘Doctor, heal yourself. What we’ve heard that took place in Capernaum, † do here in your hometown also.’ ”

24 He also said, “Truly I tell you, no prophet is accepted in his hometown. †
25 But I say to you, there were certainly many widows in Israel in Elijah’s days, † when the sky was shut up for three years and six months while a great famine came over all the land. 26 Yet Elijah was not sent to any of them except a widow at Zarephath in Sidon. † 27 And in the prophet Elisha’s time, there were many in Israel who had leprosy, † and yet not one of them was cleansed except Naaman the Syrian.” † 28 When they heard this, everyone in the synagogue was enraged. 29 They got up, drove him out of town, † and brought him to the edge of the hill that their town was built on, intending to hurl him over the cliff. 30 But he passed right through the crowd and went on his way. †

DRIVING OUT AN UNCLEAN SPIRIT

31 Then he went down to Capernaum, † a town in Galilee, and was teaching them on the Sabbath. 32 They were astonished at his teaching because his message had authority. † 33 In the synagogue there was a man with an unclean demonic spirit who cried out with a loud voice, † 34 “Leave us alone! What do you have to do with us, Jesus of Nazareth? Have you come to destroy us? I know who you are — the Holy One of God! ” † 35 But Jesus rebuked him † and said, “Be silent and come out of him! ” † And throwing him down before them, the demon came out of him without hurting him at all.
36 Amazement came over them all, and they were saying to one another, “What is this message? For he commands the unclean spirits with authority and power, and they come out! ” 37 And news about him began to go out to every place in the vicinity.

HEALINGS AT CAPERNAUM

38 After he left the synagogue, he entered Simon’s house. † Simon’s mother-in-law was suffering from a high fever, and they asked him about her. † 39 So he stood over her and rebuked the fever, and it left her. She got up immediately † and began to serve them.

40 When the sun was setting, all those who had anyone sick with various diseases brought them to him. As he laid his hands on each one of them, he healed them. † 41 Also, demons were coming out of many, shouting and saying, "You are the Son of God! " † But he rebuked them and would not allow them to speak, because they knew he was the Christ. †

42 When it was day, he went out and made his way to a deserted place. † But the crowds were searching for him. They came to him and tried to keep him from leaving them. 43 But he said to them, "It is necessary for me to proclaim the good news about the kingdom of God to the other towns also, because I was sent for this purpose." 44 And he was preaching in the synagogues of Judea. † †

4:1-13 A comparison ordering of the temptation events detailed in Luke and Matthew reveals some differences. Luke lists them in this order: turning a stone to bread, worshiping the devil, and leaping off the temple. Matthew presents them this way: turning stones to bread (Mt 4:3); leaping off the temple (Mt 4:6); and worshiping the devil (Mt 4:9). It was accepted literary practice among ancient writers to rearrange the chronology of events to emphasize certain themes. Either Luke or Matthew rearranged the temptation narrative for theological purposes. Perhaps Matthew wishes to emphasize the kingdom by aligning it with the last temptation (Mt 4:8-9), while Luke wishes to emphasize the temple.

4:18-19 Reading from Isaiah 61:1-2, Jesus claims that his ministry will be characterized by the Spirit of the Lord's anointing (see also 4:1,14) and will preach good news to the poor. Jesus employs a Jewish method of interpretation known as pesher, showing how an OT prophetic text applies to the present moment. Jesus's ministry is the fulfillment of Isaiah 61:1-2 (Lk 4:21). See also "The Gospel and Social Ministry," p. 1547.

4:24 Jesus's statement, Truly I tell you, no prophet is accepted in his hometown (cp. Mt 13:57; Mk 6:4; Jn 4:44), expresses an idea found in various cultures: the more familiar we are with someone, the less likely we are to regard them as exceptional or unique. The people of Nazareth were unimpressed by the local man they had known from infancy to adulthood. Their rejection foreshadows a wider rejection to come.

4:35 See "Spiritual Warfare," p. 1454.

4:43 The kingdom of God referred to God's rule over the entire universe through the establishment of a righteous kingdom on earth.

THE FIRST DISCIPLES

5 As the crowd was pressing in on Jesus to hear God's word, † he was standing by Lake Gennesaret. † 2 He saw two boats at the edge of the lake; the fishermen had left them and were washing their nets. 3 He got into one of the boats, † which belonged to Simon, and asked him to put out a little from the land. Then he sat down and was teaching the crowds from the boat.
4 When he had finished speaking, he said to Simon, "Put out into deep water and let down your nets for a catch." † 5 "Master," † Simon replied, "we've worked hard all night long and caught nothing. But if you say so, I'll let down the nets." † 6 When they did this, they caught a great number of fish, and their nets † began to tear. 7 So they signaled to their partners in the other boat to come and help them; they came and filled both boats so full that they began to sink.
8 When Simon Peter saw this, he fell at Jesus's knees and said, "Go away from me, because I'm a sinful man, Lord!" † 9 For he and all those with him were amazed † at the catch of fish they had taken, 10 and so were James and John, Zebedee's sons, who were Simon's partners.
"Don't be afraid," † Jesus told Simon. "From now on you will be catching people." † 11 Then they brought the boats to land, left everything, and followed him. †

A MAN CLEANSED

12 While he was in one of the towns, a man was there who had leprosy † all over him. † He saw Jesus, fell facedown, and begged him: "Lord, if you are willing, you can make me clean."

13 Reaching out his hand, Jesus touched him, † saying, “I am willing; be made clean,” and immediately the leprosy left him. 14 Then he ordered him to tell no one: † “But go and show yourself to the priest, and offer what Moses commanded for your cleansing as a testimony to them.” 15 But the news † about him spread even more, and large crowds would come together to hear him and to be healed of their sicknesses. 16 Yet he often withdrew to deserted places and prayed. †

THE SON OF MAN FORGIVES AND HEALS

17 On one of those days while he was teaching, Pharisees and teachers of the law † were sitting there who had come from every village of Galilee and Judea, and also from Jerusalem. And the Lord’s power to heal was in him. † 18 Just then some men came, † carrying on a stretcher a man who was paralyzed. They tried to bring him in and set him down before him. 19 Since they could not find a way to bring him in because of the crowd, they went up on the roof and lowered him on the stretcher through the roof tiles into the middle of the crowd before Jesus.
20 Seeing their faith he said, “Friend, † your sins are forgiven.” 21 Then the scribes and the Pharisees † began to think to themselves: “Who is this man who speaks blasphemies? Who can forgive sins but God alone? ” † 22 But perceiving their thoughts, Jesus replied to them, “Why are you thinking this in your hearts? † 23 Which is easier: to say, ‘Your sins are forgiven you,’ or to say, ‘Get up and walk’? 24 But so that you may know that the Son of Man has authority on earth to forgive sins” — he told the paralyzed man, “I tell you: Get up, take your stretcher, and go home.” 25 Immediately he got up before them, picked up what he had been lying on, and went home glorifying God. † 26 Then everyone was astounded, and they were giving glory to God. And they were filled with awe † and said, “We have seen incredible things today. ”

THE CALL OF LEVI

27 After this, Jesus went out and saw a tax collector named Levi sitting at the tax office, † and he said to him, “Follow me.” 28 So, leaving everything behind, he got up and began to follow him.

ETHICS OF PERSONAL EVANGELISM

Stereotypes of personal evangelism abound. The caricature of a Christian cornering an unbeliever until he relents and repents fits the image of many of those looking at the matter from the outside. Rarely, however, do Christian pastors, leaders, and scholars present the ethical mandate of personal evangelism. Telling people the good news about who Jesus is and what he came to accomplish is not something we merely should do. It is something we must do.

Biblical texts teach us about the ethics of personal evangelism in three broad categories. First, evangelism is mandated in Scripture; this requires an ethical response. Second, we have an ethical relationship that must be forged with unbelievers. Third, there is the ethical reality of an eternal destiny that precludes our silence.

THE ETHICAL RESPONSE

A key component of any ethical system is a proper response to those whom we have pledged our obedience and faithfulness. A husband, for example, pledges fidelity and faithfulness toward his wife. That ethical statement is typically made in the presence of God, his bride, and witnesses present. The exchanging of vows is both a joyous moment and a solemn one. And it is no coincidence that if the husband breaks the vow, he is deemed "unfaithful." He has broken the ethical promise through an unethical response.

Christians, both explicitly and implicitly, make vows or promises to God. If he commands us to do something, our only ethical response is obedience. Any other response is unethical or is, like the wayward husband's actions, unfaithful.

Most Christians know that God through Jesus Christ gave us the Great Commission to share the gospel. The most commonly used example is Matthew 28:19: "Go, therefore, and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit." Acts 1:8 is yet another common example: "But you will receive power when the Holy Spirit has come on you, and you will be my witnesses in Jerusalem, in all Judea and Samaria, and to the end of the earth."

The mandates for personal evangelism are not limited to the better-known biblical texts, however. To the contrary, the mandate was so infused in the lives of the early believers that they could not imagine ignoring it. The disciples Peter and John were commanded by the Sanhedrin to cease speaking about Christ and the gospel. Yet facing further imprisonment and perhaps even more horrific punishment, the two followers responded to the august body with their ethical decision on whether to obey the mandate of the Sanhedrin or the mandate of Christ. Their response is recorded in Acts 4:19-20: "Whether it's right in the sight of God for us to listen to you rather than to God, you decide; for we are unable to stop speaking about what we have seen and heard."

The ethical dilemma was resolved. The ethical response was obedience to God.

THE ETHICAL RELATIONSHIP

Much of Scripture is infused with directions on our relationships with God and with others. Pastors and theologians often refer to the two as the vertical relationship and the horizontal relationship respectively. Perhaps no single verse of the Bible embodies this truth as well as that which is commonly called the Great Commandment: “One of them, an expert in the law, asked a question to test him: ‘Teacher, which command in the law is the greatest?’ He said to him, ‘Love the Lord your God with all your heart, with all your soul, and with all your mind. This is the greatest and most important command. The second is like it: Love your neighbor as yourself. All the Law and the Prophets depend on these two commands’” (Mt 22:35-40).

The horizontal relationship is thus second only to the vertical relationship a Christian has with God. The clear ethical response to this command becomes an ethical relationship with others. What does it mean, therefore, to love our neighbors as ourselves? On the one hand, we should certainly demonstrate concern and care for their physical and emotional needs. Though the responsibility of social ministry has been abdicated by many Christians to government agencies and other organizations, it is—biblically speaking—first the responsibility of believers and the churches to which they belong.

Even more, however, Christians have been commanded to be concerned about the eternal state of others. That need far outweighs any of the physical and emotional needs people may have. Jesus made that reality abundantly clear: “For what does it benefit someone to gain the whole world and yet lose his life?” (Mk 8:36). The struggles of this life are but a blip in the scope of eternity.

The greatest way for Christians to demonstrate obedience to the second portion of the Great Commandment is to declare the availability of God’s love through Jesus Christ. We cannot truly say that we love others until we enter into that ethical relationship, a relationship in which we proclaim the gospel to others in word and deed. The Great Commandment demands an ethical relationship where we are intentionally and unashamedly personally evangelistic to those who are not believers.

THE ETHICAL REALITY

Perhaps the following illustration regarding the necessity of personal evangelism is trite and overplayed, but it still resonates. Imagine a small child skating on thin ice in winter. As you walk by, you see and hear the horror of breaking ice and watch the child teeter slowly toward an icy death in the water. The child reaches out for you to grab her. You have the means to do so. You have the opportunity to do so. You have the strength to do so. The only question is whether or not you will choose to do so.

Of course, most will respond that they will eagerly and willingly do whatever it takes to save the child in such a scenario. So let us take the same principle and apply it to the eternal reality of hell for those who do not place their trust in salvation through Christ.

If we know of persons who are not Christians, we are confronted with the ethical reality of their destinies. That means we must choose whether or not we will take the time and face the possible awkwardness of sharing the gospel. The good news of Christ, of course, includes such biblical realities as forgiveness, adoption, reconciliation, regeneration, and many others. But the gospel also includes the reality of heaven and hell, and the ethical reality that there is only one way to heaven. Jesus left no doubt as to the exclusivity of salvation through him: “Jesus [said], ‘I am the way, the truth, and the life. No one comes to the Father except through me’ ” (Jn 14:6).

So the Christian is no longer dealing with a hypothetical story of a child falling into icy waters. He is now confronted with the ethical reality of a literal heaven, a literal hell, and the narrow way to the former.

The unavoidable question is thus basic but profound: Will we be obedient to Christ? As we would all reach for the dying child, will we reach out to those who do not know Jesus? Our response will determine whether we are faithful or unfaithful to his calling on our lives.

THOM S. RAINER

29 Then Levi hosted a grand banquet for him at his house. Now there was a large crowd of tax collectors and others who were guests † with them. † 30 But the Pharisees and their scribes † were complaining to his disciples, “Why do you eat and drink with tax collectors and sinners? ”

31 Jesus replied to them, “It is not those who are healthy who need a doctor, but those who are sick. 32 I have not come to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance.”

A QUESTION ABOUT FASTING

33 Then they said to him, “John’s disciples fast often and say prayers, and those of the Pharisees do the same, but yours eat and drink.” †

34 Jesus said to them, “You can’t make the wedding guests fast while the groom is with them, can you? 35 But the time † will come † when the groom will be taken away from them — then they will fast in those days.”

36 He also told them a parable: “No one tears a patch from a new garment and puts it on an old garment. Otherwise, not only will he tear the new, but also the piece from the new garment will not match the old. 37 And no one puts new wine into old wineskins. Otherwise, the new wine will burst the skins, it will spill, and the skins will be ruined. 38 No, new wine is put into fresh wineskins. † 39 And no one, after drinking old wine, wants new, because he says, ‘The old is better.’ ” †

5:1 Lake Gennesaret was also known as the Sea of Galilee (Mt 4:18; Mk 1:16) and the Sea of Tiberius (Jn 6:1; 21:1).

5:12 The term leprosy could refer to various skin diseases, and was not precisely the same as modern leprosy. People with serious skin diseases were required to live outside the community. Jesus’s willingness to show compassion to the man (v. 13) is an example of his attitude toward the outcasts of society, which included the poor (4:18), women (7:36-50), lepers (17:11-19), tax collectors, and sinners (19:10).

5:24 Jesus refers to himself as the Son of Man. This title, used twenty-five times by Luke, was Jesus’s most common designation for himself. While its OT background is clear (Dn 7:13-14), Jesus’s hearers did not make the connection. This may be because the term can simply refer to a human being (cp. Ezk 2:1; 3:1). Jesus may have used the title's ambiguous meaning to conceal his identity.

5:30 Tax collectors were Jews who collected money from their fellow Jews in order to support the Roman Empire. The Roman taxation system in Israel was subject to gross abuses by those in authority, prompting the universal hatred of tax collectors. Sinners were those who violated the teachings of the Jewish religion. Jesus's decision to dine with such people was shocking to the religious leadership; sharing a meal implied identification with, and acceptance of, those with whom one ate.

5:33 Although Jews were only required by Scripture to fast—to go without food—once a year on the Day of Atonement (Lv 16:29-31), in Jesus's day many regarded regular fasting an indication of piety. The Pharisees were known to fast twice a week, on Mondays and Thursdays (Lk 18:12). The comment to Jesus here implies that his disciples were irreligious gluttons.

5:34-35 It would be inappropriate for Jesus's disciples to fast while he was with them. The presence of the Messiah is, rather, occasion to celebrate. There will, however, come a day when the Messiah will be taken away from them. Then temporary mourning and fasting will be appropriate.

LORD OF THE SABBATH

6 On a Sabbath, he passed through the grainfields. † His disciples were picking heads of grain, rubbing them in their hands, and eating them.
2 But some of the Pharisees said, "Why are you doing what is not lawful on the Sabbath? " † 3 Jesus answered them, "Haven't you read what David and those who were with him did when he was hungry — 4 how he entered the house of God and took and ate the bread of the Presence, which is not lawful for any but the priests to eat? † He even gave some to those who were with him." † 5 Then he told them,
"The Son of Man is Lord of the Sabbath."
6 On another Sabbath † he entered the synagogue and was teaching. A man was there whose right hand was shriveled. 7 The scribes and Pharisees were watching him closely, † to see if he would heal on the Sabbath, so that they could find a charge against him. † 8 But he knew their thoughts † and told the man with the shriveled hand, "Get up and stand here." † So he got up and stood there. 9 Then Jesus said to them, "I ask you: Is it lawful to do good on the Sabbath or to do evil, to save life or to destroy it? " † 10 After looking around at them all, † he told him, "Stretch out your hand." † He did, and his hand was restored. † 11 They, however, were filled with rage and started discussing with one another what they might do to Jesus.

THE TWELVE APOSTLES

12 During those days he went out to the mountain to pray † and spent all night in prayer to God. 13 When daylight came, he summoned his disciples, † and he chose twelve of them, whom he also named apostles: † 14 Simon, whom he also named Peter, and Andrew his brother; James and John; Philip and Bartholomew; 15 Matthew and Thomas; † James the son of Alphaeus, and Simon called the Zealot; 16 Judas the son of James, and Judas Iscariot, who became a traitor.

TEACHING AND HEALING

17 After coming down with them, he stood on a level place with a large crowd of his disciples and a great number of people from all Judea and Jerusalem and from the seacoast of Tyre and Sidon. † 18 They came to hear him and to be healed of their diseases; and those tormented by unclean spirits were made well.
19 The whole crowd was trying to touch him, † because power was coming out from him and healing them all. †

THE BEATITUDES

20 Then looking up at his disciples, he said: †

Blessed are you who are poor, because the kingdom of God is yours.
21 Blessed are you who are now hungry, because you will be filled.
Blessed are you who weep now, because you will laugh.
22 Blessed are you when people hate you, when they exclude you, † insult you, and slander your name as evil † because of the Son of Man. †

23 "Rejoice in that day and leap for joy. Take note — your reward is great in heaven, for this is the way their ancestors used to treat the prophets. †

WOE TO THE SELF-SATISFIED

24 But woe to you who are rich, for you have received your comfort.
25 Woe to you who are now full, for you will be hungry.
Woe to you † who are now laughing, for you will mourn and weep.

26 Woe to you †
when all people speak well of you, for this is the way their ancestors used to treat the false prophets. †

LOVE YOUR ENEMIES

27 "But I say to you who listen: Love your enemies, do what is good to those who hate you, 28 bless those who curse you, pray for those who mistreat you. † 29 If anyone hits you on the cheek, † offer the other also. And if anyone takes away your coat, don't hold back your shirt either. 30 Give to everyone who asks you, and from someone who takes your things, don't ask for them back. 31 Just as you want others to do for you, do the same for them. † 32 If you love those who love you, what credit is that to you? Even sinners love those who love them. † 33 If you do what is good to those who are good to you, what credit is that to you? Even sinners do that. 34 And if you lend to those from whom you expect to receive, what credit is that to you? † Even sinners lend to sinners to be repaid in full. 35 But love your enemies, do what is good, and lend, expecting nothing in return. Then your reward will be great, and you will be children of the Most High. † For he is gracious to the ungrateful and evil. 36 Be merciful, just as your Father also is merciful. †

DO NOT JUDGE

37 "Do not judge, and you will not be judged. † Do not condemn, and you will not be condemned. Forgive, and you will be forgiven. † 38 Give, and it will be given to you; a good measure — pressed down, shaken together, and running over — will be poured into your lap. † For with the measure you use, it will be measured back to you." † 39 He also told them a parable: "Can the blind guide the blind? Won't they both fall into a pit? † 40 A disciple is not above his teacher, but everyone who is fully trained will be like his teacher. † 41 "Why do you look at the splinter in your brother's eye, but don't notice the beam of wood in your own eye? 42 Or how can you say to your brother, ‘Brother, let me take out the splinter that is in your eye,’ when you yourself don’t see the beam of wood in your eye? Hypocrite! First take the beam of wood out of your eye, and then you will see clearly to take out the splinter in your brother’s eye.

A TREE AND ITS FRUIT

43 “A good tree doesn’t produce bad fruit; on the other hand, a bad tree doesn’t produce good fruit. † † 44 For each tree is known by its own fruit. Figs aren’t gathered from thornbushes, or grapes picked from a bramble bush. 45 A good person produces good out of the good stored up in his heart. An evil person produces evil out of the evil stored up in his heart, for his mouth speaks from the overflow of the heart.

THE TWO FOUNDATIONS

46 “Why do you call me ‘Lord, Lord,’ and don’t do the things I say? † 47 I will show you what someone is like who comes to me, hears my words, and acts on them: † 48 He is like a man building a house, who dug deep and laid the foundation on the rock. When the flood came, the river crashed against that house and couldn’t shake it, because it was well built. 49 But the one who hears and does not act is like a man who built a house on the ground without a foundation. The river crashed against it, and immediately it collapsed. And the destruction of that house was great.” †

6:1-2 Modern readers may struggle to appreciate the sacredness that ancient Jews attributed to the Sabbath and its prohibition against work (Ex 20:1-17). The Jews observed the Sabbath from sunset Friday until sunset Saturday. The law permitted people to pick ears of grain and eat them while walking through a field on the Sabbath (Dt 23:25). The Pharisees regarded rubbing the heads of grain as a violation of the sacred day, since it was thought of as reaping the grain.

6:12 Jesus spends all night in prayer to God prior to selecting his twelve disciples. Luke portrays Jesus engaging in prayer prior to the most important events of his life (9:28; 22:39-46). His all-night prayer to God highlights his dependence, as well as his desire to do his Father's will.

6:13 The number twelve is significant. The selection of twelve disciples recalls the twelve tribes of Israel, implying a reconstitution of God's people under Jesus's leadership.

6:17-49 This passage is known as the Sermon on the Plain (level place). Its message contains many parallels to the Sermon on the Mount (Mt 5–7). Biblical scholars have varied in their understanding of the relationship between these two texts. During the AD 200s and 300s, most viewed them as two accounts of the same sermon (e.g., Origen, Chrysostom). Beginning in the AD 400s, it became more popular to regard them as two different sermons (e.g., Augustine). The Reformation of the 1600s again regarded them as the same message (e.g., Calvin)—a view that most scholars continue to affirm. Careful comparison of the two passages reveals how biblical authors shaped and arranged material to fit their own theological purposes.

6:21 In the OT, God promises to feed the hungry and to bring comfort to his people, when "the LORD of Armies will prepare for all the peoples a feast of choice meat, a feast with aged wine, prime cuts of choice meat, fine vintage wine. . . [he] will wipe away the tears from every face" (Is 25:6,8). The expectation of such an eschatological banquet is a recurring theme in Luke (see Lk 13:29; 14:15). Also see "A Biblical View of Recreation," p. 737.

6:31 Jesus instructs his hearers to do for others as you want others to do for you, which is known as the Golden Rule. Such a sentiment is found elsewhere in the ancient world. The OT instructs to "love your neighbor as yourself" (Lv 19:18). Roman philosopher Seneca wrote, "Let us show our generosity in the same manner that we would wish to have it bestowed on us."

A CENTURION'S FAITH

7 When he had concluded saying all this to the people who were listening, he entered Capernaum. † 2 A centurion's servant, who was highly valued by him, was sick and about to die. 3 When the centurion heard about Jesus, he sent some Jewish elders to him, requesting him to come and save the life of his servant. 4 When they reached Jesus, they pleaded with him earnestly, saying, "He is worthy for you to grant this, 5 because he loves our nation and has built us a synagogue." † 6 Jesus went with them, and when he was not far from the house, the centurion sent friends to tell him, "Lord, don't trouble yourself, since I am not worthy to have you come under my roof. 7 That is why I didn't even consider myself worthy to come to you. But say the word, and my servant will be healed. † † 8 For I too am a man placed under authority, having soldiers under my command. I say to this one, 'Go,' and he goes; and to another, 'Come,' and he comes; and to my servant, 'Do this,' and he does it." 9 Jesus heard this and was amazed at him, and turning to the crowd following him, he said, "I tell you, I have not found so great a faith even in Israel."

10 When those who had been sent returned to the house, they found the servant in good health.

A WIDOW'S SON RAISED TO LIFE

11 Afterward he was on his way to a town called Nain. His disciples and a large crowd were traveling with him. 12 Just as he neared the gate of the town, a dead man was being carried out. He was his mother's only son, and she was a widow. † A large crowd from the city was also with her. 13 When the Lord saw her, he had compassion on her † and said, "Don't weep." 14 Then he came up and touched the open coffin, and the pallbearers stopped. And he said, "Young man, I tell you, get up! " †

15 The dead man sat up and began to speak, and Jesus gave him to his mother. †
16 Then fear † came over everyone, † and they glorified God, † saying, "A great prophet has risen among us," † and "God has visited † his people." †
17 This report about him went throughout Judea and all the vicinity.

IN PRAISE OF JOHN THE BAPTIST

18 Then John's disciples told him about all these things. † So John summoned two of his disciples 19 and sent them to the Lord, asking, "Are you the one † who is to come, or should we expect someone else? "
20 When the men reached him, they said, "John the Baptist sent us to ask you, 'Are you the one who is to come, or should we expect someone else? ' "
21 At that time Jesus healed many people of diseases, † afflictions, and evil spirits, † and he granted sight to many blind people. † 22 He replied to them, "Go and report to John what you have seen and heard: The blind receive their sight, the lame walk, those with leprosy † are cleansed, the deaf hear, † the dead are raised, and the poor are told the good news, † 23 and blessed is the one who isn't offended by me."
24 After John's messengers left, he began to speak to the crowds about John: "What did you go out into the wilderness to see? A reed swaying in the wind?
25 What then did you go out to see? A man dressed in soft clothes? See, those who are splendidly dressed and live in luxury are in royal palaces. 26 What then did you go out to see? A prophet? † Yes, I tell you, and more than a prophet.

27 This is the one about whom it is written:
See, I am sending my messenger ahead of you;
he will prepare your way before you. † †
28 I tell you, among those born of women no one is greater than John, † but the least in the kingdom of God is greater than he."
29 (And when all the people, including the tax collectors, heard this, they acknowledged God's way of righteousness, because they had been baptized with John's baptism. † 30 But since the Pharisees and experts in the law † had not been baptized by him, they rejected the plan of God for themselves. †)

AN UNRESPONSIVE GENERATION

31 "To what then should I compare the people of this generation, and what are they like? 32 They are like children sitting in the marketplace and calling to each other:

We played the flute for you,
but you didn't dance;
we sang a lament,
but you didn't weep!

33 For John the Baptist did not come eating bread or drinking wine, † and you say, 'He has a demon! ' 34 The Son of Man has come eating and drinking, and you say, 'Look, a glutton and a drunkard, a friend of tax collectors and sinners! ' † 35 Yet wisdom is vindicated by all her children."

MUCH FORGIVENESS, MUCH LOVE

36 Then one of the Pharisees invited him to eat with him. He entered the Pharisee's house and reclined at the table. † 37 And a woman in the town who was a sinner found out that Jesus was reclining at the table in the Pharisee's house. † She brought an alabaster jar of perfume 38 and stood behind him at his feet, weeping, and began to wash his feet with her tears. She wiped his feet with her hair, kissing them and anointing them with the perfume. †

39 When the Pharisee who had invited him saw this, he said to himself, “This man, if he were a prophet, would know who and what kind of woman this is who is touching him — she’s a sinner! ” †

40 Jesus replied to him, “Simon, I have something to say to you.”
He said, “Say it, teacher.”

41 “A creditor had two debtors. One owed five hundred denarii, † † and the other fifty. 42 Since they could not pay it back, † he graciously forgave them both. So, which of them will love him more? ”

43 Simon answered, “I suppose the one he forgave more.”
“You have judged correctly,” he told him. 44 Turning to the woman, he said to Simon, “Do you see this woman? I entered your house; you gave me no water for my feet, † but she, with her tears, has washed my feet and wiped them with her hair. 45 You gave me no kiss, † but she hasn’t stopped kissing my feet since I came in. 46 You didn’t anoint my head with olive oil, † but she has anointed my feet with perfume. 47 Therefore I tell you, her many sins have been forgiven; that’s why she loved much. But the one who is forgiven little, loves little.”

48 Then he said to her, “Your sins are forgiven.” †

49 Those who were at the table with him began to say among themselves, “Who is this man who even forgives sins? ” †

50 And he said to the woman, “Your faith has saved you. † Go in peace.” †

7:12,14 Luke describes a funeral procession encountered by Jesus as he approaches the town of Nain. The normal Jewish practice was to carry the deceased in an open coffin outside the town for burial on the day of death. That Jesus touched the deceased would have shocked those present, as it would have made him ritually unclean (see Nm 19:11,16).

7:19-20 The one who is to come refers to the Messiah: “Look your King is coming to you; he is righteous and victorious” (Zch 9:9). The Qumran scrolls also taught of the “coming” of the Messiah, the descendant of David.

MANY WOMEN SUPPORT CHRIST’S WORK

8 Afterward he was traveling from one town and village to another, † preaching and telling the good news of the kingdom of God. † The Twelve were with him, 2 and also some women who had been healed of evil spirits and sicknesses: † Mary, called Magdalene (seven demons had come out † of her); 3 Joanna the wife of Chuza, Herod’s steward; Susanna; and many others who were supporting them from their possessions.

THE PARABLE OF THE SOWER

4 As a large crowd was gathering, and people were coming to Jesus from every town, he said in a parable: † 5 “A sower went out to sow his seed. As he sowed, some seed fell along the path; it was trampled on, and the birds of the sky devoured it. 6 Other seed fell on the rock; when it grew up, it withered away, since it lacked moisture. 7 Other seed fell among thorns; the thorns grew up with it and choked it. 8 Still other seed fell on good ground; when it grew up, it produced fruit: a hundred times what was sown.” † As he said this, he called out, “Let anyone who has ears to hear listen.” †

WHY JESUS USED PARABLES

9 Then his disciples asked him, “What does this parable mean?” † 10 So he said, “The secrets of the kingdom of God have been given for you † to know, but to the rest it is in parables, so that Looking they may not see, and hearing they may not understand. † †

THE PARABLE OF THE SOWER EXPLAINED

11 “This is the meaning of the parable: † The seed is the word of God. † 12 The seed along the path are those who have heard and then the devil comes and takes away the word from their hearts, so that they may not believe and be saved.
13 And the seed on the rock are those who, when they hear, receive the word with joy. Having no root, these believe for a while and fall away in a time of testing. † 14 As for the seed that fell among thorns, these are the ones who, when they have heard, go on their way and are choked with worries, riches, and pleasures of life, † and produce no mature fruit. 15 But the seed in the good ground — these are the ones who, having heard the word with an honest and good heart, hold on to it and by enduring, † produce fruit.

USING YOUR LIGHT

16 "No one, after lighting a lamp, † covers it with a basket or puts it under a bed, but puts it on a lampstand so that those who come in may see its light. †
17 For nothing is concealed that won't be revealed, and nothing hidden that won't be made known and brought to light. † 18 Therefore take care how you listen. For whoever has, more will be given to him; † and whoever does not have, even what he thinks he has will be taken away from him."

TRUE RELATIONSHIPS

19 Then his mother and brothers † came to him, † but they could not meet with him because of the crowd. 20 He was told, "Your mother and your brothers are standing outside, wanting to see you."
21 But he replied to them, "My mother and my brothers are those who hear and do the word of God." †

WIND AND WAVE OBEY JESUS

22 One day he and his disciples got into a boat, † and he told them, "Let's cross over to the other side of the lake." † So they set out, 23 and as they were sailing he fell asleep. Then a fierce windstorm came down on the lake; they were being swamped and were in danger. 24 They came and woke him up, saying, "Master, Master, we're going to die! "
Then he got up and rebuked the wind and the raging waves. So they ceased, and there was a calm. † 25 He said to them, "Where is your faith? "
They were fearful and amazed, asking one another, "Who then is this? † He commands even the winds and the waves, and they obey him! "

DEMONS DRIVEN OUT BY JESUS

26 Then they sailed to the region of the Gerasenes, † † which is opposite Galilee. 27 When he got out on land, a demon-possessed man from the town met him. For a long time he had worn no clothes and did not stay in a house but in the tombs. 28 When he saw Jesus, he cried out, † fell down before him, and said in a loud voice, “What do you have to do with me, † Jesus, Son of the Most High God? † I beg you, don’t torment me! ” 29 For he had commanded the unclean spirit to come out of the man. Many times it had seized him, and though he was guarded, bound by chains and shackles, he would snap the restraints and be driven by the demon into deserted places.
30 “What is your name? ” Jesus asked him.
“Legion,” † he said, because many demons had entered him. 31 And they begged him not to banish them to the abyss. † 32 A large herd of pigs was there, feeding on the hillside. The demons begged him to permit them to enter the pigs, and he gave them permission. 33 The demons came out of the man and entered the pigs, and the herd rushed down the steep bank into the lake and drowned.
34 When the men who tended them saw what had happened, they ran off and reported it in the town and in the countryside. 35 Then people went out to see what had happened. They came to Jesus and found the man the demons had departed from, sitting at Jesus’s feet, † dressed and in his right mind. And they were afraid. 36 Meanwhile, the eyewitnesses reported to them how the demon-possessed man was delivered. † 37 Then all the people of the Gerasene region † asked him to leave them, † because they were gripped by great fear. So getting into the boat, he returned.
38 The man from whom the demons had departed begged him earnestly to be with him. But he sent him away and said, 39 “Go back to your home, and tell all that God has done for you.” And off he went, proclaiming throughout the town how much Jesus had done for him.

A GIRL RESTORED AND A WOMAN HEALED

40 When Jesus returned, the crowd welcomed him, † for they were all expecting him. † 41 Just then, a man named Jairus came. He was a leader of the synagogue. † He fell down at Jesus’s feet and pleaded with him to come to his house, 42 because he had an only daughter † about twelve years old, and she was dying.

While he was going, the crowds were nearly crushing him. † 43 A woman suffering from bleeding † for twelve years, † who had spent all she had on doctors † and yet could not be healed by any, 44 approached from behind and touched the end of his robe. † Instantly her bleeding stopped.

45 "Who touched me? " Jesus asked.

When they all denied it, Peter † said, "Master, † the crowds are hemming you in and pressing against you." †

46 "Someone did touch me," said Jesus. "I know that power has gone out from me." † 47 When the woman saw that she was discovered, she came trembling and fell down before him. In the presence of all the people, she declared the reason she had touched him and how she was instantly healed. 48 "Daughter," he said to her, "your faith has saved you. † Go in peace." †

49 While he was still speaking, † someone came from the synagogue leader's house and said, "Your daughter is dead. Don't bother † the teacher † anymore."

50 When Jesus heard it, he answered him, "Don't be afraid. Only believe, and she will be saved." † 51 After he came to the house, he let no one enter with him except Peter, John, James, † and the child's father and mother. 52 Everyone was crying † and mourning for her. † But he said, "Stop crying, because she is not dead but asleep." †

53 They laughed at him, because they knew she was dead. 54 So he † took her by the hand † and called out, "Child, get up! " † 55 Her spirit returned, † and she got up at once. Then he gave orders that she be given something to eat.

56 Her parents were astounded, but he instructed them to tell no one what had happened. †

8:8 Seed producing a crop a hundred times what was sown would have been regarded as exceedingly good (Gn 26:12). Scholars debate what constituted a normal harvest. Suggestions fall between the range of three to seven-and-one-half times what was sown.

8:21 Jesus declares that those who obey God's word belong to his family. Obedience, rather than bloodline, denotes one's relationship to Jesus. His statement would have surprised his listeners, given the importance placed on family in Jewish culture.

8:26-39 As with other biblical authors (e.g., Matthew, Mark), Luke understands demon possession not as a myth but as a real world phenomenon. Modern claims of possession should be assessed on a case-by-case basis. Demons cannot possess those within whom the Holy Spirit dwells. See the note on 11:14-15.

8:27 In first-century Palestine, tombs were often man-made caves carved into a hillside. This type of construction would have provided shelter for the demon-possessed man. Jews viewed corpses as ritually unclean, and they assumed tombs were inhabited by demons (Nm 19:11,14,16).

8:29 See "Spiritual Warfare," p. 1454.

8:41 That Jairus was a leader of the synagogue means that he served as ruler of a synagogue. Such men were normally selected from a board of elders—men who guided the activities of the synagogue. The position of synagogue leader was sometimes held for life and passed on to one's son. In some synagogues, a leader was merely a figurehead; in others they played key roles in decision-making.

COMMISSIONING THE TWELVE

9 Summoning the Twelve, † he gave them power and authority over all the demons and to heal diseases. † 2 Then he sent them to proclaim the kingdom of God and to heal the sick. † 3 "Take nothing for the road," † he told them, "no staff, † no traveling bag, no bread, no money; and don't take an extra shirt. 4 Whatever house you enter, stay there and leave from there. 5 If they do not welcome you, when you leave that town, shake off the dust from your feet as a testimony against them." † 6 So they went out and traveled from village to village, proclaiming the good news and healing everywhere.

HEROD'S DESIRE TO SEE JESUS

HEROD'S DESIRE TO SEE JESUS

7 Herod the tetrarch † heard about everything that was going on. † He was perplexed, because some said that John had been raised from the dead, 8 some that Elijah had appeared, † and others that one of the ancient prophets had risen. † 9 "I beheaded John," Herod said, "but who is this I hear such things about? " And he wanted to see him. †

FEEDING OF THE FIVE THOUSAND

10 When the apostles returned, † they reported to Jesus all that they had done. †
He took them along and withdrew privately to a † town called Bethsaida. † 11 When the crowds found out, they followed him. He welcomed them, † spoke to them about the kingdom of God, and healed those who needed healing.
12 Late in the day, † the Twelve approached and said to him, "Send the crowd away, † so that they can go into the surrounding villages and countryside to find food and lodging, because we are in a deserted place here." 13 "You give them something to eat," he told them.
"We have no more than five loaves † and two fish," they said, "unless we go and buy food for all these people." 14 (For about five thousand men were there.)
Then he told his disciples, "Have them sit down † in groups of about fifty each."
15 They did what he said, and had them all sit down. 16 Then he took the five loaves and the two fish, and looking up to heaven, † he blessed and broke them. † He kept giving them to the disciples to set before the crowd.
17 Everyone ate and was filled. They picked up twelve baskets of leftover pieces.

PETER'S CONFESSION OF THE MESSIAH

18 While he was praying in private † and his disciples were with him, he asked them, "Who do the crowds say that I am? " 19 They answered, "John the Baptist; others, Elijah; still others, that one of the ancient prophets has come back." † †
20 "But you," he asked them, "who do you say that I am? "
Peter answered, "God's Messiah." †

HIS DEATH AND RESURRECTION PREDICTED

21 But he strictly warned and instructed them to tell this to no one, † 22 saying, † "It is necessary that the Son of Man † suffer many things † and be rejected † by the elders, chief priests, and scribes, † be killed, and be raised the third day." †

TAKE UP YOUR CROSS

23 Then he said to them all, "If anyone wants to follow after † me, let him deny himself, † take up his cross daily, † and follow me. † 24 For whoever wants to save his life will lose it, but whoever loses his life because of me will save it. † 25 For what does it benefit someone if he gains the whole world, and yet loses or forfeits himself? † 26 For whoever is ashamed of me and my words, † the Son of Man will be ashamed of him when he comes in his glory † and that of the Father and the holy angels. † 27 Truly I tell you, there are some standing here who will not taste death † until they see the kingdom of God." †

THE TRANSFIGURATION

28 About eight days after this conversation, † he took along Peter, John, and James † and went up on the mountain to pray. † 29 As he was praying, the appearance of his face changed, † and his clothes became dazzling white. † 30 Suddenly, two men were talking with him — Moses and Elijah. 31 They appeared in glory and were speaking of his departure, which he was about to accomplish in Jerusalem.

32 Peter and those with him were in a deep sleep, † † and when they became fully awake, they saw his glory and the two men who were standing with him. 33 As the two men were departing from him, Peter said to Jesus, "Master, † it's good for us to be here. Let us set up three shelters: one for you, one for Moses, and one for Elijah" — not knowing what he was saying. †

34 While he was saying this, a cloud appeared and overshadowed † them. They became afraid as they entered the cloud. 35 Then a voice came from the cloud, † saying: "This is my Son, † the Chosen One; † † listen to him! " †

36 After the voice had spoken, Jesus was found alone. They kept silent, and at that time told no one what they had seen.

THE POWER OF JESUS OVER A DEMON

37 The next day, † when they came down from the mountain, a large crowd met him. 38 Just then a man from the crowd cried out, “Teacher, I beg you to look at my son, because he’s my only child. † 39 A spirit seizes him; suddenly he shrieks, and it throws him into convulsions until he foams at the mouth; severely bruising him, it scarcely ever leaves him. 40 I begged your disciples to drive it out, but they couldn’t.” †

41 Jesus replied, “You unbelieving and perverse † generation, † how long will I be with you and put up with you? † Bring your son here.”

42 As the boy was still approaching, the demon knocked him down and threw him into severe convulsions. But Jesus rebuked the unclean spirit, healed the boy, † and gave him back to his father. † 43 And they were all astonished at the greatness of God. †

THE SECOND PREDICTION OF HIS DEATH

While everyone was amazed at all the things he was doing, † he told his disciples, 44 “Let these words sink in: † The Son of Man is about to be betrayed into the hands of men.” †

45 But they did not understand this statement; † it was concealed from them so that they could not grasp it, † and they were afraid to ask him about it.

WHO IS THE GREATEST?

46 An argument started among them about who was the greatest of them. †
47 But Jesus, knowing their inner thoughts, † † took a little child and had him stand next to him. 48 He told them, “Whoever welcomes † this little child in my name welcomes me. And whoever welcomes me welcomes him who sent me. †
For whoever is least among you — this one is great.” †

IN HIS NAME

49 John responded, † “Master, we saw someone driving out demons in your name, † and we tried to stop him because he does not follow us.” †
50 “Don’t stop him,” Jesus told him, “because whoever is not against you is for you.” † †

THE JOURNEY TO JERUSALEM

51 When the days were coming to a close for him to be taken up, † he determined † † to journey to Jerusalem. † 52 He sent messengers ahead of himself, † and on the way they entered a village of the Samaritans † to make preparations for him. 53 But they did not welcome him, because he determined to journey to Jerusalem. † 54 When the disciples James and John saw this, they said, “Lord, do you want us to call down fire from heaven to consume them? ” † †
55 But he turned and rebuked them, † 56 and they went to another village.

FOLLOWING JESUS

57 As they were traveling on the road someone said to him, † “I will follow you wherever you go.”
58 Jesus told him, “Foxes have dens, and birds of the sky have nests, but the Son of Man has no place to lay his head.” 59 Then he said to another, “Follow me.”
“Lord,” he said, “first let me go bury my father.”
60 But he told him, “Let the dead bury their own dead, but you go and spread the news of the kingdom of God.” †
61 Another said, “I will follow you, Lord, but first let me go and say good-bye to those at my house.” †
62 But Jesus said to him, “No one who puts his hand to the plow and looks back is fit for the kingdom of God.”

9:5 To shake off the dust from . . . feet indicated a formal separation between Jesus's disciples and those who rejected them, and it suggested impending divine judgment. Paul and Barnabas did this in Pisidian Antioch (Ac 13:51). It recalls the Jewish practice of shaking the dust from one's sandals when returning to Israel from a pagan land. Jewish travelers sought to remove any hint of pagan contamination. See also Luke 10:10-12.

9:20 Messiah (Gk christos) means "anointed one." In OT times, a flask of oil was poured on the head of a man who was to serve as a priest or king, denoting that God had set him apart for his work or office (1Sm 16:12b-13). Messianic expectation looked forward to the rule of a descendent of King David.

9:30 The appearance of Moses and Elijah, two of the greatest figures of Israel's history, probably represents Jesus's fulfillment of the Law and the Prophets (Mt 5:17). They also point to Jesus's significance, since Moses was regarded as the model prophet (Dt 18:18) and Elijah was the forerunner of the Messiah (Mal 4:5-6; Mt 11:7-10).

9:35 God speaks directly to the disciples present with Jesus. Jewish tradition viewed this type of communication from God as rare. Luke's inclusion of the event draws attention to Jesus as God's beloved Son, One who is greater than Moses and Elijah.

9:50 Jesus's statement is proverbial and should be understood as a general principle rather than a rule to be applied in every situation. In 11:23, Jesus articulates the inverse of this principle (see also Mt 12:30).

9:51 Jesus determined to journey to Jerusalem. Thus begins what some scholars have designated the "Travel Narrative" (9:51–19:27), a section that comprises about thirty-eight percent of Luke's Gospel and portrays Jesus traveling toward Jerusalem and the cross (see also 9:57; 10:1; 17:11; 19:28).

SENDING OUT THE SEVENTY-TWO

10 After this, the Lord appointed seventy-two † others, and he sent them ahead of him in pairs to every town and place where he himself was about to go. 2 He told them, † “The harvest † is abundant, but the workers † are few. Therefore, pray to the Lord of the harvest to send out workers into his harvest. † 3 Now go; I’m sending you out like lambs among wolves. † 4 Don’t carry a money-bag, † traveling bag, † or sandals; † don’t greet anyone along the road. 5 Whatever house you enter, first say, ‘Peace † to this household.’ 6 If a person of peace is there, your peace † will rest on him; but if not, it will return to you. 7 Remain in the same house, eating and drinking what they offer, for the worker is worthy of his wages. † Don’t move from house to house. 8 When you enter any town, and they welcome you, eat the things set before you. † 9 Heal the sick † who are there, and tell them, ‘The kingdom of God † has come near † you.’ 10 When you enter any town, and they don’t welcome you, go out into its streets and say, 11 ‘We are wiping off even the dust of your town that clings to our feet as a witness against you. † Know this for certain: The kingdom of God has come near.’ 12 I tell you, on that day † it will be more tolerable for Sodom † than for that town. †

UNREPENTANT TOWNS

13 “Woe † to you, † Chorazin! † Woe to you, Bethsaida! † For if the miracles † that were done in you had been done in Tyre and Sidon, † they would have repented long ago, sitting in sackcloth and ashes. † 14 But it will be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon at the judgment † than for you. 15 And you, Capernaum, † will you be exalted to heaven? † No, you will go down to Hades. † 16 Whoever listens to you listens to me. † Whoever rejects you rejects me. † And whoever rejects me rejects the one who sent me.” †

THE RETURN OF THE SEVENTY-TWO

17 The seventy-two † † returned with joy, saying, † “Lord, even the demons † submit to us in your name.” †

18 He said to them, “I watched Satan † fall from heaven like lightning. † 19 Look, I have given you the authority † to trample † on snakes † and scorpions † and over all the power of the enemy; † nothing at all will harm

you. † 20 However, don't rejoice that † the spirits † submit to you, † but rejoice that your names are written † in heaven."

THE SON REVEALS THE FATHER

21 At that time † he † rejoiced in the Holy † Spirit † and said, "I praise † you, Father, † Lord of heaven and earth, † because you have hidden these things from the wise and intelligent † and revealed them to infants. † Yes, Father, because this was your good pleasure. † † 22 All things have † been entrusted to me by my Father. No one knows who the Son is except the Father, and who the Father is except the Son, and anyone to whom the Son desires † to reveal him." †

23 Then turning to his disciples he said privately, "Blessed are the eyes that see the things you see! 24 For I tell you that many prophets and kings wanted to see the things you see but didn't see them; to hear the things you hear but didn't hear them." †

THE PARABLE OF THE GOOD SAMARITAN

25 Then † an expert in the law † stood up to test † him, saying, "Teacher, † what must I do to inherit eternal life? " †

26 "What is written in the law? " he asked him. "How do you read it? "

27 He answered, "Love the Lord your God † with all your heart, with all your soul, with all your strength, and with all your mind;" † and "your neighbor as yourself." † †

28 "You've answered correctly," he told him. "Do this and you will live." †

29 But wanting to justify himself, † he asked Jesus, "And who is my neighbor? " †

30 Jesus took up the question and said: "A man was going down from Jerusalem to Jericho and fell into the hands of robbers. They stripped him, beat him up, and fled, leaving him half dead. 31 A priest happened to be going down that road. When he saw him, he passed by on the other side. 32 In the same way, a Levite, when he arrived at the place and saw him, passed by on the other side. 33 But a Samaritan † on his journey came up to him, and when he saw the man, he had compassion. † 34 He went over to him and bandaged his wounds, pouring on olive oil † and wine. Then he put him on his own animal, brought him to an inn, and took care of him. 35 The next day † he took out two denarii, † gave them to the innkeeper, and said, 'Take care of him. When I come back I'll reimburse you for whatever extra you spend.'

36 "Which of these three do you think proved to be a neighbor to the man who fell into the hands of the robbers? "
37 "The one who showed mercy † to him," he said.
Then Jesus told him, "Go and do the same."

MARTHA AND MARY

38 While they were traveling, he entered a village, and a woman named Martha † welcomed him into her home. † 39 She had a sister named Mary, who also sat at the Lord's † feet † and was listening to what he said. † 40 But Martha was distracted by her many tasks, and she came up and asked, "Lord, don't you care † that my sister has left me to serve alone? So tell her to give me a hand." † †
41 The Lord † answered her, "Martha, Martha, you are worried and upset about many things, † 42 but one thing is necessary. † † Mary has made the right choice, † and it will not be taken away from her."

10:30 The road from Jerusalem to Jericho stretches approximately seventeen miles. At many points the path is quite narrow with numerous rocks behind which robbers could hide. Josephus, the Jewish historian, described it as "desolate and rocky" in his Jewish Wars (4.8.3).

10:33 After defeating the Jews in the northern kingdom (Israel) in 722 BC, the Assyrians repopulated the land with pagan immigrants from the east. Victorious nations sometimes repopulated areas in an effort to break down resistance from native inhabitants. The descendants of these particular Jews and immigrants came to be known as the Samaritans. Some Jews in the southern kingdom (Judah) had such disdain for the Samaritans that they regarded them as Gentiles, or apostates, due to their departure from traditional Judaism. There is great irony in the fact that a Samaritan is presented as a model for obeying God's word (10:27).

10:39 Mary's decision to sit at the Lord's feet to listen went against the social expectations of women in two ways. First, as a female and hostess, she was required by social custom to serve her guests. Second, few first-century Jews thought it appropriate for a woman to learn from a male teacher as Mary did.

THE LORD'S PRAYER

11 He was praying † in a certain place, and when he finished, one of his disciples said to him, "Lord, teach us to pray, just as John also taught his disciples." †

2 He said to them, "Whenever you pray, say, †

Father, † †
your name † be honored as holy. † Your kingdom come. † †
3 Give us each day our daily bread. † †
4 And forgive us our sins, † for we ourselves also forgive everyone in debt to us. † †

And do not bring us into temptation." † †

ASK, SEARCH, KNOCK

5 He also said to them: "Suppose one of you † has a friend and goes to him at midnight and says to him, 'Friend, lend me three loaves of bread, 6 because a friend of mine on a journey has come to me, and I don't have anything to offer him.' 7 Then he will answer from inside and say, 'Don't bother me! The door is already locked, and my children and I have gone to bed. I can't get up to give you anything.' 8 I tell you, even though he won't get up and give him anything because he is his friend, yet because of his friend's shameless boldness, † he will get up and give him as much as he needs. † 9 "So † I say to you, ask, † and it will be given to you. Seek, † and you will find. Knock, † and the door will be opened to you. 10 For everyone who asks receives, and the one who seeks finds, and to the one who knocks, the door will be opened. 11 What father among you, if his son † asks for a fish, will give him a snake instead of a fish? 12 Or if he asks for an egg, will give him a scorpion?
13 If you then, who are evil, † know how to give good gifts to your children, how much more will the heavenly Father † give the Holy Spirit † to those who ask him? "

A HOUSE DIVIDED

14 Now † he was driving out a demon † that was mute. † When the demon came out, the man who had been mute spoke, and the crowds were amazed.
15 But some of them said, "He drives out demons by Beelzebul, † the ruler † of the demons." † 16 And others, as a test, † were demanding of him a sign † from heaven.
17 Knowing their thoughts, † he told them, "Every kingdom divided † against itself is headed for destruction, and a house divided against itself falls. 18 If Satan † also is divided against himself, how will his kingdom † stand? For you say I drive out demons by Beelzebul. 19 And if I drive out demons by Beelzebul, by whom do your sons † drive them out? For this reason they will be your judges. [20] If I drive out demons by the finger of God, † then the kingdom of God † has come upon you. [21] When a strong man, fully armed, guards his estate, his possessions are secure. [22] But when one stronger than he attacks and overpowers † him, he takes from him all his weapons † † he trusted † in, and divides up his plunder. † [23] Anyone who is not with me is against me, † and anyone who does not gather with me scatters.

AN UNCLEAN SPIRIT'S RETURN

[24] "When † an unclean spirit † comes out of a person, it roams through waterless places looking for rest, † and not finding rest, it then † says, 'I'll go back to my house that I came from.' [25] Returning, it finds the house swept and put in order. [26] Then it goes and brings seven other spirits † more evil than itself, and they enter and settle down there. As a result, that person's last condition is worse than the first." †

TRUE BLESSEDNESS

[27] As he was saying these things, a woman from the crowd † raised her voice and said to him, "Blessed is the womb that bore you and the one who nursed you! " †

[28] He said, "Rather, blessed are those who hear the word of God † and keep it." †

THE SIGN OF JONAH

[29] As the crowds were increasing, he began saying: "This generation † is an evil generation. † It demands a sign, † but no sign will be given to it except the sign of Jonah. † † [30] For just as Jonah became a sign to the people of Nineveh, so also the Son of Man † will be to this generation. [31] The queen of the south † will rise up at the judgment † with the men of this generation and condemn † them, because she came from the ends of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon, † and look — something greater than Solomon is here. [32] The men of Nineveh will stand up at the judgment with this generation and condemn it, because they repented at Jonah's preaching, and look — something greater than Jonah is here.

THE LAMP OF THE BODY

33 “No † one lights a lamp † and puts it in the cellar or under a basket, † but on a lampstand, so that those who come in may see its light. 34 Your eye is the lamp of the body. † When your eye is healthy, your whole body is also full of light. But when it is bad, † your body is also full of darkness. 35 Take care, then, that the light in you is not darkness. 36 If, therefore, your whole body is full of light, with no part of it in darkness, it will be entirely illuminated, as when a lamp shines its light on you.”

RELIGIOUS HYPOCRISY DENOUNCED

37 As he was speaking, a Pharisee † asked him to dine with him. So he went in and reclined at the table. 38 When the Pharisee saw this, he was amazed that he did not first perform the ritual washing † † before dinner. † 39 But the Lord said to him, “Now you Pharisees clean the outside of the cup and dish, but inside you are full of greed † and evil. † 40 Fools! † Didn’t he who made the outside make the inside too? 41 But give from what is within to the poor, † † and then everything is clean † for you.

42 “But woe † to you Pharisees! You give a tenth † † of mint, rue, and every kind of herb, and you bypass † justice † and love for God. † † These things you should have done without neglecting the others.

43 “Woe to you Pharisees! You love the front seat † in the synagogues † and greetings in the marketplaces.

44 “Woe to you! † You are like unmarked graves; † the people who walk over them don’t know it.”

45 One of the experts in the law † answered him, “Teacher, when you say these things you insult us too.”

46 Then he said: “Woe also to you experts in the law! You load people with burdens † that are hard to carry, and yet you yourselves don’t touch these burdens with one of your fingers. †

47 “Woe to you! You build tombs † for the prophets, † and your fathers killed † them. 48 Therefore, you are witnesses † that you approve † † the deeds of your fathers, for they killed them, and you build their monuments. † 49 Because of this, the wisdom of God † said, ‘I will send them prophets and apostles, † and some of them they will kill and persecute,’ † 50 so that this generation † may be held responsible for the blood of all the prophets shed since the foundation of the world † † — 51 from the blood of Abel † to the blood of Zechariah, † who perished between the altar and the sanctuary.

“Yes, I tell you, this generation will be held responsible. † 52 “Woe to you experts in the law! You have taken away the key to knowledge. † You didn’t go in yourselves, and you hindered † those who were trying to go in.”
53 When he left there, † the scribes and the Pharisees began to oppose † him fiercely and to cross-examine him about many things; 54 they were lying in wait † for him to trap him in something he said. † †

11:5-6 Ancient people felt great social pressure to show hospitality to both friends and strangers. Failing to show appropriate hospitality was regarded as shameful.

11:7 In Jesus's day, father, mother, and children often slept in a single room together, sometimes on a shared mat. They bolted the door with a heavy, long piece of wood or metal to keep out intruders. To grant the visitor's request, the owner of the home would have to disturb the entire household.

11:9 See "Prayer and Recovery from Illness," p. 1551.

11:14-15 A feature of Jesus's ministry was exorcising demons (Mt 17:14-20; Mk 1:23-27; 9:14-29). Pagans and Jews practiced exorcism in the first century, commonly employing rituals, incantations, and spells. In sharp contrast, Jesus exorcised unclean spirits simply by his authority (Mk 1:27) and God's power, with the intent of declaring that the kingdom had arrived (Lk 11:20). See the note on 8:26-39.

11:29-30 Jesus's generation demanded a sign to validate his ministry (Mt 12:38-42; Mk 8:11-12), but the only sign he will give them is the sign of Jonah. Here this seems to refer to Jonah's preaching of repentance (Jnh 1:2; 3:2-3; 3:4; Lk 5:32; 13:3,5; 15:7,10; see also Mt 4:17) or divine rescue (Jnh 1:17–2:10), which foreshadowed Jesus's resurrection (Lk 24:6-7).

11:30-31 Jesus's references to the people of Nineveh and the queen of the south underscore the irony of his situation. The Jews respond negatively to him while non-Israelites in former times responded positively to God's messengers. The enthusiasm of the mentioned queen, the Queen of Sheba, who likely lived in southern Arabia (1Kg 10:1-13), is highlighted in the fact that she came from the ends of the earth.

11:44 First-century graves were marked so that a Jew would not unwittingly defile himself by coming in contact with one (Nm 19:16). Lime plaster was sometimes used to mark a grave.

NATURALISM AND THE CHRISTIAN WORLDVIEW

From the biblical writers to the church fathers to the Reformers until today, believers in the Judeo-Christian tradition have dealt with the question of how a believer should relate to the physical world. The Bible is clear from its first verse that God is the Creator (Gn 1:1). Not only is he the Creator, but he is also the Sustainer (Ac 17:28; Heb 1:3; Col 1:17); Governor (Pss 104:10,14,20; 135:7; Jr 31:35; 33:20); and Provider (Ps 104:27-28; Mt 6:26-30). Furthermore, Jesus stated that we observe the creation in order to understand it (Lk 12:54-56).

Today science is considered the best way to observe and understand the physical world. Modern science explains natural phenomena in terms of natural events and causes, but does not entertain supernatural phenomena. The principles of science are governed by methodological naturalism.

Unlike philosophical naturalism, which states that the physical universe is all that exists, methodological naturalism is not concerned with the ultimate limits of reality but with the best methods for studying nature. Methodological naturalism provides the framework within which to study nature.

Is methodological naturalism compatible with a Christian worldview? Yes, in the sense that all truth is God's truth. The challenge is at the interface of science and faith—where both science and faith make historical statements about the same events.

PROS AND CONS OF METHODOLOGICAL NATURALISM

The methodological naturalistic approach to answering scientific questions has been very successful. By focusing on the physical aspects of the universe (the structure of matter, forces acting on matter, and energy changes), methodological naturalism provides effective ways of describing planetary motion, finding cures for diseases, and designing computers. Methodological naturalism has allowed science to function within all countries and worldviews and has greatly enhanced the standard of living of humankind—the dream of English Christian philosopher and scientific pioneer Francis Bacon (1561–1626), who hoped that science would relieve some of the effects of the fall.

On the other hand, methodological naturalism can lead to philosophical naturalism—though it does not have to. The naturalistic approach affects the outcomes of natural theology—the attempt to uncover the attributes of God from the findings of nature—so that supernatural phenomena are excluded from consideration. The use of naturalistic explanations can create a blind spot, only allowing naturalistic explanations to exist at the interface between science and faith. A crucial issue found at that interface is the historical death, burial, and resurrection of Jesus.

Science, with its naturalistic outlook, can help us understand the resurrection events by providing a detailed description of the physiological changes that occur during a crucifixion and of what happens to a body within three days after death. But the resurrection is biochemically impossible; thus, naturalistic explanations regard the resurrection as scientifically, and therefore historically, unfounded.

METHODOLOGICAL VERSUS PHILOSOPHICAL NATURALISM

Methodological naturalism does not, however, have to lead to philosophical naturalism. A scientist who begins with the tenants of the faith, rather than the naturalistic assumptions of science, may indeed observe the actions of God in nature. Starting with the characteristics of God as revealed in Scripture, the eyes of faith may observe God refining this fallen world through what otherwise appears to be waste and suffering. Our worldview determines what we see—a personal God shepherding his creation, or an exclusively physical universe ruled by chance. As the author of Hebrews states, "By faith we understand that the universe was created by the word of God" (Heb 11:3). If it takes faith to understand that the universe is God's creation, then it takes faith to see God in the everyday workings of this fallen world.

METHODOLOGICAL NATURALISM IN CHRISTIAN HISTORY

Are Christians who call for the abandonment of methodological naturalism right to do so? We ought not ignore the fact that methodological naturalism developed within a Christian worldview over centuries of thought. Augustine (AD 354–430) stated that all truth is God's truth—that secondary causes can be used to explain the natural world—though he was concerned that regularity in the natural order may lead to a loss of wonder. During the Middle Ages, Christian theologians and philosophers proposed that God's activities in nature follow the common course of nature—that he worked through secondary causes (physical causes and effects). Although this belief allowed the use of observation and experiment, in addition to reason, for studying nature, this belief put the visible activity of God outside the common course of nature. As such, one's faith decided whether an event, such as a strong wind, was produced by just another weather pattern or by God as he parted the Red Sea.

Thomas Aquinas (1225–1274) reaffirmed that secondary causes can be used to study nature, but he emphasized that all events are directed by God. John Calvin (1509–1564) reaffirmed Augustine's notion that God is the source of all truth. Francis Bacon (1561–1626) proposed that God revealed himself in two books—the book of creation (Ps 19:1-6) and the book of revelation, the Bible (Ps 19:7-14). B. B. Warfield (1851–1921) reaffirmed Aquinas by stating that God chooses to govern the world by regular cause-and-effect relationships. As can be seen, modern science's commitment to the assumption of physical cause-and-effect (what we today call methodological naturalism) has a long history within Christian thought.

METHODOLOGICAL NATURALISM AND SCIENTIFIC INQUIRY

Does a rejection of methodological naturalism cause science to grind to a stop for the premature appeal to God as causal agent? To evoke God as primary cause does not necessitate the rejection of natural cause-and-effect. Nevertheless, regarding God as a physical-like cause of every event can cause exploration to come to a halt. One reason that modern science did not develop in the classical Islamic world was a philosophical belief that God was indeed involved this way in every event. As Al-Ghazali (1058–1111), a leading philosopher of Islam's golden age, stated that fire does not cause cotton to burn; rather, God intervenes to produce such a result. Furthermore, since God is so different from us, we can never be sure that it will always be God's will that cotton should burn.

The belief that God is the primary cause acting though secondary causes does not mean that scientific inquiry should stop. The Christian worldview of a Creator provides the basis for believing that the universe really exists and is worthy of study. The worldview of the scientist influences what questions are asked and how results are interpreted. Historically, we see that faith did not stifle the acquisition of knowledge; instead, it provided the insight needed to advance understanding.

Believing that God created out of nothing, Johannes Kepler (1571–1630) was inspired to search for the harmony of God in the heavens and so discovered the laws of planetary motion. Believing in the "fixed kinds" of God's original creation did not limit the research of the Swedish naturalist Carolus Linnaeus (1707–1778); rather, it led him to search for a classification system for biological species. Because Louis Pasteur (1822–1895) believed that life was created by God and was not just a set of chemical reactions, he disproved the theory of spontaneous generation and made many discoveries in microbiology. The American agricultural scientist George Washington Carver's (1864–1943) belief that God gave the first humans "seed-bearing plant[s]" (Gn 1:29) for food led to his discovery of over three hundred products that could be made from peanuts. The Belgian priest and astronomer Georges Lemaître's (1894–1966) faith in a Creator God allowed him to propose what is today called the big Bang Model—espousing a dynamic universe with a beginning. In contrast, the German-American physicist Albert Einstein (1879–1955) at first refused to accept this model, even though it emerged from his own theory, because it clashed with the prevailing scientific view of a static, eternal universe.

SUMMARY

In conclusion, the naturalistic methodology of science has been, and continues to be, a helpful tool for scientific endeavor. But we must be cautious of a possible reductionism that offers only naturalistic explanations of the physical universe.

JIMMY H. DAVIS

3 Therefore, whatever you have said in the dark will be heard in the light, and what you have whispered in an ear in private rooms † will be proclaimed on the housetops. †

FEAR GOD

4 "I say to you, my friends, † don't fear † those who kill the body, and after that can do nothing more. 5 But I will show you the one to fear: Fear † him who has authority to throw people into hell † after death. Yes, I say to you, this is the one to fear! 6 Aren't five sparrows sold for two pennies? † Yet not one of them is forgotten in God's sight. † 7 Indeed, the hairs of your head are all counted.
Don't be afraid; you are worth more than many sparrows.

ACKNOWLEDGING CHRIST

8 "And I say to you, anyone who acknowledges † me before others, the Son of Man † will also acknowledge him before the angels of God, † 9 but whoever denies me before others will be denied before the angels of God. † 10 Anyone who speaks a word against the Son of Man will be forgiven, † but the one who blasphemes against the Holy Spirit † will not be forgiven. 11 Whenever † they bring you before synagogues and rulers and authorities, † don't worry † about how you should defend † yourselves or what you should say. 12 For the Holy Spirit will teach you at that very hour what must be said." †

THE PARABLE OF THE RICH FOOL

13 Someone from the crowd said to him, "Teacher, † tell my brother to divide the inheritance with me."
14 "Friend," † he said to him, "who appointed me a judge or arbitrator over you?" 15 He then told them, "Watch out and be on guard † against all greed, † because one's life is not in the abundance of his possessions." †

16 Then he told them a parable: † "A rich † man's land was very productive.
17 He thought to himself, 'What should I do, since I don't have anywhere to store my crops? 18 I will do this,' he said. 'I'll tear down my barns and build bigger ones and store all my grain and my goods there. 19 Then I'll say to myself, "You have many goods stored up for many years. Take it easy; † eat, drink, and enjoy yourself." ' †

20 "But God said to him, 'You fool! † This very night your life is demanded of you. And the things you have prepared — whose will they be? ' † 21 "That's how it is with the one who stores up treasure † for himself and is not rich toward God." †

THE CURE FOR ANXIETY

22 Then he said to his disciples: "Therefore I tell you, † don't worry about your life, what you will eat; or about the body, what you will wear. † 23 For life is more than food and the body more than clothing. 24 Consider the ravens: †
They don't sow or reap; they don't have a storeroom or a barn; yet God feeds them. † Aren't you worth much more than the birds? 25 Can any of you add one moment to his life-span † by worrying? † 26 If then you're not able to do even a little thing, why worry about the rest?

27 "Consider how the wildflowers grow: They don't labor or spin thread. Yet I tell you, not even Solomon † in all his splendor was adorned like one of these.
28 If that's how God clothes the grass, which is in the field today and is thrown into the furnace tomorrow, how much more will he do for you — you of little faith? † 29 Don't strive for what you should eat and what you should drink, and don't be anxious. 30 For the Gentile world eagerly seeks † all these things, and your Father † knows that you need them.

31 "But seek his kingdom, † and these things will be provided for you. † 32 Don't be afraid, † little flock, † because your Father delights † to give you the kingdom. † 33 Sell † your possessions and give to the poor. † Make money-bags † for yourselves that won't grow old, an inexhaustible treasure † in heaven, where no thief comes near and no moth destroys. 34 For where your treasure is, there your heart will be also. †

READY FOR THE MASTER'S RETURN

35 "Be ready for service † and have your lamps lit. † 36 You are to be like people waiting for their master † to return from the wedding banquet † so that when he comes and knocks, they can open the door for him at once. † 37 Blessed will be those servants the master finds alert † when he comes. Truly I tell you, he will get ready, † have them recline at the table, then come and serve them. † 38 If he comes in the middle of the night, or even near dawn, † and finds them alert, blessed are those servants. 39 But know this: If the homeowner had known at what hour the thief was coming, † he would not have let his house be broken into. 40 You also be ready, † because the Son of Man † is coming at an hour you do not expect." †

REWARDS AND PUNISHMENT

41 "Lord," Peter asked, "are you telling this parable to us or to everyone?"

42 The Lord said: "Who then is the faithful and sensible manager † his master will put in charge of his household servants to give them their allotted food † at the proper time? 43 Blessed is that servant whom the master finds doing his job when he comes. 44 Truly I tell you, he will put him in charge of all his possessions. 45 But if that servant says in his heart, 'My master is delaying his coming,' † and starts to beat the male and female servants, and to eat and drink and get drunk, 46 that servant's master will come on a day he does not expect him and at an hour he does not know. He will cut him to pieces † and assign him a place with the unfaithful. † 47 And that servant who knew his master's will and didn't prepare himself or do it † will be severely beaten. † 48 But the one who did not know and did what deserved † punishment will receive a light beating. From everyone who has been given much, much will be required; and from the one who has been entrusted with much, even more will be expected. † †

NOT PEACE BUT DIVISION

49 “I came † to bring fire on the earth, and how I wish it were already set ablaze! 50 But I have a baptism to undergo, † and how it consumes † me until it is finished! † 51 Do you think that I came here to bring peace on the earth? †
No, I tell you, but rather division. 52 From now on, five in one household will be divided: three against two, and two against three.
53 They will be divided, father against son,
son against father,
mother against daughter,
daughter against mother,
mother-in-law against her daughter-in-law, and daughter-in-law against mother-in-law.” † †

INTERPRETING THE TIME

54 He also said to the crowds: † “When you see a cloud rising in the west, right away you say, ‘A storm is coming,’ and so it does. † 55 And when the south wind is blowing, you say, ‘It’s going to be hot,’ and it is. 56 Hypocrites! † You know how to interpret the appearance of the earth and the sky, but why don’t you know how to interpret this present time? †

SETTLING ACCOUNTS

57 “Why don’t you judge for yourselves what is right? † 58 As you are going with your adversary † to the ruler, make an effort to settle with him on the way.
Then he won’t drag you before the judge, † the judge hand you over to the bailiff, and the bailiff throw you into prison. † 59 I tell you, you will never get out of there until you have paid the last cent.” † †

12:13 In Jesus’s day rabbis sometimes mediated disputes, especially those related to the Mosaic law. Some even traveled from town to town to settle disagreements.

12:36 Because the festivities associated with some elaborate Jewish weddings could last up to two weeks, slaves could not be certain when their master might return. Thus, they needed to be alert and prepared for his return at any time.

12:42 The manager to whom Jesus refers was likely a steward who managed other servants within a wealthy household. The wealthy depended on faithful managers to keep their estates running properly.

REPENT OR PERISH

13 At that time,† some people came and reported to him about the Galileans† whose blood Pilate† had mixed with their sacrifices.
2 And he† responded to them, “Do you think that these Galileans were more sinful than all the other Galileans because they suffered these things?† 3 No, I tell you; but unless you repent, you will all perish as well. 4 Or those eighteen that the tower in Siloam† fell on and killed — do you think they were more sinful than all the other people who live in Jerusalem? 5 No, I tell you; but unless you repent, you will all perish as well.”

THE PARABLE OF THE BARREN FIG TREE

6 And he told this parable:† “A man had a fig tree that was planted in his vineyard. He came looking for fruit on it and found none.† 7 He told the vineyard worker, ‘Listen, for three years I have come looking for fruit on this fig tree and haven't found any. Cut it down! † Why should it even waste the soil? ' †

8 "But he replied to him, 'Sir, † leave it this year also, until I dig around it and fertilize it. † 9 Perhaps it will produce fruit next year, but if not, you can cut it down.' "

HEALING A DAUGHTER OF ABRAHAM

10 As he was teaching in one of the synagogues on the Sabbath, † 11 a woman was there who had been disabled by a spirit † † for over eighteen years. She was bent over and could not straighten up at all. † 12 When Jesus saw her, he called out to her, † "Woman, you are free of your disability." 13 Then he laid his hands on her, † and instantly she was restored † and began to glorify God. †

14 But the leader of the synagogue, indignant † because Jesus had healed on the Sabbath, responded by telling the crowd, "There are six days when work should be done; † therefore come on those days and be healed and not on the Sabbath day."

15 But the Lord answered him and said, "Hypocrites! † Doesn't each one of you untie his ox † or donkey from the feeding trough † on the Sabbath and lead it to water? † 16 Satan † has bound † this woman, a daughter of Abraham, † for eighteen years — shouldn't she be untied from this bondage † on the Sabbath day? "

17 When he had said these things, all his adversaries † were humiliated, † but the whole crowd was rejoicing over all the glorious things he was doing. †

THE PARABLES OF THE MUSTARD SEED AND OF THE LEAVEN

18 He said, therefore, "What is the kingdom of God like, † and what can I compare it to? 19 It's like a mustard seed that a man took and sowed in his garden. It grew and became a tree, and the birds of the sky nested in its branches."

20 Again he said, "What can I compare the kingdom of God † to? 21 It's like leaven † † that a woman took and mixed into fifty pounds † of flour until all of it was leavened."

THE NARROW WAY

22 He went through one town and village after another, teaching and making his way to Jerusalem. † 23 "Lord," someone asked him, "are only a few people going to be saved? " †

He said to them, 24 "Make every effort to enter through the narrow door, † because I tell you, many will try to enter and won't be able 25 once the homeowner gets up and shuts the door. † Then you will stand outside and knock on the door, saying, 'Lord, open up for us! ' He will answer you, 'I don't know you or where you're from.' 26 Then you will say, 'We ate and drank in your presence, and you taught in our streets.' 27 But he will say, 'I tell you, I don't know you or where you're from. Get away from me, † all you evildoers! ' 28 There will be weeping and gnashing of teeth † in that place, † when you see Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and all the prophets in the kingdom of God, † but yourselves thrown out. 29 They will come from east and west, from north and south, to share the banquet † in the kingdom of God. 30 Note this: Some who are last will be first, and some who are first will be last." †

JESUS AND HEROD ANTIPAS

31 At that time some Pharisees came and told him, "Go, get out of here. Herod † wants to kill you." †

32 He said to them, "Go tell that fox, 'Look, I'm driving out demons and performing healings today and tomorrow, and on the third day I will complete my work.' † † 33 Yet it is necessary that I † travel today, tomorrow, and the next day, because it is not possible for a prophet † to perish † outside of Jerusalem.

JESUS'S LAMENTATION OVER JERUSALEM

34 "Jerusalem, Jerusalem, † who kills the prophets and stones † those who are sent to her. † How often I wanted to gather your children † together, as a hen gathers her chicks under her wings, † but you were not willing! † 35 See, your house is abandoned to you. † I tell you, you will not see me until the time comes when † you say, 'Blessed is he who comes in the name of the Lord'! " † †

13:1-5 Galileans had journeyed to the temple in Jerusalem to offer sacrifices. For some unknown reason Pilate had them killed and later ordered their blood to be mixed with their sacrifices. Some Jews would have concluded that the Galileans suffered such a horrible fate because they were sinners under God's judgment. Jesus counters such thinking, declaring that the Galileans were not any worse than those listening to him. His listeners should therefore repent or face punishment themselves. Jesus illustrates the point with the tower that fell on eighteen people at Siloam (18:4-5). The pool of Siloam was a reservoir at the southern edge of Jerusalem. See "The Christian Worldview and the Overcoming of Evil," p. 78.

13:11,16 The woman's physical disability was tied to a Satanic spirit. The ancients believed that physical disability and sickness were linked in some way to Satan. But we should not conclude that every illness or sickness is due to demonic activity. See the note for 8:26-39.

13:32 The ancients viewed the fox in a variety of ways, so it is difficult to know the precise meaning intended by Jesus. Insignificance, ineptitude, cleverness, and deviousness were all concepts sometimes applied to a fox.

A SABBATH CONTROVERSY

14 One Sabbath, when he went in to eat † at the house of one of the leading Pharisees, † they were watching him closely. † 2 There in front of him was a man whose body was swollen with fluid. 3 In response, Jesus asked the law experts † and the Pharisees, "Is it lawful to heal on the Sabbath or not?" † 4 But they kept silent. He took the man, healed him, and sent him away. 5 And to them, he said, "Which of you whose son or ox falls into a well, will not immediately pull him out on the Sabbath day?" † 6 They could find no answer to these things.

TEACHINGS ON HUMILITY

7 He told a parable † to those who were invited, when he noticed how they would choose the best places † for themselves: 8 "When you are invited by someone to a wedding banquet, don't recline at the best place, because a more distinguished person † than you may have been invited by your host. 9 The one who invited both of you may come and say to you, 'Give your place to this man,' and then in humiliation, you will proceed to take the lowest place.

10 "But when you are invited, go and recline in the lowest place, so that when the one who invited you comes, he will say to you, 'Friend, move up higher.' You will then be honored † in the presence of all the other guests. † 11 For everyone who exalts himself will be humbled, and the one who humbles himself will be exalted." †

12 He also said to the one who had invited him, "When you give a lunch or a dinner, don't invite your friends, your brothers or sisters, your relatives, or your rich neighbors, because they might invite you back, and you would be repaid. 13 On the contrary, when you host a banquet, † invite those who are poor, maimed, lame, or blind. † 14 And you will be blessed, because they cannot repay you; for you will be repaid † at the resurrection of the righteous." †

THE PARABLE OF THE LARGE BANQUET

15 When † one of those who reclined at the table with him heard these things, he said to him, "Blessed is the one who will eat bread in the kingdom of God! " †

16 Then he told him: "A man was giving a large banquet and invited many. 17 At the time of the banquet, he sent his servant to tell those who were invited, 'Come, because everything is now ready.'

18 "But without exception † they all began to make excuses. The first one said to him, 'I have bought a field, and I must go out and see it. I ask you to excuse me.'

19 "Another said, 'I have bought five yoke of oxen, and I'm going to try them out. I ask you to excuse me.'

20 "And another said, 'I just got married, † and therefore I'm unable to come.'

21 “So the servant came back and reported these things to his master. Then in anger, the master of the house told his servant, ‘Go out quickly into the streets and alleys of the city, and bring in here the poor, maimed, blind, and lame.’ † 22 “ ‘Master,’ the servant said, ‘what you ordered has been done, and there’s still room.’
23 “Then the master told the servant, ‘Go out into the highways and hedges and make them come in, so that my house may be filled. 24 For I tell you, not one of those people who were invited will enjoy my banquet.’ ”

THE COST OF FOLLOWING JESUS

25 Now † great crowds were traveling with him. So he turned and said to them:
26 “If anyone comes to me † and does not hate † his own father and mother, wife and children, brothers and sisters — yes, and even his own life — he cannot be my disciple. 27 Whoever does not bear his own cross † and come after me cannot be my disciple.
28 “For which of you, wanting to build a tower, doesn’t first sit down and calculate the cost † to see if he has enough to complete it? 29 Otherwise, after he has laid the foundation and cannot finish it, all the onlookers will begin to ridicule him, 30 saying, ‘This man started to build and wasn’t able to finish.’ 31 “Or what king, going to war against another king, will not first sit down and decide if he is able with ten thousand to oppose the one who comes against him with twenty thousand? 32 If not, while the other is still far off, he sends a delegation and asks for terms of peace. 33 In the same way, therefore, every one of you who does not renounce † all his possessions † cannot be my disciple.
34 “Now, † salt † is good, but if salt should lose its taste, how will it be made salty? 35 It isn’t fit for the soil or for the manure pile; they throw it out. Let anyone who has ears to hear listen.” †

14:16-17 When a person wanted to invite a guest to a formal banquet in Jesus's day, he contacted them twice. A host made initial contact far in advance to confirm his guest's attendance. Later, he contacted his guest to announce that the supper was at hand and that the guest should come immediately. The excuses of the invitees are less palatable in light of the fact that they had confirmed their reservation.

14:26 Jesus's reference to hating one's family members, even his own life, should be understood as hyperbole—a device sometimes employed by master teachers. His shocking statement emphasizes that love and devotion to him must be greater than love and devotion to all others.

THE PARABLE OF THE LOST SHEEP

15 All † the tax collectors † and sinners were approaching to listen to him. 2 And the Pharisees and scribes were complaining, "This man welcomes sinners † and eats with them."
3 So he told them this parable: † 4 "What man among you, who has a hundred sheep and loses one of them, † does not leave the ninety-nine in the open field † and go after the lost one until he finds it? 5 When he has found it, he joyfully puts it on his shoulders, 6 and coming home, he calls his friends and neighbors together, saying to them, 'Rejoice with me, because I have found my lost sheep! ' 7 I tell you, in the same way, there will be more joy in heaven † over one sinner who repents than over ninety-nine righteous people who don't need repentance.

THE PARABLE OF THE LOST COIN

8 "Or what woman who has ten silver coins, † † if she loses one coin, does not light a lamp, sweep the house, and search carefully until she finds it? 9 When she finds it, she calls her friends and neighbors together, saying, 'Rejoice with me, because I have found the silver coin I lost! ' 10 I tell you, in the same way, there is joy in the presence of God's angels † over one sinner who repents."

THE PARABLE OF THE LOST SON

11 He also said: "A man had two sons. 12 The younger of them said to his father, 'Father, give me the share of the estate I have coming to me.' So he distributed the assets † to them. 13 Not many days later, the younger son gathered together all he had and traveled to a distant country, where he squandered † his estate in foolish living. † 14 After he had spent everything, a severe famine struck that country, and he had nothing. † 15 Then he went to work for one of the citizens of that country, who sent him into his fields to feed pigs. † 16 He longed to eat his fill from † the pods that the pigs were eating, but no one would give him anything. 17 When he came to his senses, † he said, ‘How many of my father’s hired workers have more than enough food, and here I am dying of hunger! † 18 I’ll get up, go to my father, and say to him, “Father, I have sinned † against heaven † and in your sight. 19 I’m no longer worthy † to be called your son.

Make me like one of your hired workers.” ’ 20 So he got up and went to his father. But while the son was still a long way off, his father saw him and was filled with compassion. † He ran, threw his arms around his neck, and kissed † him. 21 The son said to him, ‘Father, I have sinned against heaven and in your sight. I’m no longer worthy to be called your son.’ 22 “But the father told his servants, ‘Quick! Bring out the best robe † and put it on him; put a ring † on his finger and sandals † on his feet. 23 Then bring the fattened calf † and slaughter it, and let’s celebrate with a feast, 24 because this son of mine was dead and is alive again; † he was lost and is found! ’ So they began to celebrate.
25 “Now his older son was in the field; as he came near the house, he heard music and dancing. 26 So he summoned one of the servants, questioning what these things meant. 27 ‘Your brother is here,’ he told him, ‘and your father has slaughtered the fattened calf because he has him back safe and sound.’ † 28 “Then he became angry and didn’t want to go in. So his father came out and pleaded with him. 29 But he replied to his father, ‘Look, I have been slaving many years for you, and I have never disobeyed your orders, yet you never gave me a goat so that I could celebrate with my friends. 30 But when this son of yours came, who has devoured your assets † with prostitutes, † you slaughtered the fattened calf for him.’
31 “ ‘Son,’ † he said to him, ‘you are always with me, † and everything I have is yours. 32 But we had to celebrate and rejoice, because this brother of yours was dead and is alive again; he was lost and is found.’ ”

15:3-32 This passage records three parables (The Lost Sheep, 15:3-7; The Lost Coin, 15:8-10; The Lost Son, 15:11-32) that Jesus uses to challenge the Pharisees' and scribes' complaint that he "welcomes sinners and eats with them" (v. 2). Like many ancient teachers, Jesus used parables to challenge and correct, especially the religious leaders (7:31-50; 10:25-37; 18:9-14). He also employed repetition to stress his point, as we see across the three parables here. The reaction of the older son to his father's celebration illustrates the behavior of the Pharisees and scribes.

15:12 An inheritance, the assets in view here, was not normally given until a father's death; to ask for it beforehand would constitute a grave insult: "I wish you were dead, but I can't wait until then!"

15:15 Jews regarded pigs unclean animals (Lv 11:7; Dt 14:8); to care for them would be deeply dishonorable.

15:20 Wealthy Middle Eastern men dressed in long, heavy robes did not run. Running was viewed as degrading. It would be necessary to gird the robes around one's waist like a diaper in order to run. Thus, for this father to race to his son indicates that he was willing to humiliate himself in order to greet and embrace his lost boy. Here Jesus demonstrates the extravagant love of God toward lost sinners who repent.

15:22 The best robe, ring, and sandals indicate full acceptance back into the family. Instead of being treated as a hired worker, the son is treated like a prince.

15:23 A fattened calf was kept for special occasions like wedding feasts. The use of such a calf here indicates a great celebration that perhaps includes the whole village.

15:25-28 For the older son to refuse to join in a banquet hosted by his father would have been viewed as a great public insult to the father. The son's confrontation with the father adds further disgrace, since his father's guests are still present.

THE PARABLE OF THE DISHONEST MANAGER

16 Now he said to the disciples: "There was a rich † man who received an accusation that his manager † was squandering † his possessions. 2 So he called the manager in and asked, 'What is this I hear about you? Give an account of your management, † because you can no longer be my manager.' 3 "Then the manager said to himself, 'What will I do since my master is taking the management away from me? I'm not strong enough to dig; I'm ashamed to beg. 4 I know what I'll do so that when I'm removed from management, people will welcome me into their homes.'
5 "So he summoned each one of his master's debtors. 'How much do you owe my master? ' he asked the first one.

6 “ ‘A hundred measures of olive oil,’ he said.
“ ‘Take your invoice,’ he told him, ‘sit down quickly, and write fifty.’
7 “Next he asked another, ‘How much do you owe? ’
“ ‘A hundred measures of wheat,’ he said.
“ ‘Take your invoice,’ he told him, ‘and write eighty.’
8 “The master praised the unrighteous manager † because he had acted shrewdly. For the children of this age † are more shrewd than the children of light † in dealing with their own people. † 9 And I tell you, make friends † for yourselves by means of worldly wealth † † so that when it fails, † they may welcome you into eternal dwellings. 10 Whoever is faithful † in very little † is also faithful in much, and whoever is unrighteous in very little is also unrighteous in much. 11 So if you have not been faithful with worldly wealth, who will trust you with what is genuine? 12 And if you have not been faithful with what belongs to someone else, who will give you what is your own? 13 No † servant can serve two masters, since either he will hate † one and love the other, or he will be devoted to one and despise the other. You cannot serve both God and money.”

KINGDOM VALUES

14 The Pharisees, who were lovers of money, † were listening to all these things and scoffing † at him. 15 And he told them, “You are the ones who justify † yourselves in the sight of others, but God knows your hearts. † For what is highly admired by people is revolting † in God’s sight.
16 “The † Law and the Prophets † were until John; since then, the good news of the kingdom of God † has been proclaimed, and everyone is urgently invited to enter it. † 17 But it is easier † for heaven and earth to pass away than for one stroke of a letter in the law to drop out.
18 “Everyone † who divorces † his wife and marries another woman commits adultery, † and everyone who marries a woman divorced from her husband commits adultery.

THE RICH MAN AND LAZARUS

19 “There was a rich man who would dress in purple and fine linen, † feasting lavishly every day. 20 But a poor man named Lazarus, covered with sores, was lying at his gate. † 21 He longed to be filled † with what fell from the rich man’s table, † but instead the dogs † would come and lick his sores. 22 One day the poor man died and was carried away by the angels to Abraham’s side. † †
The rich man also died and was buried. 23 And being in torment † in Hades, † he looked up and saw Abraham a long way off, with Lazarus at his side.
24 ‘Father Abraham! ’ † he called out, ‘Have mercy on me and send Lazarus to dip the tip of his finger in water and cool my tongue, because I am in agony † in this flame! ’ 25 “ ‘Son,’ † Abraham said, ‘remember that during your life you received your good things, † just as Lazarus received bad things, but now he is comforted here, † while you are in agony. 26 Besides all this, a great chasm has been fixed between us and you, so that those who want to pass over from here to you cannot; neither can those from there cross over to us.’
27 “ ‘Father,’ he said, ‘then I beg you to send him to my father’s house — 28 because I have five brothers — to warn † them, so they won’t also come to this place of torment.’
29 “But Abraham said, ‘They have Moses and the prophets; † they should listen to them.’
30 “ ‘No, father Abraham,’ he said. ‘But if someone from the dead goes to them, they will repent.’
31 “But he told him, ‘If they don’t listen to Moses and the prophets, they will not be persuaded if someone rises from the dead.’ ” †

16:1-8 The unrighteous manager serves as a model for Jesus's listeners. Just as the clever manager made preparations in light of his impending crisis (unemployment and possible starvation), so should Jesus's listeners make preparations in light of the impending crisis of God's future judgment. Jesus did not commend every action performed in his parables; the manager's dishonesty is not approved.

16:18 The OT allowed divorce (Dt 24:1-4), though the legitimate grounds for it were debated among rabbis. The school of Shamai only allowed a man to divorce his wife for adultery, while the school of Hillel viewed almost any flaw perceived in a wife as a legitimate reason for divorce. Jesus rejects a casual attitude toward the law; to marry someone else when one's first spouse still lives constitutes adultery.

16:19-31 See "The Eternal State," p. 1622.

16:21 The dogs mentioned here are likely street dogs. Jews did not keep dogs as pets; rather, they regarded them as nasty, unclean animals. They were usually scavengers that harbored various diseases. The parable thus portrays Lazarus in a degraded, humiliating state.

WARNINGS FROM JESUS

17 He † said to his disciples, "Offenses will certainly come, † but woe † to the one through whom they come! † 2 It would be better for him if a millstone were hung around his neck and he were thrown into the sea than for him to cause one of these little ones to stumble. † 3 Be † on your guard. If your brother sins, † rebuke † him, and if he repents, forgive † him. 4 And if he sins against you seven times in a day, and comes back to you seven times, saying, 'I repent,' you must forgive him."

FAITH AND DUTY

5 The † apostles † said to the Lord, "Increase our faith." †
6 "If you have faith the size of † a mustard seed," † the Lord said, "you can say to this mulberry tree, 'Be uprooted and planted in the sea,' and it will obey you.
7 "Which one of you having a servant tending sheep or plowing will say to him when he comes in from the field, 'Come at once and sit down to eat'? 8 Instead, will he not tell him, 'Prepare something for me to eat, get ready, and serve me while I eat and drink; later you can eat and drink'? † 9 Does he thank that servant because he did what was commanded? † 10 In the same way, when you have done all that you were commanded, you should say, 'We are worthless † servants; we've only done our duty.' "

TEN MEN HEALED

11 While traveling to Jerusalem, † he passed between † Samaria and Galilee. † 12 As he entered a village, ten men with leprosy † † met him. They stood at a distance 13 and raised their voices, saying, “Jesus, Master, † have mercy on us! ”
14 When he saw them, he told them, “Go and show yourselves to the priests.” †
And while they were going, they were cleansed.
15 But one of them, seeing that he was healed, returned and, with a loud voice, gave glory to God. † 16 He fell facedown † at his feet, thanking him. And he was a Samaritan. † 17 Then Jesus said, “Were not ten cleansed? Where are the nine? 18 Didn’t any return to give glory to God except this foreigner? ” 19 And he told him, “Get up and go on your way. Your faith has saved you.” † †

THE COMING OF THE KINGDOM

20 Being † asked by the Pharisees when the kingdom of God would come, † he answered them, “The kingdom of God is not coming with something observable; 21 no one will say, † ‘See here! ’ or ‘There! ’ For you see, the kingdom of God is in your midst.” † 22 Then he told the disciples: “The days are coming † when you will long to see one of the days of the Son of Man, but you won’t see it. † 23 They will say to you, † ‘See there! ’ or ‘See here! ’ Don’t follow or run after them. † 24 For as the lightning flashes from horizon to horizon and lights up the sky, so the Son of Man will be in his day. † 25 But first it is necessary that he suffer many things and be rejected by this generation. † 26 “Just as it was in the days of Noah, † so it will be in the days of the Son of Man: 27 People went on eating, drinking, marrying and giving in marriage † until the day Noah boarded the ark, † and the flood came and destroyed them all. 28 It will be the same as it was in the days of Lot: † People went on eating, drinking, buying, selling, planting, building. 29 But on the day Lot left Sodom, fire and sulfur rained from heaven and destroyed † them all. 30 It † will be like that on the day the Son of Man is revealed. † 31 On that day, a man on the housetop, whose belongings are in the house, must not come down to get them. Likewise the man who is in the field must not turn back. 32 Remember Lot's wife! † 33 Whoever tries to make his life secure † † will lose it, and whoever loses his life will preserve it. † 34 I tell you, on that night † two will be in one bed; one will be taken and the other will be left. 35 Two women will be grinding grain together; one will be taken and the other left." † 37 "Where, Lord?" † they asked him.

He said to them, "Where the corpse is, there also the vultures † will be gathered."

17:7-10 A servant, or bondservant or slave, was under the authority of his master and had specific duties. In that culture, masters felt no compulsion to commend a servant for fulfilling his duty. Jesus's disciples, likewise, should not expect special commendation simply for doing their duty.

17:14 The OT gave strict guidelines for the examination of leprosy (Lv 13–14). Priests were responsible for diagnosing it and also were to declare healed lepers clean.

THE PARABLE OF THE PERSISTENT WIDOW

18 Now he told them a parable on the need for them to pray † always and not give up. † 2 "There was a judge in a certain town who didn't fear God † or respect people. 3 And a widow † in that town kept coming to him, saying, 'Give me justice against my adversary.'

4 "For a while he was unwilling, but later he said to himself, 'Even though I don't fear God or respect people, 5 yet because this widow keeps † pestering me, † I will give her justice, so that she doesn't wear me out † by her persistent coming.' "

6 Then the Lord said, "Listen to what the unjust judge says. 7 Will not God grant justice † to his elect † who cry out to him day and night? † Will he delay † helping them? † 8 I tell you that he will swiftly grant them justice. Nevertheless, when the Son of Man comes, † will he find faith on earth? "

THE PARABLE OF THE PHARISEE AND THE TAX COLLECTOR

9 He † also told this parable to some who trusted in themselves † that they were righteous † and looked down † on everyone else: 10 "Two men went up to the temple to pray, † one a Pharisee and the other a tax collector. 11 The Pharisee was standing † and praying like this about himself: † 'God, I thank you that I'm not like other people — greedy, † unrighteous, † adulterers, † or even like this tax collector. 12 I fast † twice a week; I give a tenth † † of everything I get.'

13 "But the tax collector, standing far off, † would not even raise his eyes to heaven † but kept striking his chest † and saying, 'God, have mercy on me, † † a sinner! ' † 14 I tell you, this one went down to his house justified † rather than the other; because everyone who exalts himself will be humbled, but the one who humbles himself will be exalted." †

15 People † were bringing infants to him so he might touch them, but when the disciples saw it, they rebuked them. 16 Jesus, however, invited them: "Let the little children come to me, † and don't stop them, because the kingdom of God belongs to such as these. 17 Truly I tell you, † whoever does not receive † the kingdom of God like a little child † will never enter it."

THE RICH YOUNG RULER

18 A † ruler † asked him, "Good teacher, what must I do to inherit eternal life? " †

19 "Why do you call me good? " Jesus asked him. "No one is good except God alone. 20 You know the commandments: Do not commit adultery; do not murder; do not steal; do not bear false witness; honor your father and mother.” † †

21 “I have kept all these from my youth,” he said.

22 When Jesus heard this, he told him, “You still lack one thing: Sell all you have and distribute it to the poor, † and you will have treasure in heaven. † Then come, follow me.” †

23 After he heard this, he became extremely sad, † because he was very rich.

24 Seeing that he became sad, † Jesus said, “How hard it is for those who have wealth to enter the kingdom of God! 25 For it is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich person to enter the kingdom of God.”

26 Those who heard this asked, “Then who can be saved?” †

27 He replied, “What is impossible with man is possible with God.” †

28 Then Peter said, “Look, we have left what we had and followed † you.”

29 So he said to them, “Truly I tell you, there is no one who has left a house, wife or brothers or sisters, parents or children because of the kingdom of God, 30 who will not receive many times more at this time, † and eternal life in the age to come.”

THE THIRD PREDICTION OF HIS DEATH

31 Then † he took the Twelve aside and told them, “See, we are going up to Jerusalem. † Everything that is written † through the prophets about the Son of Man will be accomplished. † 32 For he will be handed over to the Gentiles, † and he will be mocked, † insulted, spit † on; 33 and after they flog him, they will kill him, and he will rise on the third day.” †

34 They understood none of these things. † The meaning of the saying † † was hidden † from them, and they did not grasp what was said.

A BLIND MAN RECEIVES HIS SIGHT

35 As † he approached Jericho, a blind man was sitting by the road begging. 36 Hearing a crowd passing by, he inquired what was happening. 37 “Jesus of Nazareth † is passing by," they told him.

38 So he called out, † "Jesus, Son of David, † have mercy † on me!" 39 Then those in front told him to keep quiet, † but he kept crying out all the more, "Son of David, have mercy on me!"
40 Jesus stopped and commanded that he be brought to him. When he came closer, he asked him, 41 "What do you want me to do for you?"
"Lord," he said, "I want to see."
42 "Receive your sight." † Jesus told him. "Your faith has saved you." †
43 Instantly he could see, and he began to follow him, glorifying God. † All the people, † when they saw it, gave praise to God.

18:3 Widows were very vulnerable members of a society. God expresses his concern for them throughout the Bible, which warns of his vengeance toward those who withhold justice from a widow (e.g., Dt 24:17; 27:19).

18:10 Tax collectors were despised for their complicity with the Roman oppressors of Israel as well as for their unashamed embezzlement and greed. Jews thought a house became unclean when a tax collector entered. The presence of a tax collector in the temple was seen as despicable.

18:13 Striking one's chest was an act of extreme grief, normally practiced by women in mourning. This male tax collector's actions indicate heartfelt repentance.

JESUS VISITS ZACCHAEUS

JESUS VISITS ZACCHAEUS

19 He entered Jericho and was passing through. 2 There was a man named Zacchaeus who was a chief tax collector, and he was rich. 3 He was trying to see who Jesus was, but he was not able because of the crowd, since he was a short man. 4 So running ahead, he climbed up a sycamore tree to see Jesus, since he was about to pass that way. 5 When Jesus came to the place, he looked up and said to him, "Zacchaeus, hurry and come down because today it is necessary for me to stay at your house."
6 So he quickly came down and welcomed him joyfully. 7 All who saw it began to complain, † "He's gone to stay with a sinful man." 8 But Zacchaeus stood there and said to the Lord, "Look, I'll give half of my possessions to the poor, † Lord. And if I have extorted † anything from anyone, I'll pay back four times as much." † 9 "Today salvation † has come to this house," Jesus told him, "because he too is a son of Abraham. † 10 For the Son of Man has come to seek and to save the lost." †

THE PARABLE OF THE TEN MINAS

11 As † they were listening to this, he went on to tell a parable because he was near Jerusalem, † and they thought the kingdom of God was going to appear right away. † 12 Therefore he said: "A nobleman traveled to a far country to receive for himself authority to be king † and then to return. 13 He called ten of his servants, gave them ten minas, † and told them, 'Engage in business until I come back.'
14 "But his subjects hated him and sent a delegation after him, saying, 'We don't want this man to rule over us.' 15 "At his return, having received the authority to be king, he summoned those servants he had given the money to, so that he could find out how much they had made in business. 16 The first came forward and said, 'Master, your mina has earned ten more minas.'
17 " 'Well done, good † servant!' he told him. 'Because you have been faithful † in a very small matter, have authority over ten towns.'

18 “The second came and said, ‘Master, your mina has made five minas.’
19 “So he said to him, ‘You will be over five towns.’ 20 “And another came and said, ‘Master, here is your mina. I have kept it safe in a cloth 21 because I was afraid of you since you’re a harsh man: you collect what you didn’t deposit and reap what you didn’t sow.’ † 22 “He told him, ‘I will condemn you by what you have said, you evil servant! If you knew I was a harsh man, collecting what I didn’t deposit and reaping what I didn’t sow, 23 why, then, didn’t you put my money in the bank? And when I returned, I would have collected it with interest.’ 24 So he said to those standing there, ‘Take the mina away from him and give it to the one who has ten minas.’
25 “But they said to him, ‘Master, he has ten minas.’
26 “ ‘I tell you, that to everyone who has, more will be given; and from the one who does not have, even what he does have will be taken away. † 27 But bring here these enemies of mine, † who did not want me to rule over them, and slaughter † them in my presence.’ ”

THE TRIUMPHAL ENTRY

28 When † he had said these things, he went on ahead, going up to Jerusalem. † 29 As he approached Bethphage and Bethany, at the place called the Mount of Olives, † he sent two of the disciples 30 and said, “Go into the village ahead of you. As you enter it, you will find a young donkey tied there, on which no one has ever sat. Untie it and bring it. 31 If anyone asks you, ‘Why are you untying it? ’ say this: ‘The Lord needs it.’ ” 32 So those who were sent left and found it just as he had told them. † 33 As they were untying the young donkey, its owners said to them, “Why are you untying the donkey? ” 34 “The Lord needs it,” they said. 35 Then † they brought it to Jesus, and after throwing their clothes on the donkey, they helped Jesus get on it. † 36 As he was going along, they were spreading their clothes on the road. † 37 Now he came near the path down the Mount of Olives, and the whole crowd of the disciples began to praise God joyfully with a loud voice for all the miracles they had seen:
38 Blessed is the King † who comes in the name of the Lord. † †

Peace in heaven and glory † in the highest heaven! †
39 Some of the Pharisees from the crowd told him, “Teacher, rebuke your disciples.”
40 He answered, “I tell you, if they were to keep silent, the stones would cry out.” †

JESUS’S LOVE FOR JERUSALEM

41 As he approached and saw the city, he wept † for it, 42 saying, “If you knew † this day what would bring peace — but now it is hidden † from your eyes. 43 For the days will come on you † when your enemies will build a barricade around you, surround you, and hem you in on every side. † 44 They will crush you and your children among you to the ground, † and they will not leave one stone on another † in your midst, because you did not recognize the time when God visited you.” †

45 He † went into the temple and began to throw out those who were selling, †
46 and he said, “It is written, my house will be a house of prayer, † but you have made it a den of thieves! ” † †
47 Every day he was teaching † in the temple. The chief priests, the scribes, and the leaders of the people were looking for a way to kill † him, 48 but they could not find a way to do it, because all the people † were captivated by what they heard.

19:2 Zacchaeus was a chief tax collector, an official who oversaw collectors under his authority. The position could be financially lucrative as it included managing the sales and customs of subordinate tax collectors on such items as agriculture and crafts. Levi was probably a subordinate tax collector (5:27). Tax collectors were generally despised by Jews.

19:13 In the first century, a Greek mina was equivalent to three to four months' wages.

19:30 The use of a donkey recalls Zechariah 9:9: "Rejoice greatly, Daughter Zion! Shout in triumph, Daughter Jerusalem! Look, your King is coming to you; he is righteous and victorious, humble and riding on a donkey, on a colt, the foal of a donkey."

19:35-38 Riding a donkey into Jerusalem reveals Jesus's messiahship. The spreading of clothes on the road indicates homage to a person of high rank, and the citation of Psalm 118:26, "Blessed is the King who comes in the name of the Lord," indicates that the crowd recognizes Jesus as the Messiah.

THE AUTHORITY OF JESUS CHALLENGED

20 One † day as he was teaching † the people in the temple and proclaiming the good news, † the chief priests and the scribes, with the elders, † 2 came and said to him: "Tell us, by what authority are you doing these things? Who is it who gave you this authority?"
3 He answered them, "I will also ask you a question. Tell me, 4 was the baptism of John from heaven or of human origin?"
5 They discussed it among themselves: "If we say, 'From heaven,' he will say,
'Why didn't you believe him?' 6 But if we say, 'Of human origin,' all the people † will stone us, because they are convinced that John was a prophet." † 7 So they answered that they did not know its origin.
8 And Jesus said to them, "Neither will I tell you by what authority I do these things."

THE PARABLE OF THE VINEYARD OWNER

9 Now † he began to tell the people this parable: "A man planted a vineyard, † leased it to tenant farmers, and went away for a long time. 10 At harvest time he sent a servant to the farmers so that they might give him some fruit from the vineyard. But the farmers beat him and sent him away empty-handed. 11 He sent yet another servant, but they beat that one too, treated him shamefully, and sent him away empty-handed. 12 And he sent yet a third, but they wounded this one too and threw him out.

13 “Then the owner of the vineyard said, ‘What should I do? I will send my beloved † son. Perhaps † they will respect him.’
14 “But when the tenant farmers saw him, they discussed it among themselves and said, ‘This is the heir. Let’s kill him, so that the inheritance will be ours.’ †
15 So they threw him out of the vineyard and killed him.
“What then will the owner of the vineyard do to them? 16 He will come and kill † those farmers and give the vineyard to others.”
But when they heard this they said, “That must never happen! ” †
17 But he looked at them and said, “Then what is the meaning of this Scripture: † †
The stone that the builders rejected
has become the cornerstone? † †
18 Everyone who falls on that stone will be broken to pieces, but on whomever it falls, it will shatter him.” †
19 Then the scribes and the chief priests † looked for a way to get their hands on him † that very hour, because they knew he had told this parable against them, but they feared the people. †

GOD AND CAESAR

20 They † watched closely † and sent spies † who pretended to be righteous, † so that they could catch him in what he said, † to hand him † over to the governor’s † rule and authority. 21 They questioned him, “Teacher, we know that you speak and teach correctly, † and you don’t show partiality † † but teach truthfully the way of God. † 22 Is it lawful † for us to pay taxes † to Caesar † or not? ”
23 But detecting their craftiness, he said to them, † 24 “Show me a denarius. † Whose image and inscription does it have? ”
“Caesar’s,” they said.
25 “Well then,” he told them, “give to Caesar † the things that are Caesar’s, and to God the things that are God’s.”

26 They were not able to catch him in what he said in public, and being amazed at his answer, they became silent. †

THE SADDUCEES AND THE RESURRECTION

27 Some † of the Sadducees, who say there is no resurrection, † came up and questioned him: 28 "Teacher, Moses wrote for us that if a man's brother has a wife, and dies childless, his brother should take the wife and produce offspring for his brother. † † 29 Now there were seven brothers. The first took a wife and died without children. 30 Also the second † 31 and the third took her.
In the same way, all seven died and left no children. 32 Finally, the woman died too. 33 In the resurrection, therefore, whose wife will the woman be? For all seven had married her."

34 Jesus told them, "The children of this age † marry and are given in marriage. † 35 But those who are counted worthy † to take part in that age † and in the resurrection from the dead neither marry nor are given in marriage.
36 For they can no longer die, † because they are like angels and are children of God, † since they are children of the resurrection. 37 Moses even indicated in the passage about the burning bush that the dead are raised, where he calls the Lord the God of Abraham and the God of Isaac and the God of Jacob. † † 38 He is not the God of the dead but of the living, because all are living to † him." †

39 Some of the scribes answered, "Teacher, you have spoken well." 40 And they no longer dared to ask him anything.

THE QUESTION ABOUT THE CHRIST

41 Then † he said to them, "How can they say that the Christ is the son of David? † 42 For David himself says in the Book of Psalms: †
The Lord declared to my Lord,
'Sit at my right hand
43 until I make your enemies your footstool.' † †
44 David calls him 'Lord'; how then can the Christ be his son? " †

WARNING AGAINST THE SCRIBES

45 While † all the people were listening, he said to his disciples, 46 "Beware † of the scribes, who want to go around in long robes and who love greetings in the marketplaces, the best seats in the synagogues, and the places of honor at banquets. † 47 They devour widows' houses and say long prayers just for show.
These will receive harsher judgment." †

20:20-22 Spies seek to trap Jesus with the question, Is it lawful for us to pay taxes to Caesar or not? Jews in Judea had been required to pay a poll tax since AD 6 when the Romans designated Judea a province under direct Roman rule. The tax was exceedingly unpopular among the Judeans. As a Galilean, Jesus was probably not required to pay it, for Galilee was not under direct Roman rule. He thus approaches the question as an outsider. Answering "no" could lead to his being labeled a revolutionary. Answering "yes" could lead to the accusation that he supports a pagan government that oppresses the Jews.

20:27-40 While the Sadducees viewed all of the OT as God's Word, they regarded only the Pentateuch as providing authoritative doctrine. Their reading of the Pentateuch did not acknowledge any reference to resurrection, hence their disbelief in it. Jesus's response to their question critiques their reading of the Pentateuch.

20:36 See "A Biblical View of Angels," p. 1531.

THE WIDOW'S GIFT

21 He † looked up and saw the rich dropping their offerings into the temple treasury. † 2 He also saw a poor widow dropping in two tiny coins. † † 3 "Truly I tell you," he said, "this poor widow has put in more than all of them. † 4 For all these people have put in gifts out of their surplus, but she out of her poverty has put in all she had to live on."

DESTRUCTION OF THE TEMPLE PREDICTED

5 As † some were talking about the temple, how it was adorned with beautiful stones and gifts dedicated to God, he said, 6 "These things that you see — the days will come † when not one stone will be left on another that will not be thrown down." †

SIGNS OF THE END OF THE AGE

7 "Teacher," they asked him, "so when will these things happen? And what will be the sign when these things are about to take place?" †

8 Then he said, "Watch out that you are not deceived. † For many will come in my name, † saying, 'I am he,' † and, 'The time is near.' Don't follow them. † 9 When you hear of wars and rebellions, † don't be alarmed. Indeed, it is necessary that these things take place first, but the end won't come right away." 10 Then he told them: "Nation will be raised up against nation, and kingdom against kingdom. † 11 There will be violent earthquakes, † and famines and plagues † in various places, and there will be terrifying sights and great signs from heaven. † 12 But before all these things, they will lay their hands on you † and persecute † you. They will hand you over to the synagogues † and prisons, † and you will be brought before kings and governors † because of my name. 13 This will give you an opportunity to bear witness. † 14 Therefore make up your minds † not to prepare your defense ahead of time, † 15 for I will give you such words † and a wisdom † that none of your adversaries will be able to resist or contradict. † 16 You will even be betrayed by parents, brothers, relatives, and friends. † They will kill some of you. 17 You will be hated by everyone because of my name, † 18 but not a hair of your head will be lost. † 19 By your endurance, gain † your lives. †

THE DESTRUCTION OF JERUSALEM

20 "When you see Jerusalem surrounded by armies, † then recognize that its desolation † has come near. 21 Then those in Judea must flee † to the mountains. † Those inside the city must leave it, and those who are in the country must not enter it, 22 because these are days of vengeance † to fulfill all the things that are written. 23 Woe to pregnant women and nursing mothers in those days, † for there will be great distress in the land † and wrath against this people. 24 They will be killed by the sword † † and be led captive into all the nations, and Jerusalem will be trampled by the Gentiles † † until the times of the Gentiles † are fulfilled.

THE COMING OF THE SON OF MAN

25 "Then there will be signs in the sun, moon, and stars; † and there will be anguish on the earth among nations bewildered by the roaring of the sea and the waves. † 26 People will faint from fear and expectation of the things that are coming on the world, because the powers of the heavens will be shaken. † 27 Then they will see the Son of Man coming in a cloud † with power and great glory. † 28 But when these things begin to take place, stand up and lift up your heads, because your redemption is near." †

THE PARABLE OF THE FIG TREE

29 Then he told them a parable: "Look at the fig tree, and all the trees. 30 As soon as they put out leaves you can see for yourselves and recognize that summer is already near. 31 In the same way, when you see these things happening, recognize † that the kingdom of God is near. 32 Truly I tell you, this generation will certainly not pass away until all things take place. † 33 Heaven and earth will pass away, † but my words will never pass away. †

THE NEED FOR WATCHFULNESS

34 "Be on your guard, † so that your minds are not dulled † from carousing, † drunkenness, † and worries of life, † or that day will come on you unexpectedly † 35 like a trap. For it will come on all who live on the face of the whole earth. 36 But be alert at all times, † praying that you may have strength † to escape † all these things that are going to take place and to stand before the Son of Man."

37 During † the day, he was teaching in the temple, † but in the evening he would go out and spend the night on what is called the Mount of Olives. †
38 Then all the people would come early in the morning to hear him in the temple. †

21:1-2 The Jerusalem temple contained thirteen horn-shaped receptacles into which worshipers could toss money. Offerings were used for the maintenance of temple worship and supporting the poor. The widow tosses two tiny coins (Gk lepta) into the receptacle. Lepta were made of copper and were the smallest coins in circulation in Palestine. One lepton was equivalent to one-hundredth of a denarius (or perhaps less).

21:5 The temple in Jerusalem was the symbol of religious and national unity. Around 20 BC Herod the Great decided to raze and enlarge the temple—by far his most lavish building project. When completed, the structure occupied one-sixth of Jerusalem and stood sixteen to twenty stories high. While much of the work was finished about a decade after building began (10 BC), the temple's ornamentation was not completed until AD 63 (see Jn 2:20). Herod's temple was regarded as one of the eight wonders of the ancient world; it was a tremendous source of pride for the Jewish people. The Roman military commander Titus (who later became emperor) destroyed the temple in AD 70.

21:9-11 Within Judaism wars and rebellions and natural disasters such as earthquakes, and famines and plagues were often associated with God's judgment. The apocalyptic literature of Judaism drew on such imagery (e.g., 2 Esdras). Jesus warns not to take such signs as indicating the end; they are typical of history in this fallen world.

21:20 Jewish historian Josephus recorded the AD 70 Roman siege of Jerusalem in detail (Jewish War, books 5–6).

21:25 Cosmic signs are often found in Jewish apocalyptic and prophetic literature and are associated with the judgment of God (Is 13:9-10; 34:4).

21:27 The Son of Man coming in a cloud with power and great glory is an image from Daniel 7:13-14. In that passage, "one like a son of man" comes on the clouds of heaven to the Ancient of Days and is given authority, glory, and an eternal kingdom, receiving worship from people of every nation and language.

THE PLOT TO KILL JESUS

22 The † Festival of Unleavened Bread, † which is called Passover, † was approaching. 2 The chief priests and the scribes were looking for a way to put him to death, † because they were afraid of the people. †

3 Then † Satan entered Judas, † called Iscariot, † who was numbered among the Twelve. 4 He went away and discussed with the chief priests and temple police † how he could hand him over † to them. 5 They were glad and agreed to give him silver. † 6 So he accepted the offer and started looking for a good opportunity to betray him to them when the crowd was not present.

PREPARATION FOR PASSOVER

7 Then † the Day of Unleavened Bread came when the Passover lamb had to be sacrificed. † 8 Jesus sent Peter and John, † saying, "Go and make preparations for us to eat the Passover."

9 "Where do you want us to prepare it?" they asked him.

10 "Listen," he said to them, "when you've entered the city, a man carrying a water jug will meet you. Follow him into the house he enters. 11 Tell the owner of the house, 'The Teacher asks you, "Where is the guest room where I can eat the Passover with my disciples?"' 12 Then he will show you a large, furnished room upstairs. † Make the preparations there."

13 So they went and found it just as he had told them, † and they prepared the Passover.

THE FIRST LORD'S SUPPER

14 When † the hour came, he reclined at the table, and the apostles with him. 15 Then he said to them, "I have fervently desired to eat this Passover with you before I suffer. 16 For I tell you, I will not eat it again † until it is fulfilled in the kingdom of God." † 17 Then he took a cup, † and after giving thanks, † he said, "Take this and share it among yourselves. 18 For I tell you, from now on I will not drink of the fruit of the vine until the kingdom of God comes."

19 And he took bread, gave thanks, broke it, gave it to them, and said, “This is my body, † which is given for you. Do this in remembrance † of me.” 20 In the same way he also took the cup after supper and said, “This cup is the new covenant † in my blood, † which is poured out for you. † 21 But † look, the hand of the one betraying me is at the table with me. † 22 For the Son of Man will go away as it has been determined, † but woe to that man by whom he is betrayed! ”

23 So they began to argue † among themselves which of them it could be who was going to do it.

THE DISPUTE OVER GREATNESS

24 Then a dispute also arose among them about who should be considered the greatest. † 25 But he said to them, † “The kings of the Gentiles lord it over them, and those who have authority over them have themselves called † ‘Benefactors.’ 26 It is not to be like that among you. On the contrary, whoever is greatest among you should become like the youngest, † and whoever leads, like the one serving. 27 For who is greater, the one at the table or the one serving?
Isn’t it the one at the table? But I am among you as the one who serves. † 28 You are those who stood by me in my trials. † 29 I bestow on you a kingdom, † just as my Father bestowed one on me, 30 so that you may eat and drink at my table in my kingdom. † And you will sit on thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel. †

PETER’S DENIAL PREDICTED

31 “Simon, Simon, † look out. Satan † has asked to sift you like wheat. † 32 But I have prayed † for you that your faith may not fail. And you, when you have turned back, strengthen † your brothers.”

33 “Lord,” † he told him, “I’m ready to go with you both to prison and to death.”

34 “I tell you, Peter,” he said, “the rooster will not crow today until † you deny three times that you know me.”

BE READY FOR TROUBLE

35 He also said to them, “When I sent you out † without money-bag, traveling bag, or sandals, did you lack anything? ” “Not a thing,” they said.
36 Then he said to them, “But now, whoever has a money-bag should take it, and also a traveling bag. And whoever doesn’t have a sword should sell his robe and buy one. 37 For I tell you, what is written must be fulfilled in me: † And he was counted among the lawless. † † Yes, what is written about me is coming to its fulfillment.” †
38 “Lord,” they said, “look, here are two swords.”
“That is enough! ” he told them.

THE PRAYER IN THE GARDEN

39 He went out and made his way † as usual † to the Mount of Olives, † and the disciples followed him. 40 When he reached the place, † he told them, “Pray that you may not fall into temptation.” † 41 Then he withdrew from them about a stone’s throw, knelt down, and began to pray, † 42 “Father, if you are willing, take this cup † away from me — nevertheless, not my will, but yours, be done.”
43 Then an angel from heaven † appeared to him, strengthening him. 44 Being in anguish, † he prayed more fervently, and his sweat became like drops of blood falling to the ground. † 45 When he got up from prayer and came to the disciples, he found them sleeping, exhausted from their grief. 46 “Why are you sleeping? ” he asked them. “Get up and pray, so that you won’t fall into temptation.”

JUDAS’S BETRAYAL OF JESUS

47 While † he was still speaking, suddenly a mob came, and one of the Twelve named Judas was leading them. He came near Jesus to kiss him, 48 but Jesus said to him, “Judas, are you betraying the Son of Man with a kiss? ” 49 When those around him saw what was going to happen, they asked, “Lord, should we strike with the sword? ” 50 Then one of them struck the high priest’s servant and cut off his right ear.
51 But Jesus responded, “No more of this! ” And touching his ear, he healed him. 52 Then Jesus said to the chief priests, temple police, and the elders who had come for him, “Have you come out with swords and clubs as if I were a criminal? † 53 Every day while I was with you in the temple, † you never laid a hand on me. But this is your hour † — and the dominion of darkness.” †

54 They seized him, led him away, and brought him into the high priest’s house. Meanwhile Peter † was following at a distance. 55 They † lit a fire in the middle of the courtyard † and sat down together, and Peter sat among them. 56 When a servant saw him sitting in the light, and looked closely at him, she said, “This man was with him too.”

57 But he denied it: “Woman, I don’t know him.”

58 After a little while, someone else saw him and said, “You’re one of them too.”

“Man, I am not! ” Peter said.

59 About an hour later, another kept insisting, “This man was certainly with him, since he’s also a Galilean.”

60 But Peter said, “Man, I don’t know what you’re talking about! ” Immediately, while he was still speaking, a rooster crowed. 61 Then the Lord turned and looked at Peter. † So Peter remembered the word of the Lord, how he had said to him, “Before the rooster crows today, you will deny me three times.” †

62 And he went outside and wept bitterly.

JESUS MOCKED AND BEATEN

63 The men who were holding Jesus started mocking and beating him. †

64 After blindfolding him, they kept † asking, “Prophesy! Who was it that hit you? ” 65 And they were saying many other blasphemous † things to him.

JESUS FACES THE SANHEDRIN

66 When daylight came, † the elders † of the people, both the chief priests and the scribes, † convened and brought him before their Sanhedrin. † 67 They said, † “If you are the Messiah, tell us.”

But he said to them, “If I do tell you, you will not believe. 68 And if I ask you, you will not answer. 69 But from now on, the Son of Man will be seated at the right hand of the power of God." †

70 They all asked, "Are you, then, the Son of God?" †

And he said to them, "You say that I am." †

71 "Why do we need any more testimony," they said, "since we've heard it ourselves from his mouth?"

22:1,7,15 Passover was the feast in which Israel commemorated God's rescue of his people from the judgment of death (Ex 12:1-28) and slavery in Egypt (12:29-42). The Passover lamb was killed on the fourteenth day of Nisan. After sunset, which marked the beginning of the next day according to Jewish timekeeping, the Passover meal was eaten.

22:17 The Passover meal involved four cups of wine. One was used for the opening benediction, one after the explanation of the Passover, one following the meal of unleavened bread and lamb, and one at the end of the celebration. Luke refers to two cups (vv. 17,20), but it is unclear which two.

22:20 In the OT, covenants were sealed with a blood sacrifice (Gn 15:9-10; Ex 24:8). Jesus's death ushers in the new covenant foretold in Jr 31:31-34.

22:25-26 To teach the true meaning of greatness, Jesus points his disciples to the pagan practice of seeking to dominate others and to be recognized as esteemed benefactors who bestow gifts (e.g., food during famines, protection during wars). In fact, "benefactor" was a formal title sought by the ambitious. In contrast, Jesus's disciples are not to seek to rule others or to gain recognition for good deeds performed. They are to serve others in humility.

22:31 Sifting like wheat refers to a farmer's task of separating wheat from its stalk and chaff. The pronoun, you, is plural, indicating that Satan requested to "sift" all the apostles, testing them as Job was tested (Jb 1:12; 2:6).

22:42 To drink from a cup was a metaphor often used for undergoing a distressing event, often one connected to God's wrath. As Jesus anticipates the trauma of the cross, he prays that the cup of wrath might be taken from him, but only if the Father wills it.

22:53 See also "Satan and Demons," p. 1611.

JESUS FACES PILATE

23 Then † their whole assembly rose up and brought him before Pilate.
2 They began to accuse him, saying, "We found this man misleading our nation, opposing payment of taxes † to Caesar, and saying that he himself is the Messiah, a king."
3 So Pilate asked him, † "Are you the king of the Jews? " †
He answered him, "You say so." † 4 Pilate then told the chief priests and the crowds, "I find no grounds † for charging this man."
5 But they kept insisting, "He stirs up the people, † teaching throughout all Judea, from Galilee † where he started even to here."

JESUS FACES HEROD ANTIPAS

6 When Pilate † heard this, † he asked if the man was a Galilean. 7 Finding that he was under Herod's jurisdiction, he sent him to Herod, † who was also in Jerusalem during those days. 8 Herod was very glad to see Jesus; for a long time he had wanted to see him because he had heard about him and was hoping to see some miracle † performed by him. 9 So he kept asking him questions, but Jesus did not answer him. † 10 The chief priests and the scribes stood by, vehemently accusing him. 11 Then Herod, with his soldiers, treated him with contempt, mocked † him, dressed him in bright clothing, † and sent him back to Pilate.
12 That very day Herod and Pilate became friends. † † Previously, they had been enemies.

JESUS OR BARABBAS

13 Pilate called together the chief priests, the leaders, and the people, † 14 and said to them, “You have brought me this man as one who misleads the people. † But in fact, after examining him in your presence, I have found no grounds † to charge this man with those things you accuse him of. 15 Neither has Herod, because he sent him back to us. Clearly, he has done nothing to deserve death. 16 Therefore, I will have him whipped † † and then release him.” †

18 Then † they all cried out together, “Take this man away! † Release Barabbas to us! ” 19 (He had been thrown into prison for a rebellion that had taken place in the city, and for murder.) 20 Wanting to release Jesus, † Pilate addressed them again, 21 but they kept shouting, “Crucify! Crucify him! ”

22 A third time he said to them, “Why? What has this man done wrong? † I have found in him no grounds † for the death penalty. Therefore, I will have him whipped and then release him.”

23 But they kept up the pressure, demanding with loud voices that he be crucified, and their voices † won out. 24 So † Pilate decided to grant their demand † 25 and released the one they were asking for, who had been thrown into prison for rebellion and murder. But he handed Jesus over to their will. †

THE WAY TO THE CROSS

26 As † they led him away, they seized Simon, a Cyrenian, † who was coming in from the country, and laid the cross † on him to carry behind Jesus. 27 A large crowd of people followed him, including women who were mourning and lamenting him. † 28 But turning to them, Jesus said, “Daughters of Jerusalem, † do not weep for me, but weep for yourselves and your children. 29 Look, the days are coming † when they will say, ‘Blessed are the women without children, the wombs that never bore, and the breasts that never nursed! ’ † 30 Then they will begin to say to the mountains, ‘Fall on us! ’ and to the hills, ‘Cover us! ’ † † 31 For if they do these things when the wood is green, what will happen when it is dry? ” †

32 Two others — criminals † — were also led away to be executed with him.
33 When † they arrived at the place called The Skull, they crucified him there, along with the criminals, one on the right and one on the left. 34 Then Jesus said,
"Father, † forgive † them, because they do not know what they are doing." † †
And they divided his clothes and cast lots. † 35 The † people stood watching, and even the leaders were scoffing: † "He saved others; let him save himself if this is God's Messiah, the Chosen One! " † 36 The soldiers also mocked him. They came offering him sour wine † 37 and said, "If you are the King of the Jews, † save yourself! " 38 An inscription was above him: † THIS IS THE KING OF THE JEWS.
39 Then † one of the criminals hanging there began to yell insults at † him:
"Aren't you the Messiah? Save yourself and us! " 40 But the other answered, rebuking him: "Don't you even fear God, † since you are undergoing the same punishment? 41 We are punished justly, because we're getting back what we deserve for the things we did, but this man has done nothing wrong." † 42 Then he said, "Jesus, remember me † † when you come into your kingdom." † 43 And he said to him, "Truly I tell you, today you will be with me in paradise." †

THE DEATH OF JESUS

44 It † was now about noon, † and darkness came over the whole land † until three, † 45 because the sun's light failed. † The curtain † of the sanctuary was split down the middle. 46 And Jesus called out with a loud voice, "Father, into your hands I entrust my spirit." † † Saying this, he breathed his last.
47 When the centurion saw what happened, he began to glorify † God, saying,
"This man really was righteous! " † 48 All the crowds that had gathered for this spectacle, when they saw what had taken place, went home, striking their chests. † 49 But † all who knew him, including the women who had followed him from Galilee, stood at a distance, † watching these things.

THE BURIAL OF JESUS

50 There † was a good and righteous man named Joseph, a member of the Sanhedrin, 51 who had not agreed with their plan † and action. He was from Arimathea, a Judean town, and was looking forward to the kingdom of God. †
52 He approached Pilate and asked for Jesus's body. 53 Taking it down, he wrapped it in fine linen and placed it in a tomb cut into the rock, where no one had ever been placed. † † 54 It was the preparation day, and the Sabbath was about to begin. † 55 The women † who had come with him from Galilee followed along and observed the tomb and how his body was placed. 56 Then they returned and prepared spices and perfumes. † And they rested on the Sabbath according to the commandment. †

23:6-7 Jesus was a Galilean and thus under the jurisdiction of Herod Antipas. Upon learning this fact, Pilate sends Jesus to Herod. Seeking the advice of others more familiar with the facts of a case was common practice among Roman officials engaged in legal proceedings. Alternatively, Pilate may have sought to attribute blame to Herod for the controversial decision.

23:19 Barabbas was guilty of murder and rebellion (insurrection), crimes common to the revolutionary climate of first-century Palestine. Some of the most deadly insurrectionists were the Sicarii, who would stab Roman sympathizers with small swords hidden under their clothing, while mingling with the crowds during festivals and gatherings. Barabbas is not identified as a Sicarii, but he fits their profile.

23:22 Three separate times Pilate declares that Jesus is innocent (vv. 15,20,22). These repeated affirmations of Jesus's innocence from a Roman official are striking since the Romans deeply valued justice. Luke also uses these affirmations as a literary technique to present Jesus as the innocent One who traded places with the guilty (Barabbas).

23:33 Crucifixion was a means of execution designed to expose its victims to shame and humiliation. It was a viciously cruel practice in which various positions were used to maximize torture. Death was caused by loss of blood, exposure, exhaustion, and suffocation. Victims often took days to die, leading ancient writers to regard crucifixion as the most barbaric punishment practiced by the Romans.

23:35,37,39 Ironically, each instance of mockery declares the truth about Jesus. He is God's Messiah, the Chosen One, who will not save himself precisely because he intends to save others. He is also the King of the Jews, but will not save himself so that his people might benefit. And he is the long-anticipated Messiah. Luke uses the mockery of Jesus to affirm his true identity, even though the mockers do not accept who he really is.

23:43 Paradise means "garden" and was used to refer to the garden of Eden in the Greek version of the OT. In Jewish apocalyptic literature, it also referred to an eternity of bliss for the righteous (2 Esdras 8:52). See also "The Eternal State," p. 1622.

23:44 The OT relates darkness to the judgment of the day of the Lord. Greco-Roman and Jewish literature also connected darkness to the death of great men.

23:48 The people struck their chests to express their mourning or, possibly, repentance (18:13).

23:54 The preparation day was the day prior to the Sabbath, beginning on Friday at sunset. Preparations were made early in order to avoid working on the Sabbath.

RESURRECTION MORNING

24 On † the first day of the week, † very early in the morning, they † came to the tomb, bringing the spices they had prepared. 2 They found the stone rolled away from the tomb. 3 They went in but did not find the body † of the Lord Jesus. † 4 While they were perplexed about this, suddenly two men stood by them in dazzling † clothes. 5 So the women were terrified and bowed down to the ground.

"Why are you looking for the living among the dead?" asked the men. 6 "He is not here, but he has risen! † Remember how he spoke to you when he was still in Galilee, † 7 saying, 'It is necessary that the Son of Man be betrayed † into the hands of sinful men, be crucified, and rise † on the third day'?" 8 And they remembered his words.

9 Returning from the tomb, they reported all these things to the Eleven † and to all the rest. 10 Mary Magdalene, Joanna, Mary the mother of James, † and the other women with them were telling the apostles † these things. 11 But these words seemed like nonsense to them, and they did not believe † the women.
12 Peter, † however, got up and ran to the tomb. When he stooped to look in, he saw only the linen cloths. † † So he went away, amazed † at what had happened.

THE EMMAUS DISCIPLES

13 Now † that same day two of them were on their way to a village called Emmaus, which was about seven miles † † from Jerusalem. † 14 Together they were discussing everything that had taken place. 15 And while they were discussing and arguing, Jesus himself came near and began to walk along with them. 16 But they † were prevented from recognizing him. † 17 Then he asked them, "What is this dispute that you're having † with each other as you are walking?" And they stopped walking and looked discouraged.
18 The one named Cleopas answered him, "Are you the only visitor in Jerusalem who doesn't know the things that happened there in these days?" † 19 "What things?" he asked them.
So they said to him, "The things concerning Jesus of Nazareth, † who was a prophet † powerful in action and speech † before God and all the people, † 20 and how our chief priests and leaders † handed him over to be sentenced to death, † and they crucified him. † 21 But we were hoping that he was the one who was about to redeem † Israel. Besides all this, it's the third day † since these things happened. 22 Moreover, some women from our group astounded us.
They arrived early at the tomb, 23 and when they didn't find his body, they came and reported that they had seen a vision of angels who said he was alive.
24 Some of those who were with us went to the tomb and found it just as the women had said, but they didn't see him." † 25 He said to them, "How foolish you are, and how slow † to believe all that the prophets have spoken! † 26 Wasn't it necessary for the Messiah to suffer † these things and enter into his glory?” † 27 Then beginning with Moses † and all the Prophets, † he interpreted for them the things concerning himself in all the Scriptures. † 28 They came near the village where they were going, and he gave the impression that he was going farther. † 29 But they urged him, “Stay with us, because it’s almost evening, and now the day is almost over.” So he went in to stay with them.

30 It was as he reclined at the table with them that he took the bread, blessed and broke † it, and gave it to them. 31 Then their eyes were opened, † and they recognized him, but he disappeared from their sight. † 32 They said to each other, “Weren’t our hearts burning within us while he was talking with us on the road and explaining the Scriptures † to us?” 33 That very hour they got up and returned to Jerusalem. They found the Eleven † and those with them gathered together, 34 who said, “The Lord has truly been raised and has appeared to Simon!” † 35 Then they began to describe what had happened on the road and how he was made known to them in the breaking of the bread. †

THE REALITY OF THE RISEN JESUS

36 As † they were saying these things, he himself stood in their midst. He said to them, “Peace † to you!” 37 But they were startled and terrified † and thought they were seeing a ghost. † 38 “Why are you troubled?” † he asked them. “And why do doubts arise in your hearts? 39 Look at my hands and my feet, that it is I myself! † Touch me and see, † because a ghost does not have flesh and bones as you can see I have.” 40 Having said this, he showed them his hands and feet.
41 But while they still were amazed and in disbelief because of their joy, he asked them, “Do you have anything here to eat?” 42 So they gave him a piece of a broiled fish, † 43 and he took it and ate in their presence.
44 He told them, “These are my words † that I spoke to you while I was still with you — that everything written about me in the Law of Moses, the Prophets, † and the Psalms † must be fulfilled.” 45 Then he opened their minds † to understand † the Scriptures. 46 He also said to them, “This is what is written: † The Messiah would suffer and rise from the dead the third day, † 47 and repentance for † forgiveness of sins † would be proclaimed in his name to all the nations, † beginning at Jerusalem. † 48 You are witnesses † of these things. 49 And look, I am sending you † what my Father promised. † As for you, stay in the city † until you are empowered † † from on high."

THE ASCENSION OF JESUS

50 Then he led them out to the vicinity of Bethany, † and lifting up his hands † he blessed them. 51 And while he was blessing them, he left them and was carried up into heaven. † 52 After worshiping him, † they returned to Jerusalem with great joy. † 53 And they were continually in the temple praising God. † †

24:7 The third day was calculated by the inclusion of any parts of three days; it does not refer to three twenty-four hour periods. It may also be an echo of Hosea 6:2, which looks forward to the restoration of Israel.

24:11 Not only was the women's testimony difficult to believe, but the first century view of women meant that they were often not trusted as witnesses. Josephus said, "From women let no evidence be accepted, because of the levity and temerity of their sex." Philo claimed that women are "irrational" and untrustworthy. That the Gospels report that the first eyewitnesses to the empty tomb were women adds to the credibility of their accounts. No one would have invented a story in which women were the key witnesses.

24:31 Greco-Roman and Jewish literature describes the miraculous disappearances of angelic and divine figures. Jesus fits the expectation of a divine figure, whose resurrection body is capable of unexplained phenomena.

24:37 The disciples thought they had seen a ghost (Gk pneuma). The belief that the dead sometimes return in spirit form, a notion popular in many ancient cultures, influenced the men's response to the resurrected Jesus, too.

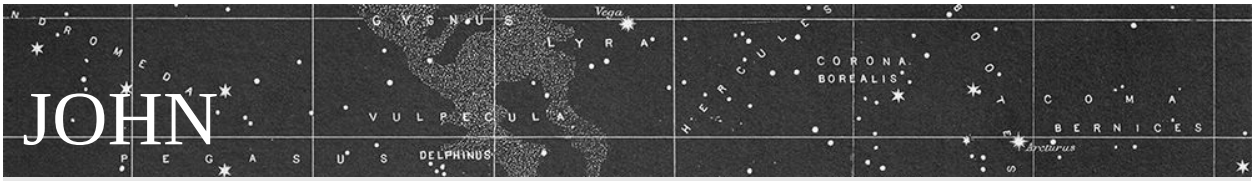
24:47 See Matthew 28:19 and "A Biblical View of the Nations," p. 688.

24:51 Elijah ascended to heaven in a whirlwind (2Kg 2:11), while Enoch was taken away by God (Gn 5:24). Later Jewish literature spoke of other OT figures that likewise ascended to heaven. Jesus's ascension is regarded by the NT authors as a sign of his exaltation to the Father's right hand in majesty (Ac 2:33).



JOHN

INTRODUCTION

The Gospel of John is different from the Synoptic Gospels—Matthew, Mark, and Luke—in that more than ninety percent of its material is unique. John's Gospel does not focus on the miracles, parables, and public speeches that are so prominent in the other accounts. Instead, the Gospel of John emphasizes the identity of Jesus as the Son of God and how we, as believers, should respond to his teachings.

CIRCUMSTANCES OF WRITING

AUTHOR: A close reading of the Gospel of John suggests that the author was an apostle (1:14; cp. 2:11; 19:35); one of the Twelve ("the disciple Jesus loved": 13:23; 19:26; 20:2; 21:20; cp. 21:24-25); and, still more specifically, John, the son of Zebedee (note the association of "the disciple Jesus loved" with Peter in 13:23-24; 18:15-16; 20:2-9; 21; and in Lk 22:8; Ac 1:13; 3–4; 8:14-25; Gl 2:9). The church fathers, too, attested to this identification (e.g., Irenaeus). Since the apostolic office was foundational in the history of the church (Ac 2:42; Eph 2:20), the apostolic authorship of John's Gospel invests it with special authority as firsthand eyewitness (Jn 15:27; 1Jn 1:1-4).

BACKGROUND: The most plausible date of writing is the period between AD 70 (the date of the destruction of the temple) and 100 (the end of John's lifetime), with a date in the 80s most likely. A date after 70 is suggested by the references to the Sea of Tiberias in 6:1 and 21:1 (a name widely used for the Sea of Galilee only toward the end of the first century); Thomas's confession of Jesus as "my Lord and my God" in 20:28 (possibly a statement against emperor worship in the time of Domitian); the reference to Peter's martyrdom, which occurred in 65 or 66 (21:19); the lack of reference to the Sadducees, who ceased to be a Jewish religious party after 70; and the comparative ease with which John equated Jesus with God (1:1,14,18; 10:30; 20:28).

The testimony of the early church also favors a date after AD 70. Clement of Alexandria (cited in Eusebius, Hist. eccl., 6.14.7) stated, "Last of all, John, perceiving that the external facts had been made plain [in the other canonical Gospels] . . . composed a spiritual gospel." The most likely place of writing is Ephesus (Irenaeus, Haer., 3.1.2; cp. Eusebius, Hist. eccl., 3.1.1), one of the most important urban centers of the Roman Empire at the time, though the envisioned readership of John's Gospel transcends any one historical setting.

John's original audience was probably composed of people in the larger Greco-Roman world in Ephesus and beyond toward the close of the first century AD. Hence John frequently explained Jewish customs and Palestinian geography and translated Aramaic terms into Greek.

CONTRIBUTION TO THE BIBLE

Of all the Gospels and any of the NT books, the Gospel of John most clearly teaches the deity and preexistence of Christ (1:1-2,18; 8:58; 17:5,24; 20:28). Together with the Gospel of Matthew, it provides the most striking proofs of Jesus's messiahship. It does so by narrating seven messianic signs (see note at 2:11), by seven "I am" statements of Jesus (see note at 6:35,48), by specific fulfillment quotations, especially at Jesus's passion, and by showing how Jesus fulfilled the symbolism inherent in a variety of Jewish festivals and institutions. Jesus's messianic mission is shown to originate with God the Father, "the One who sent" Jesus (7:16,18,28,33; 8:26,29; 15:21), and to culminate in his commissioning of his new messianic community in the power of his Spirit (20:21-22). John's Trinitarian teaching is among the most overt presentations of the triunity of the Godhead—Father, Son, and Spirit—in the entire NT and has provided much of the material for early Trinitarian and Christological formulations in the history of the church.

STRUCTURE

John is divided into two main parts. In the first section (chaps. 2–11) the focus is on both Jesus's ministry to "the world" and the signs he performed. Jesus performs seven signs that meet with varying responses. The second major section (chaps. 12–21) reveals Jesus's teaching to his disciples and the triumphant "hour" of his passion. John's record of the passion focuses on Jesus's control of the events. He had to instruct his adversaries on how to arrest him (18:4-8). Pilate struggled with his decision, but Jesus knew what would happen. Jesus died as the Lamb and was sacrificed at the very time lambs were being sacrificed for Passover (19:14).

TEACHINGS ABOUT GOD

John emphasized the sovereignty and the love of God in sending Jesus. Jesus perfectly reveals God (1:18). In particular, Jesus's astounding proclamations that begin with "I am" are remarkable claims about both his person and his work. Jesus's teaching on the Spirit ("the Counselor") is more extensive than in any other Gospel (chaps. 14–16). This Gospel especially reveals the glory and the name of the Father and the Son.

TEACHINGS ABOUT HUMANITY

Humans are sinners in need of a Savior. They are unable to save themselves but are wholly dependent on God's initiative through Jesus. Many individuals demonstrate this: Nicodemus, the Samaritan woman, the man born blind.

TEACHINGS ABOUT SALVATION

This Gospel, more than the others, emphasizes strongly a personal relationship with Jesus that's built on faith in him and his sacrificial death. Faith in Jesus is salvation and eternal life. One such text is 10:27-28: "My sheep hear my voice, I know them, and they follow me. I give them eternal life, and they will never perish. No one will snatch them out of my hand." John affirms both God's sovereign election of some for eternal life (6:44) and the invitation to "everyone who believes" (3:16).

PROLOGUE

1 In the beginning † was the Word, † and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. † 2 He was with God in the beginning. † 3 All things were created † through him, † and apart from him not one thing was created that has been created. 4 In him was life, † † and that life was the light † of men. 5 That light shines † in the darkness, and yet the darkness did not overcome † it. †

6 There was a man sent from God whose name was John. † 7 He came as a witness to testify about the light, so that all might believe through him. † 8 He was not the light, but he came to testify † about the light. 9 The true light † that gives light to everyone, was coming into the world. † †

10 He was in the world, and the world was created † through him, and yet the world did not recognize him. 11 He came to his own, and his own people did not receive him. 12 But to all who did receive † him, † he gave them the right † to be † children † of God, † to those who believe † in his name, † 13 who were born, † not of natural descent, † or of the will † of the flesh, † or of the will of man, † but of God. †

14 The Word † became flesh † and dwelt † among us. We observed his glory, † the glory as the one and only † Son † from the Father, full of grace and truth. 15 (John testified concerning him and exclaimed, “This was the one of whom I said, ‘The one coming after me † ranks ahead of me, † because he existed before me.’ ”) † 16 Indeed, we have all received grace † upon † grace from his fullness, 17 for the law was given through Moses; † grace and truth † came through Jesus Christ. 18 No one has ever seen God. The one and only † Son, who is himself God and is at the Father’s † side † —he has revealed him. †

JOHN THE BAPTIST’S TESTIMONY

19 This was John's testimony when the Jews from Jerusalem † sent priests † and Levites † to ask him, "Who are you? " 20 He didn't deny it but confessed: "I am not the Messiah." †
21 "What then? " they asked him. "Are you Elijah? " †
"I am not," he said.
"Are you the Prophet? " †
"No," he answered.
22 "Who are you, then? " they asked. "We need to give an answer to those who sent us. What can you tell us about yourself? "

THE INCARNATION OF JESUS CHRIST

The incarnation of the Son of God is at the heart of the Christian faith. "The Word became flesh and dwelt among us" in the person of Jesus Christ (Jn 1:14). Christ's first coming is essential for the reconciliation of God and humanity and for Jesus's ongoing mediation on our behalf.

While there is an element of mystery surrounding the incarnation—the person of Jesus Christ the God-man—there are some foundational nonnegotiables that we affirm to be true to biblical revelation and that honor the witness of the church throughout her history.

SIX NONNEGOTIABLES OF THE DOCTRINE OF THE INCARNATION

1. First, we hold to the true incarnation of the Logos, the Word (Jn 1:1,14,18), the Second Person of the Godhead. The Son of God, having been sent by the Father, truly assumed the whole of human nature. In this event, the Second Person of the Trinity invaded time and space, embracing humanity to himself. Therefore, any form of docetic theology—claiming that Christ only appeared to be human—must firmly be rejected (1Jn 4:2-3).

The humanity of Jesus is like that of Adam and Eve prior to the fall: it is a sinless humanity (2Co 5:21; Heb 4:15). The human nature that the Son took to himself was not tainted by sin. The most genuine expression of humanity—what it means to be human—is manifested in Jesus Christ.

2. There is a necessary distinction between the two natures of Jesus Christ and his person. He is a single person who possesses both divine and human natures. A "nature" assumes the powers and qualities that constitute a being, while a "person" is the self-conscious, self-asserting, and acting subject. This distinction is embedded in Scripture, particularly in the NT (see Php 2:5-8), and it was codified in the five great Christological councils (the First Council of Nicaea in AD 325, the First Council of Constantinople in AD 381, the First Council of Ephesus in AD 431, the Council of Chalcedon in AD 451, and the Second Council of Constantinople in AD 553). This human nature, possessing its full integrity, is united to the divine nature, possessing its full integrity, both wedded in the one person, Jesus Christ. The result is a theoanthropic person—one who is both fully divine and truly human.

3. The God-man was made incarnate through the virgin birth—the means by which God chose to accomplish Christ's coming (Is 7:14; Mt 1:18-25; Lk 1:26-38). The result is that Jesus Christ is not a double being, a compound being, or some kind of hybrid. He is the one person, our Lord Jesus Christ, complete in his deity and perfect in his humanity.

Several observations suggest a connection between the virgin birth and Jesus's sinless life.

- Jesus is the only virgin-conceived person and the only sinless human.
- The activity of the Holy Spirit in the process of conception is key.
- The virgin conception "helps us understand how Christ can stand outside the guilt of Adam" (Donald Macleod, The Person of Christ, p. 41).
- A sinless humanity is scarcely conceivable, if not impossible, without divine intervention.

4. In the incarnation there is no qualification or diminution of either Christ's deity or his humanity. Each nature retains its own integrity and genuineness. Whatever constitutes God as God, the Son is this in all its fullness (Col 2:9-10). Further, whatever constitutes man as man, Jesus of Nazareth is this in all its fullness. Sin is not needed for humans to be human. It is in Jesus that we see humanity perfectly expressed as God intended. Whereas fallen and sinful humanity lives on a subhuman plane, this is not true of Jesus.
5. There is a genuine hypostatic union in which the divine nature and the human nature come together and are present in the one person, Jesus Christ. This union is real, supernatural, personal, inseparable, and permanent (see 1Tm 2:5). There is today in heaven a God-man who is "at the right hand of the Majesty on high" (Heb 1:3) and who "always lives to intercede for [us]" (Heb 7:25). The divine and human have been united truly in the one Lord Jesus Christ.
6. The whole of Christ's work is to be attributed to his whole person and not to one or the other nature exclusively. It is required that Christ be both God and man. As man, he identifies with humanity, enabling him to die in our place. As God, he is not an innocent third party; rather, through him God was "reconciling the world to himself" (2Co 5:19). Only a God-man is able to reconcile humans to God. Jesus Christ is that God-man, the Second Person of the triune God, who took to himself a human nature for this work of redemption.

CONCLUSION

The doctrine of the "two natures" is essential to any expression of biblical and historical Christology. Thus, to jettison the doctrine of the incarnation is to radically redefine Christianity. Jesus is coequal, coeternal, coexistent, and consubstantial (of the same substance) with the Father (Jn 1:1). Truly, in Christ God made his dwelling among us. Deity and humanity are perfectly and permanently joined together in Christ, with the fullness of his work attributed to his whole person. Any attempt to separate his natures or to ascribe certain actions or words to one nature or the other is wrongheaded and must be refuted. This truth is a foundational pillar on which the Christian faith rests.

DANIEL L. AKIN

23 He said, "I am a voice of one crying out in the wilderness: Make straight the way of the Lord † † — just as Isaiah † the prophet said."

24 Now they had been sent from the Pharisees. † 25 So they asked him, "Why then do you baptize if you aren't the Messiah, or Elijah, or the Prophet? "

26 “I baptize with † water,” † John answered them. “Someone stands among you, but you don’t know him. 27 He is the one coming after me, † † whose sandal strap I’m not worthy to untie.” 28 All this happened in Bethany † across the Jordan, † where John was baptizing.

THE LAMB OF GOD

29 The next day John saw Jesus coming toward him and said, “Here is the Lamb of God, † who takes away the sin † of the world! 30 This is the one I told you about: ‘After me comes a man who ranks ahead of me, because he existed before me.’ 31 I didn’t know him, † but I came baptizing with water so he might be revealed † to Israel.” 32 And John testified, “I saw the Spirit † descending from heaven like a dove, and he rested on him. † 33 I didn’t know him, but he who sent me to baptize with water told me, ‘The one you see the Spirit descending and resting on — he is the one who baptizes with the Holy Spirit.’ † 34 I have seen and testified that this is the Son of God.” † †

35 The next day, John was standing with two of his disciples. 36 When he saw Jesus passing by, he said, “Look, the Lamb of God! ”

37 The two disciples heard him say this and followed Jesus. 38 When Jesus turned and noticed them following him, he asked them, “What are you looking for? ”

They said to him, “Rabbi” † (which means “Teacher”), “where are you staying? ”

39 “Come and you’ll see,” he replied. So they went and saw where he was staying, and they stayed with him that day. It was about four in the afternoon. †

40 Andrew, † Simon Peter’s brother, was one of the two who heard John and followed him. 41 He first found his own brother Simon and told him, “We have found the Messiah” † † (which is translated “the Christ”), † 42 and he brought Simon to Jesus.

When Jesus saw him, he said, “You are Simon, son of John. † You will be called Cephas” † (which is translated “Peter” †).

PHILIP AND NATHANAEL

43 The next day Jesus † decided to leave for Galilee. He found Philip † and told him, "Follow me."
44 Now Philip was from Bethsaida, † the hometown of Andrew and Peter.
45 Philip found Nathanael † and told him, "We have found the one Moses wrote about in the law (and so did the prophets †): Jesus the son of Joseph, † from Nazareth." †
46 "Can anything good † come out of Nazareth? " Nathanael asked him.
"Come and see," Philip answered.
47 Then Jesus saw Nathanael coming toward him and said about him, "Here truly is an Israelite † in whom there is no deceit." 48 "How do you know me? " Nathanael asked.
"Before Philip called you, when you were under the fig tree, I saw you," Jesus answered.
49 "Rabbi," † Nathanael replied, "You are the Son † of God; you are the King of Israel! " † 50 Jesus responded to him, "Do you believe because I told you I saw you under the fig tree? You will see greater things than this." 51 Then he said, "Truly I tell you, you will see heaven opened and the angels of God † ascending and descending † on the Son of Man." †

1:1 The opening of John's Gospel is replete with allusions to the OT and to philosophy contemporary to John's day. In the beginning is a reference to Genesis 1:1. The phrase would immediately be recognized by anyone familiar with the Hebrew Bible, and it implies that John is offering an alternate account of creation. Word (Gk logos) is both a reference to the personification of God's word in the OT (e.g., Is 55:10-11) and a reference to contemporary philosophical ideas. "Logos" was a popular term in Stoic and other Greek philosophies, referring to the impersonal principle of Reason, which was believed to rule the universe. John's use of "the Word" therefore appeals both to Jewish and Gentile readers.

1:3 Just as God created through means of his powerful word ("Then God said, 'Let there be light,' and there was light"; Gn 1:3), so here John states that all things were created through the Word, Jesus Christ.

1:5 The light shines in the darkness is an OT reference to the coming Messiah: "The people walking in darkness have seen a great light; a light has dawned on those living in the land of darkness" (Is 9:2).

1:9 The true light that gives light to everyone indicates that this light is not only for Israel as she awaits her Messiah. The light will also shine in the darkness of the Gentile world. John may intend a subtle contrast here with the false "light" of Hellenistic religions.

1:13 In Deuteronomy 32:18, God is said to have given birth to his people Israel.

1:14 Ancient Greeks believed the physical world was inherently evil. This notion, often called philosophical dualism, is entirely contrary to the biblical understanding of the world. Consequently, John wants his audience, who would be well versed in Greek ideas, to be completely clear that Jesus did not just appear human. He was more than God in human disguise. The Word, who is God (v. 1), actually became flesh in the person of Jesus. The Word dwelt among us, literally "tabernacled" among us. Just as God dwelt with his people Israel in the tabernacle (the portable tent predating the permanent temple), so Jesus is God dwelling among his people. His glory echoes the glory of God that dwelt in the tabernacle and later in the temple.

1:18 No one could see God and live (Ex 33:20) because his holiness is incompatible with humanity's sinfulness. But Jesus has revealed God, since he is himself God and is at the Father's side.

1:19 Only mentioned three times in the NT (Lk 10:31-32; Ac 4:36), the Levites were a group of religious experts associated with the temple. Some of their duties were separate from those of the priests (see Nm 3–4 for some OT examples of Levitical, but non-priestly, duties). Little is known about what precise role they played in the religious life of Jesus's day.

1:20-21 First-century Jews were eagerly awaiting the promised Messiah, God's anointed king, promised to King David (2Sm 7:11-16). Some also awaited Elijah, the great prophet of Israel who did not die (2Kg 2:11) and was expected to return (Mal 4:5). There was also an expectation of the coming of the Prophet, who was predicted by Moses (Dt 18:15,18). John answers all three questions negatively. Jesus, however, clarifies that John is indeed Elijah. He does not mean the actual person Elijah; rather, John is the fulfillment of the expected role of Elijah in Malachi 4:5.

1:26 Baptism—the use of water in religious rituals, frequently by immersion—was relatively common in the ancient Jewish world. Since water often symbolized religious purity (e.g. Ps 51:1-2), immersion in it was used to mark religious revival, conversion to Judaism, or identification with a particular religious movement. John the Baptist—who was not the writer of John's Gospel—baptized Jewish people to identify them with the repentance of sins and the coming of the Messiah. Jesus participated in this baptism to demonstrate that he is the Messiah at the center of that movement (v. 31).

1:29 In calling Jesus the Lamb of God, who takes away the sin of the world, John the Baptist identifies Jesus with the Passover lamb and the OT sacrificial system. Just as God allowed a lamb to die in place of the firstborn of every believing household in Egypt (Ex 12:1-28), so Jesus will die in the place of the whole world so they might be rescued from sin.

1:42 Jesus gives Simon the nickname Cephas, meaning "rock." The Gospels typically use the Greek form of the nickname: "Peter" (Gk petros). Here John uses the Aramaic form.

THE FIRST SIGN: TURNING WATER INTO WINE

2 On the third day a wedding took place in Cana † of Galilee. † Jesus's mother † was there, and 2 Jesus and his disciples were invited to the wedding as well. 3 When the wine ran out, Jesus's mother told him,
"They don't have any wine."

4 "What does that have to do with you and me, † † woman?" † Jesus asked.
"My hour has not yet come."

5 "Do whatever he tells you," his mother told the servants.

6 Now six stone water jars had been set there for Jewish purification. † Each contained twenty or thirty gallons. †

7 "Fill the jars with water," Jesus told them. So they filled them to the brim.

8 Then he said to them, "Now draw some out and take it to the headwaiter." †
And they did.

9 When the headwaiter tasted the water (after it had become wine), he did not know where it came from — though the servants who had drawn the water knew.
He called the groom 10 and told him, "Everyone sets out the fine wine first, then, after people are drunk, the inferior. But you have kept the fine wine until now."

11 Jesus did this, the first of his signs, in Cana † of Galilee. † He revealed † his glory, † and his disciples believed in him.

12 After this, he went down to Capernaum, † together with his mother, his brothers, † and his disciples, and they stayed there only a few days.

CLEANSING THE TEMPLE

13 The Jewish Passover † was near, and so Jesus went up to Jerusalem. † 14 In the temple † he found people selling oxen, sheep, and doves, and he also found the money changers sitting there. 15 After making a whip out of cords, † he drove everyone out of the temple with their sheep † and oxen. He also poured out the money changers' coins and overturned the tables. 16 He told those who were selling doves, "Get these things out of here! Stop turning my Father's † house † into a marketplace!" † †

17 And his disciples remembered that it is written: Zeal † for your house will consume † me. † †

18 So the Jews replied to him, "What sign will you show us for doing these things?"

19 Jesus answered, "Destroy this temple, † † and I will raise it up in three days." †

20 Therefore the Jews said, "This temple took forty-six years to build, † and will you raise it up in three days?" †

21 But he was speaking about the temple of his body. † 22 So when he was raised from the dead, † his disciples remembered that he had said this, † and they believed the Scripture † and the statement Jesus had made.

23 While he was in Jerusalem † during the Passover Festival, † many believed in his name † when they saw the signs he was doing. 24 Jesus, however, would not entrust himself to them, since he knew them all 25 and because he did not need anyone to testify about man; for he himself knew what was in man. †

2:1-12 It appears that Mary, Jesus's mother, is helping with the food and drink service at the wedding, probably that of a family friend; thus, she notifies Jesus immediately when the wine runs out. At least one of the families in the wedding party is reasonably wealthy—they had multiple servants and a headwaiter (lit "ruler of the table" or "master of the banquet"). Running out of wine at such a lavish event would be a serious embarrassment to any family, especially a wealthy one. Jesus shows the family great kindness by turning the water into wine, and the miracle had a powerful impact on the faith of his disciples.

2:14-16 Worshipers traveling to the temple needed appropriate coinage to purchase animals or to pay the temple tax (Ex 30:11-16). Pagan coinage bearing graven images could not be used. Such coins were exchanged for imageless Tyrian (the closest coin to the old Hebrew shekel) or Jewish temple coins. Jesus drove everyone out of the temple because they conducted business in his Father's house.

2:20 The restoration of the temple most likely began in 20 BC under the reign of Herod the Great and was still underway in Jesus's day, forty-six years later. The restoration of the entire temple complex was not finished until AD 63, and the temple was completely destroyed by the Romans in AD 70.

JESUS AND NICODEMUS

3 There was a man from the Pharisees † named Nicodemus, † a ruler † of the Jews. 2 This man came to him at night and said, "Rabbi, † we know that you are a teacher † who has come from God, † for no one could perform these signs you do unless God were with him." † 3 Jesus replied, "Truly I tell you, unless someone is born again, † † he cannot see the kingdom of God." † 4 "How can anyone be born when he is old?" Nicodemus asked him. "Can he enter his mother's womb a second time and be born?"
5 Jesus answered, "Truly I tell you, unless someone is born † of water and the Spirit, † he cannot enter the kingdom of God. 6 Whatever is born of the flesh † is flesh, and whatever is born of the Spirit † is spirit. 7 Do not be amazed that I told you that you must be born † again. 8 The wind blows where it pleases, and you hear its sound, but you don't know where it comes from or where it is going. † So it is with everyone born of the Spirit." † 9 "How can these things be?" asked Nicodemus.
10 "Are you a teacher † of Israel and don't know these things?" Jesus replied.
11 "Truly I tell you, † we speak what we know and we testify to what we have seen, but you do not accept our testimony. 12 If I have told you about earthly things and you don't believe, how will you believe if I tell you about heavenly things? 13 No one has ascended † into heaven † except the one who descended from heaven † — the Son of Man. † †

14 “Just as Moses † lifted up the snake in the wilderness, † so the Son of Man must be lifted up, 15 so that everyone who believes in him may † have eternal life. † 16 For God loved † the world in this way: † He gave † his one and only † Son, † so that everyone who believes in him will not perish but have eternal life. † 17 For God did not send his Son into the world to condemn † the world, but to save the world through him. 18 Anyone who believes in him is not condemned, but anyone who does not believe is already condemned, † because he has not believed in the name † of the one and only Son † of God. 19 This is the judgment: The light † has come into the world, † and people loved darkness rather than the light because their deeds were evil. 20 For everyone who does evil hates † the light and avoids it, † so that his deeds † may not be exposed.
21 But anyone who lives by † the truth comes to the light, so that his works † may be shown to be accomplished by God.”

JESUS AND JOHN THE BAPTIST

22 After this, Jesus and his disciples went to the Judean countryside, where he spent time with them and baptized.

23 John † also was baptizing in Aenon near Salim, because there was plenty of water there. People were coming and being baptized, 24 since John had not yet been thrown into prison. †

25 Then a dispute arose between John’s disciples † and a Jew † about purification. † 26 So they came to John and told him, “Rabbi, † the one you testified about, and who was with you across the Jordan, † is baptizing — and everyone is going to him.” †

27 John responded, “No one can receive anything unless it has been given to him from heaven. 28 You yourselves can testify that I said, ‘I am not the Messiah, † but I’ve been sent ahead of him.’ † 29 He who has the bride † is the groom. But the groom’s friend, who stands by and listens for him, rejoices greatly † at the groom’s voice. So this joy † of mine is complete. 30 He must increase, but I must decrease.”

THE ONE FROM HEAVEN

31 The one who comes from above † is above all. The one who is from the earth is earthly and speaks in earthly terms. † The one who comes from heaven is above all. † 32 He testifies † to what he has seen and heard, and yet no one accepts his testimony. 33 The one who has accepted his testimony has affirmed that God is true. † 34 For the one whom God sent speaks God's words, since he † gives the Spirit † without measure. 35 The Father loves the Son † and has given all things into his hands. † 36 The one who believes in the Son has eternal life, but the one who rejects the Son † will not see life; instead, the wrath of God remains on him. †

3:14 The phrase lifted up (Gk hypsoō) typically carries the connotation of exalted, but Jesus frequently uses this word to describe the nature of his death by crucifixion (e.g., Jn 8:28; 12:32,34).

3:16 See "God's Purposes in a Christian's Participation in Missions," p. 1191.

3:29 John the Baptist compares himself to a groom's friend who is waiting for the wedding processional of the groom (Jesus) to arrive so that the formal wedding celebration can begin. Just as a groom's friend is not jealous that the groom has the bride, and that the attention is not on him, so John is not jealous that the Messiah has arrived. Instead he rejoices greatly.

JESUS AND THE SAMARITAN WOMAN

4 When Jesus † learned that the Pharisees † had heard he was making † and baptizing more disciples than John † 2 (though Jesus himself was not baptizing, but his disciples were), 3 he left Judea † and went again to Galilee. † 4 He had to travel through Samaria; † 5 so he came to a town of Samaria called Sychar near the property † that Jacob † had given his son Joseph. † 6 Jacob's well † was there, and Jesus, worn out from his journey, sat down at the well. It was about noon. †

7 A woman of Samaria came to draw water. †

"Give me a drink," Jesus said to her, 8 because his disciples had gone into town to buy food.

9 "How is it that you, a Jew, † ask for a drink from me, a Samaritan † woman? " she asked him. For Jews do not associate with † Samaritans. †

10 Jesus answered, "If you knew the gift of God, † and who is saying to you, 'Give me a drink,' you would ask him, and he would give you living water." †

11 "Sir," † said the woman, "you don't even have a bucket, and the well is deep. So where do you get this 'living water'? 12 You aren't greater than our father Jacob, † are you? He gave us the well and drank from it himself, as did his sons and livestock."

13 Jesus said, "Everyone who drinks from this water will get thirsty again. 14 But whoever drinks from the water that I will give him will never get thirsty again. † In fact, the water I will give him will become a well † † of water springing up in him for eternal life." †

15 "Sir," the woman said to him, "give me this water so that I won't get thirsty and come here to draw water."

16 "Go call your husband," he told her, "and come back here."

17 "I don't have a husband," she answered.

"You have correctly said, 'I don't have a husband,' " Jesus said. 18 "For you've had five husbands, and the man you now have is not your husband. What you have said is true."

19 "Sir," the woman replied, "I see that you are a prophet. 20 Our fathers worshiped on this mountain, † but you Jews say that the place to worship is in Jerusalem." †

21 Jesus told her, “Believe me, woman, an hour is coming when you will worship the Father neither on this mountain nor in Jerusalem. 22 You Samaritans worship what you do not know. We worship what we do know, because salvation is from the Jews. † 23 But an hour is coming, and is now here, † when the true worshipers will worship the Father in Spirit and in truth. † Yes, the Father wants such people to worship him. 24 God is spirit, † and those who worship him must worship in Spirit and in truth.” †

25 The woman said to him, “I know that the Messiah † is coming” (who is called Christ †). “When he comes, he will explain everything to us.”

26 Jesus told her, “I, the one speaking to you, am he.” †

THE RIPENED HARVEST

27 Just then his disciples arrived, and they were amazed that he was talking with a woman. Yet no one said, “What do you want? ” or “Why are you talking with her? ”

28 Then the woman left her water jar, went into town, and told the people, 29 “Come, see a man who told me everything I ever did. Could this be the Messiah? ” † 30 They left the town and made their way to him. †

31 In the meantime the disciples kept urging him, “Rabbi, † eat something.”

32 But he said, “I have food to eat that you don’t know about.”

33 The disciples said to one another, “Could someone have brought him something to eat? ”

34 “My food is to do the will of him † who sent me † and to finish his work,” † Jesus told them. 35 “Don’t you say, ‘There are still four more months, and then comes the harvest’? Listen to what I’m telling you: Open † your eyes and look at the fields, because they are ready † for harvest. 36 The reaper is already receiving pay and gathering fruit for eternal life, † so that the sower and reaper can rejoice together. 37 For in this case the saying is true: ‘One sows and another reaps.’ † 38 I sent you to reap what you didn’t labor for; others have labored, and you have benefited from † their labor.”

THE SAVIOR OF THE WORLD

39 Now many Samaritans † from that town believed in him because of what the woman said † when she testified, † "He told me everything I ever did." 40 So when the Samaritans came to him, † they asked him to stay with them, and he stayed there two days. 41 Many more believed because of what he said. † 42 And they told the woman, "We no longer believe because of what you said, since we have heard for ourselves and know that this really is the Savior † of the world." †

A GALILEAN WELCOME

43 After two days he left there for Galilee. † 44 (Jesus himself had testified † that a prophet has no honor in his own country. †) 45 When † they entered Galilee, the Galileans † welcomed him because they had seen everything he did in Jerusalem † during the festival. † For they also had gone to the festival.

THE SECOND SIGN: HEALING AN OFFICIAL'S SON

46 He went again to Cana † of Galilee, where he had turned the water into wine.
There was a certain royal official whose son was ill at Capernaum. † 47 When this man heard that Jesus had come from Judea † into Galilee, he went to him and pleaded with him to come down and heal his son, since he was about to die.
48 Jesus told him, "Unless you people see signs and wonders, † you will not believe." †
49 "Sir," † the official said to him, "come down before my boy dies."
50 "Go," Jesus told him, "your son will live." The man believed what † Jesus said to him and departed.
51 While he was still going down, his servants met him saying that his boy was alive. 52 He asked them at what time he got better. "Yesterday at one in the afternoon † the fever left him," they answered. 53 The father † realized this was the very hour at which Jesus had told him, "Your son will live." So he himself believed, along with his whole household.
54 Now this was also the second sign † Jesus performed after he came from Judea to Galilee. †

4:4 Because of ongoing racial and political strife between Jews and Samaritans, Jews generally avoided the shorter route through Samaria when traveling from Judea to Galilee. Usually, they took the long way around on the east side of the Jordan River.

4:9 See "Equality of the Sexes," p. 1434.

4:10 Jesus's use of living water is a play on words. The phrase was frequently used in Greek to indicate a fresh spring or running water as opposed to a well or cistern. Jesus, however, clearly intends a spiritual meaning—new life in the Holy Spirit (vv. 13-14).

4:20 The Samaritans had their own version of the Torah (the first five books of the Bible); it differed significantly from the OT, especially in identifying Mount Gerizim in Samaria as the location where people were to worship God. The Samaritans had built their own temple on Mount Gerizim. The Samaritan woman mentions this ongoing dispute between Jews and Samaritans, apparently as a way to move the conversation away from the uncomfortable discussion of her marital situation (vv. 16-18).

4:39 See "Speaking to a Non-Christian about Jesus," p. XXXV.

4:45 The festival John refers to here is most likely the Passover celebration, during which Jesus cleansed the temple (2:13-25).

THE THIRD SIGN: HEALING THE SICK

5 After this, a Jewish festival took place, and Jesus went up to Jerusalem. † 2 By the Sheep Gate † in Jerusalem there is a pool, called Bethesda † in Aramaic, which has five colonnades. 3 Within these lay a large number of the disabled — blind, lame, and paralyzed. †
5 One man was there who had been disabled for thirty-eight years. 6 When Jesus saw him lying there and realized he had already been there a long time, † he said to him, "Do you want to get well? "

7 “Sir,” † the disabled man answered, “I have no one to put me into the pool when the water is stirred up, but while I’m coming, someone goes down ahead of me.”
8 “Get up,” Jesus told him, “pick up your mat and walk.” 9 Instantly the man got well, picked up his mat, and started to walk.
Now that day was the Sabbath, † 10 and so the Jews † said to the man who had been healed, “This is the Sabbath. † The law prohibits you from picking up your mat.”
11 He replied, “The man who made me well † told me, ‘Pick up your mat and walk.’ ”
12 “Who is this man who told you, ‘Pick up your mat and walk’?” they asked.
13 But the man who was healed did not know who it was, † because Jesus had slipped away into the crowd that was there. † 14 After this, Jesus found him in the temple † and said to him, “See, you are well. Do not sin anymore, so that something worse doesn’t happen to you.” 15 The man went and reported to the Jews that it was Jesus who had made him well. † 16 Therefore, the Jews began persecuting † Jesus † because he was doing these things on the Sabbath. †

HONORING THE FATHER AND THE SON

17 Jesus responded to them, “My Father † is still working, and I am working also.” 18 This is why the Jews began trying all the more to kill him: † Not only was he breaking the Sabbath, but he was even calling God his own Father, making himself equal to God.
19 Jesus replied, “Truly I tell you, the Son is not able to do anything on his own, but only what he sees the Father doing. For whatever the Father † does, the Son likewise does these things. † 20 For the Father loves the Son and shows him everything he is doing, and he will show him greater works † than these so that you will be amazed. 21 And just as the Father raises † the dead and gives them life, so the Son also gives life to whom he wants. † 22 The Father, † in fact, judges no one but has given all judgment to the Son, 23 so that all people may honor the Son just as they honor the Father. † Anyone who does not honor the Son does not honor the Father who sent him. †

LIFE AND JUDGMENT

24 "Truly I tell you, anyone who hears my word and believes him who sent me has eternal life † and will not come under judgment but has passed from death to life.

25 "Truly I tell you, an hour is coming, and is now here, † when the dead will hear the voice of the Son of God, and those who hear will live. † 26 For just as the Father has life in himself, so also he has granted to the Son † to have life in himself. 27 And he has granted him the right to pass judgment, † because he is the Son of Man. † 28 Do not be amazed at this, because a time is coming when all who are in the graves will hear his voice 29 and come out — those who have done good things, to the resurrection of life, but those who have done wicked things, to the resurrection of condemnation.

30 "I can do nothing on my own. I judge only as I hear, and my judgment † is just, † because I do not seek my own will, but the will of him who sent me. †

WITNESSES TO JESUS

31 "If I testify about myself, my testimony is not true. 32 There is another who testifies about me, and I know that the testimony he gives about me is true. † 33 You sent messengers to John, and he testified to the truth. † 34 I don't receive human testimony, but I say these things so that you may be saved. 35 John † † was a burning and shining lamp, † and you were willing to rejoice for a while in his light. †

36 "But I have a greater testimony than John's because of the works that the Father has given me to accomplish. † These very works I am doing testify about me that the Father has sent † me. 37 The Father who sent me has himself testified † about me. You have not heard his voice at any time, and you haven't seen his form. † 38 You don't have his word residing in you, because you don't believe the one he sent. 39 You pore over the Scriptures † because you think you have eternal life in them, and yet they testify about me. † 40 But you are not willing † to come to me † so that you may have life.

41 “I do not accept glory † from people, 42 but I know you — that you have no love for God † within you. 43 I have come in my Father’s name, † and yet you don’t accept me. † If someone else comes in his own name, you will accept him.
44 How can you believe, since you accept glory from one another but don’t seek the glory that comes from the only † God? † 45 Do not think that I will accuse you to the Father. Your accuser is Moses, † on whom you have set your hope.
46 For if you believed Moses, you would believe me, because he wrote about me. 47 But if you don’t believe what he wrote, † how will you believe my words? ” †

5:3 The subsequent verse 4 text recorded in the footnote was probably not original to John; the oldest and most reliable manuscripts of the NT do not contain those words. More likely they represent the superstition of the day about healings that were believed to have happened at the pool of Bethesda. It is unknown what made the water in the pool stir occasionally (5:7), but Jesus does not give the superstition credence. He simply heals the man with his divine power.

5:16 Pharisees and other Jewish religious leaders had developed a wide variety of customs related to exactly what a person could and could not do without violating the law of Moses’s prohibition against working on the Sabbath (cp. Ex 20:10; 35:2). Jesus did not violate the law of Moses, but he did run afoul of the Pharisaic regulations.

5:17 See “A Biblical View of Work,” p. 1478.

5:18 When John records the Jewish religious leaders' objection that Jesus was calling God his own Father, making himself equal to God, he is summarizing the teaching of Jesus about himself. Jesus explains this more fully in vv. 19-23. Specifically, Jesus claims to have a unique relationship to God: he is the Son of God; he does the Lord's will (v. 19); he gives eternal life (v. 21); he judges all things (v. 22); and he raises the dead (vv. 25-29). Jewish religious leaders believed Jesus regarded himself equal with God —because he was.

5:28-29 Jesus apparently draws on the prophecy of Daniel 12:2, "Many who sleep in the dust of the earth will awake, some to eternal life, and some to disgrace and eternal contempt." He affirms the general resurrection of the dead, in which all people will be raised for the purpose of judgment. Additionally, Jesus sees himself as the One who will enact this resurrection, since the dead will rise when they hear his voice.

5:31 Jesus provides four witnesses to the truths he has just taught (vv. 19-30). Jewish legal tradition required multiple witnesses to establish any disputable fact. Jesus provided more than ample evidence that he was sent by God.

THE FOURTH SIGN: FEEDING OF THE FIVE THOUSAND

6 After † this, Jesus crossed the Sea of Galilee † (or Tiberias †). 2 A huge crowd was following him because they saw the signs that he was performing by healing the sick. 3 Jesus went up a mountain and sat down there with his disciples.

4 Now the Passover, a Jewish festival, was near. 5 So when Jesus looked up and noticed a huge crowd coming toward him, † he asked Philip, † "Where will we buy bread so that these people can eat?" 6 He asked this to test him, † for he himself knew what he was going to do.

7 Philip answered him, "Two hundred denarii † † worth of bread wouldn't be enough for each of them to have a little."

8 One of his disciples, Andrew, † Simon † Peter's † brother, said to him, 9 "There's a boy here who has five barley loaves and two fish — but what are they for so many?"

10 Jesus said, "Have the people sit down."

There was plenty of grass in that place; so they sat down. The men numbered about five thousand. † 11 Then Jesus took the loaves, and after giving thanks he distributed them to those who were seated — so also with the fish, as much as they wanted. †

12 When they were full, he told his disciples, "Collect the leftovers so that nothing is wasted." † 13 So they collected them and filled twelve baskets with the pieces from the five barley loaves that were left over by those who had eaten.

14 When the people saw the sign † he had done, they said, “This truly is the Prophet † who is to come † into the world.” † 15 Therefore, when Jesus realized that they were about to come and take him by force to make him king, † he withdrew again to the mountain by himself.

THE FIFTH SIGN: WALKING ON WATER

16 When † evening came, his disciples went down to the sea, 17 got into a boat, and started across the sea to Capernaum. † Darkness had already set in, but Jesus had not yet come to them. 18 A high wind arose, and the sea began to churn. 19 After they had rowed about three or four miles, † they saw Jesus walking on the sea. He was coming near the boat, and they were afraid. 20 But he said to them, “It is I. † † Don’t be afraid.” 21 Then they were willing to take him on board, and at once the boat was at the shore where they were heading.

THE BREAD OF LIFE

22 The next day, the crowd that had stayed on the other side of the sea saw there had been only one boat. † † They also saw that Jesus had not boarded the boat with his disciples, but that his disciples had gone off alone. 23 Some boats from Tiberias † came near the place where they had eaten the bread after the Lord had given thanks. 24 When the crowd saw that neither Jesus nor his disciples were there, they got into the boats and went to Capernaum looking for Jesus.
25 When they found him on the other side of the sea, they said to him, “Rabbi, † when did you get here? ” 26 Jesus answered, “Truly I tell you, you are looking for me, not because you saw † the signs, but because you ate the loaves and were filled. 27 Don’t work for the food that perishes † but for the food that lasts for eternal life, † which the Son of Man † will give you, because God the Father † has set his seal of approval on him.”
28 “What can we do to perform the works of God? ” they asked.
29 Jesus replied, “This is the work † of God — that you believe in the one he has sent.” †

30 “What sign, then, are you going to do so we may see and believe you?” they asked. “What are you going to perform? 31 Our ancestors ate the manna † in the wilderness, † just as it is written: He gave them bread from heaven to eat.” † † 32 Jesus said to them, “Truly I tell you, Moses † didn’t give you the bread from heaven, but my Father gives you the true bread from heaven. 33 For the bread of God is the one who comes down from heaven and gives life to the world.”
34 Then they said, “Sir, give us this bread always.”
35 “I am † the bread of life,” Jesus told them. “No one who comes to me † will ever be hungry, † and no one who believes in me † will ever be thirsty † again.
36 But as I told you, you’ve seen me, † and yet you do not believe. 37 Everyone the Father gives me will come to me, and the one who comes to me I will never cast out. † 38 For I have come down from heaven, † not to do my own will, but the will of him † who sent me. 39 This is the will of him who sent me: that I should lose none of those he has given me but should raise † them up on the last day. 40 For this is the will of my Father: † that everyone who sees the Son † and believes in him will have eternal life, and I will raise † him up on the last day.” 41 Therefore the Jews started complaining about him because he said, “I am the bread that came down from heaven.” 42 They were saying, “Isn’t this Jesus the son of Joseph, † whose father and mother we know? How can he now say, ‘I have come down from heaven’?”
43 Jesus answered them, “Stop complaining among yourselves. 44 No one can come to me unless the Father who sent me draws † him, and I will raise him up on the last day. 45 It is written in the Prophets: † And they will all be taught by God. † † Everyone who has listened to and learned from the Father † comes to me — 46 not that anyone has seen the Father † except the one who is from God. † He has seen the Father. † 47 “Truly I tell you, anyone who believes † has eternal life. 48 I am the bread of life. 49 Your ancestors ate the manna † in the wilderness, † and they died.

50 This is the bread that comes down from heaven so that anyone may eat of it and not die. † 51 I am the living bread that came down from heaven. If anyone eats of this bread he will live † forever. † The bread that I will give for the life † of the world is my flesh." † 52 At that, the Jews argued † among themselves, † "How can this man give us his flesh to eat? " 53 So Jesus said to them, "Truly I tell you, unless you eat the flesh of the Son of Man † and drink his blood, † you do not have life in yourselves. 54 The one who eats my flesh and drinks my blood † has eternal life, and I will raise † him up on the last day, 55 because my flesh is true food and my blood is true drink.
56 The one who eats my flesh and drinks my blood remains in me, and I in him. † 57 Just as the living † Father sent me and I live because of the Father, so the one who feeds on me will live † because of me. 58 This is the bread that came down from heaven; it is not like the manna † your ancestors ate — and they died. The one who eats this bread will live forever." †
59 He said these things while teaching in the synagogue † in Capernaum. †

MANY DISCIPLES DESERT JESUS

60 Therefore, when many of his disciples heard this, they said, "This teaching is hard. Who can accept † it? " 61 Jesus, knowing in himself † that his disciples were complaining about this, asked them, "Does this offend you? 62 Then what if you were to observe the Son of Man † ascending † to where he was before? 63 The Spirit † is the one who gives life. The flesh doesn't help at all. The words that I have spoken to you are spirit and are life. 64 But there are some among you who don't believe." (For Jesus knew from the beginning † those who did not † believe and the one who would betray † him.) 65 He said, "This is why I told you that no one can come to me † unless it is granted to him by the Father." 66 From that moment † many of his disciples turned back and no longer accompanied him. 67 So Jesus said to the Twelve, † "You don't want to go away too, do you? "

68 Simon Peter † answered, “Lord, to whom will we go? You have the words of eternal life. 69 We have come to believe and know that you are the Holy One of God.” † †

70 Jesus replied to them, “Didn’t I choose you, the Twelve? † Yet one of you is a devil.” † 71 He was referring to Judas, † Simon Iscariot’s son, † one of the Twelve, because he was going to betray † him.

6:4 Passover was the festival of Israel in which they commemorated God’s rescue of his people from the judgment of death (Ex 12:1-28) and the slavery of Egypt (12:29-42). Three different Passovers are mentioned in John’s Gospel: in John 2, in John 6, and then in John 11:5, the final Passover. The related feast was commonly celebrated with the breaking of bread, and John, by connecting Passover (v. 4) with the feeding of the five thousand (vv. 1-15), puts Jesus at the center of the celebration. Just as John the Baptist announced that Jesus was the Lamb of God who takes away the sin of the world (2:29), so Jesus shed his body and blood as the Passover Lamb to rescue the world from sin and death (3:16).

6:35 This is the first of seven qualified I am statements of Jesus in this Gospel. Jesus uses these metaphors to describe who he is and what he has come to do. Jesus is the bread of life (6:35,45); the light of the world (8:12; 9:5); the door (to the sheep pen; 10:7,9); the good shepherd (10:11); the resurrection and the life (11:25); the way, the truth and the life (14:6); and the true vine (15:1; see the note at 8:58 for a discussion of the unqualified “I am” statements of Jesus). Jesus identifies himself as the bread of life because of the spiritual life that faith in the Messiah offers. Like the manna that came down from heaven in Israel's ancient history (Ex 16:4), Jesus fulfills all the spiritual needs of God's people, including eternal life and the resurrection from the dead (v. 40).

6:60 The disciples found the teaching that Jesus the Messiah would be destroyed, broken, and consumed (like food; vv. 53-58) offensive and overwhelming. They were unfamiliar with this picture of a Messiah and did not want it, but Jesus was clear that the Messiah would die and leave them (v. 62). As a result of this teaching, many of Jesus's disciples abandoned him (v. 66).

THE UNBELIEF OF JESUS'S BROTHERS

7 After this, Jesus traveled in Galilee, † since he did not want to travel in Judea † because the Jews † were trying to kill him. † 2 The Jewish Festival of Shelters † † was near. 3 So his brothers † said to him, "Leave here and go to Judea so your disciples can see your works † that you are doing. 4 For no one does anything in secret while he's seeking public recognition. If you do these things, show yourself to the world." 5 (For not even his brothers believed in him.) 6 Jesus told them, "My time † has not yet arrived, but your time is always at hand. 7 The world cannot hate † you, but it does hate me because I testify about it — that its works are evil. 8 Go up to the festival yourselves. I'm not going up to this festival, † because my time has not yet fully come." 9 After he had said these things, he stayed in Galilee.

JESUS AT THE FESTIVAL OF SHELTERS

10 After his brothers had gone up to the festival, then he also went up, not openly but secretly. 11 The Jews were looking for him at the festival and saying,
"Where is he?" 12 And there was a lot of murmuring about him among the crowds. Some were saying, "He's a good † man." Others were saying, "No, on the contrary, he's deceiving † the people." 13 Still, nobody was talking publicly about him for fear of the Jews.

14 When the festival was already half over, Jesus went up into the temple † and began to teach. 15 Then the Jews were amazed and said, "How is this man so learned, † since he hasn't been trained?"

16 Jesus answered them, "My teaching isn't mine but is from the one who sent me. † 17 If anyone wants to do his will, † he will know whether the teaching is from God or whether I am speaking on my own. 18 The one who speaks on his own seeks his own glory; † but he who seeks the glory † of the one who sent him is true, † and there is no unrighteousness in him. † 19 Didn't Moses † give you the law? Yet none of you keeps the law. † Why are you trying to kill me?"

20 "You have a demon!" the crowd responded. "Who is trying to kill you?"
21 "I performed one work, † and you are all amazed," Jesus answered. 22 "This is why Moses has given you circumcision † — not that it comes from Moses but from the fathers † — and you circumcise a man on the Sabbath. † 23 If a man receives circumcision on the Sabbath † so that the law of Moses † won't be broken, are you angry at me because I made a man entirely well on the Sabbath? 24 Stop judging † according to outward appearances; rather judge according to righteous judgment."

THE IDENTITY OF THE MESSIAH

25 Some of the people of Jerusalem † were saying, "Isn't this the man they are trying to kill? 26 Yet, look, he's speaking publicly and they're saying nothing to him. Can it be true that the authorities † know he is the Messiah? † 27 But we know where this man is from. † When the Messiah comes, nobody will know where he is from."
28 As he was teaching in the temple, † Jesus cried out, "You know me and you know where I am from. Yet I have not come on my own, but the one who sent me † is true. You don't know him; † 29 I know him because I am from him, and he sent me." †
30 Then they tried to seize him. Yet no one laid a hand on him because his hour had not yet come. 31 However, many from the crowd believed in him and said, "When the Messiah comes, he won't perform more signs than this man has done, † will he?" 32 The Pharisees † heard the crowd murmuring these things about him, and so the chief priests † and the Pharisees sent servants † to arrest him.
33 Then Jesus said, "I am only with you for a short time. † Then I'm going to the one who sent me. † 34 You will look for me, but you will not find me; and where I am, you cannot come." †

35 Then the Jews † said to one another, “Where does he intend to go so we won’t find him? He doesn’t intend to go to the Jewish people dispersed † † among the Greeks † and teach the Greeks, does he? 36 What is this remark he made: ‘You will look for me, and you will not find me; and where I am, you cannot come’ † ? ”

THE PROMISE OF THE SPIRIT

37 On the last and most important day of the festival, † Jesus stood up and cried out, “If anyone is thirsty, let him come to me † † and drink. † 38 The one who believes in me, † as the Scripture † has said, will have streams of living water † flow † from deep within him.” 39 He said this about the Spirit. † Those who believed in Jesus were going to receive the Spirit, † for the Spirit † had not yet been given † because Jesus had not yet been glorified.

THE PEOPLE ARE DIVIDED OVER JESUS

40 When some from the crowd heard these words, they said, “This truly is the Prophet.” † 41 Others said, “This is the Messiah.” But some said, “Surely the Messiah doesn’t come from Galilee, does he? 42 Doesn’t the Scripture † say that the Messiah comes from David’s † offspring † and from the town of Bethlehem, † where David lived? ” 43 So the crowd was divided † because of him. 44 Some of them wanted to seize him, † but no one laid hands on him.

DEBATE OVER JESUS’S CLAIMS

45 Then the servants † came to the chief priests † and Pharisees, who asked them, “Why didn’t you bring him? ”

46 The servants answered, “No man ever spoke like this! ” † † 47 Then the Pharisees responded to them: “Are you fooled † too? 48 Have any of the rulers † or Pharisees believed in him? 49 But this crowd, which doesn’t know the law, is accursed.”

50 Nicodemus † — the one who came to him previously and who was one of them — said to them, 51 “Our law doesn’t judge a man before it hears from him and knows what he’s doing, does it? ” †

52 “You aren’t from Galilee † too, are you?” they replied. “Investigate and you will see that no prophet arises from Galilee.” †

7:2,10 The Festival of Shelters, much like the Passover, celebrated God’s rescue of his people from slavery in Egypt. During this celebration, Jewish people lived in small huts or tents to remember the time when their forefathers wandered in the wilderness after the exodus. Jesus uses this opportunity to continue to argue that he is the Messiah and that the story of Israel in the OT is ultimately about him. The Jewish leadership clearly understands what Jesus means, because many of them want to kill him for his teaching (7:40-44).

7:27 Beyond some of the OT’s clearer teachings about the background of the Messiah (e.g., 8:42—family line, home town), there were many contemporary theories about how to identify the Messiah. When the Messiah comes, nobody will know where he is from, is a saying reflecting one of the many contradictory beliefs about how the Messiah could be identified (cp. 7:42).

7:32 Rome allowed the Jews to maintain a small military force to protect the temple and the area immediately around it. These servants, or temple police, most likely answered directly to the Sanhedrin.

7:35 Since the Babylonian exile, a large number of Jews lived outside Palestine, dispersed among the Greeks (Gentiles). This community was known as the diaspora; it was spread throughout the Roman Empire.

in order that they might have evidence to accuse him.
Jesus stooped down and started writing on the ground with his finger. 7 When they persisted in questioning him, he stood up and said to them, "The one without sin † among you † should be the first to throw a stone at her." † 8 Then he stooped down again and continued writing on the ground. 9 When they heard this, they left one by one, starting with the older men. Only he was left, with the woman in the center. 10 When Jesus stood up, he said to her,
"Woman, where are they? Has no one condemned you?"
11 "No one, Lord," † she answered.
"Neither do I condemn you," † said Jesus. "Go, and from now on do not sin anymore."]

CHRISTIANITY AND THE ABRAHAMIC RELIGIONS

Living in the Information Age, with its ease of travel and communication, increasingly make the world a global village. We in the West today are far more likely to have Hindus and Muslims as neighbors or work colleagues than just a generation or two ago. With this exposure to different cultures and religions come "Coexist" bumper stickers and the message that "all religions are basically the same" or "that there isn't just one true religion."

Ironically, that's not what the founders of the world's leading religions themselves believed. They took quite seriously certain "make-or-break" doctrines—tenets central to salvation or liberation.

For example, Muhammad claimed to be the final prophet of God, and he repudiated polytheism (belief in many gods) in favor of monotheism (belief in one God). Buddha rejected the Hindu doctrine of the enduring soul (atman) in favor of the no-self doctrine (anatman), in which the soulless individual is more like a shifting, flickering candle, a stream of consciousness, a bundle of ever-changing properties. Moreover, Buddha insisted that suffering comes from attachment to a transient, unstable world (an enduring God, therefore, does not exist). To resolve the problem of suffering, he believed, our desires or cravings must be extinguished. By contrast, Jesus of Nazareth did not deny desires (cp. Ps 42:2, where the psalmist "thirsts" for God); the human problem is not desiring, but desiring the wrong things. Moreover, Jesus insisted that he himself was the only way to the Father and the complete, final revelation of God (Jn 14:6-9; cp. Ac 4:12; 1Tm 2:5). He was not merely a "good moral teacher," as many religions outside Christianity suggest.

Because these faiths are not basically the same, they cannot all be true in what they affirm. They conflict at key points—the nature of reality (God or no god?), human nature (self or no self?), the human problem (ignorance, desire, sin?), the solution to this problem (enlightenment, extinction of desire, repentance and reconciliation with God?), and the afterlife (reincarnation, annihilation, union with or separation from God?).

CHRISTIANITY AND THEISTIC RELIGIONS

After the 9/11 terrorist attacks, Westerners started to hear not only that "Islam is a religion of peace," but many positive affirmations about the message of "the Abrahamic religions"—Judaism, Christianity, and Islam. These religions are monotheistic, and many assume there is no salvific (saving) difference among them. After all, the argument goes, our faiths are rooted in the same historical figure, Abraham, "the father of us all." And don't these religions hold in common that one personal, powerful, good, self-existent Creator exists, that he made a world distinct from himself, and that he created humans as uniquely endowed and capable of relating in some way to him? So aren't these theisms compatible and thus equally capable of saving us from our profoundly damaged condition?

Before responding directly to this question, we can readily affirm that a personal, intelligent, very powerful, good God exists—that the universe's beginning and fine-tuning as well as beauty, human consciousness, free will, rationality, and intrinsic human dignity make sense if a powerful, intelligent, imaginative, conscious, free, and good Being is behind them. Furthermore, we can affirm a number of overlapping beliefs among the Abrahamic faiths—the place of fasting; giving to the poor; prayer; belief in angels, prophets, an afterlife; and a final judgment. These three theistic religions affirm that God is one (e.g., Dt 6:4; 1Co 8:6; Jms 2:19; and the Muslim confession "there is no God but Allah"). Indeed, theists share more of a common worldview than they do with Buddhists, Confucians, or Hindus. So it would be wrong to think that if, say, the Christian faith is true, then all other religions are completely false. Instead, we should affirm that the Christian faith is true and that where other religions disagree on various tenets, then at that point they are in error.

When we say truth and error, let's not miss a fundamental point: we ought to believe something not because it makes us feel good, gives us a warm community, or fills our lives with purpose, but because it is true. Many people today treat religious beliefs as if they were in a metaphysical buffet line: "I like reincarnation. I don't like sin and judgment. I prefer to think of Jesus as a good moral teacher." Rather, we should ask: "which religion or philosophy of life is true? Which makes the best sense of the fundamental features of the universe and of our human experience?" Of course, with the truth of the Christian faith come power, purpose, community, hope, and much more.

Just as not all religions are equally capable of bringing salvation or liberation, so not all theistic religions are capable of bringing salvation either. Indeed, there is strong disagreement at fundamental points even here.

For example, many religious Jews in Jesus's day repudiated his messianic claims and ministry and his divine identity (Lk 5:21, Jn 1:11)—just as many in the Jewish community today would similarly reject Jesus. According to the NT, Jesus was put to death by, yes, monotheistic Jews who considered Abraham their father and Jesus an imposter and blasphemer. On the other hand, the earliest Christians were Jewish (see Ac 15), and many of them incorrectly believed that one could not be a Christian unless one was also a Jew.

As for Islam, a key tenet of the Muslim faith is that "Muhammad is [Allah's] messenger." The NT strongly affirms that Jesus is the final revelation of God and that nothing beyond Jesus is necessary (Heb

1:1-3). He is the Creator, Lord of all, and Savior of humankind. The very early Christians worshiped this risen Lord as One who shares in the identity of God (Jn 1:1-3; 1Co 8:6; 16:22; Php 2:9-11; Col 1:15-20; 1Jn 2:2). Jesus is more than a prophet—contrary to Islam's claims. Jesus is also the fulfillment of God's promises to the ancient nation of Israel (Lk 24:44); he is the faithful Israelite who lived out Israel's story and, through his death and resurrection, would bring salvation to the Gentiles to fulfill the promise to Abraham (Gn 12:1-3). For a Jew to reject Jesus as Messiah (the "anointed one") is to reject the very gift of God's salvation and hope for a new creation (cp. 2Co 5:17).

THE TRINITY AND THEISTIC RELIGIONS

Whereas traditional Judaism and Islam are unitarian, affirming that God is one person, the Christian faith is Trinitarian, affirming that there are three persons—Father, Son, and Spirit—who share the same divine nature and being. Islam expressly rejects the doctrine of the Trinity, which Muslims consider polytheism (a belief in multiple gods). As the Qur'an says, "Say not 'Trinity': desist . . . For God is One God" (4:171; cp. 5:76).

The problem, however, is that Islam itself misunderstands the doctrine of the Trinity. The Qur'an makes the mistaken claim that Christians worship three gods: the Father, Mary, and Jesus (5:116). No orthodox Christian would affirm that Mary is a person of the divine Trinity or that the Trinity consists of three gods. The Trinity—Father, Son, and Spirit—are equally divine and, like a triangle's three angles, are inseparable in being.

Furthermore, the Muslim misunderstands Jesus as the "Son of God," believing that this means that God literally had sex with Mary to produce Jesus: "They do blaspheme who say: God is Christ the son of Mary" (5:75). But again, orthodox Christians would repudiate this misrepresentation, stating that "Father" and "Son" are figurative and not literal (biological) categories.

Also, according to the Qur'an (4:157–8), Jesus was not crucified but was taken up to Allah. Yet the NT clearly affirms that Jesus of Nazareth was crucified under the Roman governor Pontius Pilate—a point confirmed by the non-Christian Jewish historian Josephus and other first-century writers.

Moreover, the Christian faith is founded on the historical fact of Jesus's bodily resurrection—a verifiable, historical event for which there is excellent evidence, as scholars such as William Lane Craig, Gary Habermas, and N. T. Wright make clear. Paul announces in 1 Corinthians 15 that if Christ has not been raised from the dead (which assumes his crucifixion and burial), there is no Christian faith and no salvation. That would mean that we Christians are still in our sins, and people ought to feel sorry for us who believe a delusion that happens to "give us purpose" just for this earthly life. Paul emphatically said we should reject such a foolish way of thinking (1Co 15:12-20,32). If Christ has not been raised, there is no Christian faith at all, and the promises to Abraham have not been fulfilled.

SUMMARY

Merely clinging to an Abrahamic religion devoid of Christ's centrality actually misses the point of the promises to Abraham (Gn 12:1-3). Clearly, not all "theisms" are created equal. They cannot all be true, and the pivotal consideration for each of them is the identity of Jesus of Nazareth.

PAUL COPAN

THE LIGHT OF THE WORLD

12 Jesus spoke to them again: "I am † the light † of the world. Anyone who follows me will never walk in the darkness but will have the light of life." †

13 So the Pharisees said to him, “You are testifying about yourself. Your testimony is not valid.”
14 “Even if I testify about myself,” Jesus replied, “My testimony is true, because I know where I came from and where I’m going. But you don’t know where I come from or where I’m going. † 15 You judge † by human standards. † † I judge no one. † 16 And if I do judge, my judgment is true, because it is not I alone who judge, but I and the Father who sent me. † 17 Even in your law it is written that the testimony of two witnesses is true. † 18 I am the one who testifies † about myself, and the Father who sent me testifies about me.”
19 Then they asked him, “Where is your Father? ”
“You know neither me nor my Father,” † Jesus answered. “If you knew me, you would also know my Father.” † 20 He spoke these words by the treasury, † while teaching in the temple. But no one seized him, because his hour had not yet come.

JESUS PREDICTS HIS DEPARTURE

21 Then he said to them again, “I’m going away; † you will look for me, and you will die in your sin. † Where I’m going, you cannot come.” †
22 So the Jews said again, “He won’t kill himself, will he, since he says, ‘Where I’m going, you cannot come’ † ? ”
23 “You are from below,” he told them, “I am from above. † You are of this world; † I am not of this world. † 24 Therefore I told you that you will die in your sins. For if you do not believe that I am he, you will die in your sins.”
25 “Who are you? ” they questioned.
“Exactly what I’ve been telling you from the very beginning,” Jesus told them.
26 “I have many things to say and to judge about you, but the one who sent me † is true, and what I have heard from him — these things I tell the world.” †
27 They did not know he was speaking to them about the Father. 28 So Jesus said to them, “When you lift up the Son of Man, † then you will know that I am † he, and that I do nothing on my own. † But just as the Father taught me, I say these things. 29 The one who sent me is with me. He has not left me alone, † because I always do what pleases him.”

TRUTH AND FREEDOM

30 As he was saying these things, many believed in him.

31 Then Jesus said to the Jews who had believed him, "If you continue in my word, † † you really are my disciples. 32 You will know the truth, † and the truth will set you free."

33 "We are descendants † of Abraham," † they answered him, "and we have never been enslaved to anyone. How can you say, 'You will become free'?"

34 Jesus responded, "Truly I tell you, everyone who commits sin is a slave of sin. † 35 A slave does not remain in the household forever, † but a son does remain forever. † 36 So if the Son sets you free, you really will be free. 37 I know you are descendants of Abraham, † but you are trying to kill me because my word has no place among you. 38 I speak what I have seen † in the presence of the Father; † † so then, you do what you have heard from your father."

39 "Our father is Abraham," they replied.

"If you were Abraham's children," Jesus told them, "you would do what Abraham did. † 40 But now you are trying to kill me, a man who has told you the truth † that I heard from God. Abraham did not do this. 41 You're doing what your father does." †

"We weren't born † of sexual immorality," † they said. "We have one Father — God." †

42 Jesus said to them, "If God were your Father, you would love me, † because I came from God † and I am here. For I didn't come on my own, but he sent me. 43 Why don't you understand what I say? Because you cannot listen to † my word. † 44 You are of your father the devil, † and you want to carry out your father's desires. He was a murderer † from the beginning † and does not stand in the truth, † because there is no truth in him. When he tells a lie, he speaks from his own nature, † because he is a liar and the father of lies. 45 Yet because I tell the truth, you do not believe me. 46 Who among you can convict me of sin? † If I am telling the truth, why don't you believe me? 47 The one who is from God listens to God's words. This is why you don't listen, because you are not from God."

JESUS AND ABRAHAM

48 The Jews responded to him, "Aren't we right in saying that you're a Samaritan † and have a demon?" †

49 "I do not have a demon," Jesus answered. "On the contrary, I honor my Father and you dishonor me. 50 I do not seek my own glory; † there is one who seeks it and judges. 51 Truly I tell you, if anyone keeps my word, † he will never see death."

52 Then the Jews said, "Now we know you have a demon. Abraham died and so did the prophets. You say, 'If anyone keeps my word, he will never taste death.' 53 Are you greater than our father Abraham who died? And the prophets died. Who do you claim to be?"

54 "If I glorify myself," Jesus answered, "my glory is nothing. My Father — about whom you say, 'He is our God' — he is the one who glorifies me. 55 You do not know him, but I know him. If I were to say I don't know him, † I would be a liar like you. But I do know him, † and I keep his word. 56 Your father Abraham rejoiced to see my day; he saw it † and was glad."

57 The Jews replied, "You aren't fifty years old yet, and you've seen Abraham?" †

58 Jesus said to them, "Truly I tell you, before Abraham was, I am." †

59 So they picked up stones † to throw at him. † But Jesus was hidden † † and went out of the temple. † †

8:12 The lighting of lamps figured prominently in the celebration of the Festival of Shelters, providing the cultural backdrop for Jesus's statement, I am the light of the world. This is the second qualified "I am" statement in John. (See the note at 6:35 for further discussion.) God is called light in the OT (Pss 27:1; 36:9), and the imagery of light is applied to the servant of the Lord (Is 49:6). Jesus draws on the contrast between light and darkness: following Jesus produces the light of life. To go without him is to walk in darkness. Throughout Jewish literature, living in the light is a metaphor for life in relationship with God (Pss 36:9; 56:13; Psalms of Solomon 3:12).

8:41 Jesus confronts the religious leaders' hypocrisy by affirming that he does what his Father (God) wants (v. 38) while the religious leaders do what their father (the devil) desires (v. 44; see "Spiritual Warfare," p. 1454; "Satan and Demons," p. 1611). The leaders respond with insults, claiming that Jesus was born of sexual immorality. Though there are no accounts of Jesus mentioning his own virgin birth, that story had likely circulated. Clearly these men did not believe the virgin birth account; thus, they regarded Jesus's conception as immoral.

8:48 Relations between the Jews and Samaritans were so bad that the religious leaders used the word Samaritan as an insult against other Jews. The insult may have implied heresy—a crime with which the religious leaders would certainly have accused Jesus, (See the note at 4:20 for an example of Samaritan heterodoxy.) 8:58 Before Abraham was, I am is the most striking example of the unqualified "I am" statements in John (See the note at 6:35 for further discussion.) These statements (e.g., 13:9; 18:5) explicitly relate to God's self-identification as he speaks to Moses from the burning bush (Ex 3:14). Jesus is not merely stating that he is older than Abraham; he is identifying himself with the God who spoke to Moses. The Jewish leadership understood and immediately sought to kill him for blasphemy (v. 59).

THE SIXTH SIGN: HEALING A MAN BORN BLIND

9 As he was passing by, he saw a man blind from birth. 2 His disciples asked him: "Rabbi, † who sinned, this man † or his parents, † that he was born blind? "

3 "Neither this man nor his parents sinned," Jesus answered. "This came about so that God's works † might be displayed in him. 4 We † must do the works † of him who sent me † while it is day. † Night is coming when no one can work. 5 As long as I am in the world, I am the light of the world." †

6 After he said these things he spit on the ground, made some mud † from the saliva, and spread the mud on his eyes. 7 "Go," he told him, "wash in the pool of Siloam" † (which means "Sent"). So he left, washed, and came back seeing. †
8 His neighbors and those who had seen him before as a beggar said, "Isn't this the one who used to sit begging?" 9 Some said, "He's the one." Others were saying, "No, but he looks like him."
He kept saying, "I'm the one."
10 So they asked him, "Then how were your eyes opened?"
11 He answered, "The man called Jesus made mud, spread it on my eyes, and told me, 'Go to Siloam † and wash.' So when I went and washed I received my sight." † 12 "Where is he?" they asked.
"I don't know," he said.

THE HEALED MAN'S TESTIMONY

13 They brought the man who used to be blind to the Pharisees. † 14 The day that Jesus made the mud and opened his eyes was a Sabbath. † 15 Then the Pharisees asked him again how he received his sight.
"He put mud on my eyes," he told them. "I washed and I can see."
16 Some of the Pharisees said, "This man is not from God, † because he doesn't keep the Sabbath." But others were saying, "How can a sinful man † perform such signs?" And there was a division † among them.
17 Again they asked the blind man, "What do you say about him, since he opened your eyes?"
"He's a prophet," † he said.
18 The Jews did not believe this about him — that he was blind and received sight — until they summoned the parents of the one who had received his sight.
19 They asked them, "Is this your son, the one you say was born blind? How then does he now see?"
20 "We know this is our son and that he was born blind," his parents answered.
21 "But we don't know how he now sees, and we don't know who opened his eyes. Ask him; he's of age. He will speak for himself." 22 His parents said these things because they were afraid of the Jews, since the Jews had already agreed that if anyone confessed him as the Messiah, † he would be banned from the synagogue. 23 This is why his parents said, “He’s of age; ask him.”

24 So a second time they summoned the man who had been blind and told him, “Give glory † to God. † We know that this man is a sinner.”
25 He answered, “Whether or not he’s a sinner, I don’t know. One thing I do know: I was blind, and now I can see! ”
26 Then they asked him, “What did he do to you? How did he open your eyes? ”
27 “I already told you,” he said, “and you didn’t listen. Why do you want to hear it again? You don’t want to become his disciples too, do you? ”
28 They ridiculed him: “You’re that man’s disciple, but we’re Moses’s † disciples. 29 We know that God has spoken to Moses. But this man — we don’t know where he’s from.” † 30 “This is an amazing thing! ” the man told them. “You don’t know where he is from, and yet he opened my eyes. 31 We know that God doesn’t listen to sinners, † but if anyone is God-fearing and does his will, † he listens to him. †
32 Throughout history † no one has ever heard of someone opening the eyes of a person born blind. † 33 If this man were not from God, he wouldn’t be able to do anything.” †
34 “You were born entirely in sin,” † they replied, “and are you trying to teach us? ” Then they threw him out. †

SPIRITUAL BLINDNESS

35 Jesus heard that they had thrown the man out, and when he found him, he asked, “Do you believe in the Son of Man? ” † †
36 “Who is he, Sir, † that I may believe in him? ” he asked.
37 Jesus answered, “You have seen him; in fact, he is the one speaking with you.”
38 “I believe, Lord! ” he said, and he worshiped him.
39 Jesus said, “I came into this world † for judgment, † in order that those who do not see will see and those who do see will become blind.” †
40 Some of the Pharisees who were with him heard these things and asked him, “We aren’t blind too, are we? ”

41 “If you were blind,” Jesus told them, “you wouldn’t have sin. † But now that you say, ‘We see,’ your sin remains.

9:2 It was common to draw a direct correlation from personal sin to all kinds of suffering. Congenital suffering, however, posed a special problem to that line of thinking. Could a child sin in the womb? The unlikelihood of that is why Jesus’s disciples wonder whether it was this man’s parents who sinned. Jesus refutes the entire premise of their question by stating that the man’s blindness was not the result of personal sin. His blindness happened so that God’s works might be displayed in him, a clear reference to the miraculous sign Jesus was about to perform in healing the man (vv. 6-7). The fellow’s sight was repaired, but those who rejected Jesus remained spiritually blind (v. 41).

9:5 See the note at 8:12.

9:22 Being banned from the synagogue was a severe form of religious and civil punishment. It carried the same ramifications that permanently losing a passport, driver’s license, or citizenship might today.

THE GOOD SHEPHERD

10 “Truly I tell you, anyone who doesn’t enter the sheep pen by the gate but climbs in some other way is a thief and a robber. † 2 The one who enters by the gate is the shepherd † of the sheep. † 3 The gatekeeper opens it for him, and the sheep hear his voice. He calls his own sheep by name and leads them out. 4 When he has brought all his own outside, he goes ahead of them.
The sheep follow him because they know his voice. 5 They will never follow a stranger; instead they will run away from him, because they don’t know the voice of strangers.” 6 Jesus gave them this figure of speech, but they did not understand † what he was telling them.

7 Jesus said again, “Truly I tell you, I am † the gate for the sheep. † 8 All who came before me † are thieves and robbers, but the sheep didn’t listen to them.
9 I am the gate. If anyone enters by me, he will be saved and will come in and go out and find pasture. 10 A thief comes only to steal † and kill and destroy. †
I have come so that they may have life and have it in abundance.

11 “I am the good shepherd. † The good shepherd lays down his life for the sheep. † 12 The hired hand, since he is not the shepherd and doesn’t own the sheep, leaves them † and runs away when he sees a wolf † coming. The wolf then snatches and scatters them. 13 This happens because he is a hired hand and doesn’t care about the sheep.
14 “I am the good shepherd. I know my own, and my own know me, 15 just as the Father knows me, and I know the Father. † I lay down my life † for the sheep. 16 But I have other sheep † that are not from this sheep pen; I must bring them also, and they will listen to my voice. Then there will be one flock, one shepherd. † 17 This is why the Father loves me, † because I lay down my life † so that I may take it up again. 18 No one takes it from me, but I lay it down on my own. I have the right to lay it down, and I have the right to take it up again. I have received this command from my Father.” † 19 Again the Jews were divided † because of these words. 20 Many of them were saying, “He has a demon † and he’s crazy. Why do you listen to him?”
21 Others were saying, “These aren’t the words of someone who is demon-possessed. Can a demon open the eyes of the blind?” †

JESUS AT THE FESTIVAL OF DEDICATION

22 Then the Festival of Dedication took place in Jerusalem, and it was winter.
23 Jesus was walking in the temple in Solomon’s Colonnade. † 24 The Jews surrounded him and asked, “How long are you going to keep us in suspense? †
If you are the Messiah, † tell us plainly.” † † 25 “I did tell you and you don’t believe,” Jesus answered them. “The works † that I do in my Father’s name testify about me. 26 But you don’t believe because you are not of my sheep. † † 27 My sheep hear my voice, I know them, and they follow me. 28 I give them eternal life, † and they will never perish. † No one will snatch † them out of my hand. 29 My Father, † who has given them to me, is greater than all. No one is able to snatch them out of the Father’s hand.
30 I and the Father are one.” †

RENEWED EFFORTS TO STONE JESUS

31 Again the Jews picked up rocks to stone him. †

32 Jesus replied, "I have shown you many good works † from the Father. For which of these works are you stoning me?"

33 "We aren't stoning † you for a good work," the Jews answered, "but for blasphemy, because you — being a man — make yourself God."

34 Jesus answered them, "Isn't it written in your law, † I said, you are gods? † † 35 If he called those whom the word † of God came to 'gods' — and the Scripture † cannot be broken — 36 do you say, 'You are blaspheming' to the one the Father set apart and sent into the world, because I said: I am the Son of God? † 37 If I am not doing my Father's works, † don't believe me. 38 But if I am doing them and you don't believe me, believe the works. This way you will know and understand † that the Father is in me and I in the Father." † 39 Then they were trying again to seize him, † but he eluded their grasp. †

MANY BEYOND THE JORDAN BELIEVE IN JESUS

40 So he departed again across the Jordan † to the place where John † had been baptizing earlier, and he remained there. 41 Many came to him † and said, "John never did a sign, but everything John said about this man was true." 42 And many believed in him there.

10:7,9 When Jesus identifies himself as the gate for the sheep, he continues the metaphor he began in verse 1. This is the third qualified "I am" statement in John. (See the note at 6:35 for further discussion.)

The sheep pen represents the safety and security of eternal life in Christ; faith in him is the only entrance into that life.

10:11 The metaphor begun in verse 1 continues when Jesus says I am the good shepherd. This is the fourth qualified "I am" statement in John. (See the note at 6:35 for further discussion.) The good shepherd lays down his life for the sheep (vv. 11,15), knows his sheep (v. 14), and has other sheep in a different pen (v. 16). With these statements, Jesus looks ahead to his death for the sins for the whole world—Jews and Gentiles (cp. 3:16).

10:22 The Festival of Dedication, or Hanukkah or the Feast of Lights, celebrates the rededication of the temple in 164 BC, after its desecration in 167 BC by the Seleucid ruler Antiochus IV Epiphanes.

10:30 I and the Father are one recalls the central confession of Judaism: "The LORD our God, the LORD is one" (Dt 6:4). Jesus's claim identifies him with the God of Israel.

LAZARUS DIES AT BETHANY

11 Now a man was sick, Lazarus from Bethany, † the village of Mary and her sister Martha. † 2 Mary was the one who anointed the Lord with perfume and wiped his feet with her hair, † and it was her brother Lazarus who was sick. 3 So the sisters sent a message to him: "Lord, the one you love is sick."
4 When Jesus heard it, he said, "This sickness will not end in death but is for the glory of God, † so that the Son of God † may be glorified through it." 5 Now Jesus loved Martha, her sister, and Lazarus. 6 So when he heard that he was sick, he stayed two more days in the place where he was. 7 Then after that, he said to the disciples, "Let's go to Judea † again." 8 "Rabbi," † the disciples told him, "just now the Jews tried to stone you, † and you're going there again?"
9 "Aren't there twelve hours in a day?" Jesus answered. "If anyone walks during the day, he doesn't stumble, because he sees the light of this world. † 10 But if anyone walks during the night, † he does stumble, because the light is not in him."
11 He said this, and then he told them, "Our friend Lazarus has fallen asleep, † but I'm on my way to wake him up." 12 Then the disciples said to him, "Lord, if he has fallen asleep, he will get well."
13 Jesus, however, was speaking about his death, but they thought he was speaking about natural sleep. 14 So Jesus then told them plainly, "Lazarus has died. 15 I'm glad for you that I wasn't there so that you may believe. But let's go to him."

16 Then Thomas † (called "Twin" †) said to his fellow disciples, "Let's go too so that we may die with him."

THE RESURRECTION AND THE LIFE

17 When Jesus arrived, he found that Lazarus had already been in the tomb † four days. 18 Bethany was near Jerusalem † (less than two miles † away). 19 Many of the Jews had come to Martha and Mary to comfort them about their brother.

20 As soon as Martha heard that Jesus was coming, she went to meet him, but Mary remained seated in the house. 21 Then Martha said to Jesus, "Lord, if you had been here, my brother wouldn't have died. 22 Yet even now I know that whatever you ask from God, God will give you."

23 "Your brother will rise † again," Jesus told her.

24 Martha said to him, "I know that he will rise again in the resurrection at the last day." †

25 Jesus said to her, "I am † the resurrection and the life. The one who believes in me, † even if he dies, will live. † 26 Everyone who lives and believes in me will never die. † Do you believe this? "

27 "Yes, Lord," she told him, "I believe you are the Messiah, † the Son † of God, who comes into the world." †

JESUS SHARES THE SORROW OF DEATH

28 Having said this, she went back and called her sister Mary, saying in private, "The Teacher is here and is calling for you."

29 As soon as Mary heard this, she got up quickly and went to him. † 30 Jesus had not yet come into the village but was still in the place where Martha had met him. 31 The Jews who were with her in the house consoling her saw that Mary got up quickly and went out. They followed her, supposing that she was going to the tomb † to cry there.

32 As soon as Mary came to where Jesus was and saw him, she fell at his feet † and told him, "Lord, if you had been here, my brother would not have died! "

33 When Jesus saw her crying, and the Jews who had come with her crying, he was deeply moved † in his spirit † and troubled. 34 "Where have you put him? " he asked.
"Lord," they told him, "come and see."
35 Jesus wept. †
36 So the Jews said, "See how he loved † him! " 37 But some of them said, "Couldn't he who opened the blind man's eyes † also have kept this man from dying? "

THE SEVENTH SIGN: RAISING LAZARUS FROM THE DEAD

38 Then Jesus, deeply moved again, came to the tomb. It was a cave, and a stone was lying against it. † 39 "Remove the stone," Jesus said.
Martha, the dead man's sister, told him, "Lord, there is already a stench because he has been dead four days."
40 Jesus said to her, "Didn't I tell you that if you believed you would see the glory † of God? " † 41 So they removed the stone. Then Jesus raised his eyes and said, "Father, I thank † you that you heard me. † 42 I know that you always hear me, but because of the crowd standing here I said this, so that they may believe you sent † me." 43 After he said this, he shouted with a loud voice, "Lazarus, come out! " 44 The dead man came out bound hand and foot with linen strips and with his face wrapped in a cloth. Jesus said to them, "Unwrap him and let him go."

THE PLOT TO KILL JESUS

45 Therefore, many of the Jews who came to Mary and saw what he did believed in him. † 46 But some of them went to the Pharisees † and told them what Jesus had done.
47 So the chief priests and the Pharisees convened the Sanhedrin † and were saying, "What are we going to do since this man is doing many signs? 48 If we let him go on like this, everyone will believe in him, and the Romans † will come and take away both our place and our nation."
49 One of them, Caiaphas, † who was high priest † that year, said to them,
"You know nothing at all! 50 You're not considering that it is to your † advantage that one man should die for the people rather than the whole nation perish.” † 51 He did not say this on his own, but being high priest that year he prophesied that Jesus was going to die † for the nation, 52 and not for the nation only, but also to unite the scattered children † of God. 53 So from that day on they plotted to kill him. †

54 Jesus therefore no longer walked openly † among the Jews but departed from there to the countryside near the wilderness, † to a town called Ephraim, and he stayed there with the disciples.

55 Now the Jewish Passover † was near, and many went up to Jerusalem † from the country to purify themselves before the Passover. 56 They were looking for Jesus and asking one another as they stood in the temple: † “What do you think? He won’t come to the festival, † will he?” 57 The chief priests † and the Pharisees had given orders that if anyone knew where he was, he should report it so that they could arrest him.

11:23-25 Martha understood Jesus’s statement, Your brother will rise again, to refer to the future resurrection of the faithful dead. Such a resurrection was taught in the OT (e.g. Is 26:19) and was a common focus in the teaching of the rabbis and in the teaching of Jesus (e.g., Jn 6:39). Jesus, however, meant that Lazarus would be raised now. He said, I am the resurrection and the life, meaning that he himself is the source of resurrection and life. The Father has granted to the Son life in himself (5:26), and so “a time is coming when all who are in the graves will hear his voice and come out” (5:28–29). Raising Lazarus is a sign of Jesus’s authority to raise the dead. Lazarus heard his voice and came out of his grave. This is the fifth qualified “I am” statement in John. (See the note at 6:35 for further discussion.) 10:35 See “Biblical Inspiration and Inerrancy,” p. XXXI.

11:35 See “The Christian Worldview and the Overcoming of Evil,” p. 78.

11:44 John provides a brief description of how Lazarus was adorned for burial—bound hand and foot with linen strips and with his face wrapped in a cloth—so that his readers would know that Lazarus really was quite dead before Jesus called. The wrapping described is not attested elsewhere in Jewish texts. However, the cloth on the face was called soudarion; it was often worn around a living person's neck.

THE ANOINTING AT BETHANY

12 Six days before the Passover, Jesus came to Bethany † where Lazarus † was, the one Jesus had raised from the dead. † 2 So † they gave a dinner for him there; Martha † was serving them, and Lazarus was one of those reclining at the table with him. 3 Then Mary took a pound of perfume, pure and expensive nard, anointed Jesus's feet, and wiped his feet with her hair. † So the house was filled with the fragrance of the perfume.

4 Then one of his disciples, Judas Iscariot † (who was about to betray him), said, 5 "Why wasn't this perfume sold for three hundred denarii † † and given to the poor?" 6 He didn't say this because he cared about the poor but because he was a thief. † He was in charge of the money-bag and would steal part of what was put in it.

7 Jesus answered, "Leave her alone; she has kept it for the day of my burial. †
8 For you always have the poor with you, † but you do not always have me."

THE DECISION TO KILL LAZARUS

9 Then a large crowd of the Jews learned he was there. They came not only because of Jesus but also to see Lazarus, the one he had raised from the dead. † 10 But the chief priests had decided to kill Lazarus also, 11 because he was the reason many of the Jews were deserting them † and believing in Jesus.

THE TRIUMPHAL ENTRY

12 The † next day, when the large crowd that had come to the festival heard that Jesus was coming to Jerusalem, 13 they took palm branches † and went out to meet him. They kept shouting:

"Hosanna! †

Blessed is he who comes in the name of the Lord † † —the King of Israel!" †

14 Jesus found a young donkey † and sat on it, just as it is written:

15 Do not be afraid, † Daughter Zion. Look, your King is coming, sitting on a donkey's colt. † †
16 His disciples did not understand these things at first. However, when Jesus was glorified, then they remembered that these things had been written about him † and that they had done these things to him.
17 Meanwhile, the crowd, which had been with him when he called Lazarus out of the tomb † and raised him from the dead, continued to testify. † 18 This is also why the crowd met him, because they heard he had done this sign. 19 Then the Pharisees said to one another, "You see? You've accomplished nothing. Look, the world has gone after him! " †

JESUS PREDICTS HIS CRUCIFIXION

20 Now some Greeks were among those who went up to worship at the festival. 21 So they came to Philip, † who was from Bethsaida † in Galilee, † and requested of him, "Sir, † we want to see Jesus." 22 Philip went and told Andrew; † then Andrew and Philip went and told Jesus.
23 Jesus replied to them, "The hour has come for the Son of Man † to be glorified. 24 Truly I tell you, unless a grain of wheat † falls to the ground and dies, it remains by itself. But if it dies, it produces much fruit. † 25 The one who loves his life will lose it, † and the one who hates † his life † in this world will keep it for eternal life. 26 If anyone serves me, he must follow me. Where I am, there my servant † also will be. † If anyone serves me, the Father will honor † him.
27 "Now my soul is troubled. What should I say — Father, save me † from this hour? But that is why I came to this hour. 28 Father, glorify your name." † †
Then a voice † came from heaven: † "I have glorified it, and I will glorify it again." †
29 The crowd standing there heard it and said it was thunder. Others said, "An angel has spoken to him."

30 Jesus responded, “This voice came, not for me, but for you. † 31 Now is the judgment of this world. † Now the ruler of this world † will be cast out. † 32 As for me, if I am lifted up † from the earth I will draw all people to myself.” † 33 He said this to indicate what kind of death he was about to die. † 34 Then the crowd replied to him, “We have heard from the law that the Messiah will remain forever. † So how can you say, ‘The Son of Man † must be lifted up’? Who is this Son of Man? ” 35 Jesus answered, “The light will be with you only a little longer. † Walk while you have the light † so that darkness doesn’t overtake you. † The one who walks in darkness doesn’t know where he’s going. † 36 While you have the light, † believe in the light so that you may become children of light.” Jesus said this, then went away and hid from them. †

ISAIAH’S PROPHECIES FULFILLED

37 Even though he had performed so many signs in their presence, they did not believe in him. 38 This was to fulfill † the word of Isaiah † the prophet, who said: †

Lord, who has believed our message?
And to whom has the arm † of the Lord been revealed? † †

39 This is why they were unable to believe, because Isaiah also said:

40 He has blinded † their eyes and hardened their hearts, †
so that they would not see with their eyes or understand with their hearts, and turn, †
and I would heal them. † †

41 Isaiah said these things because † he saw his glory † and spoke about him.
42 Nevertheless, many did believe in him even among the rulers, † but because of the Pharisees they did not confess him, so that they would not be banned from the synagogue. 43 For they loved human praise † more than praise from God. †

A SUMMARY OF JESUS’S MISSION

44 Jesus cried out, “The one who believes in me † believes not in me, but in him who sent me. 45 And the one who sees me sees him † who sent me. 46 I have come as light into the world, so that everyone who believes in me would not remain in darkness. 47 If anyone hears my words and doesn’t keep † them, I do not judge him; for I did not come to judge the world † but to save the world. † 48 The one who rejects me † and doesn’t receive my sayings has this as his judge: † The word I have spoken will judge him on the last day. † 49 For I have not spoken on my own, but the Father † himself who sent me has given me a command to say everything I have said. 50 I know that his command is eternal life. † So the things that I speak, I speak just as the Father has told me.” †

12:3-8 Nard is a fragrant oil from northern India and quite expensive. Mary had, apparently, purchased it to anoint Jesus’s corpse. Buying funeral-related items in advance was not uncommon, but because of Mary’s lavish devotion to Jesus, she decided to anoint him with the oil, and wipe his feet with her hair, while he still lived. There may be royal overtones in Mary’s anointing of Jesus as his triumphal entry into Jerusalem followed. During it he is proclaimed the King of Israel (v. 13).

12:12-15 Jesus’s public fulfillment of the messianic prophecy in Zechariah 9:9 sparks an outbreak of messianic fervor in Jerusalem. The crowds line the streets and shout Hosanna!; this is an expression of praise and shows their regard for him as the King of Israel. They cite Psalm 118, which was often interpreted messianically.

12:20 Greeks commonly refers to non-Jews (e.g., Rm 1:16), rather than people from Greece. These people are Greek speaking Gentiles, perhaps converts to Judaism (v. 21).

12:42 Being banned from the synagogue was a severe form of religious and civil punishment. It carried the same ramifications that permanently losing a passport, driver's license, or even citizenship might today.

JESUS WASHES HIS DISCIPLES' FEET

13 Before the Passover Festival, Jesus knew that his hour had come to depart from this world to the Father. † Having loved his own who were in the world, † he loved them to the end.
2 Now when it was time for supper, the devil † had already put it into the heart of Judas, † Simon Iscariot's son, † to betray † him. 3 Jesus knew that the Father had given everything into his hands, † that he had come from God, † and that he was going back to God. † 4 So he got up from supper, laid aside his outer clothing, † took a towel, and tied it around himself. † 5 Next, he poured water into a basin and began to wash his disciples' feet and to dry them with the towel tied around him.
6 He came to Simon Peter, † who asked him, "Lord, are you going to wash my feet? "
7 Jesus answered him, "What I'm doing you don't realize now, but afterward you will understand." †
8 "You will never wash my feet," Peter said.
Jesus replied, "If I don't wash you, you have no part with me."
9 Simon Peter said to him, "Lord, not only my feet, but also my hands and my head."
10 "One who has bathed," Jesus told him, "doesn't need to wash anything except his feet, but he is completely clean. You are clean, but not all of you." 11 For he knew who would betray him. This is why he said, "Not all of you are clean."

THE MEANING OF FOOT WASHING

12 When Jesus had washed their feet and put on his outer clothing, he reclined again and said to them, "Do you know what I have done for you? 13 You call me Teacher and Lord — and you are speaking rightly, since that is what I am. 14 So if I, your Lord and Teacher, have washed your feet, you also ought to wash one another's feet. † 15 For I have given you an example, † that you also should do just as I have done for you.

16 "Truly I tell you, a servant is not greater than his master, † † and a messenger is not greater than the one who sent him. 17 If you know these things, you are blessed if you do them. †

18 "I'm not speaking about all of you; I know those I have chosen. † But the Scripture † must be fulfilled: † The one who eats my bread † has raised his heel against me. † † 19 I am telling you now before it happens, † so that when it does happen you will believe † that I am he. † 20 Truly I tell you, whoever receives anyone I send receives me, and the one who receives † me receives him who sent me."

JUDAS'S BETRAYAL PREDICTED

21 When † Jesus had said this, he was troubled in his spirit † and testified, † "Truly I tell you, one of you will betray me."

22 The disciples started looking at one another — uncertain which one he was speaking about. 23 One of his disciples, the one Jesus loved, † was reclining close beside Jesus. † 24 Simon Peter motioned to him to find out who it was he was talking about. 25 So he leaned back against Jesus and asked him, "Lord, who is it? "

26 Jesus replied, "He's the one I give the piece of bread to after I have dipped it." † When he had dipped the bread, † he gave it to Judas, Simon Iscariot's son. † 27 After Judas ate the piece of bread, Satan † entered him. So Jesus told him, "What you're doing, do quickly."

28 None of those reclining at the table knew why he said this to him. 29 Since Judas † kept the money-bag, some thought that Jesus was telling him, "Buy what we need for the festival," † or that he should give something to the poor. 30 After receiving the piece of bread, he immediately left. And it was night. †

THE NEW COMMAND

31 When † he had left, Jesus said, "Now the Son of Man † is glorified, and God is glorified † in him. † 32 If God is glorified in him, † God will also glorify him in himself and will glorify him at once. 33 Children, I am with you a little while longer. † You will look for me, and just as I told the Jews, so now I tell you: 'Where I am going, you cannot come.' †

34 "I give you a new command: Love one another. Just as I have loved you, you are also to love one another. 35 By this everyone will know that you are my disciples, if you love † one another."

PETER'S DENIALS PREDICTED

36 "Lord," Simon Peter said to him, "where are you going?"

Jesus answered, "Where I am going † you cannot follow me now, but you will follow later."

37 "Lord," Peter asked, "why can't I follow you now? I will lay down my life † for you." †

38 Jesus replied, "Will you lay down your life for me? Truly I tell you, a rooster will not crow until you have denied me three times.

13:2,27 John records the role Satan played in Judas's betrayal of Jesus. Though Judas's heart was clearly far from Christ (e.g., 12:6), and he regretted his betrayal later (Mt 27:3), Satan was a driving force behind Judas's decisions. Satan put it into the heart of Judas . . . to betray him (Jesus) and entered Judas, presumably to aid him in performing the task. Though Judas was personally guilty of rejecting the Messiah, Satan clearly gave the disappointed and disbelieving disciple a plan and the power to see it through.

13:4-5 By laying aside his outer clothing and tying a towel around himself, Jesus takes on the position, posture, and appearance of a house slave. He then washes his disciples' feet and dries them. Peter's surprise and discomfort at Jesus's actions (13:6,8) is more than the discomfort modern people might have at such personal contact. Peter objects because of his assumptions about the Messiah. Contrary to popular belief, the Messiah came to serve the world by giving his life. Jesus expects his disciples to serve one another too (v. 14). See also "Leadership and Biblical Ethics," p.1501.

THE WAY TO THE FATHER

14 “Don’t let your heart be troubled. † Believe † in God; † believe also in me. 2 In my Father’s house are many rooms; if not, I would have told you. I am going away † to prepare a place for you. 3 If I go away and prepare a place for you, I will come again † and take you to myself, so that where I am you may be also. † 4 You know the way to where I am going.” † † 5 “Lord,” Thomas † said, “we don’t know where you’re going. How can we know the way? ”
6 Jesus told him, “I am † the way, † the truth, and the life. No one comes to the Father except through me. 7 If you know me, you will also know † my Father. † From now on you do know him † and have seen him.”

JESUS REVEALS THE FATHER

8 “Lord,” said Philip, † “show us the Father, and that’s enough for us.”
9 Jesus said to him, “Have I been among you all this time and you do not know me, Philip? The one who has seen me has seen the Father. † How can you say, ‘Show us the Father’? 10 Don’t you believe that I am in the Father and the Father is in me? † The words I speak to you I do not speak on my own. † The Father who lives in me does his works. † 11 Believe me that I am in the Father and the Father is in me. Otherwise, believe † because of the works themselves. †

PRAYING IN JESUS’S NAME

12 “Truly I tell you, the one who believes in me † will also do the works that I do. And he will do even greater works than these, † because I am going to the Father. † 13 Whatever you ask in my name, I will do it so that the Father may be glorified † in the Son. † 14 If you ask me † anything in my name, † I will do it. † †

ANOTHER COUNSELOR PROMISED

15 “If you love me, you will keep † my commands. † 16 And I will ask the Father, and he will give you another Counselor † † to be with you forever.
17 He is the Spirit † of truth. † The world is unable to receive him because it doesn’t see him or know him. But you do know him, because he remains with you and will be † in you. †

THE FATHER, THE SON, AND THE HOLY SPIRIT

18 “I will not leave you as orphans; I am coming to you. 19 In a little while the world will no longer see me, † but you will see me. † Because I live, you will live † too. 20 On that day you will know that I am in my Father, † you are in me, and I am in you. 21 The one who has my commands and keeps them is the one who loves me. † And the one who loves me will be loved by my Father. †
I also will love him and will reveal myself to him.”

22 Judas † (not Iscariot) said to him, “Lord, how is it you’re going to reveal yourself to us and not to the world? ” †

23 Jesus answered, “If anyone loves me, he will keep my word. My Father will love him, and we will come to him and make our home with him. † 24 The one who doesn’t love me will not keep my words. The word that you hear is not mine but is from the Father who sent me. †

25 “I have spoken these things to you while I remain with you. 26 But the Counselor, the Holy Spirit, † whom the Father will send † in my name, will teach you all things † and remind you of everything I have told you. †

JESUS’S GIFT OF PEACE

27 “Peace I leave with you. My peace I give to you. I do not give to you as the world gives. Don’t let your heart be troubled or fearful. † 28 You have heard me tell you, ‘I am going away † and I am coming to you.’ If you loved me, you would rejoice that I am going to the Father, † because the Father is greater than
I. † 29 I have told you now before it happens † so that when it does happen you may believe. 30 I will not talk with you much longer, because the ruler of the world † is coming. He has no power over me. † † 31 On the contrary, so that the world may know that I love the Father, I do as the Father commanded me.

“Get up; let’s leave this place.

14:13 The disciples would have understood Jesus’s claim—Whatever you ask in my name, I will do it—in an OT context. Asking in God’s name was not a religious formula that guaranteed a response from God. To pray in God’s name was to seek God’s will, not one’s own. The one who prays in Jesus’s name submits to the will of God.

14:16 John describes the Holy Spirit as Counselor because, after Jesus departs the earth, the Spirit will remain with the disciples until Jesus’s return (v. 18). The indwelling Spirit (v. 17) will teach them all things and remind them of the teaching of Jesus (v. 26). Jesus describes the work of the Spirit in some detail in 16:5-15.

THE VINE AND THE BRANCHES

15 “I am † the true vine, and my Father is the gardener. 2 Every branch in me that does not produce fruit he removes, † and he prunes every branch that produces fruit so that it will produce more fruit. 3 You are already clean † because of the word I have spoken to you. 4 Remain in me, and I in you.
Just as a branch is unable to produce fruit by itself unless it remains on the vine, neither can you unless you remain in me. † 5 I am the vine; † you are the branches. The one who remains in me and I in him produces much fruit, † because you can do nothing without me. 6 If anyone does not remain in me, he is thrown aside † like a branch and he withers. They gather them, throw them into the fire, † and they are burned. † 7 If you remain in me and my words remain in you, ask whatever you want and it will be done for you. † 8 My Father is glorified † by this: that you produce much fruit and prove to be † my disciples.

CHRISTLIKE LOVE

9 "As the Father has loved me, I have also loved you. Remain in my love. †
10 If you keep my commands you will remain in my love, just as I have kept my Father's commands and remain in his love. †
11 "I have told you these things so that my joy may be in you and your joy may be complete. †
12 "This is my command: Love one another as I have loved † you. 13 No one has greater love than this: to lay down his life † for his friends. 14 You are my friends if you do what I command you. 15 I do not call you servants anymore, because a servant doesn't know what his master † † is doing. I have called you friends, because I have made known to you everything I have heard from my Father. 16 You did not choose me, but I chose you. † I appointed you to go and produce fruit and that your fruit should remain, so that whatever you ask † the Father in my name, † he will give you. †
17 "This is what I command you: Love one another.

PERSECUTIONS PREDICTED

18 "If the world hates † you, understand that it hated me before it hated you.
19 If you were of the world, the world would love you as its own. However, because you are not of the world, but I have chosen † you out of it, the world hates you. 20 Remember the word I spoke to you: 'A servant is not greater than his master.' † If they persecuted me, they will also persecute you. If they kept my word, † they will also keep yours. 21 But they will do all these things to you on account of my name, † because they don't know † the one who sent me.
22 If I had not come and spoken to them, they would not be guilty of sin. † Now they have no excuse for their sin. 23 The one who hates me also hates my Father. † 24 If I had not done the works † among them that no one else has done, † they would not have sin. † Now they have seen and hated both me and my Father. 25 But this happened so that the statement written in their law might be fulfilled: † They hated me for no reason. † †

THE COUNSELOR'S MINISTRY

26 "When the Counselor † comes, the one I will send to you from the Father † — the Spirit of truth † who proceeds from the Father — he will testify about me. 27 You also will testify, † because you have been with me from the beginning.

15:1-6 Jesus uses an agricultural metaphor to describe his relationship to his disciples: I am the vine; you are the branches. Vine imagery was common in the ancient world, with the vine or vineyard often symbolizing Israel. The image, however, normally stressed Israel's failure to produce fruit. Thus, Jesus's claim to be the true vine suggests he will produce the fruit Israel has not. This is the seventh qualified "I am" statement in John. (See the note at 6:35 for further discussion.) The branches will grow only when attached to the vine. Additionally, God the Father is the farmer (Gk geōrgos), who prunes the branches to make them more fruitful. The language of fire and burning, then, looks back to Ezekiel, where a fruitless vine is good for nothing but the fire (Ezk 15:1-8)—an image of divine judgment.

15:26 See the note at 14:15.

16 "I have told you these things to keep you from stumbling. 2 They will ban you from the synagogues. † In fact, a time is coming when anyone who kills you will think he is offering service † to God. 3 They will do these things because they haven't known † the Father or me. 4 But I have told you these things so that when their time † comes you will remember † I told them to you. I didn't tell you these things from the beginning, because I was with you. 5 But now I am going away † to him who sent me, and not one of you asks me, 'Where are you going?' † 6 Yet, because I have spoken these things to you, sorrow has filled your heart. 7 Nevertheless, I am telling you the truth. † It is for your benefit that I go away, because if I don't go away the Counselor will not come to you. If I go, I will send him to you. † 8 When he comes, he will convict the world about sin, righteousness, and judgment: 9 About sin, because they do not believe in me; 10 about righteousness, because I am going to the Father † and you will no longer see me; 11 and about judgment, † because the ruler of this world † has been judged. †

12 "I still have many things to tell you, but you can't bear them now. † 13 When the Spirit of truth † comes, he will guide you into all the truth. † For he will not speak on his own, but he will speak whatever he hears. He will also declare to you what is to come. 14 He will glorify me, because he will take from what is mine and declare it to you. 15 Everything the Father † has is mine. † This is why I told you that he takes from what is mine and will declare it to you. †

SORROW TURNED TO JOY

16 "A little while † and you will no longer see me; † again a little while and you will see me." †

17 Then some of his disciples said to one another, "What is this he's telling us: 'A little while and you will not see me; again a little while and you will see me' and, 'because I am going to the Father' † ?" 18 They said, "What is this he is saying, † 'A little while'? We don't know what he's talking about."

19 Jesus knew they wanted to ask him, and so he said to them, "Are you asking one another about what I said, 'A little while and you will not see me; again a little while and you will see me'? 20 Truly I tell you, you will weep and mourn, † but the world will rejoice. You will become sorrowful, † but your sorrow will turn to joy. 21 When a woman is in labor, she has pain † because her time has come. But when she has given birth to a child, † she no longer remembers the suffering because of the joy that a person has been born into the world. 22 So you also have sorrow † now. But I will see you again. Your hearts will rejoice, † and no one will take away your joy from you. †

23 "In that day you will not ask me anything. Truly I tell you, anything you ask the Father in my name, he will give you. † 24 Until now you have asked for nothing in my name. † Ask and you will receive, † so that your joy may be complete. †

JESUS THE VICTOR

25 "I have spoken these things to you in figures of speech. A time is coming when I will no longer speak to you in figures, but I will tell you plainly about the Father. 26 On that day you will ask † in my name, and † I am not telling you that I will ask the Father on your behalf. 27 For the Father himself loves you, because you have loved † me and have believed that I came from God. † † 28 I came from the Father and have come into the world. Again, I am leaving the world and going to the Father." †

29 His disciples said, "Look, now you're speaking plainly and not using any figurative language. 30 Now we know that you know everything † and don't need anyone to question you. By this we believe that you came from God." †

31 Jesus responded to them, "Do you now believe? 32 Indeed, an hour is coming, and has come, † when each of you will be scattered to his own home, and you will leave me alone. Yet I am not alone, because the Father is with me. † 33 I have told you these things so that in me you may have peace. You will have suffering in this world. Be courageous! I have conquered the world."

16:13 See "Sources for Ethics," p. 1371.

16:21 A woman in the labor of childbirth is an image used in the OT for the coming of salvation at the end times. This day of the Lord is "a time of distress" (Dn 12:1; Zph 1:14-15). The image evokes the idea that great pain will precede the arrival of joy, but once joy has arrived, the temporary suffering is quickly forgotten.

JESUS PRAYS FOR HIMSELF

17 Jesus spoke these things, looked up to heaven, and said: “Father, the hour has come. Glorify your Son so that the Son † may glorify you, † 2 since you gave him authority over all flesh, † † so that he may give eternal life † to everyone you have given him. †

EQUALITY OF THE RACES AND RACIAL RECONCILIATION

In civil rights activist James Weldon Johnson’s musical rendition, “Lift Every Voice and Sing,” he states, “We have come over a way that with tears have been watered, we have come, treading our path through the blood of the slaughtered, out from the gloomy past, till now we stand at last where the white gleam of our bright star is cast” (Worship and Rejoice, 729). Today talk of race, a word referring to ethnic distinctions associated with culture and skin color, is a treacherous matter. But in the beginning, it was out of one blood that God created all peoples to dwell on the face of the earth (Ac 17:26), and in the Bible we see his intentions for humanity: “A vast multitude from every nation, tribe, people, and language, which no one could number, [was] standing before the throne and before the Lamb. They were clothed in white robes with palm branches in their hands” (Rv 7:9). All humans are descended from Adam and Eve (cp. Gn 3:20), and Jesus died so that all who would accept him by faith could spend eternity in his presence.

Yet in spite of these biblical realties, the enslavement of peoples from Africa survived the two great religious movements in American history—the first and second Great Awakenings. Western Christianity, in fact, still struggles with conscienceless power and powerless conscience as Christians sit around their Communion tables and worship in segregated church contexts. In adopting racist attitudes and remaining in separate camps as it were, humanity, who was made in the image of God and after God’s likeness (Gn 1:26) has not only attempted to make God in its own image (that is, prone to categorize by appearances) but has also tried to detheologize the divine DNA within mankind.

The establishment of racial hierarchy has led to apartheid, anti-Semitism, and rampant racism. History records educational exclusion and societal separation, resulting in bloodstained streets. The sacrificial blood of Christ shed at Calvary, however, was offered to cleanse humanity from sin, thus enabling us to move even beyond racial reconciliation to Christo-conciliation—fulfilling the prayer of Jesus in Gethsemane. He wanted his followers to “be one” (Jn 17:11). “As you, Father, are in me and I am in you, may they also be in us,” he said (Jn 17:21).

Christo-conciliation, then, is better than mere racial reconciliation. Because of the death of the Son of God, Jesus Christ, Christians from all backgrounds are not just members of one biological family; we are one spiritual family, coheirs with Christ. South African Archbishop Desmond Tutu places strong emphasis on forgiveness with regard to this matter: “Forgiving means abandoning your right to pay back the perpetrator in his own coin” (No Future Without Forgiveness, 219). African theologian Allan Aubrey Boesak contends that forgiveness is “taking the sting out of memory” (Radical Reconciliation, 138).

CHRIST-CENTERED RECONCILIATION

If we are to move beyond superficial conversation and onward to true healing with regard to this topic, three points must be considered. First, the evangelical church too often seems more influenced by sociology than by Scripture. Second, the evangelical church must take seriously the oneness of the human race. Third, that the gospel was intended for everyone is clearly understood, but the evangelical church tends to handle the gospel differently as it addresses different people groups. That needs to change.

In Dr. James Earl Massey's autobiography, Aspects of my Pilgrimage, he recounts being a delegate to the World Congress on Evangelism in 1966 in Berlin, Germany. The delegates represented nations from the farthest corners of the world. At that time, the Congress on evangelism was the largest ecumenical and evangelical gathering of the church since Pentecost in AD 33. The theme of the Congress was "One Race, One Gospel, One Task." But Dr. Massey and other African American delegates detected that there was an obvious omission in the dialogue—the topic of race. Dr. Carl F. H. Henry confessed to the African American delegates that the aspect of race, which was a part of the theme, had been taken for granted. He proceeded to apologize for this omission and asked the African American delegates to prepare a summary statement on "One Race."

Evangelicals must not merely assume the equality of the people groups; this truth must be embraced and proclaimed. Evangelicals must think seriously about the topic, drawing on Acts 17:26, and pointing toward the eschatological reality of the beloved community made up of different tribes and nations and tongues and peoples. We all descend from one couple and as Christians, we have been washed in the blood of Jesus Christ.

Dr. William Holmes Borders, an African American pastor of the Wheat Street Baptist Church in Atlanta, Georgia, once told this story: [A Negro] had been denied an education, political and economic opportunity, and was forced to beg for food. He rang the front doorbell of a southern mansion and the owner of the house answered. "I'm hungry," the Negro said. "Go around to the back door," he was told. Food was prepared, and the owner of the house brought it to the Negro. "First we will bless the food," the white man said. "Now you repeat after me, Our Father . . ." The Negro said, "Your Father . . ." "Why do you insist upon saying, 'Your Father,' when I keep telling you to say, "'Our Father'?" the white man asked. The Negro beggar replied, "Well, boss, if I say, 'Our Father,' that would make you and me brothers, and I'm 'fraid the Lord wouldn't like it, you makin' your brother come to the back porch to get a piece of bread." (James W. English, Handyman of the Lord, pp. 33-34) CONCLUSION

The apostle Paul reminds us that all persons have come into being out of one blood. That one blood makes each individual equal within the human race. It is the blood of Christ shed for the forgiveness of the sins of humanity, however, that makes believing humanity brothers and sisters. May we move forward to embrace the divine design.

3 This is eternal life: that they may know you, the only † true † God, and the one you have sent † — Jesus Christ. † 4 I have glorified you on the earth by completing the work you gave me to do. 5 Now, Father, † glorify me in your presence with that glory † I had with you before the world existed. †

JESUS PRAYS FOR HIS DISCIPLES

6 "I have revealed your name † to the people you gave me † from the world. †
They were yours, you gave them to me, † and they have kept your word. †

7 Now they know that everything you have given me is from you, 8 because I have given them the words you gave me. † They have received them and have known for certain that I came from you. † They have believed that you sent me.
9 “I pray † for them. I am not praying for the world but for those you have given me, † because they are yours. 10 Everything I have is yours, and everything you have is mine, † and I am glorified in them. 11 I am no longer in the world, but they are in the world, and I am coming to you. † Holy † Father, protect † them by your name † that you have given me, so that they may be one † as we are † one. 12 While I was with them, I was protecting them by your name that you have given me. I guarded † them and not one of them is lost, except the son of destruction, † so that the Scripture † may be fulfilled. † 13 Now I am coming to you, and I speak these things in the world so that they may have my joy completed in them. 14 I have given them your word. The world hated † them because they are not of the world, † just as I am not of the world. † 15 I am not praying that you take them out of the world but that you protect them from the evil one. † 16 They are not of the world, just as I am not of the world. † 17 Sanctify † them by the truth; † your word is truth. 18 As you sent me into the world, † I also have sent them into the world. 19 I sanctify myself for them, so that they also may be sanctified by the truth.

JESUS PRAYS FOR ALL BELIEVERS

20 “I pray not only for these, but also for those who believe in me through their word. 21 May they all be one, † as you, Father, are in me and I am in you. † May they also be † in us, so that the world may believe you sent me. 22 I have given them the glory † you have given me, so that they may be one as we are one. 23 I am in them and you are in me, † so that they may be made completely one, that the world may know you have sent me and have loved † them as you have loved me. †

24 “Father, I want those you have given me to be with me where I am, † so that they will see my glory, which you have given me because you loved me before the world's foundation. 25 Righteous Father, the world has not known you.

However, I have known you, † and they have known that you sent me. 26 I made your name † known to them and will continue to make it known, so that the love you have loved me with may be in them and I may be in them." †

17:3 Life after death is related to the knowledge of God (e.g., Jr 31:34). The future day to come is envisaged as a time when "the land will be as full of the knowledge of the LORD as the sea is filled with water" (Is 11:9; cp. Hab 2:14). Thus, eternal life is not simply everlasting existence; it's an existence in relationship with God and Jesus Christ.

17:5 This is another claim of the eternal preexistence of Jesus (e.g., 1:1; 8:58). Jesus prays to the Father but speaks of his glory with him before the world existed.

17:6,11 As faithful Jews, the disciples had tremendous reverence for God's personal name. It represented God's nature, his covenants, his glory, and his honor (e.g., Ex 3:14-15; Is 42:8; 48:9-11). Jesus tells his disciples, however, that it is he who has revealed God's name to them.

JESUS BETRAYED

18 After † Jesus had said these things, he went out with his disciples across the Kidron Valley, where there was a garden, and he and his disciples went into it. 2 Judas, † who betrayed † him, also knew the place, because Jesus often met there with his disciples. 3 So Judas took a company of soldiers and some officials † from the chief priests and the Pharisees † and came there with lanterns, torches, and weapons.

4 Then Jesus, knowing everything that was about to happen to him, † went out and said to them, "Who is it that you're seeking? "

5 "Jesus of Nazareth," they answered.

"I am he," † Jesus told them.

Judas, who betrayed him, was also standing with them. 6 When Jesus told them, “I am he,” they stepped back and fell to the ground.
7 Then he asked them again, “Who is it that you’re seeking? ”
“Jesus of Nazareth,” they said.
8 “I told you I am he,” Jesus replied. “So if you’re looking for me, let these men go.” 9 This was to fulfill † the words he had said: “I have not lost one of those you have given me.” †
10 Then Simon † Peter, † who had a sword, † drew it, struck the high priest’s † servant, and cut off his right ear. (The servant’s name was Malchus.)
11 At that, Jesus said to Peter, “Put your sword away! Am I not to drink the cup † the Father has given me? ”

JESUS ARRESTED AND TAKEN TO ANNAS

12 Then the company of soldiers, the commander, and the Jewish officials arrested Jesus and tied him up. 13 First they led him to Annas, † since he was the father-in-law of Caiaphas, † who was high priest that year. 14 Caiaphas was the one who had advised the Jews that it would be better for one man to die for the people. †

PETER DENIES JESUS

15 Simon Peter † was following Jesus, as was another disciple. That disciple was an acquaintance of the high priest; so he went with Jesus into the high priest’s courtyard. 16 But Peter remained standing outside by the door. So the other disciple, the one known to the high priest, went out and spoke to the girl who was the doorkeeper and brought Peter in.
17 Then the servant girl who was the doorkeeper said to Peter, “You aren’t one of this man’s disciples too, are you? ”
“I am not.” he said. 18 Now the servants and the officials had made a charcoal fire, because it was cold. They were standing there warming themselves, and Peter was standing with them, warming himself.

JESUS BEFORE ANNAS

19 The high priest † questioned Jesus about his disciples and about his teaching.

20 “I have spoken openly to the world,” Jesus answered him. “I have always taught in the synagogue † and in the temple, † where all the Jews congregate, and I haven’t spoken anything in secret. 21 Why do you question me? Question those who heard what I told them. Look, they know what I said.”
22 When he had said these things, one of the officials standing by slapped Jesus, saying, “Is this the way you answer the high priest? ” 23 “If I have spoken wrongly,” Jesus answered him, “give evidence † about the wrong; but if rightly, † why do you hit me? ” 24 Then † Annas † sent him bound to Caiaphas the high priest.

PETER DENIES JESUS TWICE MORE

25 Now Simon Peter was standing and warming himself. They said to him, “You aren’t one of his disciples too, are you? ”
He denied it and said, “I am not.”
26 One of the high priest’s servants, a relative of the man whose ear Peter had cut off, said, “Didn’t I see you with him in the garden? ” 27 Peter denied it again.
Immediately a rooster crowed. †

JESUS BEFORE PILATE

28 Then † they led Jesus from Caiaphas to the governor’s headquarters. † It was early morning. They did not enter the headquarters themselves; otherwise they would be defiled and unable to eat the Passover.
29 So Pilate † came out to them and said, “What charge † do you bring against this man? ” 30 They answered him, “If this man weren’t a criminal, † we wouldn’t have handed him over to you.”
31 Pilate told them, “You take him and judge him according to your law.”
“It’s not legal for us to put anyone to death,” the Jews declared. 32 They said this so that Jesus’s words might be fulfilled indicating what kind of death he was going to die. † 33 Then Pilate went back into the headquarters, summoned Jesus, and said to him, “Are you the King of the Jews? ” † 34 Jesus answered, “Are you asking this on your own, or have others told you about me? ”

35 “I’m not a Jew, am I? ” Pilate replied. “Your own nation and the chief priests handed you over to me. What have you done? ”

36 “My kingdom † is not of this world,” said Jesus. “If my kingdom were of this world, † my servants † would fight, so that I wouldn’t be handed over to the Jews. But as it is, † my kingdom is not from here.” †

37 “You are a king then? ” Pilate asked.

“You say that I’m a king,” Jesus replied. “I was born for this, and I have come into the world † for this: to testify † to the truth. † Everyone who is of the truth listens to my voice.”

38 “What is truth? ” said Pilate.

JESUS OR BARABBAS

After he had said this, he went out to the Jews again and told them, “I find no grounds † for charging him. 39 You † have a custom that I release one prisoner to you at the Passover. So, do you want me to release to you the King of the Jews? ”

40 They shouted back, “Not this man, but Barabbas! ” † Now Barabbas was a revolutionary. † †

18:6 Falling to the ground is a reaction to divine revelation. It indicates powerlessness in the presence of God.

18:10 Peter’s sword (Gk macharia) was probably one of the small swords, or long knives, the disciples carried during their travels for their utility (e.g., Lk 22:35-38). Jesus clearly disapproves of Peter’s rash and violent action (v. 11) and miraculously undoes the servant Malchus’s injury—even as he is being arrested (Lk 22:51).

18:13 Annas had been the high priest from AD 6 until 15 and was still consulted in important matters because of his age and experience.

18:38-40 The custom of releasing a prisoner on a holy day, or in the midst of a festival, was common in ancient Rome. Unlike modern governmental pardons, it had little to do with guilt or innocence. The practice was intended to placate the nations Rome had occupied. See also 8:31-32 and "Postmodernism," p. 779.

JESUS FLOGGED AND MOCKED

19 Then Pilate took Jesus and had him flogged. 2 The soldiers also twisted together a crown † of thorns, put it on his head, and clothed him in a purple robe. 3 And they kept coming up to him † and saying, "Hail, King of the Jews! " and were slapping his face.
4 Pilate went outside again and said to them, "Look, I'm bringing him out to you to let you know I find no grounds † for charging him." 5 Then Jesus came out wearing the crown of thorns and the purple robe. † Pilate said to them, "Here is the man! " †

PILATE SENTENCES JESUS TO DEATH

6 When the chief priests and the temple servants † saw him, they shouted, "Crucify! Crucify! " Pilate responded, "Take him and crucify him yourselves, since I find no grounds for charging him."
7 "We have a law," the Jews replied to him, "and according to that law he ought to die, † because he made himself the Son of God." † 8 When Pilate heard this statement, he was more afraid than ever. 9 He went back into the headquarters † and asked Jesus, "Where are you from? " But Jesus did not give him an answer. † 10 So Pilate said to him, "Do you refuse to speak to me? Don't you know that I have the authority to release you and the authority to crucify you? "
11 "You would have no authority over me at all," Jesus answered him, "if it hadn't been given you from above. This is why the one who handed me over to you has the greater sin." † 12 From that moment Pilate kept trying † to release him. But the Jews shouted, "If you release this man, you are not Caesar's friend. Anyone who makes himself a king opposes Caesar! "

13 When Pilate heard these words, he brought Jesus outside. He sat down on the judge's seat in a place called the Stone Pavement (but in Aramaic, † Gabbatha).
14 It was the preparation day for the Passover, and it was about noon. † Then he told the Jews, "Here is your king! "
15 They shouted, "Take him away! Take him away! Crucify him! "
Pilate said to them, "Should I crucify your king? "
"We have no king but Caesar! " the chief priests answered.
16 Then he handed him over to be crucified.

THE CRUCIFIXION

Then they took Jesus away. † 17 Carrying † the cross by himself, † he went out to what is called Place of the Skull, which in Aramaic is called Golgotha.
18 There they crucified him and two others with him, one on either side, with Jesus in the middle. 19 Pilate also had a sign made and put on the cross. It said: JESUS OF NAZARETH, THE KING OF THE JEWS. 20 Many of the Jews read this sign, because the place where Jesus was crucified was near the city, † and it was written in Aramaic, Latin, and Greek. 21 So the chief priests of the Jews said to Pilate, "Don't write, 'The King of the Jews,' † but that he said, 'I am the King of the Jews.' "
22 Pilate replied, "What I have written, I have written."
23 When the soldiers crucified Jesus, they took his clothes and divided them into four parts, a part for each soldier. They also took the tunic, which was seamless, woven in one piece from the top. 24 So they said to one another, "Let's not tear it, but cast lots for it, to see who gets it." This happened that the Scripture † might be fulfilled † that says: They divided my clothes among themselves, and they cast lots for my clothing. † † This is what the soldiers did.

JESUS'S PROVISION FOR HIS MOTHER

25 Standing † by the cross † of Jesus were his mother, † his mother's sister, Mary the wife of Clopas, and Mary Magdalene. † 26 When Jesus saw his mother and the disciple he loved † standing there, he said to his mother, "Woman, here is your son." 27 Then he said to the disciple, "Here is your mother." And from that hour the disciple took her into his home.

THE FINISHED WORK OF JESUS

THE FINISHED WORK OF JESUS

28 After † this, when Jesus knew that everything was now finished † that the Scripture might be fulfilled, he said, “I’m thirsty.” † 29 A jar full of sour wine was sitting there; so they fixed a sponge full of sour wine on a hyssop branch † and held it up to his mouth.
30 When Jesus had received the sour wine, he said, “It is finished.” † Then bowing his head, he gave up his spirit. †

JESUS’S SIDE PIERCED

31 Since it was the preparation day, † the Jews did not want the bodies † to remain on the cross † on the Sabbath † (for that Sabbath was a special † day).
They requested that Pilate have the men’s legs broken and that their bodies be taken away. † 32 So the soldiers came and broke the legs of the first man and of the other one who had been crucified with him. 33 When they came to Jesus, they did not break his legs since they saw that he was already dead. † 34 But one of the soldiers pierced † his side † with a spear, and at once blood and water † came out. 35 He who saw this has testified † so that you also may believe. His testimony is true, and he knows he is telling the truth. † 36 For these things happened so that the Scripture would be fulfilled: † Not one of his bones will be broken. † † 37 Also, another Scripture says: They will look at the one they pierced. † †

JESUS’S BURIAL

38 After † this, Joseph of Arimathea, who was a disciple of Jesus — but secretly because of his fear of the Jews — asked Pilate that he might remove Jesus’s body. † Pilate gave him permission; so he came and took his body away.
39 Nicodemus † (who had previously come to him at night) also came, bringing a mixture of about seventy-five pounds † of myrrh and aloes. 40 They took Jesus’s body † and wrapped it in linen cloths † with the fragrant spices, according to the burial † custom of the Jews. 41 There was a garden in the place where he was crucified. A new tomb was in the garden; no one had yet been placed in it. 42 They placed Jesus there because of the Jewish day of preparation and since the tomb was nearby.

19:2-3 Roman soldiers in Jerusalem liked to mock condemned prisoners, especially revolutionaries, by dressing them as kings and offering them false homage. Since Jesus had been charged as King of the Jews, he was an easy target of such mockery.

19:8 Though it may have been due to superstition, Pilate's fear was most likely political. Pilate was quickly becoming trapped between Roman law, respecting the religious customs of the Jews, and keeping the peace. He questioned Jesus, apparently attempting to find some sort of solution to his conundrum (vv. 9-10). Pilate quickly determined that finding a way to release Jesus would be the most politically expedient course (v. 12). When that failed, he conceded and ordered his execution (v. 16).

19:19-22 It was not uncommon for a crucifixion victim's crime to be posted above his head. Roman historian Seutonius said the purpose of this practice was to discourage similar crimes. Pilate, however, words his judgment in a way that is sure to anger the Jewish leadership—probably since they forced his hand in executing Jesus.

19:31 The preparation day was the day prior to the Sabbath; it began on Friday at sunset. Preparations were made early in order to avoid work on the Sabbath. The Jews believed that the bodies of hanged or crucified criminals left on a tree overnight would defile the land (Dt 21:22-23).

THE EMPTY TOMB

20 On † the first day of the week † Mary Magdalene † came to the tomb † early, while it was still dark. She saw that the stone † had been removed from the tomb. 2 So she went running to Simon Peter † and to the other disciple, the one Jesus loved, and said to them, "They've taken the Lord out of the tomb, † and we don't know where they've put him! "

3 At that, Peter and the other disciple went out, heading for the tomb. 4 The two were running together, but the other disciple outran Peter and got to the tomb first. [5] Stooping down, he saw the linen cloths † lying there, but he did not go in. [6] Then, following him, Simon Peter also came. He entered the tomb and saw the linen cloths lying there. [7] The wrapping † that had been on his head was not lying with the linen cloths † but was folded up in a separate place by itself. [8] The other disciple, who had reached the tomb first, then also went in, saw, and believed. [9] For they did not yet understand the Scripture † that he must rise † from the dead. † [10] Then the disciples returned to the place where they were staying.

MARY MAGDALENE SEES THE RISEN LORD

[11] But † Mary stood outside the tomb, † crying. As she was crying, she stooped to look into the tomb. [12] She saw two angels † in white sitting where Jesus's body † had been lying, one at the head and the other at the feet. [13] They said to her, "Woman, why are you crying? "

"Because they've taken away my Lord," † she told them, "and I don't know where they've put him."

[14] Having said this, she turned around and saw Jesus standing there, but she did not know it was Jesus. † [15] "Woman," Jesus said to her, "why are you crying? Who is it that you're seeking? "

Supposing he was the gardener, she replied, "Sir, if you've carried him away, tell me where you've put him, and I will take him away."

[16] Jesus said to her, "Mary."

Turning around, she said to him in Aramaic, † "Rabboni! " — which means "Teacher." †

[17] "Don't cling to me," Jesus told her, "since I have not yet ascended † to the Father. † But go to my brothers † and tell them that I am ascending to my Father † and your Father, to my God † and your God."

[18] Mary Magdalene went and announced to the disciples, "I have seen the Lord! " † And she told them what † he had said to her.

THE DISCIPLES COMMISSIONED

19 When it was evening of that first day of the week, † the disciples were gathered together with the doors locked because they feared the Jews. Jesus came, stood among them, and said to them, "Peace be with you." † 20 Having said this, he showed them his hands and his side. † So the disciples rejoiced when they saw the Lord.
21 Jesus said to them again, "Peace to you. As the Father has sent me, † I also send you." † 22 After saying this, he breathed on them † and said, † "Receive the Holy Spirit. † 23 If you forgive the sins of any, they are forgiven them; if you retain the sins of any, they are retained." †

THOMAS SEES AND BELIEVES

24 But Thomas † (called "Twin" †), one of the Twelve, was not with them when Jesus came. 25 So the other disciples were telling him, "We've seen the Lord! "
But he said to them, "If I don't see the mark of the nails in his hands, put my finger into the mark of the nails, † and put my hand into his side, † I will never believe." †
26 A week later his disciples were indoors again, and Thomas was with them.
Even though the doors were locked, Jesus came and stood among them and said,
"Peace be with you."
27 Then he said to Thomas, "Put your finger here and look at my hands. Reach out your hand and put it into my side. Don't be faithless, but believe." † 28 Thomas responded to him, "My Lord and my God! " 29 Jesus said, "Because you have seen me, you have believed. † Blessed are those who have not seen and yet believe." †

THE PURPOSE OF THIS GOSPEL

30 Jesus performed many other signs † in the presence of his disciples that are not written † in this book. † 31 But these are written so that you may believe that Jesus is the Messiah, † the Son † of God, † † and that by believing you may have life in his name. †

20:21 John's Great Commission is the shortest in the four Gospels, but it is no less clear (cp. Mt 28:19-20; Mk 16:15-16; Lk 24:46-49). As the Father . . . sent Jesus into the world to save humanity from sin, so Jesus sends his disciples out to proclaim forgiveness of sins in Jesus's name.

20:22 Jesus most likely breathed on the disciples as a symbolic gesture pointing to the coming of the Holy Spirit (Ac 2:1-4).

20:28 Thomas's declaration is a major proclamation of the deity of Jesus. It would take an extraordinary level of conviction for one Jewish man to declare another to be Lord and God. Strikingly, Jesus does not deny the identification.

JESUS'S THIRD APPEARANCE TO THE DISCIPLES

21 After this, Jesus revealed † himself again to his disciples by the Sea of Tiberias. † He revealed himself in this way: 2 Simon Peter, † Thomas † (called "Twin" †), Nathanael † from Cana of Galilee, † Zebedee's † sons, and two others of his disciples were together.
3 "I'm going fishing," Simon Peter said to them.
"We're coming with you," they told him. They went out and got into the boat, but that night they caught nothing. † 4 When daybreak came, Jesus stood on the shore, but the disciples did not know it was Jesus. † 5 "Friends," † Jesus called to them, "you don't have any fish, do you?"
"No," they answered.
6 "Cast the net on the right side of the boat," he told them, "and you'll find some." So they did, † and they were unable to haul it in because of the large number of fish. [7] The disciple, the one Jesus loved, said to Peter, “It is the Lord! ” †

When Simon Peter heard that it was the Lord, he tied his outer clothing around him (for he had taken it off) and plunged into the sea. [8] Since they were not far from land (about a hundred yards † † away), the other disciples came in the boat, † dragging the net full of fish.
[9] When they got out on land, they saw a charcoal fire there, with fish lying on it, and bread. [10] “Bring some of the fish you’ve just caught,” Jesus told them. [11] So Simon Peter climbed up and hauled the net ashore, full of large fish — 153 of them. Even though there were so many, the net was not torn. †
[12] “Come and have breakfast,” Jesus told them. None of the disciples dared ask him, “Who are you? ” because they knew it was the Lord. [13] Jesus came, took the bread, and gave it to them. He did the same with the fish. [14] This was now the third time † Jesus appeared † † to the disciples after he was raised from the dead.

JESUS’S THREEFOLD RESTORATION OF PETER

[15] When they had eaten breakfast, Jesus asked Simon Peter, “Simon, son of John, † do you love me more than these? ”
“Yes, Lord,” he said to him, “you know that I love you.”
“Feed † my lambs,” † he told him. [16] A second time he asked him, “Simon, son of John, do you love † me? ” †
“Yes, Lord,” he said to him, “you know that I love you.”
“Shepherd † my sheep,” † he told him.
[17] He asked him the third time, “Simon, son of John, do you love † me? ”
Peter was grieved † that he asked him the third time, “Do you love me? ” He said, “Lord, you know everything; † you know that I love you.”
“Feed † my sheep,” Jesus said. [18] “Truly I tell you, † when you were younger, you would tie your belt and walk wherever you wanted. But when you grow old, you will stretch out your hands and someone else will tie you and carry you where you don’t want to go.” [19] He said this to indicate by what kind of death † Peter would glorify God. † After saying this, he told him, “Follow me.” †

CORRECTING A FALSE REPORT

20 So Peter turned around and saw the disciple Jesus loved † following them, the one who had leaned back against Jesus at the supper and asked, “Lord, who is the one that’s going to betray you?” † 21 When Peter saw him, he said to Jesus, “Lord, what about him?”

22 “If I want him to remain until I come,” † Jesus answered, “what is that to you? As for you, follow me.”

23 So this rumor † spread to the brothers and sisters † that this disciple would not die. † Yet Jesus did not tell him that he would not die, but, “If I want him to remain until I come, what is that to you?”

EPILOGUE

24 This is the disciple who testifies to these things and who wrote them down.
We know that his testimony is true.

25 And there are also many other things that Jesus did, which, if every one of them were written down, I suppose not even the world itself could contain the books † that would be written. †

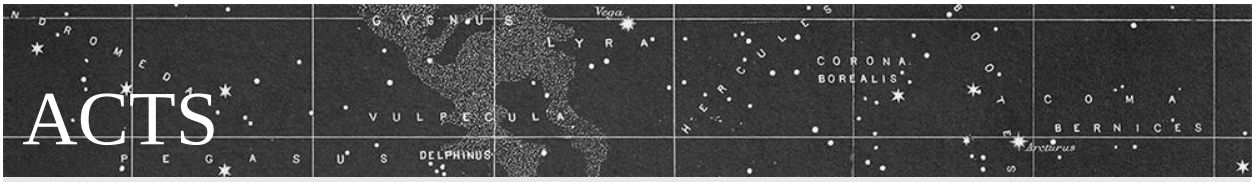
21:15-17 The OT is full of shepherd imagery used to refer to the careful provision and protection with which a shepherd oversees his flock. God's people are sheep that need such shepherds (Is 44:28; Jr 3:15; Ezk 34; cp. 1Pt 5:1-4).

21:25 John concludes his Gospel by speaking directly to the reader (cp. 20:31). He employs hyperbole—I suppose not even the world itself could contain the books—to acknowledge that his biography of Jesus offers but a sample of the things that could have been recorded about him. Hyperbolic statements were an established literary convention in Greco-Roman and Jewish literature (cp. Ec 12:9-12).



ACTS

INTRODUCTION

The book of Acts provides a glimpse into the first three decades of the early church (ca. AD 30–63) as it spread and multiplied after the ascension of Jesus Christ. It is not a detailed or comprehensive history. Rather, it focuses on the role played by apostles such as Peter, who ministered primarily to Jews, and Paul, the apostle to the Gentiles.

CIRCUMSTANCES OF WRITING

AUTHOR: The book of Acts is formally anonymous. The traditional view is that the author was the same person who wrote the Gospel of Luke—Luke the physician and traveling companion of Paul (Col 4:14; 2Tm 4:11; Phm 24). As early as the second century AD, church leaders such as Irenaeus wrote that Luke was the author of Acts. Irenaeus based his view on the "we" passages in Acts, five sections where the author changed from the third person ("he/she" and "they") to first-person plural ("we") as he narrated the action (16:10-17; 20:5-15; 21:1-18; 27:1-29; 28:1-16). Irenaeus and many scholars since his time have interpreted these passages to mean that the author of Acts was one of the eyewitness companions of Paul. Luke fits this description better than any other candidate, especially given the similar themes between the Gospel of Luke and the book of Acts.

BACKGROUND: The date of composition of the book of Acts is to a large extent directly tied to the issue of authorship. A number of scholars have argued that Acts should be dated to the early 60s (at the time of Paul's imprisonment). Acts closes with Paul still in prison in Rome (28:30-31). Although it is possible that Luke wrote at a later date, a time when Paul had been released, it is more plausible to think that he completed this book while Paul was still in prison. Otherwise he would have ended the book by telling about Paul's release.

CONTRIBUTION TO THE BIBLE

The book of Acts ties the other books of the NT together. It does so by first providing "the rest of the story" to the Gospels. The gospel and the message of the kingdom of God did not end with Jesus's ascension to heaven forty days after his resurrection, but continued on in the lives of his followers. Acts shows us how the words and promises of Jesus were carried out by the apostles and other believers through the power of the Holy Spirit. Second, the book of Acts gives us the context for much of the rest of the NT, especially the letters Paul wrote to the churches he had helped establish during his missionary journeys.

STRUCTURE

So far as literary form is concerned, the book of Acts is an ancient biography that focuses on several central characters, especially Peter and Paul. Ancient biography was not concerned simply with narrating events but with displaying the character of the people involved, especially their ethical behavior. Other features included genealogies and rhetorical elements such as speeches. Ancient biographies also commonly drew from both written and oral sources for information.

Acts 1:8 provides the introduction and outline for the book. Once empowered by the Holy Spirit, the disciples proclaimed the gospel boldly in Jerusalem. As the book progresses, the gospel spread further into Judea and Samaria, and then finally into the outer reaches of the known world through the missionary work of Paul.

CHRISTIAN WORLDVIEW ELEMENTS

TEACHINGS ABOUT GOD

The Father is in particular the Sender of the Holy Spirit. The book shows that from the beginning of Christianity Jesus has been the center of proclamation. His life, death, and resurrection were the essence of the good news. Above all, however, this book reveals the person and work of the Holy Spirit more extensively than any other book in the Bible.

TEACHINGS ABOUT HUMANITY

Particularly by tracing the spread of Christianity from Jews to Samaritans and then to Gentiles, this book shows that all kinds of people are included in salvation. A Pharisee that persecuted Jesus's followers, an African official, a Roman centurion, and a slave girl in Philippi were all touched by the power of Jesus. On the other hand, some leading authorities (both Jewish and Gentile) rejected the proclamation about Jesus.

TEACHINGS ABOUT SALVATION

Over and over in this book, the basic Christian message is presented: Jesus fulfilled the prophecies of Scripture by his deeds and life; he was crucified; God raised him; the necessary human response is to repent of sins and believe in him; those who do so receive God's good gift of the Spirit. Salvation in Acts focuses on the Spirit's filling believers so that they live holy lives and do God's will.

PROLOGUE

1 I wrote the first narrative, Theophilus, about all that Jesus began to do and teach † 2 until the day he was taken up, after he had given instructions through the Holy Spirit to the apostles he had chosen. † 3 After he had suffered, he also presented himself alive to them by many convincing proofs, appearing to them over a period of forty days and speaking about the kingdom of God. †

THE HOLY SPIRIT PROMISED

4 While he was † with them, he commanded them not to leave Jerusalem, but to wait for the Father's promise. † "Which," he said, "you have heard me speak about; 5 for John baptized with water, but you will be baptized with the Holy Spirit in a few days." † 6 So when they had come together, they asked him, "Lord, are you restoring the kingdom to Israel at this time?"
7 He said to them, "It is not for you to know times or periods that the Father has set by his own authority. † 8 But you will receive power when the Holy Spirit has come on you, and you will be my witnesses in Jerusalem, in all Judea and Samaria, and to the end of the earth." †

THE ASCENSION

9 After he had said this, he was taken up as they were watching, and a cloud took him out of their sight. 10 While he was going, they were gazing into heaven, and suddenly two men in white clothes stood by them. † 11 They said,
"Men of Galilee, why do you stand looking up into heaven? This same Jesus, who has been taken from you into heaven, will come in the same way that you have seen him going into heaven." †

UNITED IN PRAYER

12 Then they returned to Jerusalem from the Mount of Olives, which is near Jerusalem — a Sabbath day's journey away. 13 When they arrived, they went to the room † upstairs where they were staying: Peter, John, James, Andrew, Philip, Thomas, Bartholomew, Matthew, James the son of Alphaeus, Simon the Zealot, and Judas the son of James. † 14 They all were continually united † in prayer, † along with the women, including Mary the mother of Jesus, and his brothers. †

MATTHIAS CHOSEN

15 In those days Peter stood up among the brothers and sisters † — the number of people who were together was about a hundred and twenty — and said: 16 "Brothers and sisters, it was necessary that the Scripture be fulfilled that the Holy Spirit through the mouth of David foretold about Judas, who became a guide to those who arrested Jesus. † 17 For he was one of our number and shared in this ministry." † 18 Now this man acquired a field with his unrighteous wages. He fell headfirst, his body burst open and his intestines spilled out. † 19 This became known to all the residents of Jerusalem, so that in their own language that field is called Hakeldama (that is, Field of Blood). 20 "For it is written in the Book of Psalms:

Let his dwelling become desolate; let no one live in it; † and Let someone else take his position. † †

21 "Therefore, from among the men who have accompanied us during the whole time the Lord Jesus went in and out among us — 22 beginning from the baptism of John until the day he was taken up from us — from among these, it is necessary that one become a witness with us of his resurrection." †

23 So they proposed two: Joseph, called Barsabbas, who was also known as Justus, and Matthias. † 24 Then they prayed, † "You, Lord, know everyone's hearts; show which of these two you have chosen † 25 to take the place † in this apostolic ministry † that Judas left to go where he belongs." 26 Then they cast lots † for them, and the lot fell to Matthias and he was added to the eleven apostles.

1:1-2 Luke begins by addressing his likely patron, Theophilus (Gk "loved by God" or "one who loves God"). In ancient times, publishing a literary work was expensive and required a financial sponsor. Acts is the second book in Luke's two-volume work. The first volume, Luke, records all that Jesus began to do and teach until the day he was taken up (Lk 1:1-2).

1:8 This passage introduces two important themes in the book. First is the role of the disciples as witnesses of Jesus. They will serve as Jesus's witnesses in Jerusalem, in all Judea and Samaria, and to the end of the earth. The phrase, "end of the earth," refers either to Rome (Ac 28:14) or the farthest portions of the known world (e.g., Spain). Second is the work of the Holy Spirit to empower this activity. See also "God's Purposes in a Christian's Participation in Missions," p. 1191; "Speaking to a Non-Christian about Jesus," p. XXXV.

1:10 The two men are angels. Their white clothes would be understood to indicate their status as heavenly beings. Contrary to popular depictions today, the Bible does not describe angels as having wings (except in the case of the seraphim; cp. Is 6:2). Generally in the Bible, angels are described with human-like features.

1:12 The distance from the Mount of Olives to Jerusalem was a Sabbath day's journey. According to the Mishnah, this was a distance of about three-fourths of a mile. In other words, it was an acceptable distance to travel on the Sabbath.

1:13 In the firstcentury, people used upper-level rooms for study, prayer, and private meetings. Homeowners sometimes rented their upper room to others. People preferred upper-level rooms because they provided privacy from passers-by who might look in from the street.

1:15-22 Luke presents the first of many speeches in these verses. In fact, approximately one-third of Acts consists of some type of speech made by believers (e.g., Ac 7:2-56; 22:1-21) and nonbelievers (e.g., Ac 5:35-39; 19:35-40). Ancient writers often placed speeches strategically to communicate important ideas.

1:21 The phrase went in and out among us is a Semitic idiom denoting close and intimate association. Judas's replacement had to be a man who had walked closely with Jesus and his twelve disciples from the days of John the Baptist until the ascension. A second qualification included witnessing the resurrected Jesus.

1:23 Luke mentions two candidates to replace Judas: Joseph and Matthias. Joseph was also called Barsabbas, which means, "son of the Sabbath." He may have been called by this name because he was born on the Sabbath, or because he had great zeal for the day. We do not know if it was a formal name or a nickname. Joseph was also known as Justus. The second candidate was Matthias, a shortened form of Mattathias ("gift of God").

1:26 The disciples sought to discover God's choice by casting lots. Luke does not reveal precisely how they carried this out. A common method for casting lots, however, was to write each man's name on a rock or piece of wood and to place both items in a jar or bag before selecting one. Jews in the OT sometimes followed this procedure (Jos 18:6; 19:51; 1Sm 14:42; 1Ch 26:14-16; Pr 16:33; 18:18; Jnh 1:7). The soldiers cast lots for Jesus's grave clothes (Mt 27:35; Mk 15:24; Lk 23:34b; Jn 19:24). There are no biblical examples of believers engaging in this practice after the coming of the Holy Spirit (Ac 2).

PENTECOST

2 When the day of Pentecost had arrived, they were all together in one place. † 2 Suddenly a sound like that of a violent rushing wind † came from heaven, and it filled the whole house where they were staying. † 3 They saw tongues like flames of fire that separated and rested on each one of them. 4 Then they were all filled † with the Holy Spirit and began to speak in different tongues, † as the Spirit enabled them. † 5 Now there were Jews staying in Jerusalem, devout people from every nation † under heaven. 6 When this sound occurred, a crowd came together and was confused because each one heard them speaking in his own language. 7 They were astounded and amazed, saying, † "Look, aren't all these who are speaking Galileans? † 8 How is it that each of us can hear them in our own native language? 9 Parthians, Medes, Elamites; those who live in Mesopotamia, in Judea and Cappadocia, Pontus and Asia, † 10 Phrygia and Pamphylia, Egypt and the parts of Libya near Cyrene; visitors from Rome (both Jews and converts), † 11 Cretans and Arabs — we hear them declaring the magnificent acts of God in our own tongues." 12 They were all astounded and perplexed, saying to one another, "What does this mean?" 13 But some sneered and said, "They're drunk on new wine." †

PETER'S SERMON

14 Peter stood up with the Eleven, raised his voice, and proclaimed to them:
"Fellow Jews and all you residents of Jerusalem, let me explain this to you and pay attention to my words. 15 For these people are not drunk, as you suppose, since it's only nine in the morning. † 16 On the contrary, this is what was spoken through the prophet Joel:
17 And it will be in the last days, says God, that I will pour out my Spirit on all people; then your sons and your daughters will prophesy, your young men will see visions, and your old men will dream dreams. † 18 I will even pour out my Spirit on my servants in those days, both men and women and they will prophesy. † 19 I will display wonders in the heaven above and signs on the earth below:
blood and fire and a cloud of smoke.

20 The sun will be turned to darkness and the moon to blood † before the great and glorious day of the Lord † comes.
21 Then everyone who calls on the name of the Lord will be saved. † †
22 "Fellow Israelites, listen to these words: This Jesus of Nazareth was a man attested to you by God with miracles, wonders, and signs that God did among you through him, just as you yourselves know. † 23 Though he was delivered up according to God's determined plan and foreknowledge, you used † lawless people to nail him to a cross and kill him. † 24 God raised him up, ending the pains of death, † because it was not possible for him to be held by death. 25 For David says of him:
I saw the Lord ever before me; because he is at my right hand, I will not be shaken.
26 Therefore my heart is glad and my tongue rejoices.
Moreover, my flesh will rest in hope, 27 because you will not abandon me in Hades or allow your holy one to see decay. †
28 You have revealed the paths of life to me; you will fill me with gladness in your presence. † †
29 "Brothers and sisters, I can confidently speak to you about the patriarch David: He is both dead and buried, and his tomb is with us to this day. †
30 Since he was a prophet, he knew that God had sworn an oath to him to seat one of his descendants † on his throne. † 31 Seeing what was to come, he spoke concerning the resurrection of the Messiah: He † was not abandoned in Hades, and his flesh did not experience decay. † †
32 "God has raised † this Jesus; we are all witnesses of this. 33 Therefore, since he has been exalted to the right hand of God † and has received from the Father the promised Holy Spirit, † he has poured out † what you both see and hear.
34 For it was not David who ascended into the heavens, but he himself says:
The Lord declared to my Lord, 'Sit at my right hand
35 until I make your enemies your footstool.' † †
36 "Therefore let all the house of Israel know with certainty that God has made this Jesus, whom you crucified, both Lord and Messiah." †

CALL TO REPENTANCE

37 When they heard this, they were pierced to the heart and said to Peter and the rest of the apostles: “Brothers, what should we do? ” †

38 Peter replied, “Repent † and be baptized, † each of you, in the name † of Jesus Christ for the forgiveness of your sins, and you will receive the gift of the Holy Spirit. 39 For the promise is for you and for your children, and for all who are far off, † as many as the Lord our God will call.” 40 With many other words he testified and strongly urged them, saying, “Be saved from this corrupt † generation! ” † 41 So those who accepted his message were baptized, and that day about three thousand people were added to them.

A GENEROUS AND GROWING CHURCH

42 They devoted themselves to the apostles’ teaching, † to the fellowship, to the breaking of bread, and to prayer. †

43 Everyone was filled with awe, and many wonders and signs were being performed through the apostles. † 44 Now all the believers were together and held all things in common. † 45 They sold their possessions and property and distributed the proceeds to all, as any had need. 46 Every day they devoted themselves to meeting together in the temple, and broke bread from house to house. They ate their food with joyful and sincere hearts, † 47 praising God and enjoying the favor of all the people. Every day the Lord added to their number † those who were being saved. †

2:1 Pentecost, the second of Judaism's three great festivals—Passover, Pentecost, Tabernacles—was an annual agricultural and religious celebration occurring fifty days (Gk Pentecoste, "fiftieth") after Passover in May or June (Lv 23:15-21). It was known originally as the Feast of Weeks because it came after seven weeks of harvesting. Pentecost also served to commemorate the giving of the Mosaic Law at Sinai.

2:2-3 Luke describes the Spirit's coming with specific sounds and sights: a sound like that of a violent rushing wind . . . and tongues like flames. In the OT, wind and fire served to denote God's divine presence (e.g., breath/wind, Ezk 37:9-14; fire, Ex 3:2-5; 13:21; 24:17).

2:4 As vv. 5-11 make clear, tongues in this account refers to known, human languages rather than to unintelligible, heavenly ones.

2:5 Some understand the Jews referenced here as pilgrims who had come to the Pentecost festival. Others view them as residents of Jerusalem, i.e., Jews who had returned previously from the Diaspora to resettle in the city. The latter view is based on Luke's use of the verb "living" (Gk katoikountes) throughout his writing (e.g., Ac 1:20; 7:2,4,48; 9:22). It implies a more permanent residence.

2:7 At the time of Pentecost, most of Jesus's followers were Galileans incapable of speaking the diverse languages referenced in Acts 2:9-11.

2:9-11 Luke mentions places from which the Jewish listeners originated. The languages and dialects spoken would have included Aramaic, Parthian, Iranian, Hebrew, Phrygian, Pisidian, Lydian, Carian, Lycian, Celtic, Lycaonian, Coptic, Latin, Numidian, Greek, and Nabatean among others.

2:13 New wine refers to partially fermented wine that is sweet.

2:14-21 In his Pentecost sermon, Peter presents a view of history that sees God working through people and events to bring his divine salvation in Jesus, the Messiah. Key events include Jesus's death and resurrection (Ac 2:23-24,27,31-32) and the outpouring of the Spirit (Ac 2:17-18,38).

2:42 In the earliest days of the church's history, believers took the Lord's Supper as part of a regular meal rather than during a separate worship service. The breaking of bread may refer to people eating a regular meal together, partaking of the Lord's Supper, or both.

2:46 In the first few centuries of the church, believers met in one another's homes (from house to house), especially in the homes of wealthy Christians, as they could accommodate more people.

2:47 Luke notes that every day the Lord added to their number those who were being saved. This is the first of many summary statements highlighting the expansion of the church (e.g., Ac 6:7; 9:31; 12:24; 16:5; 19:20).

HEALING OF A LAME MAN

3 Now Peter and John were going up to the temple for the time of prayer † at three in the afternoon. † 2 A man who was lame from birth was being carried there. He was placed each day at the temple gate called Beautiful, so that he could beg from those entering the temple. † 3 When he saw Peter and John about to enter the temple, he asked for money. 4 Peter, along with John, looked straight at him and said, "Look at us." 5 So he turned to them, expecting to get something from them. 6 But Peter said, “I don’t have silver or gold, but what I do have, I give you: In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, get up and walk!” † 7 Then, taking him by the right hand he raised him up, and at once his feet and ankles became strong. 8 So he jumped up and started to walk, and he entered the temple with them — walking, leaping, and praising God. † 9 All the people saw him walking and praising God, 10 and they recognized that he was the one who used to sit and beg at the Beautiful Gate of the temple. So they were filled with awe and astonishment at what had happened to him. †

PREACHING IN SOLOMON’S COLONNADE

11 While he † was holding on to Peter and John, all the people, utterly astonished, ran toward them in what is called Solomon’s Colonnade. † 12 When Peter saw this, he addressed the people: “Fellow Israelites, why are you amazed at this? Why do you stare at us, as though we had made him walk by our own power or godliness? 13 The God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, the God of our ancestors, † has glorified his servant Jesus, whom you handed over and denied before Pilate, † though he had decided to release him. 14 You denied the Holy and Righteous One † and asked to have a murderer released to you. † 15 You killed the source † of life, whom God raised from the dead; we are witnesses of this. † 16 By faith in his name, his name has made this man strong, whom you see and know. So the faith that comes through Jesus has given him this perfect health in front of all of you.

17 “And now, brothers and sisters, I know that you acted in ignorance, just as your leaders also did. † 18 In this way God fulfilled what he had predicted through all the prophets — that his Messiah would suffer. † 19 Therefore repent † and turn back, so that your sins may be wiped out, † 20 that seasons of refreshing may come from the presence of the Lord, and that he may send Jesus, who has been appointed † for you as the Messiah. 21 Heaven must receive him until the time of the restoration of all things, which God spoke about through his holy prophets from the beginning. † 22 Moses said: † The Lord your God will raise up for you a prophet like me from among your brothers and sisters.

You must listen to everything he tells you. 23 And everyone who does not listen to that prophet will be completely cut off from the people. † †
24 "In addition, all the prophets who have spoken, from Samuel and those after him, have also foretold these days. 25 You are the sons † of the prophets and of the covenant that God made with your ancestors, saying to Abraham, And all the families of the earth will be blessed through your offspring. † † 26 God raised up his servant † and sent him first to you to bless you by turning each of you from your evil ways." †

3:1 Priests in the Jerusalem temple offered a burnt offering at sunrise and at 3:00 pm. A time of prayer followed both rituals (Ex 29:38-42; Nm 28:3-8). Peter and John's visit to the temple at the time of prayer likely refers to the prayer time following the afternoon sacrifice.

3:2 Luke refers to a man lame from birth . . . at the temple gate called Beautiful. The lame man's positioning himself at the temple's entrance was strategic as he hoped those entering to worship would give him money. Judaism viewed giving to the needy a meritorious act. Two gates have been suggested as the one called Beautiful: the Nicanor Gate and the Shushan Gate. From the fifth century onward, people typically regarded the Beautiful gate as the Shushan Gate. More modern scholars suggest the Nicanor Gate. The choice depends on whether one assumes Josephus (Nicanor Gate) or rabbinic texts (Shushan Gate) more reliable.

3:11 Many magnificent colonnades surrounded the outer portion of the temple platform. The one on the eastern side was called Solomon's Colonnade.

3:12-26 Luke records an evangelistic speech by Peter consisting of only fifteen verses. Speeches given in ancient times were often quite lengthy, lasting up to two hours. Thus, in this speech and many others, Luke presents an accurate summary.

PETER AND JOHN ARRESTED

4 While they were speaking to the people, the priests, the captain of the temple police, and the Sadducees confronted them, † 2 because they were annoyed that they were teaching the people and proclaiming in Jesus the resurrection of the dead. † 3 So they seized them and took them into custody until the next day since it was already evening. 4 But many of those who heard the message believed, and the number of the men † came to about five thousand.

PETER AND JOHN FACE THE JEWISH LEADERSHIP

5 The next day, their rulers, elders, and scribes assembled in Jerusalem 6 with Annas the high priest, Caiaphas, John, Alexander, and all the members of the high-priestly family. † 7 After they had Peter and John stand before them, they began to question them: "By what power or in what name have you done this? "
8 Then Peter was filled with the Holy Spirit and said to them, "Rulers of the people and elders: † † 9 If we are being examined today about a good deed done to a disabled man, by what means he was healed, 10 let it be known to all of you and to all the people of Israel, that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom you crucified and whom God raised from the dead — by him this man is standing here before you healthy. † 11 This Jesus is the stone rejected by you builders, which has become the cornerstone. † † 12 There is salvation in no one else, for there is no other name under heaven given to people by which we must be saved." †

THE BOLDNESS OF THE DISCIPLES

13 When they observed the boldness of Peter and John and realized that they were uneducated and untrained men, they were amazed and recognized that they had been with Jesus. † 14 And since they saw the man who had been healed standing with them, they had nothing to say in opposition. 15 After they ordered them to leave the Sanhedrin, they conferred among themselves, 16 saying, "What should we do with these men? For an obvious sign has been done through them, clear to everyone living in Jerusalem, and we cannot deny it. † 17 But so that this does not spread any further among the people, let's threaten them against speaking to anyone in this name again." 18 So they called for them and ordered them not to speak or teach at all in the name of Jesus.
19 Peter and John answered them, "Whether it's right in the sight of God for us to listen to you rather than to God, you decide; † 20 for we are unable to stop speaking about what we have seen and heard." † 21 After threatening them further, they released them. They found no way to punish them because the people were all giving glory to God over what had been done. † 22 For this sign of healing had been performed on a man over forty years old.

PRAYER FOR BOLDNESS

23 After they were released, they went to their own people and reported everything the chief priests and the elders had said to them. 24 When they heard this, they raised their voices together to God and said, "Master, you are the one who made the heaven, the earth, and the sea, and everything in them. † 25 You said through the Holy Spirit, by the mouth of our father David your servant: †

Why do the Gentiles rage and the peoples plot futile things?
26 The kings of the earth take their stand and the rulers assemble together against the Lord and against his Messiah. † †

27 "For, in fact, in this city both Herod and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles and the people of Israel, assembled together against your holy servant Jesus, whom you anointed, † 28 to do whatever your hand and your will had predestined to take place. 29 And now, Lord, consider their threats, and grant that your servants may speak your word with all boldness, † 30 while you stretch out your hand for healing, and signs and wonders † are performed through the name of your holy servant Jesus." 31 When they had prayed, the place where they were assembled was shaken, and they were all filled with the Holy Spirit and began to speak the word of God boldly. †

ALL THINGS IN COMMON

32 Now the entire group of those who believed were of one heart and mind, and no one claimed that any of his possessions was his own, but instead they held everything in common. † 33 With great power the apostles were giving testimony to the resurrection of the Lord Jesus, and great grace was on all of them. † 34 For there was not a needy person among them because all those who owned lands or houses sold them, brought the proceeds of what was sold, † 35 and laid them at the apostles' feet. This was then distributed to each person as any had need. †

36 Joseph, a Levite from Cyprus by birth, the one the apostles called Barnabas (which is translated Son of Encouragement), † 37 sold a field he owned, brought the money, and laid it at the apostles' feet. †

4:1-2 The captain of the temple police was responsible for maintaining order in the temple area. Only the high priest was greater in rank. The Sadducees were the ruling aristocracy in Jerusalem. They allied themselves with the Romans and sought to keep the status quo politically in order to maintain their position in society. The Sadducees denied that people could be resurrected—hence their concern when the apostles were teaching the people and proclaiming in Jesus the resurrection of the dead.

4:5-6 Rulers, elders, and scribes refer to the Sanhedrin (see also v. 15). This body, composed of the high priest and seventy members (e.g., priests, experts on the law), was the Supreme Court of the nation. It exercised jurisdiction over less serious offenses. The Sanhedrin advised the Roman governor in capital cases. Though some Pharisees participated in this body, the Sadducees held the majority of seats. Annas served as high priest from AD 6–15. His son-in-law, Caiaphas, served in the same position from AD 18–36. Scholars do not know the identities of John and Alexander.

4:1-22 This section records the arrest, trial, and witness of Peter and John before the Sanhedrin. In Acts 5:17-40 the apostles face the Sanhedrin a second time and are subsequently flogged. Luke's portrayal of the apostles' two interactions with the group provides a window into the legal process of that day. In one's first appearance before the Sanhedrin, he received a warning. During one's second appearance, he was punished. Peter and John, in their first appearance, were warned not to speak Jesus's name to anyone (Ac 4:17). At their second appearance, they were reminded of the warning (5:28), flogged, and ordered again not to speak Jesus's name (5:40).

4:12 See "Ethics of Global Missions," p. 1323.

4:13 Luke's reference to Peter and John as uneducated and untrained refers to their assumed lack of formal rabbinic training, i.e., formal theological education. He is not implying that they were illiterate.

4:19-20 See "Ethics of Personal Evangelism," p. 1234.

4:36 Joseph, which means, "God gives the increase," was a common Jewish name in the first century. This would have been the name he used at home, in the synagogue, and among Jews in general. Barnabas (Hb "Son of Encouragement") was a nickname employed to distinguish him from other men named Joseph (Ac 1:23).

LYING TO THE HOLY SPIRIT

5 But a man named Ananias, with his wife Sapphira, sold a piece of property. 2 However, he kept back part of the proceeds with his wife's knowledge, and brought a portion of it and laid it at the apostles' feet. † 3 "Ananias," Peter asked, "why has Satan filled your heart † to lie to the Holy Spirit and keep back part of the proceeds of the land? 4 Wasn't it yours while you possessed it? And after it was sold, wasn't it at your disposal? Why is it that you planned this thing in your heart? You have not lied to people but to God."
5 When he heard these words, Ananias dropped dead, and a great fear came on all who heard. † 6 The young men got up, wrapped his body, carried him out, and buried him. †
7 About three hours later, his wife came in, not knowing what had happened.
8 "Tell me," Peter asked her, "did you sell the land for this price? "
"Yes," she said, "for that price."
9 Then Peter said to her, "Why did you agree to test the Spirit of the Lord?
Look, the feet of those who have buried your husband are at the door, and they will carry you out." † 10 Instantly she dropped dead at his feet. When the young men came in, they found her dead, carried her out, and buried her beside her husband. 11 Then great fear came on the whole church and on all who heard these things.

APOSTOLIC SIGNS AND WONDERS

12 Many signs and wonders were being done among the people through the hands of the apostles. † They were all together in Solomon's Colonnade. † 13 No one else dared to join them, but the people spoke well of them. † 14 Believers were added to the Lord in increasing numbers — multitudes of both men and women. 15 As a result, they would carry the sick out into the streets and lay them on cots and mats so that when Peter came by, at least his shadow † might fall on some of them. 16 In addition, a multitude came together from the towns surrounding Jerusalem, bringing the sick and those who were tormented by unclean spirits, and they were all healed.

IN AND OUT OF PRISON

17 Then the high priest rose up. He and all who were with him, who belonged to the party of the Sadducees, were filled with jealousy. † 18 So they arrested the apostles and put them in the public jail. † 19 But an angel of the Lord opened the doors of the jail during the night, brought them out, and said, † 20 "Go and stand in the temple, and tell the people all about this life." † 21 Hearing this, they entered the temple at daybreak and began to teach.

THE APOSTLES ON TRIAL AGAIN

When the high priest and those who were with him arrived, they convened the Sanhedrin — the full council of the Israelites — and sent orders to the jail to have them brought. † 22 But when the servants † got there, they did not find them in the jail, so they returned and reported, 23 "We found the jail securely locked, with the guards standing in front of the doors, but when we opened them, we found no one inside." 24 As † the captain of the temple police and the chief priests heard these things, they were baffled about them, wondering what would come of this.
25 Someone came and reported to them, "Look! The men you put in jail are standing in the temple and teaching the people." 26 Then the commander went with the servants and brought them in without force, because they were afraid the people might stone them. † 27 After they brought them in, they had them stand before the Sanhedrin, and the high priest asked, 28 "Didn't we strictly order you not to teach in this name? † Look, you have filled Jerusalem with your teaching and are determined to make us guilty of this man's blood." † 29 Peter and the apostles replied, "We must obey God rather than people. 30 The God of our ancestors raised up Jesus, † whom you had murdered by hanging him on a tree. † 31 God exalted this man to his right hand as ruler and Savior, to give repentance to Israel and forgiveness of sins. † 32 We are witnesses of these things, and so is the Holy Spirit † whom God has given to those who obey him."

GAMALIEL'S ADVICE

33 When they heard this, they were enraged and wanted to kill them. † 34 But a Pharisee named Gamaliel, a teacher of the law who was respected by all the people, stood up in the Sanhedrin and ordered the men † to be taken outside for a little while. † 35 He said to them, “Men of Israel, be careful about what you’re about to do to these men. 36 Some time ago Theudas rose up, claiming to be somebody, and a group of about four hundred men rallied to him. He was killed, and all his followers were dispersed and came to nothing. † 37 After this man, Judas the Galilean rose up in the days of the census and attracted a following. He also perished, and all his followers were scattered. 38 So in the present case, I tell you, stay away from these men and leave them alone. For if this plan or this work is of human origin, it will fail; † 39 but if it is of God, you will not be able to overthrow them. You may even be found fighting against God.” They were persuaded by him. † 40 After they called in the apostles and had them flogged, they ordered them not to speak in the name of Jesus and released them. † 41 Then they went out from the presence of the Sanhedrin, rejoicing that they were counted worthy to be treated shamefully on behalf of the Name. † † 42 Every day in the temple, and in various homes, they continued teaching and proclaiming the good news that Jesus is the Messiah.

5:1 Ananias (Hb “God is gracious”) was a common name among Palestinian Jews in the firstcentury. Sapphira is an Aramaic name meaning “the beautiful one.”

5:15 In ancient times, people believed that a shadow carried spiritual power that could result in blessing or harm, depending on who cast it. In Acts, Luke will attribute healing and miraculous acts ultimately to a divine source (Ac 3:6; 4:10; 5:19; 19:11-12).

5:18 The public jail may have been located at the praetorium on the western side of the city or in the temple.

5:34 Gamaliel, the son (or grandson) of Hillel, was a well-respected Pharisaic teacher active in Jerusalem from AD 25–50. Scholars disagree as to whether he followed the more lenient tradition of Hillel or the strict tradition of Shammai. Gamaliel later served as Saul of Tarsus’s teacher (Ac 22:3).

5:36-37 Theudas led a rebellion of approximately four hundred men and was subsequently killed. He is mentioned only here in the NT. This Theudas should not be confused with a later revolutionary by the same name, who led a revolt during the procuratorship of Cuspius Fadus (AD 44–46). Judas the Galilean, also known as Judas of Gamala, led a failed rebellion against the census conducted by Quirinius in AD 6.

5:40 The apostles are flogged. Luke does not identify the number of lashes administered or the specific instrument employed, but thirty-nine lashes was the maximum number allowed.

SEVEN CHOSEN TO SERVE

6 In those days, as the disciples † were increasing in number, there arose a complaint by the Hellenistic Jews against the Hebraic Jews that their widows were being overlooked in the daily distribution. † 2 The Twelve summoned the whole company of the disciples and said, “It would not be right for us to give up preaching the word of God to wait on tables. 3 Brothers and sisters, select from among you seven men of good reputation, † full of the Spirit † and wisdom, whom we can appoint to this duty. 4 But we will devote ourselves to prayer and to the ministry of the word.” 5 This proposal pleased the whole company. So they chose Stephen, † a man full of faith and the Holy Spirit, and Philip, Prochorus, Nicanor, Timon, Parmenas, and Nicolaus, a convert from Antioch. † 6 They had them stand before the apostles, who prayed † and laid their hands on † them.

7 So the word of God spread, the disciples in Jerusalem increased † greatly in number, and a large group of priests became obedient to the faith.

STEPHEN ACCUSED OF BLASPHEMY

8 Now Stephen, full of grace and power, was performing great wonders and signs among the people. 9 Opposition arose, however, from some members of the Freedmen’s Synagogue, composed of both Cyrenians and Alexandrians, and some from Cilicia and Asia, and they began to argue with Stephen. 10 But they were unable to stand up against his wisdom and the Spirit by whom he was speaking.

11 Then they secretly persuaded some men to say, “We heard him speaking blasphemous words against Moses and God.” † 12 They stirred up the people, the elders, and the scribes; so they came, seized him, and took him to the Sanhedrin. 13 They also presented false witnesses who said, “This man never stops speaking against this holy place and the law. † 14 For we heard him say that this Jesus of Nazareth will destroy this place and change the customs that Moses handed down to us.” † 15 And all who were sitting in the Sanhedrin looked intently at him and saw that his face was like the face of an angel.

6:1 The Hellenistic Jews were Jews who spoke Greek, probably due to being raised outside Palestine. Hebraic Jews were those raised in Palestine; they spoke Aramaic as their native language. Widows in ancient times were in an extremely difficult position as most had little means to support themselves. So precarious was their situation that marriage contracts often included promises of support for a woman after her husband’s death.

6:5 Seven men were chosen: Stephen . . . Philip, Prochorus, Nicanor, Timon, Parmenas, and Nicolaus. All seven had Greek names. It is impossible to know for certain if all were Hellenistic Jews or not. Still, it is interesting that men with Greek names were put in charge of caring for Hellenistic widows.

6:6 The apostles’ act of laying their hands is a type of commissioning (see also 9:15-17). The practice finds its origin in the OT (e.g., Nm 27:18).

6:9 Opposition arose against Stephen from some within the Freedmen’s Synagogue. The synagogue’s name, coupled with the origin of its members (Cyprus, Alexandria, Cilicia, and Asia), suggests that Stephen’s opposition came from emancipated Hellenistic Jews belonging to a single synagogue. While no specific reason is given as to why these Hellenistic Jews had been enslaved, war and debt may be factors. Inhabitants of defeated nations became slaves of victorious nations, and an inability to pay one’s debt also resulted in bondage. Slavery in ancient times was not based on ethnicity.

6:11-14 Stephen’s preaching resulted in charges of blasphemy. Among pious Jews, blasphemy was a serious offense. The OT mentions stoning as a punishment (Lv 24:11-16; see also Nm 15:30).

STEPHEN’S SERMON

7 “Are these things true? ” the high priest asked.

2 “Brothers and fathers,” he replied, “listen: The God of glory appeared to our father Abraham when he was in Mesopotamia, before he settled in Haran, † 3 and said to him: Leave your country and relatives, and come to the land that I will show you. † †

4 “Then he left the land of the Chaldeans and settled in Haran. From there, after his father died, God had him move to this land in which you are now living. †

5 He didn’t give him an inheritance in it — not even a foot of ground — but he promised to give it to him as a possession, and to his descendants after him, † even though he was childless. 6 God spoke in this way: His descendants would be strangers in a foreign country, and they would enslave and oppress them for four hundred years. 7 I will judge the nation that they will serve as slaves, God said. After this, they will come out and worship me in this place. † † 8 And so he gave Abraham the covenant of circumcision. After this, he fathered Isaac and circumcised † him on the eighth day. Isaac became the father of Jacob, and Jacob became the father of the twelve patriarchs. †

THE PATRIARCHS IN EGYPT

9 "The patriarchs became jealous of Joseph and sold him into Egypt, but God was with him † 10 and rescued him out of all his troubles. He gave him favor and wisdom in the sight of Pharaoh, king of Egypt, who appointed him ruler over Egypt and over his whole household. † 11 Now a famine and great suffering came over all of Egypt and Canaan, † and our ancestors could find no food. 12 When Jacob heard there was grain in Egypt, he sent our ancestors there the first time. 13 The second time, Joseph revealed himself to his brothers, and Joseph's family became known to Pharaoh. 14 Joseph invited his father Jacob and all his relatives, seventy-five people in all, † 15 and Jacob went down to Egypt. He and our ancestors died there, † 16 were carried back to Shechem, and were placed in the tomb that Abraham had bought for a sum of silver from the sons of Hamor in Shechem. †

MOSES, A REJECTED SAVIOR

17 "As the time was approaching to fulfill the promise that God had made to Abraham, the people flourished and multiplied in Egypt † 18 until a different king who did not know Joseph ruled over Egypt. † 19 He dealt deceitfully with our race and oppressed our ancestors by making them abandon their infants outside so that they wouldn't survive. † 20 At this time Moses was born, and he was beautiful in God's sight. He was cared for in his father's home for three months. 21 When he was put outside, Pharaoh's daughter adopted and raised him as her own son. † 22 So Moses was educated in all the wisdom of the Egyptians and was powerful in his speech and actions. †

23 "When he was forty years old, he decided to visit his own people, the Israelites. 24 When he saw one of them being mistreated, he came to his rescue and avenged the oppressed man by striking down the Egyptian. 25 He assumed his people would understand that God would give them deliverance through him, but they did not understand. 26 The next day he showed up while they were fighting and tried to reconcile them peacefully, saying, ‘Men, you are brothers. Why are you mistreating each other? ’ †

27 “But the one who was mistreating his neighbor pushed Moses aside, saying: Who appointed you a ruler and a judge over us? 28 Do you want to kill me, the same way you killed the Egyptian yesterday? † †
29 “When he heard this, Moses fled and became an exile in the land of Midian, where he became the father of two sons. † 30 After forty years had passed, an angel † appeared to him in the wilderness of Mount Sinai, in the flame of a burning bush. 31 When Moses saw it, he was amazed at the sight. As he was approaching to look at it, the voice of the Lord came: 32 I am the God of your ancestors — the God of Abraham, of Isaac, and of Jacob. † † Moses began to tremble and did not dare to look.
33 “The Lord said to him: Take off the sandals from your feet, because the place where you are standing is holy ground. 34 I have certainly seen the oppression of my people in Egypt; I have heard their groaning and have come down to set them free. And now, come, I will send you to Egypt. † †
35 “This Moses, whom they rejected when they said, Who appointed you a ruler and a judge? † — this one God sent as a ruler and a deliverer through the angel who appeared to him in the bush. † 36 This man led them out and performed wonders and signs in the land of Egypt, † at the Red Sea, and in the wilderness for forty years. †

ISRAEL’S REBELLION AGAINST GOD

37 “This is the Moses who said to the Israelites: God † will raise up for you a prophet like me from among your brothers and sisters. † † 38 He is the one who was in the assembly in the wilderness, with the angel who spoke to him on Mount Sinai, and with our ancestors. † He received living oracles to give to us. † 39 Our ancestors were unwilling to obey him. Instead, they pushed him aside, and in their hearts turned back to Egypt. † 40 They told Aaron: Make us gods who will go before us. As for this Moses who brought us out of the land of Egypt, we don’t know what’s happened to him. † † 41 They even made a calf in those days, offered sacrifice to the idol, and were celebrating what their hands had made. † 42 God turned away † and gave them up to worship † the stars of heaven, as it is written in the book of the prophets:

House of Israel, did you bring me offerings and sacrifices for forty years in the wilderness?

43 You took up the tent of Moloch and the star of your god Rephan, the images that you made to worship.

So I will send you into exile beyond Babylon. † †

GOD'S REAL TABERNACLE

44 "Our ancestors had the tabernacle of the testimony in the wilderness, just as he who spoke to Moses commanded him to make it according to the pattern he had seen. † 45 Our ancestors in turn received it and with Joshua brought it in when they dispossessed the nations that God drove out before them, † until the days of David. 46 He found favor in God's sight and asked that he might provide a dwelling place for the God † of Jacob. † 47 It was Solomon, rather, who built him a house, † 48 but the Most High does not dwell in sanctuaries made with hands, as the prophet says: †

49 Heaven is my throne, and the earth my footstool.
What sort of house will you build for me?
says the Lord,
or what will be my resting place?

50 Did not my hand make all these things? † †

RESISTING THE HOLY SPIRIT

51 "You stiff-necked † people with uncircumcised hearts and ears! † You are always resisting the Holy Spirit. As your ancestors did, you do also. 52 Which of the prophets did your ancestors not persecute? † They even killed those who foretold the coming of the Righteous One, whose betrayers and murderers † you have now become. 53 You received the law under the direction of angels † and yet have not kept it."

THE FIRST CHRISTIAN MARTYR

54 When they heard these things, they were enraged † and gnashed their teeth at him. 55 Stephen, full of the Holy Spirit, gazed into heaven. He saw the glory of God, and Jesus standing at the right hand of God. † 56 He said, “Look, I see the heavens opened and the Son of Man standing at the right hand of God! ” † 57 They yelled at the top of their voices, covered their ears, and together rushed against him. 58 They dragged him out of the city and began to stone † him. And the witnesses laid their garments at the feet of a young man named Saul. † 59 While they were stoning Stephen, he called out: “Lord Jesus, receive my spirit! ” † 60 He knelt down and cried out with a loud voice, † “Lord, do not hold this sin against them! ” And after saying this, he died. † †

7:2-50 In his speech, Stephen reviews the Hebrews’ history, focusing on three topics related to Judaism: the land (vv. 2-36), the law vv. 37-43), and the temple (vv. 44-50). At times, Jews venerated these institutions too strongly. Stephen suggests that they were not the most important features of Judaism.

7:58 Luke introduces a young man named Saul. He will serve as a central character in Acts 13–28. Saul was likely born in the first decade of the firstcentury; he could have been anywhere between eighteen and thirty at the time of Stephen’s martyrdom. He will be called Paul for the first time in Acts 13:9, at the beginning of his first missionary journey to the Gentiles. Luke’s reference to the witnesses likely implies either that they removed their garments to avoid staining them or that they wished to free themselves for unhindered participation in the stoning.

SAUL THE PERSECUTOR

Saul agreed with putting him to death.

8 On that day a severe persecution broke out against the church in Jerusalem, and all except the apostles were scattered throughout the land of Judea and Samaria. † 2 Devout men buried Stephen and mourned deeply over him. 3 Saul, † however, was ravaging the church. He would enter house after house, drag off men and women, and put them in prison. †

PHILIP IN SAMARIA

4 So those who were scattered went on their way preaching the word. 5 Philip went down to a † city in Samaria and proclaimed the Messiah to them. † 6 The crowds were all paying attention to what Philip said, as they listened and saw the signs he was performing. 7 For unclean spirits, crying out with a loud voice, came out of many who were possessed, and many who were paralyzed and lame were healed. † 8 So there was great joy in that city.

THE RESPONSE OF SIMON

9 A man named Simon had previously practiced sorcery in that city and amazed the Samaritan people, while claiming to be somebody great. † 10 They all paid attention to him, from the least of them to the greatest, and they said, "This man is called the Great Power of God." † † 11 They were attentive to him because he had amazed them with his sorceries for a long time. 12 But when they believed Philip, as he proclaimed the good news about the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, both men and women were baptized. † 13 Even Simon himself believed. And after he was baptized, he followed Philip everywhere and was amazed as he observed the signs and great miracles † that were being performed.

SIMON'S SIN

14 When the apostles who were at Jerusalem heard that Samaria had received the word of God, they sent Peter and John to them. † 15 After they went down there, they prayed for them so the Samaritans might receive the Holy Spirit because he had not yet come down on any of them. 16 (They had only been baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus. †) 17 Then Peter and John laid their hands on them, and they received the Holy Spirit.

18 When Simon saw that the Spirit † was given through the laying on of the apostles' hands, he offered them money, 19 saying, "Give me this power also so that anyone I lay hands on may receive the Holy Spirit."

20 But Peter told him, "May your silver be destroyed with you, because you thought you could obtain the gift of God with money! † 21 You have no part or share in this matter, because your heart is not right before God. † 22 Therefore repent of this wickedness of yours, and pray to the Lord that, if possible, your heart's intent may be forgiven. 23 For I see you are poisoned by bitterness and bound by wickedness." †

24 "Pray to the Lord for me," Simon replied, "so that nothing you have said may happen to me." †

25 So, after they had testified and spoken the word of the Lord, they traveled back to Jerusalem, preaching the gospel in many villages of the Samaritans.

THE CONVERSION OF THE ETHIOPIAN OFFICIAL

26 An angel of the Lord spoke to Philip: "Get up and go south to the road that goes down from Jerusalem to Gaza." (This is the desert road. † †) 27 So he got up and went. There was an Ethiopian man, a eunuch † and high official of Candace, queen of the Ethiopians, who was in charge of her entire treasury. He had come to worship in Jerusalem † 28 and was sitting in his chariot on his way home, reading the prophet Isaiah aloud.

29 The Spirit told Philip, "Go and join that chariot." †

30 When Philip ran up to it, he heard him reading the prophet Isaiah, and said, "Do you understand what you're reading? "

ARE MIRACLES AND SCIENCE COMPATIBLE?

One of the secular claims against Christianity is that the modern world's increasing knowledge of the natural world through science (principally chemistry, biology, and physics) has made belief in miracles unjustified at best and positively irrational at worst. Recently, biologist and atheist Richard Dawkins has led this charge, especially in his best-selling book, The God Delusion (2007). Before responding to this challenge, we need to define our two basic terms: miracle and science.

Biblically understood, a miracle is God's supernatural intervention in creation, which produces an effect otherwise not possible given the operation of natural laws. Since God as Creator and Sustainer of the universe is the One who has established so-called natural laws, he is also free to act outside such laws. After all, natural laws simply reflect God's design for the way things normally occur. If he decides to act outside this normal design, he is not breaking the laws of nature, since they are not "laws" for God; they are simply patterns that reflect his own will.

So why, then, do secularists think that science is incompatible with belief in miracles? There are three main reasons.

First, if one believes there is no God, then there is no divine agent (or conscience actor) to produce a miracle. In other words, if you begin with the presupposition that God does not exist, then you cannot believe in miracles.

Nevertheless, there are ample reasons drawn from science and philosophy to believe that a personal Creator and Designer does exist. Cosmology indicates that the universe began from nothing a finite time ago with a big bang. Such an event requires a cause outside the universe. The best explanation is that God caused this event. From one point of view, the creation of the universe from nothing is God's first supernatural action, since natural laws do not allow something to be made from nothing. Physics also reveals that the laws and proportions of the universe are finely tuned for the support of human life. Chance and mindless natural law do not explain this adequately. God's purpose and design provide the best explanation.

Science, in and of itself, does not preclude the work of God within nature. But if scientists presuppose that God does not exist, then such explanations are dismissed. Consequently, many secularists define science in such a way as to exclude miracles. Science is seen as offering only natural explanations for natural events.

Second, scientific endeavor is regarded as the only legitimate source for knowledge about the natural world. No supernatural explanations are allowed in principle. So, even if the universe began from nothing, science cannot even suggest a Creator's involvement in it. Neither can science speak to the existence of a Designer to explain the fine-tuning of the universe. Inevitably, the result is that no one can be intellectually justified in believing in miracles.

But this claim for science is neither grounded in the history of science—many leaders of the scientific revolution were theists—nor is it philosophically credible. Science becomes a knowledge blocker if, in fact, God has left recognizable signs of his existence in the cosmos. Whether or not we can find evidence for God in the natural world should be an open question up for rigorous investigation. Furthermore, when science is regarded the only source of rational knowledge, it logically refutes itself. This approach, known as scientism, claims that (1) science is limited to giving natural explanations for natural events based on logical reasoning; and that (2) science is the sole conduit for knowledge (or credible, true beliefs). These two statements rightly receive the following rebuttals. First, the claim that science is the only source of knowledge is not justified by any natural event or logical reasoning. Scientism is, rather, a philosophical claim. And therefore, second, since this materialistic view of science is not supported by its own understanding of science, scientism must be false. This destroys the argument for science as the one source of knowledge about reality. It cannot be the only means of acquiring genuine knowledge.

Third, some affirm that the development of technology, especially in the twentieth century, is incompatible with belief in miracles. It was a biblical scholar, and not a scientist, who put this starkly. Rudolph Bultmann (1884–1976) said that no one who uses a transistor radio can believe in the miraculous world presented in the NT.

But the development of technology is not incompatible with miracles, since these technologies depend on scientific discoveries and methods which themselves do not refute miracles, as argued above. The claim is a classic non sequitur—however often we hear it.

Detecting a miracle in human experience is a matter of historical inquiry. No hard science such as chemistry, biology, or physics speaks directly to events that occur once within humanity. That is, we cannot know through the methods of science that Caesar crossed the Rubicon. But this does not mean we have no knowledge of historical matters, such as social change within cultures, the rise and fall of empires, or biography. One's method of acquiring knowledge must fit the subject of study. History consults written and unwritten items from the past to discern what happened. While many historians simply dismiss God and the supernatural from knowable history, ignoring the Bible's claims to record such, there is no good reason to do so. If it is possible that God exists, then miracles are possible. If they are possible, we may investigate miraculous claims to see if there are any actual miracles.

While many religions claim miracles, none are as well substantiated as NT miracles. This is especially true of Jesus's miracles, and his resurrection in particular. In fact, Christianity is the only religion that attributes miracles to its founder in its earliest and foundational documents—the books comprising the NT. For example, the historical resurrection of Jesus from the dead is affirmed in all four Gospels. It is also directly or indirectly affirmed throughout the rest of the NT. These documents were written by eyewitnesses (Jn 19:35) to the resurrected Christ or by those who consulted eyewitnesses (Lk 1:1-4).

Finally, there is sufficient evidence that miracles have not ceased to occur after the time of the NT. While they are not as plentiful as the signs and wonders of the apostolic period, many miracles performed in the name of Jesus have been documented. For a scholarly study of NT miracles and subsequent miracles, see Craig S. Keener, Miracles: The Credibility of the New Testament Accounts, two vols. (Grand Rapids, MI: Baker, 2011).

Christians need not fear that the advancement of science somehow undermines the rationality of their belief in miracles. Miracles are not incompatible with science. Only an unhelpful understanding of science, or of miracles, or of both, generates this false impression. Both science and history corroborate the biblical teaching that God is a wonder-working God of space-time history—and eternity.

31 "How can I," he said, "unless someone guides me?" So he invited Philip to come up and sit with him. 32 Now the Scripture passage he was reading was this:

He was led like a sheep to the slaughter, and as a lamb is silent before its shearer, so he does not open his mouth.
33 In his humiliation justice was denied him.

34 The eunuch said to Philip, "I ask you, who is the prophet saying this about — himself or someone else?" 35 Philip proceeded to tell him the good news about Jesus, beginning with that Scripture. †

36 As they were traveling down the road, they came to some water. The eunuch said, "Look, there's water. What would keep me from being baptized?" † 38 So he ordered the chariot to stop, and both Philip and the eunuch went down into the water, and he baptized him. 39 When they came up out of the water, the Spirit of the Lord † carried Philip away, and the eunuch did not see him any longer but went on his way rejoicing. 40 Philip appeared in † Azotus, † and he was traveling and preaching the gospel in all the towns until he came to Caesarea. †

8:5 Philip, one of the seven mentioned in Acts 6, and a Hellenistic Jewish Christian, travels to a city in Samaria and proclaims the Messiah. Luke does not specify which city Philip visited, but suggestions include Samaria and Shechem. Samaria was the capital city of the province of Samaria. Herod the Great renamed the city "Sebaste" in honor of Caesar Augustus (Sebaste is the Gk equivalent of the Lat "Augustus"). Sebaste was a thoroughly pagan city at the time. Shechem was the religious headquarters of the Samaritans in Philip's day. That the gospel is taken to the Samarians shows the spread of Christianity outside Jewish circles (cp. Ac 1:8).

8:9 The term sorcery refers to magic, which was commonly used by pagans in ancient times to cast spells on someone to make him fall in love or to aid in conceiving a baby. Magic included the use of charms and incantations.

8:10 The name Great Power of God may reflect a belief in Simon's divinity or simply his access to supernatural power.

8:27 The Ethiopian . . . eunuch was an important governmental official who served the queen of Ethiopia, Candace. In the firstcentury, the kingdom of Ethiopia lay south of Egypt. In ancient times, eunuchs were castrated men who kept the royal harem (Est 2:3,14-15). This man served as a treasurer.

THE DAMASCUS ROAD

9 Now Saul was still breathing threats and murder against the disciples † of the Lord. He went to the high priest † 2 and requested letters † from him to the synagogues in Damascus, so that if he found any men or women who belonged to the Way, † he might bring them as prisoners to Jerusalem. 3 As † he traveled and was nearing Damascus, a light from heaven suddenly flashed around him. 4 Falling to the ground, he heard a voice saying to him, “Saul, Saul, why are you persecuting me? ”

5 “Who are you, Lord? ” Saul said.
“I am Jesus, the one you are persecuting,” he replied. 6 “But get up and go into the city, and you will be told what you must do.” 7 The men who were traveling with him stood speechless, hearing the sound but seeing no one. † 8 Saul got up from the ground, and though his eyes were open, he could see nothing. So they took him by the hand and led him into Damascus.
9 He was unable to see for three days and did not eat or drink.

SAUL’S BAPTISM

10 There was a disciple in Damascus named Ananias, and the Lord said to him in a vision, “Ananias.”
“Here I am, Lord,” he replied. † 11 “Get up and go to the street called Straight,” the Lord said to him, “to the house of Judas, and ask for a man from Tarsus † named Saul, since he is praying there. 12 In a vision † he has seen a man named Ananias coming in and placing his hands on him so that he may regain his sight.” † 13 “Lord,” Ananias answered, “I have heard from many people about this man, how much harm he has done to your saints in Jerusalem. † 14 And he has authority here from the chief priests to arrest all who call on your name.” † 15 But the Lord said to him, “Go, for this man is my chosen instrument † to take my name to Gentiles, † kings, and Israelites. † 16 I will show him how much he must suffer for my name.” †
17 Ananias went and entered the house. He placed his hands on him and said, “Brother Saul, the Lord Jesus, who appeared to you on the road you were traveling, has sent me so that you may regain your sight and be filled with the Holy Spirit.” †
18 At once something like scales fell from his eyes, and he regained his sight.
Then he got up and was baptized. 19 And after taking some food, he regained his strength. †

SAUL PROCLAIMING THE MESSIAH

SAUL PROCLAIMING THE MESSIAH

Saul was with the disciples in Damascus for some time. 20 Immediately he began proclaiming Jesus in the synagogues: “He is the Son of God.” †
21 All who heard him were astounded and said, “Isn’t this the man in Jerusalem who was causing havoc for those who called on this name and came here for the purpose of taking them as prisoners to the chief priests? ” †
22 But Saul grew stronger and kept confounding the Jews who lived in Damascus by proving that Jesus is the Messiah.
23 After many days had passed, the Jews conspired to kill him, 24 but Saul learned of their plot. So they were watching the gates day and night intending to kill him, † 25 but his disciples took him by night and lowered him in a large basket through an opening in the wall. †

SAUL IN JERUSALEM

26 When he arrived in Jerusalem, † he tried to join the disciples, but they were all afraid of him, since they did not believe he was a disciple. 27 Barnabas, however, took him and brought him to the apostles and explained to them how Saul had seen the Lord on the road and that the Lord had talked to him, and how in Damascus he had spoken boldly † in the name of Jesus. † 28 Saul was coming and going with them in Jerusalem, speaking boldly in the name of the Lord. 29 He conversed and debated with the Hellenistic Jews, but they tried to kill him. † 30 When the brothers found out, they took him down to Caesarea and sent him off to Tarsus. †

THE CHURCH’S GROWTH

31 So the church † throughout all Judea, Galilee, and Samaria had peace and was strengthened. Living in the fear of the Lord and encouraged by the Holy Spirit, it increased in numbers.

THE HEALING OF AENEAS

32 As Peter was traveling from place to place, he also came down to the saints † who lived in Lydda. † 33 There he found a man named Aeneas, who was paralyzed and had been bedridden for eight years. 34 Peter said to him, “Aeneas, Jesus Christ heals you. Get up and make your bed,” † and immediately he got up. † 35 So all who lived in Lydda and Sharon † saw him and turned to the Lord.

DORCAS RESTORED TO LIFE

36 In Joppa † there was a disciple named Tabitha (which is translated Dorcas). She was always doing good works † and acts of charity. 37 About that time she became sick and died. After washing her, they placed her in a room upstairs. 38 Since Lydda was near Joppa, the disciples heard that Peter was there and sent two men to him who urged him, “Don’t delay in coming with us.” 39 Peter got up and went with them. When he arrived, they led him to the room upstairs. And all the widows approached him, weeping and showing him the robes and clothes that Dorcas had made while she was with them. 40 Peter sent them all out of the room. He knelt down, prayed, and turning toward the body said, “Tabitha, get up.” She opened her eyes, saw Peter, and sat up. † 41 He gave her his hand and helped her stand up. He called the saints and widows and presented her alive. 42 This became known throughout Joppa, and many believed in the Lord. 43 Peter stayed for some time in Joppa with Simon, † a leather tanner.

9:1 The expression breathing threats and murder is an idiom denoting Saul’s violent intentions toward Christians. It does not necessarily mean that he personally killed them.

9:11 The street called Straight, located in the eastern part of the Old City in Damascus, was a major road (forty to fifty feet wide) running east to west. The road still exists today and is also known as Darb el-Mustaqim.

9:23-25 In 2 Corinthians 11:32-33, Paul refers to the attempt on his life and his subsequent escape from Damascus. The governor under King Aretas IV (9 BC–AD 40) guarded the city with the intent of capturing Paul. But he escaped in a large basket through an opening in the wall. Homes were built into city walls. Most likely, Saul escaped from the window of a home located on the wall.

CORNELIUS’S VISION

CORNELIUS'S VISION

10 There was a man in Caesarea named Cornelius, a centurion of what was called the Italian Regiment. † 2 He was a devout man and feared God along with his whole household. He did many charitable deeds for the Jewish people and always prayed to God. † 3 About three in the afternoon † he distinctly saw in a vision an angel of God who came in and said to him, "Cornelius." †
4 Staring at him in awe, he said, "What is it, Lord? "
The angel told him, "Your prayers and your acts of charity have ascended as a memorial offering before God. † 5 Now send men to Joppa and call for Simon, who is also named Peter. 6 He is lodging with Simon, a tanner, whose house is by the sea." †
7 When the angel who spoke to him had gone, he called two of his household servants and a devout soldier, who was one of those who attended him. 8 After explaining everything to them, he sent them to Joppa.

PETER'S VISION

9 The † next day, as they were traveling and nearing the city, Peter went up to pray on the roof † about noon. † 10 He became hungry and wanted to eat, but while they were preparing something, he fell into a trance. 11 He saw heaven opened † and an object that resembled a large sheet coming down, being lowered by its four corners to the earth. 12 In it were all the four-footed animals and reptiles of the earth, and the birds of the sky. 13 A voice said to him, "Get up, Peter; kill and eat."
14 "No, Lord! " Peter said. "For I have never eaten anything impure and ritually unclean." † 15 Again, a second time, the voice said to him, "What God has made clean, do not call impure." † 16 This happened three times, and suddenly the object was taken up into heaven.

PETER VISITS CORNELIUS

17 While Peter was deeply perplexed about what the vision he had seen might mean, right away the men who had been sent by Cornelius, having asked directions to Simon's house, stood at the gate. 18 They called out, asking if Simon, who was also named Peter, was lodging there.

19 While Peter was thinking about the vision, the Spirit told him, "Three men are here looking for you. † 20 Get up, go downstairs, and go with them with no doubts at all, because I have sent them." †
21 Then Peter went down to the men and said, "Here I am, the one you're looking for. What is the reason you're here? "
22 They said, "Cornelius, a centurion, an upright and God-fearing man, who has a good reputation with the whole Jewish nation, was divinely directed by a holy angel to call you to his house and to hear a message from you." † 23 Peter then invited them in and gave them lodging.
The next day he got up and set out with them, and some of the brothers from Joppa went with him. † 24 The following day he entered Caesarea. Now Cornelius was expecting them and had called together his relatives and close friends. 25 When Peter entered, Cornelius met him, fell at his feet, and worshiped him.
26 But Peter lifted him up and said, "Stand up. I myself am also a man." †
27 While talking with him, he went in and found a large gathering of people.
28 Peter said to them, "You know it's forbidden for a Jewish man to associate with or visit a foreigner, † but God has shown me that I must not call any person impure or unclean. † 29 That's why I came without any objection when I was sent for. So may I ask why you sent for me? "
30 Cornelius replied, "Four days ago at this hour, at three in the afternoon, † I was † praying in my house. Just then a man in dazzling clothing stood before me † 31 and said, 'Cornelius, your prayer has been heard, and your acts of charity have been remembered in God's sight. 32 Therefore send someone to Joppa and invite Simon here, who is also named Peter. He is lodging in Simon the tanner's house by the sea.' † 33 So I immediately sent for you, and it was good of you to come. So now we are all in the presence of God to hear everything you have been commanded by the Lord."

GOOD NEWS FOR GENTILES

34 Peter began to speak: “Now I truly understand that God doesn’t show favoritism, † 35 but in every nation the person who fears him and does what is right is acceptable to him. 36 He sent the message to the Israelites, proclaiming the good news of peace through Jesus Christ — he is Lord of all. † 37 You know the events that took place throughout all Judea, beginning from Galilee after the baptism that John preached: 38 how God anointed Jesus of Nazareth with the Holy Spirit and with power, and how he went about doing good and healing all who were under the tyranny of the devil, because God was with him. † 39 We ourselves are witnesses of everything he did in both the Judean country and in Jerusalem, and yet they killed him by hanging him on a tree. † 40 God raised up this man on the third day and caused him to be seen, 41 not by all the people, but by us whom God appointed as witnesses, who ate and drank with him after he rose from the dead. † 42 He commanded us to preach to the people and to testify that he is the one appointed by God to be the judge of the living and the dead. † 43 All the prophets testify † about him that through his name † everyone who believes in him receives forgiveness of sins.” †

GENTILE CONVERSION AND BAPTISM

44 While Peter was still speaking these words, the Holy Spirit came down † on all those who heard the message. 45 The circumcised believers who had come with Peter were amazed because the gift of the Holy Spirit had been poured out even on the Gentiles. † 46 For they heard them speaking in other tongues † and declaring the greatness of God.
Then Peter responded, 47 “Can anyone withhold water and prevent these people from being baptized, who have received the Holy Spirit just as we have?” † 48 He commanded them to be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ. † Then they asked him to stay for a few days.

10:1-2 The Gentile Cornelius is described as a devout man who feared God along with his whole household. God-fearers were Gentiles with great sympathy for Judaism and its teaching. They did not, however, undergo full conversion to the faith. As a Roman centurion, Cornelius had authority over eighty to a hundred soldiers.

10:9-16 Peter experiences a vision in which the central message is to take the gospel to the Gentiles and have fellowship with them. The inclusion of multiple visions in Acts (e.g., Ac 7:31-32; 9:10-12; 11:5; 16:9-10; 18:9-10) shows early Christianity's belief that God sometimes communicates to his people in dramatic ways, especially in times of great salvation-historical importance.

10:25-26 Cornelius regards Peter as some type of heavenly being, perhaps an angel or divine figure. Peter rejects his worship, stressing that he is merely human.

10:28 Pious Jews did not associate with Gentiles for fear of becoming ceremonially unclean, but God had taught Peter otherwise in a vision (vv. 10:9-16).

10:34-43 Here Luke records one of many evangelistic speeches (2:14-40; 3:12-26; 13:16-41; 17:22-31; 28:23-38). This speech, and others like it, reveals that the church was strongly evangelistic in its first few decades, calling people to believe and turn to Christ.

GENTILE SALVATION DEFENDED

11 The apostles and the brothers and sisters who were throughout Judea heard that the Gentiles had also received the word of God. 2 When Peter went up to Jerusalem, the circumcision party criticized him, †
3 saying, "You went to uncircumcised men and ate with them." †
4 Peter began to explain to them step by step: 5 "I † was in the town of Joppa praying, and I saw, in a trance, an object that resembled a large sheet coming down, being lowered by its four corners from heaven, and it came to me.
6 When I looked closely and considered it, I saw the four-footed animals of the earth, the wild beasts, the reptiles, and the birds of the sky. 7 I also heard a voice telling me, 'Get up, Peter; kill and eat.'
8 " 'No, Lord! ' I said. 'For nothing impure or ritually unclean has ever entered my mouth.' 9 But a voice answered from heaven a second time, 'What God has made clean, you must not call impure.' 10 "Now this happened three times, and everything was drawn up again into heaven. 11 At that very moment, three men who had been sent to me from Caesarea arrived at the house where we were. 12 The Spirit told me to accompany them with no doubts at all. These six brothers also accompanied me, and we went into the man's house. † 13 He reported to us how he had seen the angel standing in his house and saying, 'Send † to Joppa, and call for Simon, who is also named Peter. 14 He will speak a message to you by which you and all your household † will be saved.'

15 "As I began to speak, the Holy Spirit came down on them, just as on us at the beginning. † 16 I remembered the word of the Lord, how he said, 'John baptized with water, but you will be baptized with the Holy Spirit.' † 17 If, then, God gave them the same gift that he also gave to us when we believed in the Lord Jesus Christ, how could I possibly hinder God?" † 18 When they heard this they became silent. And they glorified God, saying, "So then, God has given repentance resulting in life even to the Gentiles." †

THE CHURCH IN ANTIOCH

19 Now those who had been scattered as a result of the persecution that started because of Stephen made their way as far as Phoenicia, Cyprus, and Antioch, † speaking the word to no one except Jews. 20 But there were some of them, men from Cyprus and Cyrene, who came to Antioch and began speaking to the Greeks † also, proclaiming the good news about the Lord Jesus. † 21 The Lord's hand was with them, and a large number who believed turned to the Lord. † 22 News about them reached † the church in Jerusalem, and they sent out Barnabas to travel † as far as Antioch. 23 When he arrived and saw the grace of God, he was glad and encouraged all of them to remain true to the Lord with devoted hearts, † 24 for he was a good man, full of the Holy Spirit † and of faith. And large numbers of people were added † to the Lord.
25 Then he † went to Tarsus to search for Saul, 26 and when he found him he brought him to Antioch. For a whole year they met with the church and taught large numbers. The disciples † were first called Christians at Antioch. †

FAMINE RELIEF

27 In those days some prophets came down from Jerusalem to Antioch. † 28 One of them, named Agabus, stood up and predicted by the Spirit that there would be a severe famine throughout the Roman world. † This took place during the reign of Claudius. † 29 Each of the disciples, according to his ability, determined to send relief to the brothers and sisters who lived in Judea. † 30 They did this, sending it to the elders † by means of Barnabas and Saul.

11:2 The circumcision party refers to more conservative Jewish Christians who were hesitant to associate with Gentiles for fear of becoming unclean.

11:26 The first reference to Jesus's followers as Christians occurred at Antioch. In the NT, the term is consistently applied to believers by non-Christians (26:28; 1Pt 4:16). Christians did not use the name in reference to themselves until the second century. The application of this specific title reveals that believers were associated closely with one whom they regarded as the Christ, the Messiah.

11:27-28 Prophets came to Antioch from Jerusalem and predicted a severe famine during the reign of the Roman emperor, Claudius (AD 41–54). Jews believed that prophecy came to an end with the last of the writing prophets (e.g., Malachi). Early Christian believers regarded prophecy as active and present with the coming of the Messiah.

JAMES MARTYRED AND PETER JAILED

12 About that time King Herod violently attacked some who belonged to the church, 2 and he executed James, † John's brother, with the sword. 3 When he saw that it pleased the Jews, he proceeded to arrest Peter too, during the Festival of Unleavened Bread. † 4 After the arrest, he put him in prison and assigned four squads of four soldiers each to guard him, intending to bring him out to the people after the Passover. 5 So Peter was kept in prison, but the church was praying fervently to God for him.

PETER RESCUED

6 When Herod was about to bring him out for trial, that very night Peter, bound with two chains, was sleeping between two soldiers, while the sentries in front of the door guarded the prison. 7 Suddenly an angel of the Lord † appeared, and a light shone in the cell. Striking Peter on the side, he woke him up and said, "Quick, get up! " And the chains fell off his wrists. † 8 "Get dressed," the angel told him, “and put on your sandals.” And he did. “Wrap your cloak around you,” he told him, “and follow me.” 9 So he went out and followed, and he did not know that what the angel did was really happening, but he thought he was seeing a vision. † 10 After they passed the first and second guards, they came to the iron gate that leads into the city, which opened to them by itself. They went outside and passed one street, and suddenly the angel left him. †

11 When Peter came to himself, he said, “Now I know for certain that the Lord has sent his angel and rescued me from Herod’s grasp and from all that the Jewish people expected.” † 12 As soon as he realized this, he went to the house of Mary, the mother of John Mark, † † where many had assembled and were praying. 13 He knocked at the door of the outer gate, and a servant named Rhoda came to answer. 14 She recognized Peter’s voice, and because of her joy, she did not open the gate but ran in and announced that Peter was standing at the outer gate.

15 “You’re out of your mind! ” they told her. But she kept insisting that it was true, and they said, “It’s his angel.” † 16 Peter, however, kept on knocking, and when they opened the door and saw him, they were amazed.

17 Motioning to them with his hand † to be silent, he described to them how the Lord had brought him out of the prison. “Tell these things to James † and the brothers,” he said, and he left and went to another place.

18 At daylight, there was a great commotion among the soldiers as to what had become of Peter. 19 After Herod had searched and did not find him, he interrogated the guards and ordered their execution. Then Herod went down from Judea to Caesarea and stayed there. †

HEROD’S DEATH

20 Herod had been very angry with the people of Tyre and Sidon. Together they presented themselves before him. After winning over Blastus, who was in charge of the king’s bedroom, they asked for peace, because their country was supplied with food from the king’s country. † 21 On an appointed day, dressed in royal robes and seated on the throne, Herod delivered a speech to them. 22 The assembled people began to shout, “It’s the voice of a god and not of a man! ”

23 At once an angel of the Lord † struck him because he did not give the glory to God, and he was eaten by worms and died. †

24 But the word of God flourished and multiplied. † 25 After they had completed their relief mission, Barnabas and Saul returned to † Jerusalem, taking along John who was called Mark. †

12:1-2 Herod Agrippa I (ca. 9 BC–AD 44), grandson of Herod the Great, ruled over Judea from AD 41–44. The reference to execution with the sword probably denotes beheading.

12:4 Sixteen soldiers guarded Peter during his imprisonment because every three hours a new squad of four relieved the previous one. It appears that two soldiers were chained to Peter while two others guarded the door (v. 6).

12:12 Mary, the mother of John Mark, was likely a woman of means, since believers tended to gather in the larger homes of the wealthy.

12:19 Execution was the fate of guards who allowed prisoners to escape. Some captors would kill either themselves (16:27) or their prisoners to avoid it (27:42).

12:20 Luke mentions a certain Blastus, who was in charge of the king's bedroom. In this role, Blastus served as the king's personal chief of staff.

12:23 See "A Biblical View of Angels," p. 1531.

PREPARING FOR THE MISSION FIELD

13 Now in the church at Antioch there were prophets and teachers: Barnabas, Simeon who was called Niger, Lucius of Cyrene, Manaen, a close friend of Herod the tetrarch, † and Saul.

2 As they were worshiping † the Lord and fasting, the Holy Spirit said, "Set apart for me Barnabas and Saul for the work to which I have called them." †
3 Then after they had fasted, prayed, and laid hands on them, they sent them off. †

THE MISSION TO CYPRUS

4 So being sent out by the Holy Spirit, they went down to Seleucia, and from there they sailed to Cyprus. 5 Arriving in Salamis, they proclaimed the word of God in the Jewish synagogues. They also had John as their assistant. † 6 When they had traveled the whole island as far as Paphos, they came across a sorcerer, a Jewish false prophet named Bar-Jesus. † 7 He was with the proconsul, Sergius Paulus, an intelligent man. This man summoned Barnabas and Saul and wanted to hear the word of God. † 8 But Elymas the sorcerer (that is the meaning of his name) opposed † them and tried to turn the proconsul away from the faith. † 9 But Saul — also called Paul — filled with the Holy Spirit, stared straight at Elymas 10 and said, "You are full of all kinds of deceit and trickery, you son of the devil † and enemy of all that is right. Won't you ever stop perverting the straight paths † of the Lord? 11 Now, look, the Lord's hand is against you. † You are going to be blind, and will not see the sun for a time." Immediately a mist and darkness fell on him, and he went around seeking someone to lead him by the hand.

ETHICS OF GLOBAL MISSIONS

Missions, best understood as proclaiming the good news of Jesus across cultures, marked the growth of the early church. From a group of 120 followers of Christ based in Jerusalem (Ac 1:15) grew a church that crossed boundaries to reach the center of the Roman Empire. Among others in the book of Acts, Samaritans (8:4-25), Ethiopians (8:26-40), and Gentiles (10:34-48) chose to follow Christ after they heard the Word. The church in Antioch sent out the first missionaries (13:1-3), and the rest of Acts is a missionary story.

WHY GLOBAL MISSIONS?

Some today argue that it is unethical to try to convert people of other cultures and religions to Christianity. Proclaiming a single way to God—that is, the biblical way—is religious arrogance, it is claimed. Such a viewpoint, however, is a denial of the gospel. It misses the point of the mandate to do global missions.

The basis on which Christ's followers do global missions is biblical teaching and the acts of God in history. God inspired his Word (2Tm 3:16) as his Spirit moved men to write (2Pt 1:21). God, who cannot lie (Ti 1:2), thus has given us a guide that is perfect, trustworthy, right, and radiant (Ps 19:7-8). It is that inspired Word that includes the Great Commission to "make disciples of all nations" (Mt 28:18-20).

Indeed, it was Jesus, the One in whom "the entire fullness of God's nature dwells bodily" (Col 2:9), who uttered this missions mandate (Mt 28:16-20; Mk 16:15; Lk 24:45-49; Jn 20:19-23; Ac 1:6-8). His followers are to teach the Word and make disciples of all the peoples. The One who spoke these words had power to defeat the devil (Mt 4:1-11), to teach like no other (7:28-29), to calm the sea (8:23-27), to forgive sin (9:1-8), to heal the sick (9:27-31), and to raise the dead (9:23-26). When he proclaimed the command recorded in Matthew 28, Jesus was, in fact, the resurrected One before whom every knee will bow as every tongue confesses him as Lord (Php 2:9-11). To disobey his global missions mandate out of some misguided concern to adhere to modern sensibilities would be to reject his authority as the One whom we proclaim as risen Lord over all.

The disciples, the original audience in Matthew 28, were not to wait for nonbelievers to come to them; rather, they were to take the initiative to tell others the good news. Such evangelism would model the heart of God, whose Son entered into the world, became flesh, and dwelt among us (Jn 1:11,14). He who died for us while we were yet sinners (Rm 5:8) demands that his followers take that gospel to the ends of the earth. Through that ministry, in fact, the church would see believers from the corners of the globe enter the kingdom according to God's plan (Mt 8:11; Rv 7:9). Even today, we are privileged to carry on this work through global missions. The work will continue until the end, when Jesus returns and makes all things new.

BIBLICAL THEOLOGY AND MISSIONS

Biblical theology should drive us to do missions. There is only one true God (Is 45:5), the Trinitarian God of the Bible who exists as Father, Son, and Holy Spirit (Mt 28:19; Eph 4:4-6). He created humans in his image (Gn 1:27), but because of the sin Adam committed in the garden, we too are sinners who reject him by our very nature and by our actions (Rm 3:23; 5:12). The just judgment for our sin is death and ultimate separation from God in hell (Rm 6:23; Rv 20:15). On our own, we cannot fix this problem. All people around the world are spiritually lost apart from the grace of God.

However, God so loves us that he sent Jesus to die on our behalf (Jn 3:16). Jesus is the One through whom broken relationships with God are restored (Jn 14:6; Ac 4:12). Only through turning from our sin and trusting in him can we be saved (Mk 1:15); there simply is no salvation apart from placing personal faith in Jesus Christ. Indeed, the apostle Paul indicated that no one can believe unless he has first heard the gospel: "How can they believe without hearing about him? And how can they hear without a preacher? (Rm 10:14).

God calls us to go to the nations because he loves the world and does not want "any to perish" (2Pt 3:9). God's heart is for the lost to come to him (Lk 15:11-32). We tell the good news, some turn to God for forgiveness, and heaven rejoices when lost sheep are found (Lk 15:7). Those once held in the domain of darkness are transferred to the kingdom of God's Son (Col 1:13). Indeed, God is in the process of drawing to himself a multitude from every nation, tribe, people, and tongue (Rv 5:9; 7:9). From more than eleven thousand people groups around the world, God will draw unto himself worshipers. This message is the good news we get to announce.

Hence, ignoring God's call to global missions is not only disobedient toward God; it is also uncaring toward those who have not heard. If we genuinely believe that people who do not know Jesus will suffer God's judgment, why would we not seek to get the good news to those who need to hear it? While not all believers are called to be full-time missionaries in distant lands, none of us has permission to ignore the Great Commission. To do so is hardly a loving choice.

INTEGRITY IN GLOBAL MISSIONS

How we do global missions does matter, however. At its foundation, missions is an affirmation of the worth of all humans, including those who follow false belief systems. All people are created in the image of God and therefore matter to God. Jesus's death for "the whole world" (1Jn 2:2) further illustrates the value of each individual. Any approach to missions must—even while speaking difficult truths about lostness and salvation—reflect Christian concern, humility, and respect for others. Were it not for the grace of God, we too would still be unbelievers following false gods.

As God's forgiven instruments, we must strive to model Christian integrity in our own lives. The gospel is powerful on its own, but we are nevertheless called to be light in a dark world (Mt 5:16). Our good works glorify the Father and validate the life-transforming power of the gospel. Others should see in us forgiveness instead of bitterness, holiness rather than immorality, and love rather than hatred. If our lives instead reflect faithlessness and disobedience, our lack of integrity becomes an obstacle to the work of the Great Commission.

Further, the goal of Christian missions is proclamation of the gospel, but our efforts should not ignore issues of physical need and social justice. Feeding the hungry, giving water to the thirsty, clothing the naked, ministering to the sick and the stranger, and visiting the prisoner (Mt 25:31-46) reflect the character of God and open hearts to hear the gospel. Servanthood in a world that emphasizes self illustrates the transforming power of the good news.

Aside from the countless self-sacrificing efforts that have gone into spreading the gospel around the world, church history also includes tragic episodes in which believers have attempted to compel conversions by military might or legislative act. Such strategies, however, do not reflect a correct understanding of biblical missions. First, only God can change a heart; no external human force can do that miraculous work. Second, reaching the nations focuses on loving proclamation of the truth, not arrogant imposition of the message. Reasoned apologetics and persistent persuasion have a legitimate place in global missions, but both must be grounded in the power of the Spirit rather than in human reasoning or power of persuasion. Coerced conversions are seldom, if ever, genuine.

We need not rely on our power, however. God's Spirit is at work around the world, drawing people to him in response to his Word. Rarely has the church seen the opportunity we have today to take the gospel to the ends of the earth. Ease of travel and access to the Internet make it possible to reach people who have yet to hear about Jesus. We need only continue to fulfill his commission to make disciples of all nations, reflecting God's heart for the lost.

12 Then, when he saw what happened, the proconsul believed, because he was astonished at the teaching of the Lord. †

PAUL'S SERMON IN ANTIOCH OF PISIDIA

13 Paul and his companions set sail from Paphos and came to Perga in Pamphylia, but John left them and went back to Jerusalem. † 14 They continued their journey from Perga and reached Pisidian Antioch. On the Sabbath day they went into the synagogue and sat down. † 15 After the reading of the Law and the Prophets, the leaders of the synagogue sent word to them, saying, "Brothers, if you have any word of encouragement for the people, you can speak." †

16 Paul stood up and motioned with his hand and said: "Fellow Israelites, and you who fear God, listen! † 17 The God of this people Israel chose our ancestors, made the people prosper during their stay in the land of Egypt, and led them out of it with a mighty † arm. † 18 And for about forty years he put up with them † in the wilderness; † 19 and after destroying seven nations in the land of Canaan, † he gave them their land as an inheritance. 20 This all took about 450 years. After this, he gave them judges until Samuel the prophet. †

21 Then they asked for a king, and God gave them Saul the son of Kish, a man of the tribe of Benjamin, for forty years. † 22 After removing him, † he raised up David as their king and testified about him: 'I have found David the son of Jesse to be a man after my own heart, † † who will carry out all my will.'

23 "From this man's descendants, as he promised, God brought to Israel † the Savior, Jesus. † 24 Before his coming to public attention, John had previously proclaimed a baptism of repentance to all the people of Israel. † 25 Now as John was completing his mission, he said, 'Who do you think I am? I am not the one.
But one is coming after me, and I am not worthy to untie the sandals on his feet.' †
26 "Brothers and sisters, children of Abraham's race, and those among you who fear God, it is to us that the word of this salvation has been sent. † 27 Since the residents of Jerusalem and their rulers did not recognize him or the sayings of the prophets that are read every Sabbath, they have fulfilled their words by condemning him. † 28 Though they found no grounds for the death sentence, they asked Pilate to have him killed. † 29 When they had carried out all that had been written about him, they took him down from the tree and put him in a tomb. † 30 But God raised him from the dead, † 31 and he appeared for many days to those who came up with him from Galilee to Jerusalem, who are now his witnesses to the people. † 32 And we ourselves proclaim to you the good news of the promise that was made to our ancestors. † 33 God has fulfilled this for us, their children, by raising up Jesus, as it is written in the second Psalm:
You are my Son;
today I have become your Father. † † † 34 As to his raising him from the dead, never to return to decay, he has spoken in this way, I will give you the holy and sure promises of David. † † 35 Therefore he also says in another passage, You will not let your Holy One see decay. † † 36 For David, after serving God's purpose in his own generation, fell asleep, † was buried with his fathers, and decayed, † 37 but the one God raised up did not decay. 38 Therefore, let it be known to you, brothers and sisters, that through this man forgiveness of sins is being proclaimed to you. † 39 Everyone who believes is justified † through him from everything that you could not be justified from through the law of Moses. † 40 So beware that what is said in the prophets does not happen to you:

41 Look, you scoffers, marvel and vanish away, because I am doing a work in your days, a work that you will never believe, even if someone were to explain it to you." † †

PAUL AND BARNABAS IN ANTIOCH

42 As they were leaving, the people † urged them to speak about these matters the following Sabbath. 43 After the synagogue had been dismissed, many of the Jews and devout converts to Judaism followed Paul and Barnabas, who were speaking with them and urging them to continue in the grace of God. † 44 The following Sabbath almost the whole town assembled to hear the word of the Lord. † 45 But when the Jews saw the crowds, they were filled with jealousy and began to contradict what Paul was saying, insulting him. † 46 Paul and Barnabas boldly replied, "It was necessary that the word of God be spoken to you first. Since you reject it and judge yourselves unworthy of eternal life, we are turning to the Gentiles. † 47 For this is what the Lord has commanded us:
I have made you a light for the Gentiles to bring salvation to the end of the earth." † † 48 When the Gentiles heard this, they rejoiced and honored the word of the Lord, and all who had been appointed to eternal life believed. 49 The word of the Lord spread through the whole region. 50 But the Jews incited the prominent God-fearing women and the leading men of the city. They stirred up persecution against Paul and Barnabas and expelled them from their district. † 51 But Paul and Barnabas shook the dust off their feet † against them † and went to Iconium. 52 And the disciples were filled with joy and the Holy Spirit. †

13:1–14:28 This passage records the first major missionary journey taken by Barnabas and Saul. In regard to early Christian missions, no one participated in such a wide and extensive missionary effort as the apostle Paul (Saul). One scholar has estimated that Paul traveled by land and sea more than fifteen thousand miles in missionary service. By comparison, Alexander the Great traveled twenty thousand miles in military campaigns.

13:2 Acts records the Spirit's central role in the events of the early church (5:3,9; 8:29; 10:19; 13:4; 19:6). This is in line with Jesus's promise that he would send the Holy Spirit to empower the witness of the apostles (1:8).

13:5 Salamis, about 130 miles southwest of Seleucia, was the most significant city on the island of Cyprus. The island was inhabited mostly by Greeks, with some Jews living among them. The missionaries traveled throughout the island visiting Jewish synagogues, which would have served Jews and God-fearing Gentiles. Paul's normal practice when visiting a new city was to visit the local Jewish synagogue first, provided that one existed.

13:7 Lucius Sergius Paulus served as the proconsul of the Roman province, Cyprus (ca AD 45–46). Cyprus was a senatorial, as opposed to imperial, province. Rulers of senatorial provinces were appointed by the Roman senate for one year. Senatorial provinces were more politically stable than imperial ones. Incidentally, this gives us an approximate date for Paul's first missionary journey. Sergius Paulus's role as proconsul of Cyprus in AD 45–46 is confirmed in a Latin inscription found in Rome.

13:8 Elymas the sorcerer served as advisor to Sergius Paulus. Roman government officials sometimes took counsel from diviners.

13:13 Pamphylia was an imperial province. The Roman Empire was composed of two types of provinces, imperial provinces and senatorial ones. Imperial provinces were marked by a lack of political stability due to frequent internal rebellions or external threats like foreign invasion. These provinces usually contained one or more legions of soldiers. Imperial provinces were under the direct control of the Roman emperor who appointed a legate or prefect to govern. Examples include Cilicia, Syria, Egypt, Galatia, Cappadocia, and Judea (beginning in AD 6). See the note for Acts 13:7.

13:28-29 Paul's message of a crucified Messiah was unacceptable to many Jews, as it did not fit their conception of the Messiah (Dt 21:23, "anyone hung on a tree is under God's curse").

13:51 Jews returning to Israel from a Gentile territory sometimes shook the dust off their feet to symbolize leaving any and all pagan defilement behind them. Here the act symbolizes the missionaries' strong disassociation or separation from those Jews who rejected the gospel.

GROWTH AND PERSECUTION IN ICONIUM

14 In Iconium they entered the Jewish synagogue, as usual, and spoke in such a way that a great number of both Jews and Greeks believed. †
2 But the unbelieving Jews stirred up the Gentiles and poisoned their minds against the brothers. † 3 So they stayed there a long time and spoke boldly for the Lord, who testified to the message of his grace by enabling them to do signs and wonders. † 4 But the people of the city were divided, some siding with the Jews and others with the apostles. † 5 When an attempt was made by both the Gentiles and Jews, with their rulers, to mistreat and stone them, 6 they found out about it and fled to the Lycaonian towns of Lystra and Derbe and to the surrounding countryside. † 7 There they continued preaching the gospel. †

MISTAKEN FOR GODS IN LYSTRA

8 In Lystra a man was sitting who was without strength in his feet, had never walked, and had been lame from birth. 9 He listened as Paul spoke. After looking directly at him and seeing that he had faith to be healed, 10 Paul said in a loud voice, “Stand up on your feet!” And he jumped up and began to walk around. †
11 When the crowds saw what Paul had done, they shouted, saying in the Lycaonian language, “The gods have come down to us in human form!” †
12 Barnabas they called Zeus, and Paul, Hermes, because he was the chief speaker. 13 The priest of Zeus, whose temple was just outside the town, brought bulls and wreaths to the gates because he intended, with the crowds, to offer sacrifice.
14 The apostles Barnabas and Paul tore their robes when they heard this and rushed into the crowd, shouting: † 15 “People! Why are you doing these things? We are people also, just like you, and we are proclaiming good news to you, that you turn from these worthless things † to the living God, who made the heaven, the earth, the sea, and everything in them. † † 16 In past generations he allowed all the nations † to go their own way, 17 although he did not leave himself without a witness, † since he did what is good by giving you rain from heaven and fruitful seasons † and filling you with food and your † hearts with joy.” 18 Even though they said these things, they barely stopped the crowds from sacrificing to them.

19 Some Jews came from Antioch and Iconium, and when they won over the crowds, they stoned Paul and dragged him out of the city, thinking he was dead. † 20 After the disciples gathered around him, he got up and went into the town. The next day he left with Barnabas for Derbe. †

CHURCH PLANTING

21 After they had preached the gospel in that town and made many disciples, they returned to Lystra, to Iconium, and to Antioch, † 22 strengthening the † disciples by encouraging them to continue in the faith † and by telling them, “It is necessary to go through many hardships † to enter the kingdom of God.” 23 When they had appointed elders † for them in every church and prayed with fasting, they committed them to the Lord in whom they had believed.

24 They passed through Pisidia and came to Pamphylia. 25 After they had spoken the word in Perga, they went down to Attalia. 26 From there they sailed back to Antioch where they had been commended to the grace of God for the work they had now completed. † 27 After they arrived and gathered the church together, they reported everything God had done with them † and that he had opened the door † of faith to the Gentiles. 28 And they spent a considerable time with the disciples.

Luke does not explain why the people associated Zeus with Barnabas—it may be because Barnabas was the older of the two—but they regarded Paul as Hermes because he was the chief speaker.

14:13 Greco-Roman religion was marked by sacrifice. Offerings included animals, food, and drink. Sacrifices were given as offerings of thanksgiving for blessings bestowed on worshipers.

14:14-15 The tearing of one’s robes could express various ideas like mourning. Here, Paul and Barnabas tear their robes to demonstrate that they are just normal people, not gods.

DISPUTE IN ANTIOCH

15 Some men † came down from Judea and began to teach the brothers:
"Unless you are circumcised † according to the custom prescribed by Moses, † you cannot be saved." 2 After Paul and Barnabas had engaged them in serious argument and debate, Paul and Barnabas and some others were appointed to go up to the apostles and elders in Jerusalem about this issue. † 3 When they had been sent on their way by the church, † they passed through both Phoenicia and Samaria, describing in detail the conversion of the Gentiles, and they brought great joy to all the brothers and sisters.
4 When they arrived at Jerusalem, they were welcomed by the church, the apostles, and the elders, and they reported all that God had done with them. † 5 But some of the believers who belonged to the party of the Pharisees stood up and said, "It is necessary to circumcise them and to command them to keep the law of Moses."

THE JERUSALEM COUNCIL

6 The apostles and the elders gathered to consider this matter. 7 After there had been much debate, Peter stood up and said to them: "Brothers and sisters, you are aware that in the early days God made a choice among you, † that by my mouth the Gentiles would hear the gospel message and believe. 8 And God, who knows the heart, bore witness to them by giving them the Holy Spirit, just as he also did to us. † 9 He made no distinction between us and them, † cleansing their hearts by faith. † 10 Now then, why are you testing God by putting a yoke on the disciples' necks † that neither our ancestors nor we have been able to bear? 11 On the contrary, we believe that we are saved through the grace † of the Lord Jesus in the same way they are."
12 The whole assembly became silent and listened to Barnabas and Paul describe all the signs and wonders God had done through them among the Gentiles. † 13 After they stopped speaking, James responded: "Brothers and sisters, listen to me. 14 Simeon † has reported how God first intervened to take from the Gentiles a people for his name. † 15 And the words of the prophets agree with this, as it is written:

16 After these things I will return and rebuild David's fallen tent.
I will rebuild its ruins and set it up again, 17 so the rest of humanity may seek the Lord — even all the Gentiles who are called by my name — declares the Lord who makes these things 18 known from long ago. † † †

19 Therefore, in my judgment, we should not cause difficulties for those among the Gentiles who turn to God, 20 but instead we should write to them to abstain from things polluted by idols, from sexual immorality, † from eating anything that has been strangled, and from blood. 21 For since ancient times, Moses has had those who proclaim him in every city, and every Sabbath day he is read aloud in the synagogues." †

THE LETTER TO THE GENTILE BELIEVERS

22 Then the apostles and the elders, with the whole church, decided to select men who were among them and to send them to Antioch with Paul and Barnabas: Judas, called Barsabbas, and Silas, † both leading men among the brothers. 23 They wrote:

"From the apostles and the elders, your brothers, To the brothers and sisters among the Gentiles in Antioch, Syria, and Cilicia: † Greetings.

24 Since we have heard that some without our authorization went out from us † and troubled you with their words and unsettled your hearts, † † 25 we have unanimously † decided to select men and send them to you along with our dearly loved Barnabas and Paul, 26 who have risked their lives † for the name of our Lord Jesus Christ. 27 Therefore we have sent Judas and Silas, who will personally report the same things by word of mouth. 28 For it was the Holy Spirit's decision — and ours — not to place further burdens on you beyond these requirements: † 29 that you abstain from food offered to idols, from blood, from eating anything that has been strangled, and from sexual immorality. † You will do well if you keep yourselves from these things.

Farewell.”

THE OUTCOME OF THE JERUSALEM LETTER

30 So they were sent off and went down to Antioch, and after gathering the assembly, they delivered the letter. 31 When they read it, they rejoiced because of its encouragement. 32 Both Judas and Silas, who were also prophets themselves, encouraged the brothers and sisters and strengthened them with a long message. † 33 After spending some time there, they were sent back in peace † by the brothers and sisters to those who had sent them. † † 35 But Paul and Barnabas, along with many others, remained in Antioch, teaching and proclaiming the word of the Lord. †

PAUL AND BARNABAS PART COMPANY

36 After some time had passed, Paul said to Barnabas, “Let’s go back and visit the brothers and sisters in every town † where we have preached the word of the Lord and see how they’re doing.” 37 Barnabas wanted to take along John Mark. † 38 But Paul insisted that they should not take along this man who had deserted them in Pamphylia and had not gone on with them to the work. 39 They had such a sharp disagreement that they parted company, and Barnabas took Mark † with him and sailed off to Cyprus. 40 But Paul chose Silas and departed, after being commended by the brothers and sisters to the grace of the Lord. † 41 He traveled through Syria † and Cilicia, strengthening the churches.

15:1 The men who came from Judea were Jewish Christians who argued that Gentile believers must be circumcised and follow the Mosaic law in order to be saved. Leviticus 12:3 required newborn males to be circumcised on the eighth day; however, the practice could be traced even earlier in Jewish tradition to Abraham’s time (Gn 17:9-14). Peter (Ac 15:10-11), the Jerusalem Council (15:13-29), and later Paul (e.g., Gl 3:19-29; 6:15) argued against making adherence to Mosaic law a requirement of Jesus’s followers.

15:2 The Jerusalem Council (ca AD 49) was a major meeting of the early church in which the apostles discussed whether Gentiles should be required to keep the legal requirements of the OT before becoming Christians. Essentially the apostles addressed whether it was necessary to become a Jew prior to converting to Christianity.

15:20-21 While Gentiles are not required to become Jews, following the law of Moses, they are to turn completely from pagan ways. They should abstain from things polluted by idols, from sexual immorality, from eating anything strangled, and from blood. Not doing so would be offensive to Jewish believers, so the stipulations help Christians of both Gentile and Jewish backgrounds to get along.

15:36–18:22 This section records Paul’s second major missionary journey (ca AD 49–52). The mission included visiting the former churches he and Barnabas planted on their first missionary journey (13:1–14:28). It also included carrying the gospel into new lands. Paul’s first convert in what constitutes modern Europe was a businesswoman named Lydia (16:14).

PAUL SELECTS TIMOTHY

16 Paul went on to Derbe and Lystra, where there was a disciple named Timothy, † the son of a believing Jewish woman, † but his father was a Greek. 2 The brothers and sisters at Lystra and Iconium spoke highly of him. † 3 Paul wanted Timothy to go with him; so he took him and circumcised † him because of the Jews who were in those places, since they all knew that his father was a Greek. 4 As they traveled through the towns, they delivered the decisions reached by the apostles and elders at Jerusalem for the people to observe. † 5 So the churches were strengthened in the faith and grew daily in numbers. †

EVANGELIZATION OF EUROPE

6 They went through the region of Phrygia and Galatia; they had been forbidden by the Holy Spirit to speak the word in Asia. † 7 When they came to Mysia, they tried to go into Bithynia, but the Spirit of Jesus † did not allow them.
8 Passing by Mysia they went down to Troas. † 9 During the night Paul had a vision in which a Macedonian man was standing and pleading with him, "Cross over to Macedonia and help us!" † 10 After † he had seen the vision, we immediately made efforts to set out for Macedonia, concluding that God had called us to preach the gospel to them.

LYDIA'S CONVERSION

11 From Troas we put out to sea and sailed straight for Samothrace, the next day to Neapolis, 12 and from there to Philippi, † a Roman colony and a leading city of the district of Macedonia. We stayed in that city for several days. 13 On the Sabbath day we went outside the city gate by the river, where we expected to find a place of prayer. We sat down and spoke to the women gathered there.
14 A God-fearing woman named Lydia, a dealer in purple cloth from the city of Thyatira, was listening. The Lord opened her heart to respond to what Paul was saying. † 15 After she and her household were baptized, she urged us, "If you consider me a believer in the Lord, come and stay at my house." † And she persuaded us.

PAUL AND SILAS IN PRISON

16 Once, as we were on our way to prayer, a slave girl met us who had a spirit by which she predicted the future. † She made a large profit for her owners by fortune-telling. 17 As she followed Paul and us she cried out, “These men, who are proclaiming to you † the way of salvation, are the servants of the Most High God.” 18 She did this for many days.
Paul was greatly annoyed. Turning to the spirit, he said, “I command you in the name of Jesus Christ to come out of her! ” And it came out right away. † 19 When her owners realized that their hope of profit was gone, they seized Paul and Silas † and dragged them into the marketplace to the authorities.
20 Bringing them before the chief magistrates, they said, “These men are seriously disturbing our city. They are Jews 21 and are promoting customs that are not legal for us as Romans to adopt or practice.” † 22 The crowd joined in the attack against them, and the chief magistrates stripped off their clothes and ordered them to be beaten with rods. † 23 After they had severely flogged them, they threw them in jail, ordering the jailer to guard them carefully. 24 Receiving such an order, he put them into the inner prison and secured their feet in the stocks. †

A MIDNIGHT DELIVERANCE

25 About midnight Paul and Silas were praying and singing hymns to God, and the prisoners were listening to them. 26 Suddenly there was such a violent earthquake that the foundations of the jail were shaken, and immediately all the doors were opened, and everyone’s chains came loose. † 27 When the jailer woke up and saw the doors of the prison standing open, he drew his sword and was going to kill himself, since he thought the prisoners had escaped.
28 But Paul called out in a loud voice, “Don’t harm yourself, because we’re all here! ”
29 The jailer called for lights, rushed in, and fell down trembling before Paul and Silas. 30 He escorted them out and said, “Sirs, what must I do to be saved? ” † 31 They said, “Believe in the Lord Jesus, and you will be saved — you and your household.” † 32 And they spoke the word of the Lord to him along with everyone in his house. 33 He took them the same hour of the night and washed their wounds. Right away he and all his family were baptized. 34 He brought them into his house, set a meal before them, and rejoiced because he had come to believe in God with his entire household. †

AN OFFICIAL APOLOGY

35 When daylight came, the chief magistrates sent the police to say, "Release those men."
36 The jailer reported these words to Paul: "The magistrates have sent orders for you to be released. So come out now and go in peace." †
37 But Paul said to them, "They beat us in public without a trial, although we are Roman citizens, and threw us in jail. And now are they going to send us away secretly? Certainly not! On the contrary, let them come themselves and escort us out." †
38 The police reported these words to the magistrates. They were afraid when they heard that Paul and Silas were Roman citizens. 39 So they came to appease them, and escorting them from prison, they urged them to leave town. 40 After leaving the jail, they came to Lydia's house, where they saw and encouraged the brothers and sisters, and departed. †

16:1 Timothy was the son of a marriage between a Jewish mother and Greek father. Paul would later write of the sincere faith not only of Timothy's mother, Eunice, but also his grandmother, Lois (2Tm 3:15).

16:6 Asia refers to a Roman province located in what is now western Turkey. Established in 129 BC by the Romans, it contained key cities such as Ephesus, Miletus, Troas, Cos, and Rhodos.

16:10 This is noteworthy as it is the first "we passage" of Acts, in which Luke includes himself as a participant in the narrative (see also 20:5–21:18).

16:11-15 Upon arriving in Philippi, Paul journeys to a river where he meets several women worshiping God. Jewish tradition required ten males to form a synagogue. Believers lacking the required number of men were instructed to meet near a river for prayer. The river provided means for ceremonial washing. Likely Philippi did not contain a large Jewish population.

16:12 In 360 BC, the Athenian general and orator, Callistratos, led a group of Greek colonists to found a new city called Krenides, "Little Springs." Six years later, Philip of Macedon renamed the city Philippi after himself. The Romans took control of Philippi in 168 BC and populated it with Roman veterans as a reward for their service.

16:16 Paul and his missionary companions encountered a slave girl . . . who had a spirit by which she predicted the future. Pagans highly esteemed those whom they believed could predict the future. The slave girl had made a great deal of money for her owners as a fortune-teller.

16:20-21 The specific charge against Paul and his associates was that they were upsetting the peace of the city by promoting unlawful customs. Romans greatly valued societal order and were suspicious of influences that threatened to disturb it—especially foreign influences. One should not overlook the anti-Jewish sentiment expressed by the slave girl's owners.

16:22-23 The normal Roman practice was to strip the accused of clothing prior to beating him. The men were severely flogged. As a Roman citizen, Paul should not have endured such punishment, but his captors were ignorant of his citizenship (vv. 37-39). He recalls this experience in 2 Corinthians 11:25.

16:27 See the notes on Acts 12:19.

16:32-34 The jailer's behavior toward Paul and Silas was highly irregular. Roman guards did not care for the needs of prisoners, allow them to leave jail, or invite them over for a meal. The Philippian jailer's behavior strongly suggests that his conversion to Christianity was genuinely life-transforming.

16:37-39 Paul and Silas were Roman citizens. As such, they were entitled to due process and were exempt from certain forms of punishment (e.g., flogging, crucifixion).

A SHORT MINISTRY IN THESSALONICA

17 After they passed through Amphipolis and Apollonia, they came to Thessalonica, † where there was a Jewish synagogue. 2 As usual, Paul went into the synagogue, and on three Sabbath days reasoned with them from the Scriptures, † 3 explaining and proving that it was necessary for the Messiah to suffer and rise from the dead: "This Jesus I am proclaiming to you is the Messiah." † 4 Some of them were persuaded and joined Paul and Silas, including a large number of God-fearing Greeks, as well as a number of the leading women. †

THE ROLE OF PRESUPPOSITIONS IN KNOWLEDGE

During his second missionary journey, the apostle Paul explored Athens. While there, he debated some Epicurean and Stoic philosophers and presented the good news about Jesus's resurrection. Some called him an ignorant showoff, a pseudo-intellectual. Some asked to know more, so that they might gain some understanding of his strange teaching.

Paul identified the unknown god to whom a nearby altar was dedicated with the One who made the world and everything in it, the Lord of heaven and earth. “In him we live and move and have our being” (Ac 17:29); he is the one true God, Paul taught. Then the apostle identified the resurrected Jesus with the one true God and called his hearers to repent so that God would judge them righteous. The author of Acts reports that some believed in the risen Christ, while others ridiculed Paul (17:15-32). So why did some believe while others did not?

What follows is a possible and partial answer, one that involves the role of presuppositions and competing worldviews like those at stake in Epicurean, Stoic, and Christian visions of life.

WHAT ARE PRESUPPOSITIONS?

Most basically, a presupposition is a belief assumed to be true. Presuppositions are ubiquitous. They are at work in ordinary conversations, in scientific and historical research, and in the explicit use of reasoning as exemplified in arguments. Some presuppositions have rather narrow implications. Some have quite broad ones.

Consider ordinary conversations. If I say, “Jo Anne left for the grocery store,” my words presuppose that some unique person, Jo Anne, exists and that there is a grocery store to which she is traveling. And even if it is false that Jo Anne left for the grocery story, the sentence still implies she exists and that there is a grocery store to which she could have gone.

Presuppositions are usually implicit. Critical thinking involves making them explicit and evaluating them and the larger view of which they are a part. Consider the following argument: All acts of killing of innocent persons are morally wrong acts.

All abortions are acts of killing innocent persons.

So, all abortions are morally wrong acts.

This argument presupposes that (1) a correct way to think about the killing of humans is by reference to a moral category called personhood, and (2) that an embryo or a fetus is correctly classified as a person.

PRESUPPOSITIONS AND WORLDVIEWS

A fully articulated worldview is a comprehensive, systematic, and integrated way of thinking, believing, and living. Succinctly stated, a worldview is the broadest set of presuppositions possible. While it is in an important sense subjective, it is not primarily a personal and private viewpoint. Rather it is a point of view that invites exploration, examination, and critique. Ideally it is characterized by internal coherence, consistency with external facts and theories, and an overall unity.

A worldview seeks to answer some basic, fundamental questions about life. What are humans? Why are we here? Why are we flawed? How can we overcome our flaws and act and live well? To whom are we responsible? What happens after death? What is the point or purpose of one’s life?

PRESUPPOSITIONS AND THE CHRISTIAN WORLDVIEW

What are the primary parts of the Christian worldview? First, there are general beliefs about God and his relation to the world: God is spirit (Jn 4:24); he is omnipresent (Jr 23:23-24), eternal (Ps 90:1-4), the Creator and Sustainer of the universe; (Gn 1:1–2:3); he is perfectly good (Mk 10:18), omnipotent (Eph 1:19), and omniscient (1Jn 3:20). He is a necessary being (Ac 17:24-28), and he is worship-worthy (Heb 1:6); there is only one God (Eph 4:5).

Second, there are particular beliefs about God and his relation to the world: God covenanted with Abraham and the people of Israel to bless and redeem fallen humanity (Gn 12:1-3); God entered human history as Jesus of Nazareth, born of the virgin Mary (Lk 1:26-38); God is a triune community of persons—Father, Son, and Holy Spirit (2Co 13:13); and as Jesus was resurrected from the dead after his crucifixion, so humans will be resurrected and reunited with God through placing faith in Christ (Jn 11:25). (Note that the last claim presupposes that the humans who are resurrected and reunited with Christ have an essential unity with their preresurrected selves.) There’s more. Humans are created in the image of God, and both faith and reason are gifts of God. Their correct use by humans is essential to fulfilling God's creative purposes. Good and evil and beauty and ugliness are objective features of the universe.

CHRISTIANITY VERSUS OTHER WORLDVIEW PRESUPPOSITIONS

How does the Christian worldview compare to the worldview of the Epicureans and the Stoics that Paul met at Athens? Both of these groups were materialists in that they presupposed that only material objects can act or be acted upon. The Epicureans accepted that there were gods, who, though immortal, were material beings like humans. Living supremely happy lives, the gods were indifferent to the welfare of humans. Because the Epicureans presupposed humans were merely material, and that the gods were uninterested in humans, they denied the possibility of life after death. And since they assumed death is the annihilation of the body and involves no suffering beyond one's last breath, they argued that death is not to be feared.

In contrast, the Stoics spoke of a single God, but since they held that all of reality is material, they conceived God to be a material thing (a celestial "fire") that was immanent throughout the universe, rather than distinct from it. They identified God with reason (logos in Gk) and insisted that the world (all that is) is governed absolutely in every detail by reason. Because the Stoics assumed that reason determines absolutely what happens, they denied that humans act freely. Like the Epicureans, they argued that death was not to be feared, and took that notion a step further. Sometimes it is to be welcomed and hastened by suicide.

Given what we know about the Epicurean and Stoic worldviews, it is no surprise that Paul was ridiculed as an "ignorant showoff" (Ac 17:18,32). Given their presuppositions that reality is material, that one's physical death entails one's complete annihilation, and that the gods (or God) are indifferent to humans, Paul's claims that Jesus was resurrected—and that Jesus is also the Creator and Sustainer of the world—must have seemed utterly impossible, and thus, entirely unreasonable.

JUDGING BETWEEN WORLDVIEWS

So how does one adjudicate between competing worldviews? There are many acceptable answers to this question. Let me propose a familiar one.

Since a worldview, ideally, is a comprehensive and integrated explanation or account of all that one accepts as true, it is appropriate to test a worldview by comparing it to what one presupposes to be true. Doing so poses a difficulty for both the Epicurean and Stoic worldviews, as well as for contemporary versions of materialism. Most of us presuppose that we are agents and sometimes act on the basis of reasons, thus acting to some extent independently of the causal mechanisms that explain movement in the physical world. Moreover, this commonsense picture suggests that the "I" that acts persists through time and maintains personal identity, despite changes in one's physical constituents. Thus, we typically presuppose that we are more than our bodies, even if they are intimately connected to us.

In short, our commonsense view of humans presupposes that we are agents and are constituted by both material and nonmaterial stuff. Because of these beliefs, some humans find it reasonable to hope that our lives can have a purpose beyond one's physical existence, to believe that the moral and religious quality of our lives will have a bearing on the future state, to believe that while our own efforts matter, the moral and religious qualities of our lives are not merely a function of those efforts, and to believe that one's physical death is not one's annihilation.

Contemporary materialists understand perhaps more clearly than Epicurus did that a materialist worldview implies the elimination of psychological categories such as intention, beliefs, desires, preferences, consciousness, and reasons for action—or at least their reduction down to material properties. So, if some version of materialism is the correct worldview, then our commonsense views of ourselves and our relation to the world are at best, false, and at worst, a delusion.

By contrast, Christian theism as a worldview coheres with our commonsense view of ourselves and of the social world that we inhabit, a significant point in its favor. Indeed, Christian theism provides a more satisfactory explanation than materialism about the existence of the physical universe (that there is something rather than nothing), about its pervasive order and regularity (scientific laws and predictable events), and about the existence of conscious creatures, some of whom possess a sense of right and wrong (humans). And while the resurrection of Jesus is rightly a wonder to be marveled at, it is consistent with a worldview that includes the existence of a nonmaterial being who is like a human person, who acts, is omnipotent, omniscient, perfectly free, and perfectly good. Ironically, it is the advocate of materialism as a worldview that is the ignorant showoff.

MICHAEL D. BEATY

RIOT IN THE CITY

5 But the Jews became jealous, and they brought together some wicked men from the marketplace, formed a mob, and started a riot in the city. Attacking Jason's house, they searched for them to bring them out to the public assembly. † 6 When they did not find them, they dragged Jason and some of the brothers before the city officials, shouting, "These men who have turned the world upside down have come here too, 7 and Jason has welcomed them. They are all acting contrary to Caesar's decrees, † saying that there is another king — Jesus." † 8 The crowd and city officials who heard these things were upset.
9 After taking a security bond from Jason and the others, they released them.

THE BEREANS SEARCH THE SCRIPTURES

10 As soon as it was night, the brothers and sisters sent Paul and Silas away to Berea. † Upon arrival, they went into the synagogue of the Jews. 11 The people here were of more noble character than those in Thessalonica, since they received the word with eagerness and examined the Scriptures † daily to see if these things were so. 12 Consequently, many of them believed, including a number of the prominent Greek women as well as men. 13 But when the Jews from Thessalonica found out that the word of God had been proclaimed by Paul at Berea, they came there too, agitating and upsetting † the crowds. 14 Then the brothers and sisters immediately sent Paul away to go to the coast, but Silas and Timothy † stayed on there. 15 Those who escorted Paul brought him as far as Athens, and after receiving instructions for Silas and Timothy to come to him as quickly as possible, they departed. †

PAUL IN ATHENS

16 While Paul was waiting for them in Athens, he was deeply distressed when he saw that the city was full of idols. 17 So he reasoned in the synagogue with the Jews and with those who worshiped God, as well as in the marketplace every day with those who happened to be there. † 18 Some of the Epicurean and Stoic philosophers also debated with him. Some said, “What is this ignorant showoff † trying to say? ”
Others replied, “He seems to be a preacher of foreign deities” — because he was telling the good news about Jesus and the resurrection. † 19 They took him and brought him to the Areopagus, † and said, “May we learn about this new teaching you are presenting? † 20 Because what you say sounds strange to us, and we want to know what these things mean.” 21 Now all the Athenians and the foreigners residing there spent their time on nothing else but telling or hearing something new.

THE AREOPAGUS ADDRESS

22 Paul stood in the middle of the Areopagus and said: “People of Athens! I see that you are extremely religious in every respect. 23 For as I was passing through and observing the objects of your worship, I even found an altar on which was inscribed: ‘To an Unknown God.’ Therefore, what you worship in ignorance, this I proclaim to you. 24 The God who made the world and everything in it † — he is Lord of heaven and earth † — does not live in shrines made by hands. † 25 Neither is he served by human hands, as though he needed anything, † since he himself gives everyone life and breath and all things. † 26 From one man † he has made every nationality to live over the whole earth and has determined their appointed times and the boundaries of where they live. † 27 He did this so that they might seek God, and perhaps they might reach out and find him, though he is not far from each one of us. † 28 For in him we live and move and have our being, as even some of your own poets have said, ‘For we are also his offspring.’ † 29 Since we are God’s offspring then, we shouldn’t think that the divine nature is like gold or silver or stone, an image fashioned by human art and imagination. †

30 “Therefore, having overlooked † the times of ignorance, God now commands all people everywhere to repent, 31 because he has set a day when he is going to judge the world in righteousness by the man he has appointed. He has provided proof of this to everyone by raising him from the dead.” † 32 When they heard about the resurrection of the dead, some began to ridicule him, but others said, “We’d like to hear from you again about this.” 33 So Paul left their presence. 34 However, some people joined him and believed, including Dionysius the Areopagite, a woman named Damaris, and others with them.

17:1 Thessalonica was the capital city of the Roman province of Macedonia. It was a busy seaport located on the Via Egnatia, which served as a major Roman road that connected the empire from east to west. The Via Egnatia was constructed about two hundred years before Christ.

17:1-5 As usual, Paul first visited the local Jewish synagogue where his audience included God-fearing Greeks and Jews. God-fearers were those who displayed deep interest in Judaism yet had not undergone the necessary requirements of conversion to Judaism, namely, circumcision and baptism. Luke’s reference to the leading women may indicate that they were the prominent wives of leading men.

17:6-7 See the notes on Acts 16:20-21.

17:16-34 See “How Can We Evaluate Competing Worldviews?” p. 1423.

17:16 Pagan cities were typically filled with idols. Such statues lined the streets and beautifully colored temples were visible for all to see. But Athens was especially dedicated to idol worship. It was said that it was easier to find a god than a man in Athens.

17:18 Two prominent philosophical schools in ancient Athens were those of Epicureanism and Stoicism. The founder of Epicureanism, Epicurus (341–271 BC), argued that the goal of life was achieving peace and tranquility, that is, freedom from hardship and distress. He denied the gods’ intervention in the lives of people and the existence of an afterlife. Stoicism originated with Zeno of Cyprus (ca 334–262 BC). Stoics took a fatalistic view of life (in contrast to the Epicureans) and taught that the gods intervened in human affairs. In Athens, a number of those from both groups looked on Paul with disfavor. They called him a showoff, lit “seed-picker” (Gk spermologos), a metaphor used to describe a bird that hops about picking up scraps and debris in the marketplace. Paul’s detractors were essentially saying that he was a pseudo-intellectual presenting the scraps and debris he had gathered. Others found his teaching about the resurrection strange (v. 20; see also v. 32).

17:19-20 The Athenian Greeks take Paul to the Areopagus, “Hill of Ares.” The name “Areopagus” refers to Ares, the Greek god of war. The Roman name for this god was “Mars”, so the same location is sometimes called Mars Hill. Paul appeared before a council that evaluated new religious and philosophical ideas that sought formal acceptance in the city. Members of the Areopagus functioned as the religious and philosophical gatekeepers of the city.

17:22-23 Paul sought to relate to the Greeks' worldview for the purpose of sharing the gospel of Christ with them. Nevertheless, while commending their pursuit for truth, he informed them that their search had been conducted in ignorance.

17:26 See "The Bible and Civil Rights," p. 1446; "Equality of the Races and Racial Reconciliation," p. 1295.

17:28 In an effort to connect to the worldview of the Athenians, Paul cited works by the Greek poet Epimenides (ca 600 BC)—in him we live and move and have our being—and by the Stoic philosopher Aratus of Soli (ca 315–240 BC)—for we are also his offspring. This speech serves as a model of how to connect to the worldview of one's hearers in order to introduce them to a different worldview. Also see "The Role of Presuppositions in Knowledge," p. 1330; "Agnosticism and Secularism," p. 620; "Literature and a Christian Worldview," p. 546.

17:32 Some openly ridiculed Paul when they heard him speak about the resurrection of the dead. Epicureans and Stoics denied not only the possibility of resurrection but also the eternal existence of the human soul.

17:34 Luke mentions two converts by name: a man called Dionysius, and a woman named Damaris. Dionysius was a member of the council of the Areopagus, and was thus of high social standing.

FOUNDING THE CORINTHIAN CHURCH

18 After this, he † left Athens and went to Corinth, † 2 where he found a Jew named Aquila, † a native of Pontus, who had recently come from Italy with his wife Priscilla because Claudius had ordered all the Jews to leave Rome. Paul came to them, 3 and since they were of the same occupation, tentmakers by trade, † he stayed with them and worked. 4 He reasoned in the synagogue every Sabbath and tried to persuade both Jews and Greeks. † 5 When Silas and Timothy arrived from Macedonia, Paul devoted himself to preaching the word † and testified to the Jews that Jesus is the Messiah. † 6 When they resisted and blasphemed, † he shook out his clothes † and told them, "Your blood is on your own heads! † I am innocent. † From now on I will go to the Gentiles." † 7 So he left there and went to the house of a man named Titius Justus, a worshiper of God, whose house was next door to the synagogue. 8 Crispus, the leader of the synagogue, believed in the Lord, along with his whole household. † Many of the Corinthians, when they heard, believed and were baptized.

9 The Lord said to Paul in a night vision, “Don’t be afraid, but keep on speaking and don’t be silent. 10 For I am with you, and no one will lay a hand on you to hurt you, because I have many people in this city.” † 11 He stayed there a year and a half, teaching the word of God among them.
12 While Gallio was proconsul of Achaia, the Jews made a united attack against Paul and brought him to the tribunal. † 13 “This man,” they said, “ is persuading people to worship God in ways contrary to the law.” 14 As Paul was about to open his mouth, Gallio said to the Jews, “If it were a matter of wrongdoing or of a serious crime, it would be reasonable for me to put up with you Jews. 15 But if these are questions about words, names, and your own law, see to it yourselves. I refuse to be a judge of such things.” † 16 So he drove them from the tribunal. 17 And they all † seized Sosthenes, † the leader of the synagogue, and beat him in front of the tribunal, but none of these things mattered to Gallio.

THE RETURN TRIP TO ANTIOCH

18 After staying for some time, Paul said farewell to the brothers and sisters and sailed away to Syria, accompanied by Priscilla and Aquila. He shaved his head at Cenchreae because of a vow he had taken. † 19 When they reached Ephesus † he left them there, but he himself entered the synagogue and debated with the Jews. 20 When they asked him to stay for a longer time, he declined, 21 but he said farewell and added, † “I’ll come back to you again, if God wills.” † Then he set sail from Ephesus.
22 On landing at Caesarea, he went up to Jerusalem and greeted the church, then went down to Antioch. † 23 After spending some time there, he set out, traveling through one place after another in the region of Galatia and Phrygia, strengthening all the disciples. †

THE ELOQUENT APOLLOS

24 Now a Jew named Apollos, † a native Alexandrian, an eloquent man who was competent in the use of the Scriptures, arrived in Ephesus. 25 He had been instructed in the way of the Lord; and being fervent in spirit, † he was speaking and teaching accurately about Jesus, although he knew only John’s baptism. †

26 He began to speak boldly in the synagogue. After Priscilla and Aquila heard him, they took him aside † and explained the way of God to him more accurately. † 27 When he wanted to cross over to Achaia, the brothers and sisters wrote to the disciples to welcome him. After he arrived, he was a great help to those who by grace had believed. † 28 For he vigorously refuted the Jews in public, demonstrating through the Scriptures that Jesus is the Messiah. †

18:1 The name Corinth derives from a small, seedless grape used in cooking that grew in the Mediterranean region. In 146 BC, General Lucius Mummius, the leading Roman commander in the Achaean War, completely destroyed the city. He killed all the men, sold the women and children into slavery, and shipped the city's many great works of art to Rome. Julius Caesar re-founded the city in 44 BC as a Roman colony, populating it with thousands of emancipated slaves and army veterans. From 29 BC onward, Corinth served as the capital of the province Achaia. It was a busy seaport and thriving commercial center.

18:2 Roman emperor Claudius expelled the Jews from Rome in AD 49. Roman historian Suetonius writes in his Life of Claudius (25.4) that Claudius expelled the Jews because of a disturbance instigated by a certain "Chrestus." Most historians regard "Chrestus" as a misspelling of "Christ." At that time the Roman authorities probably did not distinguish between Judaism and Christianity, hence the expulsion of all Jews.

18:4 See "Speaking to a Non-Christian about Jesus," p. XXXV.

18:6 Paul's shaking out his clothes was a symbolic act of separation. The Jews' resistance to Paul's message relieved him of any evangelistic responsibility toward them. He would focus on the Gentiles instead.

18:9-10 Luke recounts one of several visionary experiences in Paul's life whereby the Lord provided encouragement to his servant (23:11; 27:23-24). According to Paul's own account (1Co 2:3), he arrived in Corinth in a dejected state, yet the Lord revealed himself and provided assurance of his divine presence.

18:12 An inscription at Delphi, a city in ancient Greece, provides archaeological affirmation that Gallio served as proconsul of Achaia from AD 51–52. Paul's encounter with him (vv. 12-17) took place during this timeframe, in Corinth.

18:18 At Cenchreae, Paul shaved his head . . . because of a vow he had taken. Perhaps Paul had taken a Nazarite vow while in Corinth to consecrate himself to the Lord and his work (Nm 6:1-21). Since God's blessings in Corinth had come to pass, Paul needed to travel to Jerusalem for a thirty-day period during which he would present his hair as a thanksgiving sacrifice to God.

18:23–19:20 Paul's third major missionary journey is recorded in Acts 18:23–20:28. Paul begins the journey from Antioch. See the note for 13:1–14:28.

TWELVE DISCIPLES OF JOHN THE BAPTIST

19 While Apollos was in Corinth, Paul traveled through the interior regions and came to Ephesus. He found some disciples † 2 and asked them, "Did you receive the Holy Spirit when you believed? " †

"No," they told him, "we haven't even heard that there is a Holy Spirit." †

3 "Into what then were you baptized? " he asked them.

"Into John's baptism," they replied. †

4 Paul said, "John baptized with a baptism of repentance, † telling the people that they should believe in the one who would come after him, that is, in Jesus." †

5 When they heard this, they were baptized into the name of the Lord Jesus. 6 And when Paul had laid his hands on † them, the Holy Spirit came on them, and they began to speak in other tongues † and to prophesy. † 7 Now there were about twelve men in all.

IN THE LECTURE HALL OF TYRANNUS

8 Paul entered the synagogue and spoke boldly over a period of three months, arguing and persuading them about the kingdom of God. † 9 But when some became hardened and would not believe, slandering the Way in front of the crowd, he withdrew from them, taking the disciples, and conducted discussions every day in the lecture hall of Tyrannus. † 10 This went on for two years, so that all the residents of Asia, both Jews and Greeks, † heard the word of the Lord. †

DEMONISM DEFEATED AT EPHESUS

11 God was performing extraordinary miracles by Paul's hands, 12 so that even facecloths or aprons † that had touched his skin were brought to the sick, and the diseases left them, and the evil spirits came out of them. †

13 Now some of the itinerant Jewish exorcists also attempted to pronounce the name of the Lord Jesus over those who had evil spirits, saying, “I command you by the Jesus that Paul preaches!” † 14 Seven sons of Sceva, a Jewish high priest, were doing this. 15 The evil spirit answered them, “I know Jesus, and I recognize Paul — but who are you?” 16 Then the man who had the evil spirit jumped on them, overpowered them all, and prevailed against them, so that they ran out of that house naked and wounded.

MONISM, PANTHEISM, AND PANENTHEISM

In 1983 actress Shirley MacLaine, a proponent of New Age spirituality, wrote this in her book titled Out on a Limb: “The tragedy of the human race was that we had forgotten that we were each Divine. You are everything. Everything you want to know is inside of you. You are the universe” (p. 347). This viewpoint is known as pantheism—the worldview claiming that all or everything (pan) is God (theos)—and God is everything. They are identical.

PANTHEISM AND MONISM

We should differentiate pantheism from monism (“one-ism”). Certain Hindus hold to monism—as do Zen Buddhists and philosophical and religious schools in other traditions.

For example, certain Hindu scriptures known as The Upanishads affirm that the soul (atman) is really God (Brahman). Importantly, Brahman isn’t some personal Creator, as theistic religions claim. Rather, Brahman is pure consciousness. Just imagine emptying your mind of all content and distinction. Let’s say it’s completely blank—that you make no distinctions between yourself and, for instance, the Empire State Building and that your thinking is without any impressions, moral judgments, emotions, or logical reasoning. That is the featureless, quality-less Brahman. This version of Hinduism (Advaita Vedanta) affirms that pure consciousness is the only reality there is; everything else—including a physical world—is an illusion. The Hindu philosopher Shakara, who died in AD 820, held this view.

Let’s imagine that monism is symbolized by a circle with nothing in it—a oneness without differentiation. By contrast, think of a circle with little clearly-defined circles or squares within it—oneness with differentiation. This symbolizes pantheism: differences exist within “God.” This view was held by the Hindu philosopher Ramanuja, who died in AD 1137.

ASSESSING MONISM

How do we begin to assess these viewpoints? Let’s consider monism first. This view is deeply problematic because it tells us to deny what seems so obvious to us—that a world of tables, chairs, trees, and stones exists outside our minds—and to accept what seems utterly contrary to our everyday experience. After all, we each have to deal with traffic jams, grumpy people, and finding a restroom—all experiences that assume a distinct reality outside of our minds. So why deny what seems so undeniable? Why embrace a worldview that seems so counterintuitive?

Consider these questions, too: Don't monists read and write books? Aren't they trying to persuade other minds to believe what they do? And what gave rise to the illusion in the first place if all reality is undifferentiated oneness? And isn't the illusory belief in differences itself real? What are we to make of the psychotic, whose problem is being out of touch with the real world outside of his mind? Or what about AIDS, pollution, or crime? Surely these aren't just an illusion? It would be irresponsible and immoral not to do anything about them by claiming they don't exist. When pondered critically, monism seems more like an escapism that avoids the world's difficult problems. It just makes better sense to affirm the reality of a world outside the mind since there is no good reason to deny it.

Furthermore, monism must ultimately deny real differences between good and evil: were Adolf Hitler's concentration camps and Joseph Stalin's labor camps just an illusion, and is there no difference between these horrific tyrants and Mother Teresa? Monism also must reject logical thinking, which makes distinctions between logical error or fallacies and sound reasoning. One sixth-century Zen Buddhist poem is very telling: "If you want to get to the plain truth Be not concerned with right and wrong. The conflict between right and wrong / Is the sickness of the mind" (Hsin-hsin Ming by Seng-ts'an, quoted in The Way of Zen by Alan Watts). These considerations expose some of the deep problems of monism.

ASSESSING PANTHEISM

What about pantheism, to which Shirley MacLaine subscribes? While pantheism is right to emphasize real differences that exist, it suffers from the fact that evil really exists in the world. Pantheism, therefore, must acknowledge that evil is somehow part of "God."

But a further problem then emerges: if evil is part of God, why try to change anything about it since we can't truly improve on God, can we? And from a practical point of view, this would lead to fatalism—that there's nothing we ought to do to change things since everything is part of God and we just need to accept this.

PANENTHEISM

Pantheism differs from panentheism ("all in God"), in which the world and God exist in an eternal interdependent relationship. This view is sometimes called "process theology." (Noted process theologians include Alfred North Whitehead, Charles Hartshorne, and John Cobb.) Some panentheists will compare God's relationship to the world as the soul's relationship to the body. God doesn't exist without the world, and the world doesn't exist without God. Rather than being sovereign over the world, God attempts to influence or direct the world. And unlike the biblical view of God who is faithful and unchanging in his nature, process theology emphasizes an ever-changing, ever-improving god. In panentheism, God does not create a universe out of nothing: the universe is eternal along with God.

Some philosophers of science adopting panentheism (Arthur Peacocke, Ian Barbour, Philip Clayton) have marginally attached themselves to biblical themes and doctrines. Yet they deny the fundamental importance of creation out of nothing. And many thinkers adopting this type of model of God's relationship to the world reject a God who is "sovereign" and who "rules over" creation. Why? Because this model of God can lead to oppressing others and to destroying creation.

ASSESSING PANENTHEISM

Think of the topic this way: if everything is changing—including God, as well as individual human persons—how can a person possess moral responsibility? After all, since "I" am not the same person "I" was twenty or thirty years ago, "I" can't be held responsible for anything "I" did back then.

But this idea of constant flux (much like Buddhism's doctrine of impermanence) is itself flawed. After all, the claim that everything is perpetually changing is itself a permanent, unchangeable doctrine. Also, change presupposes sameness since some thing is moving from one state to another (like a leaf's color changing from green to red in the fall).

Moreover, panentheism not only rejects the biblical doctrine of creation out of nothing (cp. Gn 1:1); it flies in the face of contemporary science, which indicates that matter, energy, space, and time came into existence with a big bang—in striking support of Genesis 1:1. In other words, if the universe began to exist, then God and the world could not be interdependent. Unlike the everlasting God, the universe is not eternal (Ps 102:25-26); rather, it is winding down after having been wound up in a sense, according to the second law of thermodynamics. No, the world is not God's body.

Further, panentheism diminishes God's transcendence (his distinction from the world) at the expense of God's immanence (his nearness to his creation). Panentheism presents God as a needy, dependent entity rather than the self-sufficient, all-powerful God of Scripture (Ps 50:12). The Bible affirms that God is both transcendent and immanent, and he needs nothing outside himself.

Finally, panentheism fails to take seriously a biblical understanding of the triune God, who is inherently relational and self-giving. Because God is relational by nature (as Father, Son, and Spirit—the "divine family"), he creates with relationship in mind. God engages with humans on the stage of history; he suffers with humans and even endures great suffering on the cross. The biblical God is not detached; rather, he gets his hands dirty, faces injustice and evil, and overcomes them by dying naked on the cross in weakness but rising from the dead in power.

PHILOSOPHY AND THE TRINITY

In large part, the history of philosophy has been an attempt to make sense of the relationship between "the one" and "the many." The pre-Socratic philosopher Parmenides argued for one unchanging reality (no plurality). By contrast, another pre-Socratic, Heraclitus, said that you can't step into the same river twice; everything is in flux, always changing. On the side of Parmenides, monism and pantheism express the one without the many—unity at the expense of significant distinction. In panentheism, we have continual flux in the world and in God, and there is nothing fixed and enduring that unites all of these changes—the many without the one.

By contrast, the Christian doctrine of the Trinity affirms both the many and the one—a robust unity and plurality: God is three persons sharing the same nature in one being. In God, we have an explanation for the universe—a coherent unity amidst diversity. This impacts everyday life as well. For example, the Christian can also affirm the place of the community (the body of Christ) and the significance of the individual (e.g., the Christian's spiritual gifts within that body) so that neither swallows up the other. Biblical theism brings together what pantheism, monism, and panentheism cannot.

PAUL COPAN

17 When this became known to everyone who lived in Ephesus, both Jews and Greeks, they became afraid, and the name of the Lord Jesus † was held in high esteem. †
18 And many who had become believers came confessing and disclosing their practices, 19 while many of those who had practiced magic † collected their books and burned them in front of everyone. So they calculated their value and found it to be fifty thousand pieces of silver. 20 In this way the word of the Lord flourished and prevailed. †

THE RIOT IN EPHESUS

21 After these events, Paul resolved by the Spirit † to pass through Macedonia and Achaia and go to Jerusalem. “After I’ve been there,” he said, “It is necessary for me to see Rome as well.” † 22 After sending to Macedonia two of those who assisted him, Timothy and Erastus, † he himself stayed in Asia for a while. † 23 About that time there was a major disturbance about the Way. † 24 For a person named Demetrius, a silversmith who made silver shrines of Artemis, provided a great deal of business for the craftsmen. 25 When he had assembled them, as well as the workers engaged in this type of business, he said: “Men, you know that our prosperity is derived from this business. 26 You see and hear that not only in Ephesus, but in almost all of Asia, this man Paul has persuaded and misled a considerable number of people by saying that gods made by hand are not gods. † 27 Not only do we run a risk that our business may be discredited, but also that the temple of the great goddess Artemis may be despised and her magnificence come to the verge of ruin — the very one all of Asia and the world worship.”
28 When they had heard this, they were filled with rage and began to cry out, “Great is Artemis of the Ephesians! ” 29 So the city was filled with confusion, and they rushed all together into the amphitheater, dragging along Gaius † and Aristarchus, † Macedonians who were Paul’s traveling companions.
30 Although Paul wanted to go in before the people, the disciples did not let him.
31 Even some of the provincial officials of Asia, who were his friends, sent word to him, pleading with him not to venture † into the amphitheater. 32 Some were shouting one thing and some another, † because the assembly was in confusion, and most of them did not know why they had come together. 33 Some Jews in the crowd gave instructions to Alexander † after they pushed him to the front.
Motioning with his hand, Alexander wanted to make his defense to the people. † 34 But when they recognized that he was a Jew, they all shouted in unison for about two hours: “Great is Artemis of the Ephesians! ” 35 When the city clerk had calmed the crowd down, he said, “People of Ephesus! What person is there who doesn’t know that the city of the Ephesians is the temple guardian of the great † Artemis, and of the image that fell from heaven? 36 Therefore, since these things are undeniable, you must keep calm and not do anything rash. 37 For you have brought these men here who are not temple robbers or blasphemers of our † goddess. 38 So if Demetrius and the craftsmen who are with him have a case against anyone, the courts are in session, and there are proconsuls. Let them bring charges against one another. † 39 But if you seek anything further, it must be decided in a legal assembly. 40 In fact, we run a risk of being charged with rioting † for what happened today, since there is no justification that we can give as a reason for this disturbance."

41 After saying this, he dismissed the assembly.

19:1 Ephesus was a free city, one of two types of cities found in the Roman Empire. Inhabitants of free cities employed a democratic, or Greek system, of government (i.e., assembly) that allowed them to follow local traditions. They were also allowed to mint their own coins. Other examples include Smyrna, Tarsus, and Thessalonica. (See the note for 21:7). Ephesus was a center for magical practices in the Mediterranean world.

19:9 The lecture hall of Tyrannus was either a meeting hall or school. Tyrannus was either the owner or a teacher in the facility.

19:12-14 Some itinerant Jewish exorcists tried to use Jesus's name to remove evil spirits. Apparently they regarded his name as a magical incantation that would provide power, having seen the extraordinary miracles performed by Paul.

19:27 Artemis, whose Roman name was Diana, was the Greek goddess of fertility and childbirth. She was esteemed as the "mother goddess" believed to provide reproductive power to her worshipers. She was so significant that the calendar month Artemision was named after her. Her temple in Ephesus was considered one of the Seven Wonders of the Ancient World. It also served as a banking center for Asia Minor.

PAUL IN MACEDONIA

20 After the uproar was over, Paul sent for the disciples, encouraged them, and after saying farewell, departed to go to Macedonia. † 2 And when he had passed through those areas and offered them many words of encouragement, he came to Greece 3 and stayed three months. The Jews plotted against him when he was about to set sail for Syria, and so he decided to go back through Macedonia. † 4 He was accompanied † by Sopater son of Pyrrhus † from Berea, Aristarchus and Secundus from Thessalonica, Gaius from Derbe, Timothy, † and Tychicus † and Trophimus † from the province of Asia. 5 These men went on ahead and waited for us in Troas, † 6 but we sailed away from Philippi after the Festival of Unleavened Bread. † In five days we reached them at Troas, where we spent seven days.

EUTYCHUS REVIVED AT TROAS

7 On the first day of the week, we † assembled to break bread. † Paul spoke to them, and since he was about to depart the next day, he kept on talking until midnight. 8 There were many lamps in the room upstairs where we were assembled, 9 and a young man named Eutychus was sitting on a window sill and sank into a deep sleep as Paul kept on talking. When he was overcome by sleep, he fell down from the third story and was picked up dead. 10 But Paul went down, bent over him, embraced him, and said, “Don’t be alarmed, because he’s alive.” † 11 After going upstairs, breaking the bread, and eating, Paul talked a long time until dawn. Then he left. 12 They brought the boy home alive and were greatly comforted.

FROM TROAS TO MILETUS

13 We went on ahead to the ship and sailed for Assos, where we were going to take Paul on board, because these were his instructions, since he himself was going by land. 14 When he met us at Assos, we took him on board and went on to Mitylene. 15 Sailing from there, the next day we arrived off Chios. The following day we crossed over to Samos, and † the day after, we came to Miletus. † 16 For Paul had decided to sail past Ephesus to avoid spending time in the province of Asia, because he was hurrying to be in Jerusalem, if possible, for the day of Pentecost. †

FAREWELL ADDRESS TO THE EPHESIAN ELDERS

17 Now from Miletus, he sent to Ephesus and summoned the elders of the church. 18 When they came to him, he said to them: “You know, from the first day I set foot in Asia, how I was with you the whole time, † 19 serving the Lord

with all humility, with tears, and during the trials that came to me through the plots of the Jews. † 20 You know that I did not avoid proclaiming to you anything that was profitable or from teaching you publicly and from house to house. 21 I testified to both Jews and Greeks about repentance toward God † and faith in our Lord Jesus. †

22 "And now I am on my way to Jerusalem, compelled by the Spirit, † not knowing what I will encounter there, † 23 except that in every town the Holy Spirit warns me that chains and afflictions are waiting for me. † 24 But I consider my life of no value to myself; my purpose is to finish my course † and the ministry † I received from the Lord Jesus, † to testify to the gospel of God's grace.

25 "And now I know that none of you, among whom I went about preaching the kingdom, will ever see me again. 26 Therefore I declare to you this day that I am innocent † of the blood of all of you, † 27 because I did not avoid declaring to you the whole plan of God. † 28 Be on guard for yourselves and for all the flock † of which the Holy Spirit has appointed you as overseers, † to shepherd the church of God, † which he purchased with his own blood. † 29 I know that after my departure savage wolves will come in among you, not sparing the flock. 30 Men will rise up even from your own number and distort the truth to lure the disciples into following them. † 31 Therefore be on the alert, remembering that night and day for three years I never stopped warning each one of you with tears. †

32 "And now † I commit you to God and to the word of his grace, † which is able to build you up and to give you an inheritance † among all who are sanctified. 33 I have not coveted anyone's silver or gold or clothing. † 34 You yourselves know that I worked with my own hands to support myself and those who are with me. † 35 In every way I've shown you that it is necessary to help the weak by laboring like this and to remember the words of the Lord Jesus, because he said, 'It is more blessed to give than to receive.' "

36 After he said this, he knelt down and prayed with all of them. † 37 There were many tears shed by everyone. They embraced Paul and kissed him,

38 grieving most of all over his statement that they would never see his face again. And they accompanied him to the ship. †

20:4 The people mentioned in this verse knew Paul from his missionary journeys among the Gentiles.

20:7 The first day of the week indicates that Christians had already begun meeting on Sunday for worship, rather than on the Sabbath day (Saturday).

20:16 The day of Pentecost likely refers to the twenty-ninth of May in AD 57.

20:23 Paul firmly believes that the Holy Spirit provides guidance in his life (13:2,4,9; 16:6-7; 19:21). While he does not know the precise details, the Spirit revealed that he will be imprisoned and afflicted.

20:27 See "The Worship and Service of God," p. 810.

20:28 The role of overseers entailed serving as guardians and protectors of God's people. Paul tells the overseers that the Holy Spirit played an important role in their appointment (see also 21:1).

WARNINGS ON THE JOURNEY TO JERUSALEM

21 After † we tore ourselves away from them, we set sail straight for Cos, the next day to Rhodes, and from there to Patara. 2 Finding a ship crossing over to Phoenicia, we boarded and set sail. 3 After we sighted Cyprus, passing to the south of it, † we sailed on to Syria and arrived at Tyre, since the ship was to unload its cargo there. 4 We sought out the disciples and stayed there seven days. Through the Spirit they told Paul not to go to Jerusalem. † 5 When our time had come to an end, we left to continue our journey, while all of them, with their wives and children, accompanied us out of the city. After kneeling down on the beach to pray, 6 we said farewell to one another and boarded the ship, and they returned home.

7 When we completed our voyage † from Tyre, we reached Ptolemais, where we greeted the brothers and sisters and stayed with them for a day. † 8 The next day we left and came to Caesarea, where we entered the house of Philip † the evangelist, † who was one of the Seven, and stayed with him. 9 This man had four virgin daughters who prophesied. † 10 After we had been there for several days, a prophet named Agabus came down from Judea. 11 He came to us, took Paul's belt, tied his own feet and hands, and said, "This is what the Holy Spirit says: 'In this way the Jews in Jerusalem will bind the man who owns this belt and deliver him over to the Gentiles.' " † 12 When we heard this, both we and the local people pleaded with him not to go up to Jerusalem.
13 Then Paul replied, "What are you doing, weeping and breaking my heart? For I am ready not only to be bound but also to die in Jerusalem for the name of the Lord Jesus." † 14 Since he would not be persuaded, we said no more except, "The Lord's will be done." †

CONFLICT OVER THE GENTILE MISSION

15 After this we got ready and went up to Jerusalem. 16 Some of the disciples from Caesarea also went with us and brought us to Mnason of Cyprus, an early disciple, with whom we were to stay. †
17 When we reached Jerusalem, the brothers and sisters welcomed us warmly. † 18 The following day Paul went in with us to James, and all the elders were present. † 19 After greeting them, he reported in detail what God had done among the Gentiles through his ministry. † 20 When they heard it, they glorified God and said, "You see, brother, how many thousands of Jews there are who have believed, and they are all zealous † for the law. 21 But they have been informed about you — that you are teaching all the Jews who are among the Gentiles to abandon Moses, telling them not to circumcise their children or to live according to our customs. † 22 So what is to be done? † They will certainly hear that you've come. 23 Therefore do what we tell you: We have four men who have made a vow. 24 Take these men, purify yourself along with them, and pay for them to get their heads shaved. Then everyone will know that what they were told about you amounts to nothing, but that you yourself are also careful about observing the law. † 25 With regard to the Gentiles who have believed, we have written a letter containing our decision that † they should keep themselves from food sacrificed to idols, from blood, from what is strangled, and from sexual immorality."

THE RIOT IN THE TEMPLE

26 So the next day, Paul took the men, having purified himself along with them, and entered the temple, announcing the completion of the purification days when the offering would be made for each of them. † 27 When the seven days were nearly over, some Jews from the province of Asia saw him in the temple, stirred up the whole crowd, and seized him, † 28 shouting, "Fellow Israelites, help! This is the man who teaches everyone everywhere against our people, our law, and this place. What's more, he also brought Greeks into the temple and has defiled this holy place." † 29 For they had previously seen Trophimus the Ephesian in the city with him, and they supposed that Paul had brought him into the temple. †

30 The whole city was stirred up, and the people rushed together. They seized Paul, dragged him out of the temple, and at once the gates were shut. †

31 As they were trying to kill him, word went up to the commander of the regiment that all Jerusalem was in chaos. 32 Taking along soldiers and centurions, he immediately ran down to them. Seeing the commander and the soldiers, they stopped beating Paul. 33 Then the commander approached, took him into custody, and ordered him to be bound with two chains. † He asked who he was and what he had done. 34 Some in the crowd were shouting one thing and some another. Since he was not able to get reliable information because of the uproar, he ordered him to be taken into the barracks. † 35 When Paul got to the steps, he had to be carried by the soldiers because of the violence of the crowd, 36 for the mass of people followed, yelling, "Get rid of him! " †

PAUL'S DEFENSE BEFORE THE JERUSALEM MOB

37 As he was about to be brought into the barracks, Paul said to the commander, "Am I allowed to say something to you? "

He replied, “You know how to speak Greek? 38 Aren’t you the Egyptian who started a revolt some time ago and led four thousand men of the Assassins into the wilderness? ” †

39 Paul said, “I am a Jewish man from Tarsus of Cilicia, † a citizen of an important city. Now I ask you, let me speak to the people.”

40 After he had given permission, Paul stood on the steps and motioned with his hand to the people. When there was a great hush, he addressed them in Aramaic: † †

21:7 Ptolemais was a Roman colony—a city colonized by Romans (e.g., veterans, freed slaves) that mirrored life in Rome in matters such as government. Many inhabitants of such a colony possessed Roman citizenship. Other Roman colonies included Pisidian Antioch, Lystra, Iconium, Troas, Philippi, and Corinth. See the note for Acts 19:1.

21:10-11 The prophet Agabus acts out what will happen to Paul. His behavior is similar to that of certain OT prophets (e.g., I1Kg 11:29-39; Is 20:2-4; Jr 27:1-22).

21:21-25 Rumors had been circulating that Paul taught Jews living among the Gentiles to disregard the law of Moses. To silence the rumors and demonstrate that Paul is not dismissive toward the law, the elders proposed that he purify himself (see the note on v. 26) and provide financial assistance to four men who had taken a Nazarite vow (Nm 6:2-21). People taking such a vow dedicated themselves to the Lord for a period (e.g., one month), during which time they refrained from drinking wine or cutting their hair. When the vow came to an end, they shaved their heads and offered the hair and other items (e.g., a lamb, ram, bread) to the Lord at the temple in Jerusalem. The many offerings required of a worshiper could be rather expensive, which is why the elders propose that Paul pay for the four men’s offerings. Nevertheless, the elders did not request that Paul take a Nazarite vow. They also did not request that he compromise the gospel—to behave in a manner that suggests keeping the law is necessary for salvation—a position that the Jerusalem Council and the elders rejected. They asked him to act in a manner that demonstrates respect for the law and Jewish tradition for the purpose of unity.

21:26 For Paul and the four men, the seven-day purification ritual likely involved immersion in one of the large pools in Jerusalem—either the Pool of Siloam or the Pool of Bethsaida. The act symbolized a rededication of oneself to God and personal repentance.

21:27-29 Paul is seized in the temple when Jews from the province of Asia accuse him of bringing Trophimus the Ephesian (a Gentile) into the temple, thus defiling it. Warning signs in both Latin and Greek were inscribed on a stone wall separating the court of the Gentiles from the inner courts of the temple. The inscriptions declared that Gentiles would be executed if they entered further.

21:37-38 The Roman commander, Claudius Lysias, was surprised that Paul spoke Greek. He also mistook Paul for an Egyptian false prophet and revolutionary. According to Josephus (Ant. 20.169–72; J.W. 2.261–63), when Felix was procurator of Judea (AD 52–59), a certain Egyptian led revolutionaries through the desert to the Mount of Olives. He promised that Jerusalem's walls would fall, and he would lead them into the city. The Romans put down the effort and killed many, but the Egyptian escaped. Claudius appears to have confused Paul with the revolutionary.

21:39 In order to correct the case of mistaken identity, Paul announced that he is a Jew and a citizen of Tarsus—a respected and important city in ancient times.

22 "Brothers and fathers, listen now to my defense before you." 2 When they heard that he was addressing them in Aramaic, † they became even quieter. † 3 He † continued, "I am a Jew, born in Tarsus of Cilicia but brought up in this city, educated at the feet of Gamaliel † according to the law of our ancestors. I was zealous for God, just as all of you are today. † 4 I persecuted this Way † to the death, arresting and putting both men and women in jail, † 5 as both the high priest and the whole council of elders can testify about me. After I received letters from them to the brothers, I traveled to Damascus to arrest those who were there and bring them to Jerusalem to be punished. †

PAUL'S TESTIMONY

6 "As † I was traveling and approaching Damascus, about noon an intense light from heaven suddenly flashed around me. 7 I fell to the ground and heard a voice saying to me, 'Saul, Saul, why are you persecuting me? ' 8 "I answered, 'Who are you, Lord? '
"He said to me, 'I am Jesus of Nazareth, the one you are persecuting.' 9 Now those who were with me saw the light, † but they did not hear the voice of the one who was speaking to me. † 10 "I said, 'What should I do, Lord? '
"The Lord told me, 'Get up and go into Damascus, and there you will be told everything that you have been assigned to do.' 11 "Since I couldn't see because of the brightness of the light, † I was led by the hand by those who were with me, and went into Damascus. † 12 Someone named Ananias, a devout man according to the law, who had a good reputation with all the Jews living there, † 13 came and stood by me and said, 'Brother

Saul, regain your sight.’ And in that very hour I looked up and saw him. 14 And he said, ‘The God of our ancestors has appointed † you to know his will, to see † the Righteous One, † and to hear the words from his mouth, 15 since you will be a witness for him to all people of what you have seen and heard. † 16 And now, why are you delaying? Get up and be baptized, and wash away your sins, † calling on his name.’ † 17 “After I returned to Jerusalem and was praying in the temple, I fell into a trance † 18 and saw him telling me, ‘Hurry and get out of Jerusalem quickly, because they will not accept your testimony about me.’ 19 “But I said, ‘Lord, they know that in synagogue after synagogue I had those who believed in you imprisoned and beaten. † 20 And when the blood of your witness Stephen was being shed, I stood there giving approval † and guarding the clothes of those who killed him.’ †
21 “He said to me, ‘Go, because I will send you far away to the Gentiles.’ ” †

PAUL’S ROMAN PROTECTION

22 They listened to him up to this point. Then they raised their voices, shouting, “Wipe this man off the face of the earth! He should not be allowed to live! ” † 23 As they were yelling and flinging aside their garments and throwing dust into the air, † 24 the commander ordered him to be brought into the barracks, directing that he be interrogated with the scourge to discover the reason they were shouting against him like this. 25 As they stretched him out for the lash, Paul said to the centurion standing by, “Is it legal for you to scourge a man who is a Roman citizen and is uncondemned? ” † 26 When the centurion heard this, he went and reported to the commander, saying, “What are you going to do? For this man is a Roman citizen.” 27 The commander came and said to him, “Tell me, are you a Roman citizen? ”
“Yes,” he said.
28 The commander replied, “I bought this citizenship for a large amount of money.”
“But I was born a citizen,” Paul said.
29 So those who were about to examine him withdrew from him immediately.
The commander too was alarmed when he realized Paul was a Roman citizen and he had bound him. †

PAUL BEFORE THE SANHEDRIN

30 The next day, since he wanted to find out exactly why Paul was being accused by the Jews, he released him † and instructed the chief priests and all the Sanhedrin to convene. † He brought Paul down and placed him before them.

22:3 At some point—it is impossible to know precisely when—Paul moved from Tarsus to Jerusalem and studied under the famed rabbi, Gamaliel (see 5:34-39). Under Gamaliel, Paul received an excellent education in the Pharisaic tradition according to the law of their ancestors.

22:25 Roman citizens held a privileged status not possessed by most inhabitants of the empire. Citizenship ensured the right to a fair trial, exemption from specific forms of punishment like scourging or crucifixion, and the right to have one's case heard before a higher court (e.g., the emperor or his representative). Most likely Paul received his citizenship at birth due to a noble deed performed by one of his ancestors. See also "Church and State," p. 1374.

22:28 While both men are Roman citizens, Paul is technically the Roman commander's social superior due to the fact that he was born a citizen while the commander bought his citizenship for a large amount of money (i.e., he bribed a Roman official). The commander may have hoped that Paul was a social inferior, which would have resulted in a lighter punishment should Paul have sought legal compensation. It is likely that Claudius, the commander, purchased his citizenship during the reign of the Roman emperor Claudius (AD 41–54) since people obtaining citizenship received the nomen (middle name) of the emperor.

23 Paul looked straight at the Sanhedrin and said, "Brothers, I have lived my life before God in all good conscience † to this day." 2 The high priest Ananias ordered those who were standing next to him to strike him on the mouth. † 3 Then Paul said to him, "God is going to strike you, you whitewashed wall! You are sitting there judging me according to the law, and yet in violation of the law are you ordering me to be struck? " †

4 Those standing nearby said, "Do you dare revile God's high priest? "

5 "I did not know, brothers, that he was the high priest," replied Paul. "For it is written, You must not speak evil of a ruler of your people." † † 6 When Paul realized that one part of them were Sadducees and the other part were Pharisees, he cried out in the Sanhedrin, “Brothers, I am a Pharisee, a son of Pharisees. † I am being judged because of the hope of the resurrection of the dead! ” †

7 When he said this, a dispute broke out between the Pharisees and the Sadducees, and the assembly was divided. 8 For the Sadducees say there is no resurrection, † and neither angel nor spirit, but the Pharisees affirm them all.
9 The shouting grew loud, and some of the scribes of the Pharisees’ † party got up and argued vehemently: “We find nothing evil in this man. † What if a spirit or an angel has spoken to him? ” † †
10 When the dispute became violent, the commander feared that Paul might be torn apart by them and ordered the troops to go down, take him away from them, and bring him into the barracks. † 11 The following night, the Lord stood by him and said, “Have courage! For as you have testified about me in Jerusalem, so it is necessary for you to testify in Rome.” †

THE PLOT AGAINST PAUL

12 When it was morning, the Jews formed a conspiracy and bound themselves under a curse not to eat or drink until they had killed Paul. † 13 There were more than forty who had formed this plot. 14 These men went to the chief priests and elders and said, “We have bound ourselves under a solemn curse that we won’t eat anything until we have killed Paul. 15 So now you, along with the Sanhedrin, make a request to the commander that he bring him down to you † as if you were going to investigate his case more thoroughly. But, before he gets near, we are ready to kill him.” †
16 But the son of Paul’s sister, hearing about their ambush, came and entered the barracks and reported it to Paul. 17 Paul called one of the centurions and said, “Take this young man to the commander, because he has something to report to him.”
18 So he took him, brought him to the commander, and said, “The prisoner Paul called me and asked me to bring this young man to you, because he has something to tell you.”
19 The commander took him by the hand, led him aside, and inquired privately, “What is it you have to report to me? ”

20 “The Jews,” he said, “have agreed to ask you to bring Paul down to the Sanhedrin tomorrow, as though they are going to hold a somewhat more careful inquiry about him. 21 Don’t let them persuade you, because there are more than forty of them lying in ambush — men who have bound themselves under a curse not to eat or drink until they have killed him. Now they are ready, waiting for your consent.” † 22 So the commander dismissed the young man and instructed him, “Don’t tell anyone that you have informed me about this.”

TO CAESAREA BY NIGHT

23 He summoned two of his centurions and said, “Get two hundred soldiers ready with seventy cavalry and two hundred spearmen to go to Caesarea at nine tonight. † † 24 Also provide mounts for Paul to ride and bring him safely to Felix the governor.”
25 He wrote the following letter: †
26 Claudius Lysias, To the most excellent governor Felix:
Greetings. †
27 When this man had been seized by the Jews and was about to be killed by them, I arrived with my troops and rescued him because I learned that he is a Roman citizen. † 28 Wanting to know the charge they were accusing him of, I brought him down before their Sanhedrin. 29 I found out that the accusations were concerning questions of their law, † and that there was no charge that merited death or imprisonment. † 30 When I was informed that there was a plot against the man, † † I sent him to you right away. I also ordered his accusers † to state their case against him in your presence. † 31 So the soldiers took Paul during the night and brought him to Antipatris as they were ordered. 32 The next day, they returned to the barracks, allowing the cavalry to go on with him. 33 When these men entered Caesarea and delivered the letter to the governor, they also presented Paul to him. † 34 After he † read it, he asked what province he was from. When he learned he was from Cilicia, † 35 he said, “I will give you a hearing whenever your accusers also get here.” He ordered that he be kept under guard in Herod’s palace. † †

23:1 The Sanhedrin was the Jewish Supreme Court. Though Pharisees were included in this body, the Sadducees occupied the majority of seats. See also note on Ac 4:5-6.

23:6-8 Paul, trained in the Pharisaic tradition, sought to gain support from at least some members of the Sanhedrin by publicly identifying himself as a Pharisee and appealing to their belief in the resurrection. The Pharisees affirmed this teaching, while the Sadducees rejected it.

23:11 The Lord revealed himself to Paul in a vision to encourage him. He affirmed that Paul would testify about him in Rome, as in Jerusalem.

23:23-24 Taking great caution to keep Paul the Roman citizen safe, Claudius commissioned a large contingent of soldiers, cavalrymen, and spearmen (470 in total) to transport Paul from Jerusalem to Caesarea at night. Paul will be taken to Felix the governor, who served from AD 52–59. Prior to serving in that role, Felix had been a slave of Antonia, the mother of the Roman emperor, Claudius.

23:31-32 Paul and his Roman guard traveled about thirty-five miles northwest of Jerusalem to Antipatris and spent the night. Antipatris was named after the father of Herod the Great, Antipater. Paul and his guard completed the thirty-one mile journey to Caesarea the following day.

23:35 Felix imprisoned Paul in the palace built by Herod the Great sometime between 22–10 BC. It was located by the sea and included rooms in which prisoners were kept.

THE ACCUSATION AGAINST PAUL

24 Five days later Ananias † the high priest came down with some elders and a lawyer named Tertullus. These men presented their case against Paul to the governor. † 2 When Paul was called in, Tertullus began to accuse him and said: “We enjoy great peace because of you, and reforms are taking place for the benefit of this nation because of your foresight. 3 We acknowledge this in every way and everywhere, most excellent † Felix, with utmost gratitude.
4 But, so that I will not burden you any further, I request that you would be kind enough to give us a brief hearing. 5 For we have found this man to be a plague, † an agitator † among all the Jews throughout the Roman world, and a ringleader of the sect of the Nazarenes. † 6 He even tried to desecrate the temple, and so we apprehended him. † By examining him yourself you will be able to discern the truth about these charges we are bringing against him.” 9 The Jews also joined in the attack, alleging that these things were true.

PAUL’S DEFENSE BEFORE FELIX

10 When the governor motioned for him to speak, Paul replied: “Because I know you have been a judge of this nation for many years, I am glad to offer my defense in what concerns me. † 11 You can verify for yourself that it is no more than twelve days since I went up to worship in Jerusalem. † 12 They didn’t find me arguing with anyone or causing a disturbance among the crowd, either in the temple or in the synagogues or anywhere in the city. † 13 Neither can they prove the charges they are now making against me. 14 But I admit this to you: I worship the God of my ancestors according to the Way, † which they call a sect, believing everything that is in accordance with the law and written in the prophets. † 15 I have a hope in God, which these men themselves also accept, that there will be a resurrection, † † both of the righteous and the unrighteous. † 16 I always strive to have a clear conscience † toward God and men. 17 After many years, I came to bring charitable gifts and offerings to my people. † 18 While I was doing this, some Jews from Asia found me ritually purified in the temple, without a crowd and without any uproar. † 19 It is they who ought to be here before you to bring charges, if they have anything against me. 20 Or let these men here state what wrongdoing they found in me when I stood before the Sanhedrin, 21 other than this one statement I shouted while standing among them, ‘Today I am on trial before you concerning the resurrection of the dead.’ ”

THE VERDICT POSTPONED

22 Since Felix was well informed about the Way, † he adjourned the hearing, saying, “When Lysias the commander comes down, I will decide your case.” 23 He ordered that the centurion keep Paul under guard, though he could have some freedom, and that he should not prevent any of his friends from meeting † his needs. †

24 Several days later, when Felix came with his wife Drusilla, who was Jewish, he sent for Paul and listened to him on the subject of faith in Christ Jesus.

25 Now as he spoke about righteousness, self-control, and the judgment to come, † Felix became afraid and replied, “Leave for now, but when I have an opportunity I’ll call for you.” 26 At the same time he was also hoping that Paul would offer him money. † So he sent for him quite often and conversed with him.

27 After two years had passed, Porcius Festus † succeeded Felix, and because Felix wanted to do the Jews a favor, † he left Paul in prison. †

24:1 The high priest, Ananias, along with Jewish elders and Tertullus, travelled from Jerusalem to Caesarea to make their case against Paul. Tertullus was a professional lawyer hired by the Jews. Paul would defend himself.

24:2-3 Like many professional attorneys of his day, Tertullus began his presentation by flattering the judge. In truth, Felix was a ruthless leader who hunted down and oppressed those who opposed him.

24:5 The Christian movement is here described as the sect of the Nazarenes, which draws on Jesus’s connection to Nazareth.

24:15 Several Jewish writings affirmed belief in a general resurrection, in which all people will be resurrected for the purpose of judgment (cp. Dn 12:2; Ezra 7:32-35; Jn 5:28-29).

24:22 Felix was familiar with Christianity, though Luke does not indicate how he became knowledgeable of the Way. Regardless, it is not surprising, since thousands had become Christians in Jerusalem, Caesarea, and throughout Palestine. Felix was married to a Jewish woman named Drusilla (v. 24).

24:25 Paul’s comments about righteousness, self-control, and the judgment to come frightened Felix, for his personal life was marked by great immorality. Approximately five years prior to Paul’s trial, Felix, by means of a magician, persuaded Drusilla, the fourteen-year-old wife of Azizus, king of Emesa in Syria, to leave her husband to become his third wife. Drusilla was the daughter of Herod Agrippa I (see 12:19-23).

24:26 Felix hoped for a bribe from Paul in exchange for a more speedy and favorable verdict.

24:27 Felix left Paul in prison for two years. Due to poor leadership, Felix was replaced in AD 59 by Porcius Festus. The latter displayed good leadership ability and died in AD 62.

APPEAL TO CAESAR

25 Three days after Festus arrived in the province, he went up to Jerusalem from Caesarea. † 2 The chief priests and the leaders of the Jews presented their case against Paul to him; and they appealed, † 3 asking for a favor against Paul, that Festus summon him to Jerusalem. They were, in fact, preparing an ambush along the road to kill him. 4 Festus, however, answered that Paul should be kept at Caesarea, and that he himself was about to go there shortly. † 5 "Therefore," he said, "let those of you who have authority go down with me and accuse him, if he has done anything wrong."
6 When he had spent not more than eight or ten days among them, he went down to Caesarea. The next day, seated at the tribunal, he commanded Paul to be brought in. † 7 When he arrived, the Jews who had come down from Jerusalem stood around him and brought many serious charges that they were not able to prove. † 8 Then Paul made his defense: "Neither against the Jewish law, † nor against the temple, nor against Caesar have I sinned in any way." 9 But Festus, wanting to do the Jews a favor, † replied to Paul, "Are you willing to go up to Jerusalem to be tried before me there on these charges? " 10 Paul replied: "I am standing at Caesar's tribunal, where I ought to be tried. I have done no wrong to the Jews, as even you yourself know very well. 11 If then I did anything wrong and am deserving of death, I am not trying to escape death; but if there is nothing to what these men accuse me of, no one can give me up to them. I appeal to Caesar! " † 12 Then after Festus conferred with his council, he replied, "You have appealed to Caesar; to Caesar you will go."

KING AGRIPPA AND BERNICE VISIT FESTUS

13 Several days later, King Agrippa and Bernice arrived in Caesarea and paid a courtesy call on Festus. 14 Since they were staying there several days, Festus presented Paul's case to the king, saying, "There's a man who was left as a prisoner by Felix. 15 When I was in Jerusalem, the chief priests and the elders of the Jews presented their case and asked that he be condemned. † 16 I answered them that it is not the Roman custom to give someone up † before the accused faces the accusers and has an opportunity for a defense against the charges. †

17 So when they had assembled here, I did not delay. The next day I took my seat at the tribunal and ordered the man to be brought in. 18 The accusers stood up but brought no charge against him of the evils I was expecting. 19 Instead they had some disagreements † with him about their own religion and about a certain Jesus, a dead man Paul claimed to be alive. 20 Since I was at a loss in a dispute over such things, I asked him if he wanted to go to Jerusalem and be tried there regarding these matters. 21 But when Paul appealed to be held for trial by the Emperor, † I ordered him to be kept in custody until I could send him to Caesar."

22 Agrippa said to Festus, "I would like to hear the man myself."

"Tomorrow you will hear him," he replied. †

PAUL BEFORE AGRIPPA

23 So the next day, Agrippa and Bernice † came with great pomp and entered the auditorium with the military commanders and prominent men of the city. When Festus gave the command, Paul was brought in. 24 Then Festus said: "King Agrippa and all men present with us, you see this man. The whole Jewish community has appealed to me concerning him, both in Jerusalem and here, shouting that he should not live any longer. † 25 I found that he had not done anything deserving of death, but when he himself appealed to the Emperor, I decided to send him. † 26 I have nothing definite to write to my lord about him. Therefore, I have brought him before all of you, and especially before you, King Agrippa, so that after this examination is over, I may have something to write. 27 For it seems unreasonable to me to send a prisoner without indicating the charges against him."

25:11-12 Roman citizens accused of a crime were afforded the opportunity to have their cases heard by either the emperor or his representative. In Paul's case, this would have been Emperor Nero or Sextus Afranius Burrus, the prefect of the Praetorian Guard. Burris served as prefect from AD 51–62.

25:13 King Agrippa, also known as Herod Agrippa II (AD 27–100), was the son of Herod Agrippa I and grandson of Herod the Great. Agrippa ruled over various northern areas of Palestine as well as parts of Galilee, Perea, and the temple in Jerusalem. His authority over the temple, which included the authority to appoint the high priest, inclined him to take interest in Paul's case. Agrippa lived with Bernice for about fifteen years. She was his sister and the older sister of Drusilla, who was married to Felix. Agrippa was criticized by some for the apparently incestuous relationship with Bernice. He was the last ruler in the Herodian line.

25:26 Festus does not know how to present Paul's case to Caesar. Paul is not guilty of sedition against the emperor, so Festus hopes this hearing will clarify the charges against him. Roman law required a report from Festus.

PAUL'S DEFENSE BEFORE AGRIPPA

26 Agrippa said to Paul, "You have permission to speak for yourself."
Then Paul stretched out his hand and began his defense: 2 "I consider myself fortunate, that it is before you, King Agrippa, I am to make my defense today against all the accusations of the Jews, 3 especially since you are very knowledgeable about all the Jewish customs and controversies. Therefore I beg you to listen to me patiently.
4 "All the Jews know my way of life from my youth, which was spent from the beginning among my own people and in Jerusalem. † 5 They have known me for a long time, if they are willing to testify, that according to the strictest sect of our religion I lived as a Pharisee. † 6 And now I stand on trial because of the hope † in what God promised † to our ancestors, 7 the promise our twelve tribes hope to reach as they earnestly serve him night and day. King Agrippa, I am being accused by the Jews because of this hope. † 8 Why do any of you consider it incredible that God raises the dead? 9 In fact, I myself was convinced that it was necessary to do many things in opposition to the name of Jesus of Nazareth. † 10 I actually did this in Jerusalem, and I locked up many of the saints in prison, since I had received authority for that from the chief priests.
When they were put to death, I was in agreement against them. † 11 In all the synagogues I often punished them and tried to make them blaspheme. † Since I was terribly enraged at them, I pursued them even to foreign cities.

PAUL'S ACCOUNT OF HIS CONVERSION AND COMMISSION

12 "I was traveling to Damascus under † these circumstances with authority and a commission from the chief priests. 13 King Agrippa, while on the road at midday, I saw a light from heaven brighter than the sun, shining around me and those traveling with me. 14 We all fell to the ground, and I heard a voice speaking to me in Aramaic, † ‘Saul, Saul, why are you persecuting me? It is hard for you to kick against the goads.’ † 15 “I asked, ‘Who are you, Lord? ’

“And the Lord replied: ‘I am Jesus, the one you are persecuting. 16 But get up and stand on your feet. For I have appeared to you for this purpose, to appoint you as a servant and a witness of what you have seen and will see of me. † 17 I will rescue you from your people and from the Gentiles. I am sending you to them † 18 to open their eyes † so that they may turn † from darkness to light and from the power of Satan to God, that they may receive forgiveness of sins and a share among those who are sanctified by faith in me.’ †
19 “So then, King Agrippa, I was not disobedient to the heavenly vision. 20 Instead, I preached to those in Damascus first, and to those in Jerusalem and in all the region of Judea, and to the Gentiles, that they should repent and turn to God, and do works worthy of repentance. † 21 For this reason the Jews seized me in the temple and were trying to kill me. 22 To this very day, I have had help from God, and I stand and testify to both small and great, saying nothing other than what the prophets and Moses said would take place † — 23 that the Messiah must suffer, and that, as the first to rise from the dead, he would proclaim light to our people and to the Gentiles.” †

AGRIPPA NOT QUITE PERSUADED

24 As he was saying these things in his defense, Festus exclaimed in a loud voice, “You’re out of your mind, † Paul! Too much study is driving you mad.”
25 But Paul replied, “I’m not out of my mind, most excellent Festus. On the contrary, I’m speaking words of truth and good judgment. † 26 For the king knows about these matters, and I can speak boldly to him. For I am convinced that none of these things has escaped his notice, since this was not done in a corner. 27 King Agrippa, do you believe the prophets? I know you believe.”
28 Agrippa said to Paul, “Are you going to persuade me to become a Christian so easily? ” † 29 “I wish before God,” replied Paul, “that whether easily or with difficulty, † not only you but all who listen to me today might become as I am — except for these chains.” †

30 The king, the governor, Bernice, and those sitting with them got up, 31 and when they had left they talked with each other and said, “This man is not doing anything to deserve death or imprisonment.” †
32 Agrippa said to Festus, “This man could have been released if he had not appealed to Caesar.” †

26:3 See the note for 25:13. Agrippa would have been knowledgeable of Jewish customs and controversies due to the fact that Jerusalem fell under his authority.

26:14 A goad was a long stick with a pointed end. In ancient times, a farmer might jab a horse or ox with a goad to encourage it to move forward. The animal could react by kicking at the goad. Such a response was pointless, however. It was better for the creature to yield to the farmer’s will. Jesus’s word to Saul, It is hard for you to kick against the goads, is a proverbial statement suggesting it is futile for Saul to struggle against God’s plan for his church or—perhaps—Saul’s life.

26:24 Festus would have found Paul’s teaching about the Messiah incomprehensible. First, being familiar with Jewish messianic expectation, which was political in nature, he would not have understood how the Messiah could have suffered and died (26:23). Second, the idea of resurrection was ludicrous to Roman thought. It is little wonder that Festus charged Paul as being out of [his] mind.

26:26 The expression, not done in a corner, is a figure of speech meaning these events occurred in an open fashion and were well known.

SAILING FOR ROME

27 When it was decided that we were to sail to Italy, they handed over Paul and some other prisoners to a centurion named Julius, of the Imperial Regiment. † † 2 When we had boarded a ship of Adramyttium, we put to sea, intending to sail to ports along the coast of Asia. Aristarchus, a Macedonian of Thessalonica, was with us. † 3 The next day we put in at Sidon, and Julius treated Paul kindly and allowed him to go to his friends to receive their care. † 4 When we had put out to sea from there, we sailed along the northern coast † of Cyprus because the winds were against us. 5 After sailing through the open sea off Cilicia and Pamphylia, we reached Myra in Lycia. † 6 There the centurion found an Alexandrian ship sailing for Italy and put us on board. 7 Sailing slowly for many days, with difficulty we arrived off Cnidus. Since the wind did not allow us to approach it, we sailed along the south side of Crete off Salmone. 8 With still more difficulty we sailed along the coast and came to a place called Fair Havens near the city of Lasea.

PAUL'S ADVICE IGNORED

9 By now much time had passed, and the voyage was already dangerous. Since the Day of Atonement † † was already over, Paul gave his advice 10 and told them, "Men, I can see that this voyage is headed toward disaster and heavy loss, not only of the cargo and the ship but also of our lives." 11 But the centurion paid attention to the captain and the owner of the ship rather than to what Paul said. † 12 Since the harbor was unsuitable to winter in, the majority decided to set sail from there, hoping somehow to reach Phoenix, a harbor on Crete † facing the southwest and northwest, and to winter there.

STORM-TOSSED SHIP

13 When a gentle south wind sprang up, they thought they had achieved their purpose. They weighed anchor and sailed along the shore of Crete. 14 But before long, a fierce wind called the "northeaster" rushed down from the island.
15 Since the ship was caught and unable to head into the wind, we gave way to it and were driven along. 16 After running under the shelter of a little island called Cauda, † we were barely able to get control of the skiff. 17 After hoisting it up, they used ropes and tackle and girded the ship. Fearing they would run aground on the Syrtis, they lowered the drift-anchor, and in this way they were driven along. 18 Because we were being severely battered by the storm, they began to jettison the cargo the next day. † 19 On the third day, they threw the ship's tackle overboard with their own hands. 20 For many days neither sun nor stars appeared, and the severe storm kept raging. Finally all hope was fading that we would be saved.

21 Since they had been without food for a long time, Paul then stood up among them and said, "You men should have followed my advice not to sail from Crete and sustain this damage and loss. 22 Now I urge you to take courage, because there will be no loss of any of your lives, but only of the ship. 23 For last night an angel of the God I belong to and serve stood by me † 24 and said, ‘Don’t be afraid, Paul. It is necessary for you to appear before Caesar. And indeed, God has graciously given you all those who are sailing with you.’ 25 So take courage, men, because I believe God that it will be just the way it was told to me. †

26 But we have to run aground on some island.” † 27 When the fourteenth night came, we were drifting in the Adriatic Sea, and about midnight the sailors thought they were approaching land. 28 They took soundings and found it to be a hundred and twenty feet † deep; when they had sailed a little farther and sounded again, they found it to be ninety feet † deep.
29 Then, fearing we might run aground on the rocks, they dropped four anchors from the stern and prayed for daylight to come. 30 Some sailors tried to escape from the ship; they had let down the skiff into the sea, pretending that they were going to put out anchors from the bow. 31 Paul said to the centurion and the soldiers, “Unless these men stay in the ship, you cannot be saved.” 32 Then the soldiers cut the ropes holding the skiff and let it drop away.
33 When it was about daylight, Paul urged them all to take food, saying, “Today is the fourteenth day that you have been waiting and going without food, having eaten nothing. 34 So I urge you to take some food. For this is for your survival, since none of you will lose a hair from your head.” † 35 After he said these things and had taken some bread, he gave thanks to God in the presence of all of them, and after he broke it, he began to eat. † 36 They all were encouraged and took food themselves. 37 In all there were 276 of us on the ship. † 38 When they had eaten enough, they began to lighten the ship by throwing the grain overboard into the sea.

SHIPWRECK

39 When daylight came, they did not recognize the land but sighted a bay with a beach. They planned to run the ship ashore if they could. † 40 After cutting loose the anchors, they left them in the sea, at the same time loosening the ropes that held the rudders. Then they hoisted the foresail to the wind and headed for the beach. 41 But they struck a sandbar and ran the ship aground. The bow jammed fast and remained immovable, while the stern began to break up by the pounding of the waves. 42 The soldiers’ plan was to kill the prisoners so that no one could swim away and escape. [43] But the centurion kept them from carrying out their plan because he wanted to save Paul, and so he ordered those who could swim to jump overboard first and get to land. [44] The rest were to follow, some on planks and some on debris from the ship. In this way, everyone safely reached the shore. †

27:2 Paul began his journey to Rome on a ship arriving from Adramyttium, a port on the western side modern Turkey. The captain of the vessel planned to travel along the coast of Asia, stopping at various ports until finding a ship headed to Rome. This was normal practice for captains who sailed on the Mediterranean at that time.

27:3 The ship traveled from Caesarea to Sidon in Phoenicia, about seventy miles north of Caesarea. In an act of kindness, the centurion Julius allowed Paul to disembark and visit friends, most likely fellow Christians. Christian missionaries first settled in Phoenicia due to the persecution in Jerusalem—which, ironically, had been spearheaded by Saul (11:19).

27:7-8 The captain of the Alexandrian ship intended to sail north of Crete, but because of difficulty with winds from the northwest, he altered course and sailed along the south side of Crete, docking at the small port of Fair Havens. Most likely they traveled during mid-October. (See the note for 27:9.) 27:9 Many scholars contend that Paul's voyage took place in AD 59, which means that the Jewish Day of Atonement occurred on October 5. As Luke's comments suggest, sailing during this period was unsafe. It was risky from September 14 to November 11, and extremely dangerous from November 12 to March 10, as ancient sources indicate.

27:13-14 A gentle south wind persuaded the crew that it was safe to begin the thirty-six mile journey to Phoenix, but a fierce northeaster forced the ship from its course and out into the open sea. A northeaster could contain hurricane-force winds.

27:15-16 Ancient ships were unable to withstand strong winds. Rather than fight the wind, the crew gave way to it—they shortened the sail and attempted to move forward best they could. Nevertheless, they lacked real control, and the strong winds carried the ship to the south side of an island called Cauda, which offered some protection. The skiff refers to the ship's lifeboat, which was towed behind the ship.

27:17 After hoisting . . . up the skiff (or lifeboat), they attempted to keep the ship from breaking apart by girding it with ropes and tackle. They also lowered the drift-anchor for fear that the vessel would run aground on the Syrtis. The Syrtis, located 380 miles to the south of Cauda near the North African coast, contained numerous sandbars which had doomed many ships.

27:34 Paul says none of you will lose a hair from your head because an angel had told him that God would preserve the lives of those sailing with him (27:24; see also 1Sm 14:45; 2Sm 14:11).

27:42-43 Roman soldiers paid with their own lives if their prisoners escaped. These prisoners, however, were spared because the centurion wished to preserve Paul's life.

MALTA'S HOSPITALITY

MALTA'S HOSPITALITY

28 Once safely ashore, we † then learned that the island was called Malta. † 2 The local people † showed us extraordinary kindness. They lit a fire and took us all in, since it was raining and cold. 3 As Paul gathered a bundle of brushwood and put it on the fire, a viper came out because of the heat and fastened itself on his hand. 4 When the local people saw the snake hanging from his hand, they said to one another, "This man, no doubt, is a murderer.
Even though he has escaped the sea, Justice has not allowed him to live." † 5 But he shook the snake off into the fire and suffered no harm. † 6 They expected that he would begin to swell up or suddenly drop dead. After they waited a long time and saw nothing unusual happen to him, they changed their minds and said he was a god. †

MINISTRY IN MALTA

7 Now in the area around that place was an estate belonging to the leading man of the island, named Publius, who welcomed us and entertained us hospitably for three days. 8 Publius's father was in bed suffering from fever and dysentery.
Paul went to him, and praying and laying his hands on him, he healed him. † 9 After this, the rest of those on the island who had diseases also came and were healed. 10 So they heaped many honors on us, and when we sailed, they gave us what we needed.

ROME AT LAST

11 After three months we set sail in an Alexandrian ship that had wintered at the island, with the Twin Gods † as its figurehead. 12 Putting in at Syracuse, we stayed three days.

THE EMERGENCE OF EVANGELICAL CENTERS

The emergence of evangelical centers around the world in the late twentieth and early twenty-first centuries is only the most recent of many shifts in Christian work since Pentecost (Ac 1). From its first center in Jerusalem, Antioch emerged as a mission-sending center. Alexandria, Ephesus, and Rome became centers by the end of the first century. With the legalization of the Christian faith in the fourth century, Constantinople became a center of faith, too. As the Western Empire faded in the fifth century, Christianity spread into the Celtic spheres of Western Europe. By the end of the tenth century, however, Eastern Orthodox Christianity also had spread to Russia, which would become its new center in the second Christian millennium. Even so, Christianity had faded in the Eastern Mediterranean and North Africa with the Islamic invasions of the eighth century.

As the gospel spread, different aspects of the gospel message addressed different local and regional spiritual issues and questions so that the local theologies reflected the aspect of the gospel that was most significant to that culture. The Eastern church, for instance, would orient its theology and worship around the resurrection of Christ who defeated death and sin, and around the Holy Spirit who brings regeneration and union with God. The Western church, both Roman and Protestant, would orient its theology around the sacrificial death of Jesus, while Protestants would add the authority of God's fulfilled Word, the Bible. For the African church during the Roman period, the coming of God in the flesh as Jesus Christ who demonstrated God's love and mediated our reconciliation took center stage in the affirmations of Athanasius. Thus, various local theologies arose even as Christians everywhere affirmed the same faith upon which these theologies are based.

The more modern emergence of evangelical centers around the world has its roots in the changing European situation five hundred years before it. Coinciding with the Protestant Reformation, European powers in the late fifteenth and early sixteenth centuries ventured forth in search of nautical trade routes to the Far East. These ventures began with voyages east around Africa before Columbus made his famous voyage in 1492. That same year, Ferdinand and Isabella consolidated their kingdoms and united Christian Spain by defeating the last Muslim kingdom on the Spanish peninsula.

Catholic Spain, Portugal, and France began a program not only of extending their trade, but also of extending their sovereignty over other lands. The new Protestant countries of England, Holland, Sweden, and Denmark also embarked on their own programs of expansion. The first wave of colonization resulted in communities of Catholics and Protestants in the Americas. The English, Dutch, and Swedish colonies in North America became early centers of evangelical faith out of which the First Great Awakening spread. By the mid-nineteenth century, the European powers had established global empires that controlled most of Africa, Australia, Central America, South America, and large portions of Asia.

The modern mission movement began in the context of growing British control over the subcontinent of India. William Carey went as a Baptist missionary from England. Adoniram Judson went as a Congregationalist missionary to India, but upon converting to Baptist convictions during the long voyage from New England, he went to Burma instead. Organized Baptist denominational life in the United States, known as the Triennial Convention, began as an effort to support the mission of Judson. In 1865, Hudson Taylor founded the China Inland Mission as a conservative interdenominational mission society. By its nature, this society was broadly evangelical rather than denominational in its orientation. It adopted a policy of propagating an indigenous Christianity that identified with the Chinese people rather than an imperial European power. As Britain extended its control in Africa, from Egypt southward and from South Africa northward, the Anglican Church sent missionaries into every new region that came under British rule.

While the evangelization of Asia and Africa tended to follow the pattern of colonial expansion, the spread of evangelical Christianity in Latin America proceeded in a different manner. By agreement between Spain and Portugal negotiated by Pope Alexander VI in 1493, newly discovered territories and pagan territories in the Far East were divided between the two great Catholic powers. Thus, Spain had hegemony in America west of the leading edge of South America that became Brazil. These claims extended around the globe to the Spanish territory of the Philippines. Portugal's lands extended east from Brazil to include Africa and India. Evangelical mission work in Brazil came from the United States in the mid-1800s with Methodists, Presbyterians, Episcopalians, and Baptists establishing work there once the old Spanish and Portuguese colonial power structure came to an end with the independence movement.

The gains of evangelical missions by 1900 could be called modest at best. With the dawn of the new century, however, an increasing optimism marked the gospel enterprise. The Student Volunteer Movement for Foreign Missions of the 1880s and 1890s emerged from an awakening among students at Cambridge University. John R. Mott coined the slogan of this movement: "The Evangelization of the World in this Generation." Mott organized the Edinburgh Conference of 1910 that brought together over twelve hundred missionaries from different evangelical mission societies around the world. Some declared the twentieth century to be "The Christian Century." A nondenominational evangelical gathering in Edinburgh 1910 was the last great transnational Christian gathering before the Great War of 1914. By the end of that war, most of the great imperial monarchies of the world (China, Russia, Ottoman Turk, Austria-Hungary, and Germany) had come to an end, or their empires stood on the verge of collapse (as in the case of France, Spain, Britain, and Netherlands).

Freed from colonial and imperial attachments, the gospel spread tenaciously across Asia, Africa, and Latin America during the twentieth century in the context of civil war, revolution, famine, economic depression, and global warfare. In the midst of the social, political, and economic turmoil of the twentieth century, however, a number of spiritual awakenings took place around the world in the midst of the chaos. Beginning with the Welsh Revival of 1905, which encouraged the international mission movement and the 1906 Azusa Street Revival in Los Angeles that launched the international Pentecostal Movement, awakenings also took place in Asia, Africa, and South America.

In China, the Shantung Revival prepared Chinese Christians for the horrors of World War II, the Communist Revolution, and the Cultural Revolution. A century after the Chinese Revolution of 1911 led by the Christian Dr. Sun Yat Sen, perhaps as many as a hundred million Chinese had converted to Christianity. An awakening in South Korea following the Korean War has led to approximately half the population of South Korea converting to Christianity.

An awakening in East Africa in the context of the new independence of former British colonies has led to a sudden and dramatic spread of the gospel in sub-Saharan Africa. An awakening among the evangelical and Pentecostal churches of Brazil has resulted in a significant spread of the gospel there.

The post-World War II global awakening saw a rise in local national Christian leaders around the globe who assumed the leadership role that had once belonged to the original missionaries. The gospel issues of Asia, Africa, and South America differed from the theologies of North America and Europe, rooted as they are in the traditions of the evangelization of the old Celtic peoples more than a thousand years ago. In Korea, an emphasis on prayer through the exalted Christ is prominent. In Africa and South America where the Pentecostal Movement has been particularly strong, an emphasis on the power of the Holy Spirit over all other spiritual forces and the authority of the exalted Christ over all spiritual realms has been prominent. In China, which has had a pluralistic religious tradition for thousands of years, including the practice of Taoism, Buddhism, and Confucianism alongside traditional polytheism and ancestor worship, the reality of the one Creator God has been prominent.

The massive shift in the center of Christianity away from Europe and North America during the twentieth century after the colonial period is the kind of experience the church has not seen since the mass people movements of Celtic and Russian conversion over a thousand years ago. We watch with avid interest and rejoicing as another chapter of the gospel's spread unfolds.

HARRY L. POE

13 From there, after making a circuit along the coast, † we reached Rhegium.
After one day a south wind sprang up, and the second day we came to Puteoli.
14 There we found brothers and sisters † and were invited to stay a week with them. And so we came to Rome. 15 Now the brothers and sisters from there had heard the news about us and had come to meet us as far as the Forum of Appius and the Three Taverns. When Paul saw them, he thanked God and took courage.

16 When we entered Rome, † Paul was allowed to live by himself with the soldier who guarded him. †

PAUL'S FIRST INTERVIEW WITH ROMAN JEWS

17 After three days he called together the leaders of the Jews. When they had gathered he said to them: "Brothers, although I have done nothing against our people or the customs of our ancestors, I was delivered as a prisoner from Jerusalem into the hands of the Romans. † 18 After they examined me, they wanted to release me, since there was no reason for the death penalty in my case. † 19 Because the Jews objected, I was compelled to appeal to Caesar; † even though I had no charge to bring against my people. 20 For this reason I've asked to see you and speak to you. In fact, it is for the hope of Israel that I'm wearing this chain." †
21 Then they said to him, "We haven't received any letters about you from Judea. None of the brothers has come and reported or spoken anything evil about you. 22 But we want to hear what your views are, since we know that people everywhere are speaking against this sect." †

THE RESPONSE TO PAUL'S MESSAGE

23 After arranging a day with him, many came to him at his lodging. From dawn to dusk he expounded and testified about the kingdom of God. He tried to persuade them about Jesus from both the Law of Moses and the Prophets. †
24 Some were persuaded by what he said, but others did not believe. †
25 Disagreeing among themselves, they began to leave after Paul made one statement: † "The Holy Spirit was right in saying to your † ancestors through the prophet Isaiah 26 when he said, Go to these people and say: You will always be listening, but never understanding; and you will always be looking, but never perceiving.
27 For the hearts of these people have grown callous, their ears are hard of hearing, and they have shut their eyes; otherwise they might see with their eyes and hear with their ears, understand with their heart and turn,

and I would heal them. † †
28 Therefore, let it be known to you that this salvation of God has been sent to the Gentiles; they will listen.” †

PAUL’S MINISTRY UNHINDERED

30 Paul stayed two whole years in his own rented house. And he welcomed all who visited him, 31 proclaiming the kingdom of God † and teaching about the Lord Jesus Christ with all boldness † and without hindrance.

28:1 Malta is a small island approximately fifty-eight miles south of Sicily. It was inhabited by the ancestors of the Phoenicians and became part of the Roman Empire in 218 BC.

28:4-6 When the inhabitants of Malta saw the snake hanging from Paul’s hand, they initially believed that he was a murderer whom the Roman goddess, Dike (Justice), had marked for punishment. She was the daughter of Zeus. Pagans believed she carried out judgment on people for their wrongdoing. When Paul did not die, their opinion quickly changed and they reasoned that he was a god.

28:11 The shipwrecked men probably spent November, December, and January (AD 59–60) on Malta. Sometime afterward, the crew set sail on a boat with a carving of Castor and Pollux on the bow. These Twin Gods, or twin sons of Zeus, were believed to rescue sailors in distress.

28:13-14 At the port of Puteoli, Paul and his companions encountered believers with whom they stayed for seven days. The journey from Puteoli to Rome was approximately 150 miles—about a six-day walk along the Via Appia.

28:15 On the journey along the Via Appia to Rome, Paul was met by two groups of believers, one from the Forum of Appius, a market town forty miles south of Rome, and another from the Three Taverns, a stop featuring inns that accommodated travellers, thirty-five miles south of Rome. The church in Rome may have begun when Jewish pilgrims from there were baptized after hearing Peter’s Pentecost speech in Jerusalem. Upon returning home, they began to their share beliefs about Jesus the Messiah. Alternatively, other Christians from Palestine or the Diaspora had spread the news to Rome while visiting there.

28:16 Rome was the greatest city in the Roman Empire in regard to wealth, influence, and power. When Paul arrived in AD 60, its population was approximately one million. Paul is given a degree of freedom, being allowed to live by himself, under the guard of a single soldier. This light form of custody may have been due to the centurion Julian’s assessment that Paul was not a flight risk. Through all their travels together, Paul had showed himself determined to appear before Caesar.

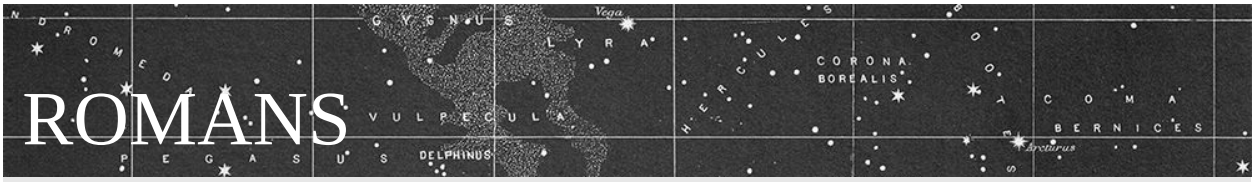
28:17-22 Paul's usual practice was to speak in the synagogue of every new city he visited. Since in Rome he was under house arrest, he had the leaders of the Jews come to him instead.

28:22 Likely the intense debate and rioting about Jesus led to Claudius's expulsion of the Jews from Rome in AD 49. If so, it is not surprising that since then people everywhere are speaking against this sect.

28:23 See "Speaking to a Non-Christian about Jesus," p. XXXV.

28:26-28 Paul cited Isaiah 6:9-10, speaking of Israel's hardness of heart and unresponsiveness to God's revelation. Paul applied this message to his hearers in Rome, declaring that this is why this salvation of God has been sent to the Gentiles. Unlike unresponsive Israel, the Gentiles will listen.

28:30-31 Paul remained in Rome for two . . . years (AD 60–62) in a rented house. It is unclear how Paul paid the rent, given that he had no income. Most likely he was supported by believers in Rome. Though Paul's house arrest was relatively comfortable, he was under military guard and forbidden to leave his house. He continued to receive visitors, taking the opportunity to proclaim the kingdom of God and teach about the Lord Jesus Christ. He most likely wrote Colossians, Philippians, Philemon, and Ephesians during this time. What happened next to Paul is somewhat of a mystery. We also do not know why Luke chose to end the story here. Paul was beheaded outside Rome, by order of Emperor Nero, sometime between AD 62–67. He either remained imprisoned until his death, or was granted a temporary release only to be arrested again. Tradition holds that Paul traveled to Spain, as he had long desired to do (1 Clem 5; Rm 16:23-24). If so, this must have occurred after his house arrest. Either way, Paul's relatively comfortable situation gave way to a more severe imprisonment in the Mamertine Prison, where Paul suffered barbaric conditions while awaiting execution.



ROMANS

INTRODUCTION

Paul's letter to the Roman house churches has been preeminent among the NT writings for its theological and pastoral influence. It focuses on the doctrine of salvation, including the practical implications for believers as they live out the salvation given to them through Jesus Christ.

CIRCUMSTANCES OF WRITING

AUTHOR: Paul the apostle is the stated and indisputable author of the book of Romans. From the book of Acts and statements in Romans, we learn that Paul wrote this letter while he was in Corinth and on his way to Jerusalem in the spring of AD 57, to deliver an offering from the Gentile churches to poor Jewish Christians (Ac 20:3; Rm 15:25-29).

BACKGROUND: All of Paul's writings grew out of his missionary/pastoral work and were about the problems and needs of local churches. The book of Romans is also of this genre, but it is the least "local" in the sense that Paul had not yet been to Rome. This letter was his opportunity to expound the good news message (the gospel). He could discuss the essence of sin, the salvation accomplished on the cross, the union of the believer with Christ, how the Spirit works in the Christian to promote holiness, the place of the Jewish people in God's plan, future things, and Christian living or ethics. Though Paul did not write Romans as a systematic theology, his somewhat orderly exposition has been the fountain for the development of that discipline.

The origin of the Roman house churches is unknown. The founding of the Roman church likely goes back to the "visitors from Rome," "both Jews and converts" who came to Jerusalem at Pentecost (Ac 2:10). Many of these visitors converted to Christianity (Ac 2:41), some of whom very likely hailed from Rome. In Acts 18:2 Luke mentioned Aquila and Priscilla, who left Rome because emperor Claudius had ordered all Jews to leave the city (AD 49). This exodus was caused by strife among Jews over "Chrestus" (Christ). The remaining Christians in Rome would be from a Gentile background. The Jewish-Gentile tensions in Rome had a long history. These tensions are somewhat reflected throughout the letter, most specifically in chapters 2, 11, and 14–15.

Rome was the primary destination of this letter. Yet some manuscripts lack the phrase "in Rome" (1:7), giving some support to the conclusion that Paul intended a wider audience for the book of Romans and sent copies to other churches.

CONTRIBUTION TO THE BIBLE

What is the gospel? The word gospel means "good news." The good news is about Jesus and what he did for us. Most Bible students would say that the gospel is outlined in 1 Corinthians 15:3-5. Romans fills in that outline and clarifies the gospel in relation to the OT promises and the Mosaic law, the role of good works, and the gift of God's righteousness. Paul emphasized righteousness and justification in this letter to a depth and detail not found elsewhere in the Bible. Sin is traced to its core in our union with Adam and the imputation of original sin. Paul also mapped out the spread of human sin and its results in both believers and nonbelievers.

There are three passages in the NT (each one long sentence in the Greek text) that contain the most important theology of the NT: John 1:14 on the incarnation; Ephesians 1:3-14 about the triune purpose and glory of God; and Romans 3:21-26 on justification, redemption, and propitiation. If a Christian understands these three sentences, he has a solid foundation for faith.

Paul, in Romans 6–8, gave the most comprehensive development of our union with Christ and the Spirit's work in us. Romans 9–11 (on the role of Israel in God's plan) has been called the key to understanding the Bible. Romans 13 is the classic NT passage on the Christian's relation to and duties to the state. Romans 14–15 covers how Christians can relate to one another yet have different opinions and convictions on nonessential religious matters.

STRUCTURE

Paul wrote thirteen of the twenty-one letters (or "epistles") contained in the NT. The four Gospels, the book of Acts, and the book of Revelation are not classified as letters. Romans is the longest of Paul's letters, and it contains the elements found in a standard letter at that time: salutation (1:1-7); thanksgiving (1:8-17); the main body (1:18–16:18); and a farewell (16:19-24). Some scholars refer to Romans as a tractate (a formal treatise). But it bears all the marks of a real letter, although it is a finely tuned literary composition.

CHRISTIAN WORLDVIEW ELEMENTS

TEACHINGS ABOUT GOD

In Romans God is supreme in all matters of salvation, which serves his glory and the good of his people. He is both the One who is righteous and the One who declares righteous "the one who has faith in Jesus" (3:26). There is no fuller presentation of the person and work of Christ. The Holy Spirit is the One by whose indwelling believers are enabled to live holy lives (chap. 8).

TEACHINGS ABOUT HUMANITY

There are only two kinds of human beings: sinners who are condemned "in Adam" and believing sinners "in Christ" who are therefore declared righteous. Those who have been justified by faith are expected to live holy lives and to live in Christian community with one another by the power of the Spirit.

TEACHINGS ABOUT SALVATION

Salvation is a complex concept that includes past, present, and future. For individual believers, Christ has saved from the penalty of sin (justification, chaps. 4–5); he is saving from the power of sin (sanctification, chaps. 6–7); and he will save from the presence of sin (glorification, chap. 8). For the community of believers, salvation came first to Israel (chaps. 9–10), and in the present era it is coming to Gentiles (and some Jews) who make up the church (chap. 11).

THE GOSPEL OF GOD FOR ROME

1 Paul, a servant of Christ Jesus, called as an apostle † † and set apart † for the gospel of God † — 2 which he promised beforehand † through his prophets † in the Holy Scriptures — 3 concerning his Son, Jesus Christ our Lord, who was a descendant of David † † according to the flesh † 4 and was appointed to be the powerful † Son of God † according to the Spirit of holiness † by the resurrection of the dead. 5 Through him we have received grace and apostleship † to bring about † the obedience † of faith for the sake of his name among all the Gentiles, † † 6 including you who are also called by Jesus Christ. †

7 To all who are in Rome, loved by God, † called † as saints. †
Grace to you and peace from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

PAUL'S DESIRE TO VISIT ROME

8 First, I thank my God through Jesus Christ for all of you because the news of your faith † is being reported in all the world. † 9 God is my witness, † whom I serve with my spirit † in telling the good news about his Son — that I constantly mention you, † 10 always asking in my prayers that if it is somehow in God's will, I may now at last succeed in coming to you. † 11 For I want very much to see you, † so that I may impart to you some spiritual gift to strengthen you, 12 that is, to be mutually encouraged by each other's faith, both yours and mine.

13 Now I don't want you to be unaware, † brothers and sisters, that I often planned to come to you (but was prevented until now †) in order that I might have a fruitful ministry † among you, † just as I have had among the rest of the Gentiles. 14 I am obligated both to Greeks and barbarians, † † both to the wise and the foolish. 15 So I am eager to preach the gospel † to you also who are in Rome.

THE RIGHTEOUS WILL LIVE BY FAITH

16 For I am not ashamed of the gospel, † † because it is the power of God for salvation † to everyone who believes, first to the Jew, † and also to the Greek. † 17 For in it the righteousness of God is revealed from faith to faith, † † just as it is written: The righteous will live by faith. † † †

THE GUILT OF THE GENTILE WORLD

18 For God's wrath † is revealed from heaven against all godlessness and unrighteousness of people who by their unrighteousness suppress the truth, †
19 since what can be known † about God is evident among them, † because

God has shown it to them. [20] For his invisible attributes, that is, his eternal power and divine nature, have been clearly seen since the creation of the world, † being understood through what he has made. † As a result, people are without excuse. [21] For though they knew God, they did not glorify him as God or show gratitude. Instead, their thinking became worthless, and their senseless hearts were darkened. † [22] Claiming to be wise, they became fools †

DIVINE PROVIDENCE AND NATURALISM

A common secular assumption is that natural laws displace and disallow the reality of divine providence. Natural laws are generally understood as the regularities identified in the hard sciences that govern the major areas of chemistry, biology, and physics. The law of gravity is a classic example of one such law in physics. Many hope for a "final theory" from physics that will unite all natural laws, but thus far no such theory has been identified. Things become more complex when it comes to identifying laws in quantum physics, and there is no consensus on the proper interpretation of this field.

Does the concept of natural law rule out divine providence? God's purposeful governance of all things in the visible and invisible world is his providence (Eph 1:11). Therefore, things in heaven and things on earth are under his jurisdiction and care—from the smallest particle to the most distant galaxy to the souls of men and the behavior of animals (Col 1:15-20). Nothing is excluded from God's providence. This providence is not the impersonal necessity of Stoicism or the materialistic determinism of some forms of naturalism. Nor is it some combination of chance coupled with impersonal natural laws that exist for no purpose. Unlike some Eastern religions, the Bible teaches that the space-time universe is objectively real. It is not an illusion nor an extension of God's essence. God exercises his providence over creation in accordance with his divine nature (as a perfect being) and according to the nature of what he has created. God is thus neither a tyrant nor a spectator; he is active in his creation, being especially concerned with humans since they bear his image (Gn 1:26; Mt 6:26).

The Westminster Confession explains how divine providence is to be understood: "God, in His ordinary providence, makes use of means, yet is free to work without, above, and against them, at His pleasure" (V.III). In other words, God can use natural laws to do his bidding, causing the rain to fall on the righteous and the unrighteous alike (Mt 5:45; Ac 27:31). He also can bypass natural laws by directly speaking, as to Moses from a burning bush (Ex 3; also Hs 1:7). Moreover, he can go against the normal course of things by raising Jesus from the dead (1Co 15; see 1Kg 6:6; Dn 3:27).

How, then, does the secular account of natural law try to contradict the biblical view of divine providence? According to the philosophy of naturalism, God does not exist; therefore, the cosmos and human history have no divine origin, divine administration, or divine destiny. As atheist Bertrand Russell announced in his 1948 debate with Friedrich Copleston on the existence of God, "The universe is just there." In light of this, everything in the material universe (which is all that exists in this view) must be explained without a designing mind at work behind it. Divine providence is hence replaced by natural laws that are "just there." To use a philosophical term, they are "brute facts," having no explanation beyond their own existence.

Put another way, naturalism removes what Aristotle called "final causes" from the universe. While Aristotle did not possess a robust monotheism, he claimed that the First Cause endowed the world with teleology. Each thing, humans included, has a nature that moves toward an end or goal. Nothing is just there. This aligns to some extent with the biblical notion of the cosmos and history having a purpose. Each thing is created according to its kind and fulfills its role in God's personal governance of the universe.

Sadly, most of modern science is concerned only with what Aristotle called "efficient causes," or what makes something happen on the physical level. When a billiard ball hits another and causes it to move, we see efficient causation. The biblical view of divine providence requires the existence of efficient causes working on material things because the world of space, time, and matter is created and sustained by God (Gn 1:1; Jn 1:1-5; Heb 1:3). There is no good reason, however, to limit explanations to the efficient causation of material things. Such a limitation can be critiqued from four directions.

First, if the naturalistic account of natural law is correct, then the cosmos, humanity, and each human life are meaningless, lacking objective value or purpose. This is not a "purpose-driven" universe. All meaning is subjective, and it dies when the person dies. This worldview, known as nihilism, is counterintuitive and ultimately unlivable. We intuitively know that there is more to life than matter, chance, and brute natural laws. In part we know this because we make judgments based on objective value, such as, "Rape is always wrong." But if there is nothing but impersonal natural law governing the universe, no such judgment is possible. There is more to reality than merely physical interactions described by natural law.

Second, we have good scientific evidence from big bang cosmology that the cosmos began to exist a finite time ago. The agnostic scientist Robert Jastrow granted as much in God and the Astronomers: Consider the enormity of the problem. Science has proved that the universe exploded into being at a certain moment. It asks: What cause produced this effect? Who or what put the matter or energy into the universe? And science cannot answer these questions, because, according to the astronomers, in the first moments of its existence the Universe was compressed to an extraordinary degree, and consumed by the heat of a fire beyond human imagination. The shock of that instant must have destroyed every particle of evidence that could have yielded a clue to the cause of the great explosion. . . . For the scientist who has lived by his faith in the power of reason, the story ends like a bad dream. He has scaled the mountain of ignorance; he is about to conquer the highest peak; as he pulls himself over the final rock, he is greeted by a band of theologians who have been sitting there for centuries (p. 106-7).

The origin of the universe cannot, in principle, be explained by natural laws. The universe, with its laws, was brought into being by a Being outside it. Furthermore, the Being that created the universe from nothing may have a plan for it.

Third, the intelligent design movement, led by William Dembski, Michael Behe, and Stephen Meyer, has argued cogently that particular living systems and the genetic code cannot be adequately explained on the basis of natural law, chance, and eons of purposeless time. For example, the genetic code is a complex language of life containing vast amounts of information. But all the other information about which we have knowledge comes from a mind, such as what you are now reading. Mere natural laws may explain the current operations of life, but they cannot explain its origin. This points to design and purpose.

Fourth, the greatest reason to believe in divine providence comes from God's dealings with human history and his revelation in Scripture. God has communicated knowable truth about himself, the universe, history, morality, and salvation through the books of the Bible (2Tm 3:15). These books form a coherent worldview rooted in history; they explain where we came from, what went wrong, how to make it right, and where we are going. In other words, we are taught the true, rational, and existentially-compelling doctrines of creation, fall, and redemption (Rm 1–8). God's mission to reach out to erring mortals is culminated in the matchless achievements of Jesus Christ, the crucified and resurrected Lord of the cosmos (Rm 1:3). Since he lived a perfect life, died an atoning death, and was raised immortal, we can know that life is not meaningless. The universe is not governed by impersonal natural laws, but by God's providence, which covers natural laws, teleology, revelation, miracle, and redemption through Jesus Christ, who "has revealed" God the Father (Jn 1:18). As the apostle Paul says, in light of the resurrection and God's past, present, and future providence, "Therefore, my dear brothers and sisters, be steadfast, immovable, always excelling in the Lord's work, because you know that your labor in the Lord is not in vain" (1Co 15:58).

1:1 Paul is set apart for the gospel of God. "The gospel" refers to the "good news" or "glad tidings" of God's actions to save humanity (cp. Is 40:9). The word was also used by the Romans, referring to the good news of the emperor's great deeds.

1:2 The NT is deeply grounded in the OT. The gospel is the fulfillment of the promises of God revealed in the OT.

1:3-4 Son of God here refers to the Messiah, the promised king of Israel, who would be a descendant of David (2Sm 7:12-13). The resurrection of Jesus seals his messianic status (Ac 2:22-36).

1:7 In the NT all believers are called saints, that is "holy ones." In Christ we are made holy—set apart to belong to God.

1:14 The ancient Greek-speaking world divided humanity into Greeks (those who could speak Greek and were thus considered civilized) and barbarians (everyone else).

1:16 Paul lived in a shame culture, in which honor was extremely important. The very idea of crucifixion was regarded as shameful, since a crucified person was thought to be under God's curse. Thus, the gospel that Paul preaches—about a crucified Savior—would be regarded as shameful. Nevertheless, Paul says he is not ashamed of the gospel. Paul uses the then typical Jewish way of categorizing people: Jew and Greek (anyone who is not a Jew). The gospel comes first to the people of the old covenant and then to the rest of the world.

1:17 The righteousness of God refers to God acting rightly, according to his nature (e.g., Pss 7:9; 145:17), or acting to put things right (e.g., Is 46:13; 51:5-8)—especially in the sense of vindicating his people (e.g., Dt 32:35,43; Ps 135:14). Scholars debate which sense is most likely here, but in the overall argument of Romans it is clear that both senses are appropriate. God does what is righteous, and he acts to put humanity in right relation with himself.

1:18 The first point of Paul's gospel explanation is the wrath of God against all sin. The good news must be understood in the context of the reality of evil.

1:21 See v. 28; "The Bible and Intellectual Pursuit," p. 1512.

1:23 Forming images of created things for the purpose of worship is idolatry; it is worshiping the creation rather than the Creator (cp. v. 25). Idolatry was almost universal in the ancient world, and Israel engaged in it too, ultimately leading to their exile.

1:26-27 Unlike much of the Greek and Roman culture around him, Paul clearly denounces homosexual behavior as sinful. It goes against natural sexual relations and is thus against God's design for humanity

(cp. Gn 1:27). See “Engaging LGBT Advocates,” p. 1392; “Christian Worldview and Same-Sex Marriage,” p. 1499.

GOD’S RIGHTEOUS JUDGMENT

2 Therefore, every one of you † † who judges is without excuse. † For when you judge another, † you condemn yourself, since you, the judge, do the same things. 2 We know that God’s judgment on those who do such things is based on the truth. 3 Do you really think — anyone of you who judges those who do such things yet do the same — that you will escape God’s judgment? 4 Or do you despise the riches of his kindness, † restraint, † and patience, † not recognizing † that God’s kindness † is intended to lead you to repentance? 5 Because of your hardened and unrepentant heart you are storing up wrath † for yourself in the day of wrath, † when God’s righteous judgment is revealed. 6 He will repay each one according to his works: † † 7 eternal life † to those who by persistence in doing good † seek glory, honor, † and immortality; † 8 but wrath and anger to those who are self-seeking † and disobey the truth † while obeying unrighteousness. 9 There will be affliction and distress † for every human being who does evil, first to the Jew, and also to the Greek; † 10 but glory, honor, and peace for everyone who does what is good, first to the Jew, and also to the Greek. 11 For there is no favoritism with God. †

12 All who sin without the law † will also perish without the law, and all who sin under † the law will be judged by the law. 13 For the hearers of the law † are not righteous before God, but the doers of the law will be justified. † 14 So, when Gentiles, who do not by nature have the law, † do † what the law demands, they are a law to themselves even though they do not have the law. 15 They show that the work of the law † is written on their hearts. † Their consciences confirm this. Their competing thoughts either accuse or even excuse them † 16 on the day when God judges † what people have kept secret, according to my gospel through Christ Jesus. †

JEWISH VIOLATION OF THE LAW

17 Now if † you call yourself a Jew, and rely on the law, † and boast in God, 18 and know his will, and approve the things that are superior, † being instructed from the law, 19 and if you are convinced that you are a guide for the blind, a light to those in darkness, 20 an instructor of the ignorant, a teacher of the immature, having the embodiment of knowledge and truth † in the law — 21 you then, who teach another, † don't you teach yourself? You who preach, "You must not steal" — do you steal? 22 You who say, "You must not commit adultery" — do you commit adultery? You who detest idols, do you rob their temples? † 23 You who boast in the law, † do you dishonor God by breaking the law? 24 For, as it is written: The name of God is blasphemed among the Gentiles because of you. † †

CIRCUMCISION OF THE HEART

25 Circumcision benefits you if you observe the law, but if you are a lawbreaker, your circumcision has become uncircumcision. † 26 So if an uncircumcised † man keeps the law's requirements, † will not his uncircumcision be counted as circumcision? 27 A man who is physically uncircumcised, but who keeps the law, will judge you † who are a lawbreaker in spite of having the letter of the law and circumcision. 28 For a person is not a Jew who is one outwardly, † and true circumcision is not something visible in the flesh. 29 On the contrary, a person is a Jew who is one inwardly, † and circumcision is of the heart — by the Spirit, not the letter. † † That person's praise is not from people but from
God. †

2:1-5 While Paul's Jewish readers would no doubt agree with the critique of Gentile idolatry (1:18-32), now Paul turns to include Jews as facing the same condemnation.

2:7-11 Paul is not teaching that people can earn salvation, as he makes clear in chapter 4. As elsewhere in the NT, salvation is connected with works as evidence of persevering in faith (Mt 25:31-46; 1Tm 4:16; Heb 10:36).

2:12-16 Whether or not one has heard God's law, all are responsible before God. People have an innate awareness of God's requirements, the law of God is written on their hearts. (see "General Revelation," p. 626; "Should We Legislate Morality?" p. 215).

2:15 See "The Existence of God," p. 849.

2:24 The OT makes clear that the Jewish people did not have a good record of obedience to the law they knew. Paul's quote of Isaiah 52:5 indicates that the Jews cannot claim right standing before God on their own merit.

2:25 Circumcision, beginning with Abraham (Gn 17:9-14), was the mark of belonging to God's covenant people, (Gn 17:9-14). Given that many Jews lived among pagans in Paul's day, such outward markers were emphasized in order to preserve Jewish identity. Many Jews had come to think that if one was circumcised, he would ultimately be saved. In the verses that follow, Paul refutes this popular idea.

2:27 This is a radical claim, since Jews believed that Gentiles had to be circumcised to be saved. Only circumcised Gentiles could be considered true converts to Judaism.

PAUL ANSWERS AN OBJECTION

3 So what advantage does the Jew have? Or what is the benefit of circumcision? 2 Considerable in every way. First, they were entrusted † with the very words of God. † 3 What then? If some were unfaithful, † will their unfaithfulness nullify God's faithfulness? 4 Absolutely not! † Let God be true, even though everyone is a liar, † as it is written:

That you may be justified in your words and triumph when you judge. † †

5 But if our unrighteousness highlights † God's righteousness, † what are we to say? † I am using a human argument: † † Is God unrighteous to inflict wrath?
6 Absolutely not! Otherwise, how will God judge the world? † 7 But if by my lie God's truth abounds to his glory, why am I also still being judged as a sinner? † 8 And why not say, just as some people slanderously claim we say, "Let us do what is evil so that good may come"? † Their condemnation is deserved!

THE WHOLE WORLD GUILTY BEFORE GOD

9 What then? Are we any better off? † Not at all! For we have already charged that both Jews † and Gentiles † † are all under sin, † † 10 as it is written:
There is no one righteous, not even one.
11 There is no one who understands; there is no one who seeks God.
12 All have turned away; all alike have become worthless.
There is no one who does what is good, not even one. † † 13 Their throat is an open grave; they deceive with their tongues. † † Vipers' venom is under their lips. † †
14 Their mouth is full of cursing and bitterness. † †
15 Their feet are swift to shed blood; 16 ruin and wretchedness are in their paths, 17 and the path of peace they have not known. † †
18 There is no fear of God before their eyes. † †
19 Now we know that whatever the law says, † it speaks to those who are subject to the law, † † so that every mouth may be shut and the whole world may become subject to God's judgment. † † 20 For no one will be justified † in his sight by the works of the law, † because the knowledge of sin comes through the law. †

THE RIGHTEOUSNESS OF GOD THROUGH FAITH

21 But now, apart from the law, the righteousness of God has been revealed, † attested by the Law and the Prophets. † † 22 The righteousness of God is through faith † in Jesus Christ † † to all who believe, † since there is no distinction. † 23 For all have sinned † and fall short of the † glory of God.
24 They are justified freely by his grace † through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus. †

THE GOSPEL AND THE FORMATION OF A CHRISTIAN

WORLDVIEW

The gospel of the crucified and risen Jesus (see 1Co 15:1-11) is the core message regarding the climactic events central to a Christian worldview. To understand the Christian worldview, we must start with the word worldview itself.

A worldview is a way, a perspective, an outlook on the world, on all there is. While worldviews can certainly be described, analyzed, and compared to other worldviews—and thus debated—usually a worldview consists of the set of assumptions that govern how we view and understand all of reality. We don't ordinarily question our worldviews, unless we feel ultimate issues really need to be analyzed and debated. A worldview is the lens, the frame of reference, or, to change the metaphor, the scaffolding on which we build our living, our actions, our thinking, and our experiences. Thus, a worldview should not be limited merely to "seeing" or looking. It is our way of knowing and understanding, accomplished as we live and experience all that there is.

A biblical, Christian worldview begins with the assumption of the one true Creator God, who involves himself in history and seeks relationship with his creatures. It does not assume a deist god who is merely there, and certainly not a pantheistic god whose existence is mingled in with all that there is. The God of Scripture is the God who creates, who makes all things good, who is intimately involved with his creation, and who is faithful in all his interactions with it. From a biblical perspective, there can be no argument as to whether or not God does the "miraculous," because the whole of creation is his world; he is involved in it; and his presence in the world occurs both by routine and by things wondrous and strange. The Scriptures refer to God as having covenants not only with his human creatures, but also with the creation itself (cp. Gn 8:20-22; 9:8-17).

Most worldviews, whether secular or religious, have stories and narratives as part of their basic structure. In the case of a Christian worldview, the stories that lie at the heart of our perspective are essentially the narratives of what God has done in history. The God of Scripture is active in the world he made; thus, history witnesses to his presence both in creation and in his actions, particularly as these are revealed in the Bible. Thus, Scripture not only provides a worldview for those who accept its testimony, but it also reflects the worldview of its authors. Put another way, the writers of Scripture are themselves informed by the great truths that they teach—so that the biblical worldview provides a lens through which their writing should be understood—while they also establish the worldview that informs Christian theology.

The story of the Bible begins with the God who creates. But the narrative quickly moves to a crisis known as the fall. The rebellion of Adam and Eve provides the second fixed point in the narrative. The fall is the backdrop for the rest of the biblical story, in which God acts to redeem humanity and to restore the entire creation—to make a new heaven and a new earth. So, according to a biblical worldview, there is one Creator God who is involved in his creation. He acts to restore the world.

From the vantage point of creation and the fall, we then see the patterns of God's actions in history to redeem and rescue, as they unfold in Scripture. This has implications for a Christian understanding of history. A Christian worldview assumes that history does not inevitably decline. There is always the prospect of God's divine action, which at any moment may set a new course for history. God works through circumstances both good and evil (cp. Rm 9:14-17) to move history along to accomplish his faithful purposes.

We can be somewhat specific regarding God's movements in history to redeem, since he has unfolded a strategy whereby he chose a particular people, Israel, and through this nation he has acted to bring the whole world back to himself. God's choosing of Israel underlies the stories of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, through to Joseph and the enslavement of God's people in Egypt. Israel's exodus from Egypt through God's dramatic plagues upon the former led his chosen people to Canaan. But Israel's story has multiple twists, because, in the end, Israel herself was not faithful to God. Israel was sent into exile, but her prophets, who warned of her impending judgment, also reiterated God's promises that one day he would reign as King (cp.

Is 35:3-6; 40:3-5,9-10; 52:7-10; 60:1-2; Ezk 43:1-7; Zch 8:2-3; 14:1-17) and restore his people. Israel would be brought back from exile, and a son of the great King David (Is 9:6-7; 11:1-11; Jr 33:14-18), who would rule in the place of God, would be seated on a throne. He would not only rule Israel, but eventually all nations would pay him homage and worship the one Creator God.

But once again, the larger biblical narrative takes a surprising turn. The long-awaited King not only suffered for his people, Israel, in an act of propitiation and sacrifice that concluded their exile and redeemed them from sin. He also fulfilled Israel's unfinished work to be a light to the Gentiles and to bring the nations back to God. The death and resurrection of Jesus Christ are the climactic moments in the larger biblical story.

Now the people of God are organized around Jesus—the true Israel of God, and the second Adam—and must preach the gospel, the message of the crucified and resurrected Jesus, to the ends of the earth. As the gospel of Jesus is preached in all the world, the final vindication of Jesus will come, and the glorious day of resurrection and restoration will occur (Mt 24:14). Then, the restoration of heaven and earth will take place (Rv 21:1-5; cp. Is 65:17; 66:22), and a final separation of all the peoples and nations of the earth will happen (Mt 25:31-46; 2Th 1:5-10; Rv 20:1-15). Those who embrace the one true God through Jesus will be raised to a glorious life, while those who have rejected God's Son are banished into outer darkness. Then God will be "all in all" (1Co 15:28).

This outline of the biblical narrative constitutes the lens through which Christians understand the world. Worldviews may be described, analyzed, and debated. But every worldview that claims to be Christian and biblical must start with the one true Creator God, who made man and woman in his image and who, despite the rebellion of his creatures and the consequent cursing of creation, longs to redeem his people—an action that he has accomplished through the coming of Jesus, the long-awaited son of David. Christ fulfills the work of Israel, drawing the nations back to God through his obedient death, resurrection, enthronement at the right hand of God, and final appearance as King of kings and Lord of lords.

25 God presented him as an atoning sacrifice † † in his blood, † received through faith, to demonstrate his righteousness, because in his restraint God † passed over the sins previously committed. † 26 God presented him to demonstrate his righteousness at the present time, so that he would be righteous and declare righteous † the one who has faith in Jesus.

BOASTING EXCLUDED

27 Where, then, is boasting? † It is excluded. By what kind of law? † † By one of works? No, on the contrary, by a law † of faith. 28 For we conclude that a person is justified by faith apart from the works of the law. † 29 Or is God the God of Jews only? † Is he not the God of Gentiles too? Yes, of Gentiles too, 30 since there is one God † who will justify the circumcised by faith † and the uncircumcised through faith. 31 Do we then nullify the law through faith? Absolutely not! † On the contrary, we uphold the law. †

3:10-18 Paul collects a string of quotes from various parts of the OT to support his argument that both Jews and Gentiles are under sin. Later rabbis used such collections of verses, and the practice may have been common in the first century as well.

3:21-22 The righteousness of God does not come through obedience to the OT law, but through faith in Jesus Christ to whom the OT Scriptures (the Law and the Prophets) pointed. See the note on 1:17.

3:24 To be justified means to be put right with God. Justification is a legal declaration of right standing, and Paul argues that this status is granted freely by God's grace, meaning that right standing with him is not something deserved or achieved by people. Rather, it is God's gift. Redemption refers to the payment of a price in order to secure liberation. The central redemptive event in Israel's history was the exodus from Egypt, in which God delivered his people out of slavery. Redemption from sin occurs in Christ Jesus.

3:25 Paul describes Christ's death in terms of an OT atoning sacrifice (propitiation), in which the sacrifice turns away God's wrath against sin. While propitiation in pagan religious practice was understood to placate capricious and irascible gods, God's wrath is never capricious. Furthermore, he takes steps to propitiate himself—that is, the sacrifice of atonement is offered by God in Christ in order to deal with humanity's sin.

ABRAHAM JUSTIFIED BY FAITH

4 What then will we say that Abraham, our forefather † according to the flesh, has found? † 2 If Abraham was justified † by works, † he has something to boast about — but not before God. 3 For what does the Scripture say? Abraham believed God, and it was credited to him for righteousness. † † 4 Now to the one who works, † pay is not credited as a gift, but as something owed. 5 But to the one who does not work, but believes on him who declares the ungodly to be righteous,† his faith is credited for righteousness.

DAVID CELEBRATING THE SAME TRUTH

6 Just as David also speaks of the blessing of the person to whom God credits righteousness apart from works:

7 Blessed are those whose lawless acts are forgiven and whose sins are covered.

8 Blessed is the person the Lord will never charge with sin. † †

ABRAHAM JUSTIFIED BEFORE CIRCUMCISION

9 Is this blessing only for the circumcised,† then? Or is it also for the uncircumcised? For we say, Faith was credited to Abraham for righteousness. † † 10 In what way then was it credited — while he was circumcised, or uncircumcised? It was not while he was circumcised, but uncircumcised. 11 And he received the sign of circumcision† as a seal of the righteousness that he had by faith† † while still uncircumcised. This was to make him the father† of all who believe† but are not circumcised, so that righteousness may be credited to them also. 12 And he became the father of the circumcised, who are not only circumcised but who also follow in the footsteps of the faith our father Abraham had while he was still uncircumcised.

THE PROMISE GRANTED THROUGH FAITH

13 For the promise to Abraham† or to his descendants that he would inherit the world† was not through the law, but through the righteousness that comes by faith. 14 If those who are of the law are heirs,† faith is made empty and the promise nullified, 15 because the law produces wrath.† And where there is no law,† there is no transgression.

16 This is why the promise is by faith, so that it may be according to grace,† to guarantee it to all the descendants† — not only to those who are of the law† but also to those who are of Abraham's faith. He is the father of us all. 17 As it is written: I have made you the father of many nations. † † He is our father in God's sight, in whom Abraham believed — the God who gives life to the dead† and calls † things into existence that do not exist. † 18 He believed, hoping against hope, so that he became the father of many nations † † according to what had been spoken: So will your descendants be. † † 19 He did not weaken in faith when he considered † his own body to be already dead † (since he was about a hundred years old) † and also the deadness of Sarah's womb. † 20 He did not waver in unbelief at God's promise but was strengthened in his faith and gave glory to God, † 21 because he was fully convinced † that what God had promised, he was also able to do. † 22 Therefore, it was credited to him for righteousness. † † 23 Now it was credited to him † was not written for Abraham alone, † 24 but also for us. It will be credited to us who believe in him † who raised Jesus our Lord from the dead. † 25 He was delivered up for † our trespasses † and raised for our justification. †

4:1 Or What then shall we say? Have we found Abraham to be our forefather according to the flesh? or What, then, shall we say that Abraham our forefather found according to the flesh? 4:2 Or was declared righteous, or was acquitted 4:11 Lit righteousness of faith, also in v. 13 4:16 Or not to those who are of the law only 4:19 Other mss read He did not consider 4:25 Or because of

4:1-13 Since Abraham was regarded the "father" of Israel (Is 51:2), how Abraham was justified is significant for the debate between Paul and those who say one must first become a Jew (and thus obey the OT law) to be saved. Abraham's faith is "credited . . . to him as righteousness" in Genesis 15:6, even though circumcision is not discussed until Genesis 17:10-14. Thus, righteousness that comes by faith precedes any outward markers or formal law.

4:15 Transgression means breaking a specific law, so transgression is not possible without law. Nonetheless, Paul is not saying there was no sin before the law was given (see 1:18-32).

4:17 See "Ultimate Origins and the Christian Worldview," p. 846.

4:25 Jesus was delivered up for our trespasses, which recalls the work of the Suffering Servant, who would be "handed over because of their sins" (Gk version of Is 53:12). Being raised for our justification indicates that justification is connected to resurrection. In keeping with the Jewish expectation of resurrection for the purpose of judgment (Dn 12:2; Jn 5:28-29), Paul regards Jesus's resurrection as having secured vindication (justification) in the judgment. Those who are raised with Christ are thereby justified with him (Rm 5:5; Eph 2:5-6; Col 2:13).

FAITH TRIUMPHS

FAITH TRIUMPHS

5 Therefore, since we have been declared righteous by faith, † we have peace † with God through our Lord Jesus Christ. † 2 We have also obtained access through him † by faith † into this grace in which we stand, † and we rejoice † in the hope of the glory of God. 3 And not only that, † but we also rejoice in our afflictions, † because we know that affliction produces endurance, † 4 endurance produces proven character, † and proven character produces hope. 5 This hope will not disappoint us, † because God's love has been poured out in our hearts † through the Holy Spirit who was given to us.

THOSE DECLARED RIGHTEOUS ARE RECONCILED

6 For while we were still helpless, at the right time, † Christ died for the ungodly. 7 For rarely will someone die for a just person — though for a good person perhaps someone might even dare to die. 8 But God proves † his own love for us † in that while we were still sinners, Christ died for us. 9 How much more then, since we have now been declared righteous by his blood, † will we be saved through him from wrath. † 10 For if, while we were enemies, † we were reconciled to God through the death of his Son, then how much more, having been reconciled, will we be saved by his life. † 11 And not only that, but we also rejoice in God through our Lord Jesus Christ, through whom we have now received this reconciliation. †

DEATH THROUGH ADAM AND LIFE THROUGH CHRIST

12 Therefore, just as sin entered the world through one man, † and death through sin, † in this way death spread to all people, † because all sinned. †
13 In fact, sin was in the world before the law, but sin is not charged to a person's account when there is no law. † 14 Nevertheless, death reigned from Adam to Moses, even over those who did not sin in the likeness of Adam's transgression. † He is a type of the Coming One. † 15 But the gift is not like the trespass. For if by the one man's trespass the many died, how much more have the grace of God and the gift which comes through the grace of the one man † Jesus Christ overflowed to the many. 16 And the gift is not like the one man's sin, because from one sin came the judgment, † resulting in condemnation, but from many trespasses came the gift, resulting in justification. † 17 Since by the one man's trespass, death reigned through that one man, how much more will those who receive the overflow of grace and the gift of righteousness reign in life † through the one man, Jesus Christ.

18 So then, as through one trespass there is condemnation for everyone, so also through one righteous act there is justification leading to life † for everyone. 19 For just as through one man's disobedience the many were made sinners, † so also through the one man's obedience † the many will be made righteous. 20 The law came along to multiply the trespass. † But where sin multiplied, grace multiplied even more † 21 so that, just as sin reigned in death, † so also grace will reign † through righteousness, resulting in eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord.

5:1 Peace with God is a strong contrast to being under God's wrath—which was the just penalty for all humans before Jesus's atonement for sin (1:18; 2:5; 5:9). The Hebrew notion of peace envisioned harmony and well-being in relationship with God, rather than simply the cessation of hostility.

5:3 See "Christians and Suffering," p. 580.

5:7-8 The extravagance of God's love is seen in the giving of his Son to die for us while we were still sinners. God's love is contrasted with the rarity of self-sacrificial death on behalf of others, even for those considered just and good.

5:9 Jewish expectation held that justification (or the declaration of righteousness) would occur on the last day at the final judgment of God (e.g., Psalms of Solomon 17:26-29). Paul, however, claims that justification has already occurred for those with faith in Christ. This is because the believer is able to participation in Jesus's own vindication, evidenced by his resurrection from the dead (see the note on 4:25). The final judgment will ratify the righteous standing already declared for those in Christ.

5:12-14 See "Illness and a Christian Worldview," p. 646.

5:12 The word for man in Hebrew is also a name: Adam. Through this one man death and sin entered the world and spread to all people (Gn 3). See the essay "Fall and Redemption," p. 12; "Creation: A Young Earth Perspective ," p. 9; Creation: Why an Old Earth View Is Defensible," p. 7.

5:14 The Coming One is Jesus, as the following paragraph shows (5:17).

5:20 The coming of the law exposed more of sin, since it specifies the reality of sin once various commandments are broken.

THE NEW LIFE IN CHRIST

6 What should we say then? † Should we continue in sin so that grace may multiply? † 2 Absolutely not! † How can we who died to sin † still live in it? 3 Or are you unaware that all of us who were baptized † into Christ Jesus were baptized into his death? † 4 Therefore we were buried with him by baptism into death, † in order that, just as Christ was raised from the dead † by the glory of the Father, † so we too may walk in newness † of life. † 5 For if we have been united with him in the likeness of his death, † we will certainly also be † in the likeness of his resurrection. 6 For we know that our old self † † was crucified with him † so that the body ruled by sin † might be rendered powerless † so that we may no longer be enslaved to sin, 7 since a person who has died † is freed † from sin. 8 Now if we died with Christ, † we believe that we will also live with him, 9 because we know that Christ, having been raised from the dead, † will not die again. Death no longer rules over him. † 10 For the death he died, he died to sin once for all time; but the life he lives, he lives to God. 11 So, you too consider yourselves dead to sin † and alive to God in Christ Jesus. † 12 Therefore do not let sin reign in your mortal body, so that you obey † its desires. 13 And do not offer any parts † of it to sin † as weapons for unrighteousness. But as those who are alive from the dead, offer yourselves to God, † and all the parts of yourselves to God as weapons for righteousness.
14 For sin will not rule over you, because you are not under the law † but under grace. †

FROM SLAVES OF SIN TO SLAVES OF GOD

15 What then? Should we sin because we are not under the law but under grace? † Absolutely not! † 16 Don't you know that if you offer yourselves to someone † as obedient slaves, † you are slaves of that one you obey † — either of sin leading to death † or of obedience leading to righteousness? 17 But thank God that, although you used to be slaves of sin, † you obeyed from the heart that pattern of teaching to which you were handed † over, † 18 and having been set free from sin, † you became enslaved to righteousness. 19 I am using a human analogy † because of the weakness of your flesh. † For just as you offered the parts of yourselves as slaves to impurity, and to greater and greater lawlessness, so now offer them as slaves to righteousness, which results in sanctification. 20 For when you were slaves of sin, you were free with regard to righteousness. † † 21 So what fruit was produced † then from the things you are now ashamed of? † The outcome of those things is death. † 22 But now, since you have been set free from sin and have become enslaved to God, † you have your fruit, which results in sanctification † — and the outcome is eternal life! † 23 For the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life in Christ Jesus our Lord. †

6:1-2 Paul anticipates the objection about his gospel of salvation by grace—why not continue in sin? The short answer to the objection is absolutely not! The longer answer occupies the remainder of the chapter.

6:3 The reference to baptism here may refer to physical, water baptism, or it may refer to "spiritual baptism," meaning conversion. The latter would mean that at the point of conversion to Christ, the believer was baptized into his death (see the note on vv. 5-7).

6:5-7 A key concept throughout this chapter is believers' union with Christ. We have been united with him in his death and resurrection. Union, or participation, with Christ refers to believers being connected to the person and work of Jesus so that we participate in the benefits of his saving work. Paul is the chief theologian of union with Christ, though it can also be detected in the teaching of Jesus (e.g., Jn 14:20; 15:1-8; 17:21-23; cp. Ac 9:4). The idea does not find its conceptual background in pagan mysticism, but in the teaching of Jesus and in OT notions of corporate solidarity (cp. Rm 5:12-21). Being crucified with Christ means that believers have escaped slavery to sin, because death satisfied the demands of sin. A person who has died is freed from sin. Throughout this chapter sin is personified as a ruler, or slave-master. It is not individualized, personal acts of sin that are in view, but the tyrannical reign of sin over its slaves (vv. 12,14,16-17,20).

6:9 Christ's resurrection from the dead is unlike prior resurrections (e.g., Lazarus's; Jn 11), since Christ will not die again. This is because Christ's death conquered sin; once sin has been conquered, death has been conquered (see the note on 1Co 15:56).

6:10-11 If Christ's death is concerned with sin, his resurrection is concerned with eternal life in relation to God. This means that believers who have died with Christ are to consider themselves dead to sin and alive to God in Christ Jesus, because they have participation in Christ's death to sin and his resurrection to eternal life.

6:12 Christians are no longer under the tyrannical reign of sin, having died to sin with Christ (v. 6). But here Paul acknowledges that believers may nonetheless put themselves back under obedience to sin's desires. This is to be avoided.

6:16-23 Throughout this section, Paul's dominate motif is the ancient institution of slavery. Part of the fabric of ancient Rome, the concept is immediately understood by his readers. Notably, Paul does not contrast slavery with freedom, but slavery to two different masters. Slavery is bad when the master is sin; but slavery is good when the master is God. Indeed, slavery to God is true freedom.

6:16 Christian freedom does not mean living outside of any authority, as this verse makes clear. Freedom is living under the appropriate authority, having been rescued from harmful authority. A person's conduct ultimately demonstrates allegiance: obedience to sin characterizes the slaves of sin, while obedience to righteousness characterizes the righteous person.

6:18 Believers have been set free from sin by being crucified with Christ (v. 6). Having escaped the tyrannical rule of the dominion of sin, believers are now enslaved to righteousness. Righteousness is the new governing principle to which believers are subject.

6:22 Humans will always be under authority—but to whom will we be subject? Being set free from sin means that believers are now enslaved to God. This is true freedom—not autonomy or self-rule, but obedience to God.

6:23 The wages of sin is death because death is the fruit of sin. This inextricable connection between sin and death goes back to Adam's sin in the garden, the penalty for which was death for all humanity (Gn 3). While sin earns death as its wages, eternal life is the gift of God, found in Christ Jesus our Lord.

AN ILLUSTRATION FROM MARRIAGE

7 Since I am speaking to those who know the law, brothers and sisters, † don't you know that the law rules over someone as long as he lives? 2 For example, a married woman is legally bound to her husband while he lives. † But if her husband dies, she is released from the law regarding the husband. 3 So then, if she is married to another man while her husband is living, she will be called an adulteress. But if her husband dies, she is free from that law. Then, if she is married to another man, she is not an adulteress.

4 Therefore, my brothers and sisters, you also were put to death † in relation to the law † through the body of Christ † so that you may belong to another. You belong to him who was raised from the dead in order that we may bear fruit for God. 5 For when we were in the flesh, † the sinful passions aroused through the law were working in us † † to bear fruit for death. 6 But now we have been released from the law, since we have died to what held us, so that we may serve in the newness of the Spirit † and not in the old letter of the law.

SIN'S USE OF THE LAW

7 What should we say then? † Is the law sin? Absolutely not! † On the contrary, I would not have known sin if it were not for the law. † For example, I would not have known what it is to covet if the law had not said, Do not covet. † † 8 And sin, seizing an opportunity through the commandment, † produced in me coveting of every kind. For apart from the law sin is dead. †
9 Once I was alive apart from the law, but when the commandment came, sin sprang to life again 10 and I died. The commandment that was meant for life † resulted in death for me. 11 For sin, seizing an opportunity through the commandment, deceived me, † and through it killed me. 12 So then, the law is holy, † and the commandment is holy and just and good. 13 Therefore, did what is good become death to me? Absolutely not! † On the contrary, sin, in order to be recognized as sin, was producing death in me through what is good, so that through the commandment, sin might become sinful beyond measure.

THE PROBLEM OF SIN IN US

14 For we know that the law is spiritual, † but I am of the flesh, † sold † as a slave to sin. † † 15 For I do not understand what I am doing, † because I do not practice what I want to do, † but I do what I hate. 16 Now if I do what I do not want to do, I agree with the law that it is good. 17 So now I am no longer the one doing it, but it is sin living in me. 18 For I know that nothing good lives in me, that is, in my flesh. † For the desire to do what is good is with me, but there is no ability to do it. [19] For I do not do the good that I want to do, but I practice the evil that I do not want to do. [20] Now if I do what I do not want, I am no longer the one that does it, but it is the sin that lives in me. [21] So I discover this law: † † When I want to do what is good, † evil is present with me. [22] For in my inner self † I delight in God's law, † [23] but I see a different law in the parts of my body, † † waging war against the law of my mind and taking me prisoner to the law of sin in the parts of my body. [24] What a wretched man I am! Who will rescue me from this body of death? † [25] Thanks be to God through Jesus Christ our Lord! † So then, with my mind I myself am serving the law of God, but with my flesh, the law of sin.

7:1-6 Paul draws on the universal image of marriage to illustrate believers' relationship to the law. The law rules over someone as long as he lives, just as a woman is bound to her husband while he lives. Similarly, a person is only released from the law through death.

7:4 Because believers have died with Christ (6:8), they no longer belong to the law since death brings to an end our obligation to the law (vv. 1–3).

7:5 To be in the flesh refers to being in a fallen human state, as opposed to having been renewed by the Spirit. The word flesh is used literally by Paul (see 1:3; 2:28; 3:20), and it is used metaphorically to refer to humanity's bondage to sin (see 7:18,25; 8:4-13). Some believe that this use of flesh shows that Paul is shaped by Greek thought in which the physical body was viewed as evil. However, it is more likely that the OT is Paul's primary background. There the Hebrew word bāsār, "flesh," refers to humans, particularly with reference to their tendency to sin (Gn 6:3,12; Ps 78:39).

7:6 While the law once functioned to provide guidance for God's people, the Spirit occupies the same role now for believers.

7:7 The law functioned to expose sin, naming it and causing us to recognize its wickedness. Because people are unable to fully obey the law, it has a ministry of condemnation (vv. 9-11). But the law is not bad. It is holy and just (v. 12), though lacking power to help us overcome sin.

7:12-13 Paul simultaneously defends the law as holy, just, and good, while also showing that it makes sin "more sinful" and produces death. This, however, is not the fault of the law; it is the fault of sinful humanity.

7:14-25 One of the most controversial passages in the NT, this section leads debate to swirl around whether Paul is describing his personal struggle with sin as a Christian believer, as a "pre-Christian" version of himself, as a generic Jewish person under law, or as a national Israel under law. Arguments that

Paul is describing his current experience include the general tone of the section, with the extensive use of "I" and the present tense. Also, he does elsewhere describe the phenomenon of ongoing struggle with sin (e.g., Gl 5:16-17). Arguments for an unconverted Jew (or Israel) under law include a number of statements that seem to contradict comments found in Romans 6 (cp. 7:14/6:22; 7:18/6:12; 7:19/6:14). That is, the descriptions found in 7:14-25 seem not to fit Paul's teaching regarding sin and the life of the Christian in the previous chapter. Instead, they seem to fit better the person who attempts to live under the law, but fails because of prevailing sin.

THE LIFE-GIVING SPIRIT

8 Therefore, there is now no condemnation † for those in † Christ Jesus, † † 2 because the law of the Spirit of life † in Christ Jesus has set you † free from the law of sin and death. † 3 What the law could not do † since it was weakened by the flesh, † God did. He condemned sin in the flesh by sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh † as a sin offering, † † 4 in order that the law's requirement would be fulfilled † in us who do not walk according to the flesh † but according to the Spirit. 5 For those who live according to the flesh have their minds set on the things of the flesh, † but those who live according to the Spirit have their minds set on the things of the Spirit. 6 Now the mind-set of the flesh † is death, † but the mind-set of the Spirit is life and peace. 7 The mind-set of the flesh is hostile † to God because it does not submit to God's law. Indeed, it is unable to do so. 8 Those who are in the flesh † cannot please God. 9 You, however, are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, if indeed the Spirit of God lives in you. † If anyone does not have the Spirit of Christ, † he does not belong to him. 10 Now if Christ is in you, † the body is dead because of sin, but the Spirit † gives life † because of righteousness. 11 And if the Spirit of him who raised Jesus from the dead † lives in you, then he who raised Christ from the dead will also bring your mortal bodies to life through † his Spirit who lives in you.

THE HOLY SPIRIT'S MINISTRIES

12 So then, brothers and sisters, we are not obligated to the flesh to live according to the flesh, 13 because if you live according to the flesh, you are going to die. But if by the Spirit you put to death the deeds of the body, † you will live. [14] For all those led by God's Spirit † are God's sons. † [15] For you did not receive a spirit of slavery to fall back into fear. † Instead, you received the Spirit of adoption, † by whom we cry out, "Abba, † Father!" † [16] The Spirit himself testifies together with our spirit † that we are God's children, [17] and if children, also heirs † — heirs of God and coheirs with Christ — if indeed we suffer with him † so that we may also be glorified with him.

FROM GROANS TO GLORY

[18] For I consider that the sufferings of this present time are not worth comparing † with the glory † that is going to be revealed to us. [19] For the creation eagerly waits with anticipation † for God's sons † to be revealed. [20] For the creation was subjected † to futility † — not willingly, but because of him who subjected it † — in the hope [21] that the creation itself † will also be set free from the bondage to decay into the glorious freedom of God's children. [22] For we know that the whole creation has been groaning together with labor pains † until now. [23] Not only that, † but we ourselves who have the Spirit as the firstfruits † — we also groan within ourselves, † eagerly waiting for adoption, † the redemption of our bodies. † [24] Now in this hope † we were saved, but hope † that is seen is not hope, because who hopes for what he sees? [25] Now if we hope for what we do not see, † we eagerly wait for it with patience.

[26] In the same way the Spirit also helps us in our weakness, because we do not know what to pray for as we should, † but the Spirit himself intercedes for us † † with unspoken groanings. [27] And he who searches our hearts † knows the mind of the Spirit, because he intercedes for the saints according to the will of God.

[28] We know that all things work together † for the good † of those who love God, who are called according to his purpose. † [29] For those he foreknew he also predestined † to be conformed to the image of his Son, † so that he would be the firstborn among many brothers and sisters. † [30] And those he predestined, he also called; and those he called, he also justified; † and those he justified, he also glorified. †

THE BELIEVER'S TRIUMPH

31 What then are we to say about these things? † If God is for us, who is against us? † 32 He did not even spare his own Son † but offered him up for us all. † How will he not also with him grant us everything? 33 Who can bring an accusation against God's elect? † God is the one who justifies. † 34 Who is the one who condemns? † Christ Jesus is the one who died, † but even more, has been raised; † he also is at the right hand of God † and intercedes for us. † 35 Who can separate us from the love of Christ? Can affliction † or distress or persecution † or famine or nakedness or danger or sword? 36 As it is written:

Because of you
we are being put to death all day long; † we are counted as sheep to be slaughtered. † †

37 No, in all these things we are more than conquerors † through him who loved us. † 38 For I am persuaded that neither death nor life, † nor angels nor rulers, † nor things present nor things to come, † nor powers, 39 nor height nor depth, nor any other created thing will be able to separate us from the love of God † that is in Christ Jesus our Lord. †

8:1 In descending from Adam (5:12-21) there is only death and condemnation, but in Christ Jesus there is forgiveness, life, and peace.

8:3 This verse summarizes the main arguments of chapters 6 and 7. Romans 8:3a focuses on the problem of the law (cp. Rm 7), while 8:3b focuses on sin (cp. Rm 6). The point is that God has dealt with both problems by sending Jesus.

8:4 On "flesh", see the note on 7:5. The contrast in 8:4-11 (flesh vs. Spirit) is not between material and immaterial substance, but between sinful humanity left to itself and humanity that has been renewed by the Spirit. The Hebrew metaphor of walking speaks of the character and direction of one's life; all people will walk according to the flesh or according to the Spirit.

8:7 Reason alone cannot persuade unbelievers since their mind-set . . . is hostile to God and is unable to submit to him. Considering Scripture logically is valuable, but we need the Spirit's work to open our eyes (see 2Co 4:1-6).

8:9 Though believers experience tension between the flesh and the Spirit (Gal 5:16-17), we are not in the flesh, that is under the flesh's dominion and control. Believers live in the dominion of the Spirit.

8:11 Paul draws on the Jewish expectation of the resurrection of the righteous (e.g., Dn 12:2; Ezk 37) and explains how this will happen: the Spirit who raised Jesus from the dead will also bring your mortal bodies to life. This is the physical counterpart of participation in Christ's resurrection, which is already a spiritual reality for believers (Rm 6:11; Eph 2:5).

8:13 The deeds of the body refer to sinful actions or thoughts. Paul calls believers to put these to death—that is, to wage war against our own sinful desires. The Christian must be in perpetual war against his own sin, holding out until full victory is found in Christ's presence either after death or at his coming.

8:14 This verse contradicts those who say one can become a Christian and only later receive the Holy Spirit (cp. 8:9).

8:15 Adoption was fairly common in the Roman world: Julius Caesar adopted Octavian, who became his heir and successor. Regardless of a lack of genetic connection, the adopted one became a legitimate heir and child on par with natural born offspring. Paul uses the practice of adoption to portray the full acceptance of Christians before God, their place as heirs, and to stress the graciousness of this act. Abba is an Aramaic term used by Jesus (Mk 14:36), which suggests close familial connection. The term is more reverential than "Daddy." It is more like "Father." See also "A Biblical View of Adoption," p. 1367.

8:19-22 Since the fall of humanity brought futility to creation, the resurrection of redeemed humanity (God's children) will bring renewal to creation. Both facts demonstrate that human sin has wider consequences than simply destroying humanity's relationship with God. It is part of a global and cosmic reality that involves the whole of the created order. See also "The Apocalyptic and the Environment," p. 1565; "The Bible and Creation Care," p. 24.

8:23 Firstfruits were the beginnings of the harvest as discussed in the law (Lv 23:10). Believers have the beginnings of redemption in the Spirit (redemption, 3:24; adoption, 8:15), but long for its completion at the resurrection (the redemption of our bodies).

8:28-30 See "Christians and Suffering," p. 580 "Imago Dei and the Distinctiveness of Humans," p. 27.

8:33-34 Assurance of salvation is grounded in a legal argument: God, as Judge, is the One who declares believers righteous—he justifies those in Christ. If the Judge has so determined this legal standing, who is left to condemn us? Moreover, Christ Jesus intercedes for believers at the right hand of God. Christ is our "Lawyer" and God is Judge—and both have already declared their acceptance of those in Christ. Thus, there can be no condemnation for them (v. 1).

8:36 Paul's quote of Psalm 44:22 reminds his readers that it is normal for God's people to face persecution. The believers in Rome will shortly experience fierce persecution under the tyrannical reign of Emperor Nero.

8:39 There is nothing in all creation—physical or spiritual, material or immaterial—that is able to separate believers from the love of God that is in Christ Jesus our Lord. This is the ultimate conclusion of the argument in Romans thus far. The law, sin, death, spiritual powers, and present or future realities are unable to compromise the standing that believers enjoy in Christ. The prevailing work of God in Jesus offers assurance of salvation and confidence in the face of any obstacle or doubt.

ISRAEL'S REJECTION OF CHRIST

9 I speak the truth in Christ † —I am not lying; my conscience testifies to me through the Holy Spirit † — 2 that I have great sorrow and unceasing anguish in my heart. 3 For I could wish † that I myself were cursed † and cut off † from Christ for the benefit of my brothers and sisters, my own flesh and blood. 4 They are Israelites, † and to them belong the adoption, † the glory, † the covenants, † the giving of the law, † the temple service, † and the promises. † 5 The ancestors are theirs, † and from them, by physical descent, † came the Christ, † who is God † over all, † praised forever. † † Amen.

GOD'S GRACIOUS ELECTION OF ISRAEL

6 Now it is not as though the word of God has failed, † because not all who are descended from Israel are Israel. † 7 Neither are all of Abraham's children his descendants. † † On the contrary, your offspring will be traced † through Isaac. † † 8 That is, it is not the children by physical descent † who are God's children, † but the children of the promise † are considered to be the offspring.
9 For this is the statement of the promise: At this time I will come, and Sarah will have a son. † † 10 And not only that, † but Rebekah conceived children † through one man, our father Isaac. 11 For though her sons had not been born yet or done anything good or bad, so that God's purpose according to election might stand — † [12] not from works but from the one who calls — she was told, The older will serve the younger. † † [13] As it is written: I have loved Jacob, but I have hated Esau. † †

GOD'S SELECTION IS JUST

[14] What should we say then? † Is there injustice with God? † Absolutely not! †

A BIBLICAL VIEW OF ADOPTION

Adoption is sometimes a confusing topic, even to people who support it. Some think of adoption, implicitly, as a kind of "Plan B" infertility treatment for those who want, but can't have, children "of their own." And, some, without thinking much about it, make a wide distinction between adopted children and "real" children—as though the adjective adopted signifies a different, slightly lesser status within the family.

For Christians though, adoption ought to be one of the clearest and most evocative images in our vocabulary. This is because adoption is a biblical concept that explains a key aspect of what has happened to believers in the reconciling work of God in Christ Jesus. A biblical understanding of adoption unveils for us something about our identity in Christ, our inheritance in Christ, and our mission with Christ—all of which are grounded in the gospel.

One of the most important questions anyone can face is, "Who am I?" In Scripture, a key aspect of personal identity is found in one's place in a family line. In contrast to the modern pretense of an autonomous, self-creating individual, the Bible, like the ancient Near Eastern world in which it emerged, ties personal identity to that of the larger tribe. Thus, the question "who am I?" is really the question "where do I belong?" or "who are my people?"

This is the reason that biblical figures are identified, and identify themselves, in terms of their fathers and forefathers. Joshua is the "son of Nun," Saul is the "son of Kish," David is the "son of Jesse," James and John are the "sons of Zebedee," and so on. On an even broader level, the people of Israel are called by that phrase because they are "sons" of their father Jacob, who was renamed during his wrestling match with God. ("Your name will no longer be Jacob," he said. "It will be Israel because you have struggled with God and with men and have prevailed," Gn 32:28). Moreover, they are "sons of Abraham," because they are rooted in the patriarch's line. (Gn 17:5).

But identity is not simply a matter of biological ancestry. God demonstrated this in the family line of Jesus by rooting Jesus in the line of Abraham and David (as per the prophetic promises, e.g., Gn 22:18 and 2Sm 7:11b-16) but also including in these lines those from outside the borders of Israel, such as Ruth the Moabitess who married into the Hebrew family. Moreover, Jesus's connection as heir to the Abrahamic and Davidic lines is established in the Bible not by his "natural" biology (through his mother) but through the line of his father Joseph, whose fatherhood comes about through adoption rather than by procreation since Joseph did not father Jesus (Lk 1:26-38).

Jesus asserted that biological connection to Israel alone couldn't establish identity. He said, for instance, that those who rejected him within the house of Israel demonstrate that they are not, in fact, "sons of Abraham" because they do not share in Abraham's faith (e.g., Mt 3:9; Jn 8:30-47). True admittance is by faith, not by genetic inheritance. Likewise, Paul says, "Not all who are descended from Israel are Israel.

Neither are all of Abraham's children his descendants" (Rm 9:6-7).

As the church advanced through the Roman Empire in the months and years after the ascension of Jesus, many Gentiles (those unconnected by birth to the promises of Abraham) responded in faith to the gospel message and were thus included in the gathered assembly of God's people. Paul says they have received "the Spirit of adoption" and are now sons of God (Rm 8:14-15). Through this adoption the Christian becomes a new person, one whose identity is no longer his own but is hidden in Christ, and Christ is henceforth his life (1Co 6:19-20; Col 3:3-4). The status as son (or daughter) is not earned or deserved by merit but is God's gift to his children (Eph 2:8).

The gospel theology of adoption means that everyone who is united to Christ through faith is a child of God. As Paul states in Rm 8:16-17, "The Spirit himself testifies together with our spirit that we are God's children, and if children, also heirs—heirs of God and coheirs with Christ." The doctrine of adoption, then, means that all of those in Christ are predestined "to be adopted as sons through Jesus Christ for himself" (Eph 1:5). There is no distinction between Jews and Gentiles and no division on the basis of any other category (Gl 3:26-29; Col 3:10-11) since our adoption is into Christ; he is our new identity.

This status as adopted children is not for Gentiles only, as though these newcomers were the "adopted" children standing off from the "real" children of God. The Israelites themselves, Paul affirms, had received adoption: "They are Israelites, and to them belong the adoption, the glory, the covenants, the giving of the law, the temple service, and the promises" (Rm 9:4). Abraham, after all, was not "naturally born." He was initially Abram, a Gentile who was called into God's family while living in Haran; in fact, he was the basis for the creation of the Hebrew nation (Gn 12:1-3).

Moreover, our adoption into Christ is not merely a matter of relation, but of inheritance. Those who are children are also "heirs," the Scripture says, and not merely heirs but "coheirs with Christ" (Rm 8:17). This means that those in Christ share the same table and also the same inheritance as Jesus himself—an inheritance which includes not just the land promised to Abraham but the entire cosmos (Rm 4:13; Gl 3:16).

The Israelites of old were reminded to love the sojourners among them because they, too, were once aliens in a strange land. "For the LORD your God is the God of gods and Lord of lords, the great, mighty, and awe-inspiring God, showing no partiality and taking no bribe. He executes justice for the fatherless and the widow, and loves the resident alien, giving him food and clothing. You are also to love the resident alien, since you were resident aliens in the land of Egypt" (Dt 10:17-19).

The gospel—including the doctrine of adoption—makes a similar emphasis since the apostle Paul tells us to "accept one another, just as Christ also accepted you, to the glory of God" (Rm 15:7). And the mission of Jesus includes caring for those who have been orphaned, just as we were all once spiritually orphaned. James says that "pure and undefiled religion" means, in part, "to look after orphans and widows in their distress" (Jms 1:27). This is entirely consistent with the witness of the OT Law and Prophets, which constantly point out God's advocacy for the poor, the widowed, and the orphaned (Dt 14:28-29; 15:11; 27:19; Pss 68:5; 146:9; Jr 49:11; Mal 3:5).

The church must care for orphans through adoption, foster care, support for women in crisis, pro-life advocacy, and efforts to combat such root causes of the orphan crisis as poverty, disease, genocide, family dissolution, and war. In so doing, we are carrying out the mission of Christ, and we are reminding ourselves of the gospel truth that is good news for ex-orphans like us.

RUSSELL D. MOORE

15 For he tells Moses, I will show mercy to whom I will show mercy, and I will have compassion on whom I will have compassion. † † 16 So then, it does not depend on human will or effort † but on God who shows mercy. † 17 For the Scripture tells Pharaoh, I raised you up for this reason so that I may display my power in you and that my name may be proclaimed in the whole earth. † † 18 So then, he has mercy on whom he wants to have mercy and he hardens whom he wants to harden. †

19 You will say to me, † therefore, "Why then does he still find fault? † For who can resist his will?" † 20 But who are you, a mere man, to talk back to God? † Will what is formed say to the one who formed it, "Why did you make me like this?" † 21 Or has the potter no right over the clay, † to make from the same lump one piece of pottery for honor and another for dishonor? 22 And what if God, wanting to display his wrath and to make his power known, endured with much patience † objects of wrath prepared for destruction? † 23 And what if he did this to make known the riches of his glory † on objects of mercy † that he prepared beforehand for glory † — 24 on us, the ones he also called, † not only from the Jews but also from the Gentiles? † 25 As it † also says in Hosea,

I will call Not My People, My People, and she who is Unloved, Beloved. † †

26 And it will be in the place where they were told, you are not my people, there they will be called sons of the living God. † †

27 But Isaiah cries out concerning Israel,

Though the number of Israelites is like the sand of the sea, † only the remnant will be saved; †

28 since the Lord will execute his sentence completely and decisively on the earth. † † †

29 And just as Isaiah predicted:

If the Lord of Hosts † had not left us offspring, †
we would have become like Sodom, and we would have been made like Gomorrah. † †

ISRAEL'S PRESENT STATE

30 What should we say then? † Gentiles, who did not pursue righteousness, have obtained righteousness — namely the righteousness that comes from faith. † 31 But Israel, pursuing the law of righteousness, † has not achieved the righteousness of the law. † † 32 Why is that? 9:2 Paul's grief over unbelieving Israel recalls the despair of OT prophets like Jeremiah, who lamented the sin of and judgment on Israel in his own day (e.g., Jr 4:19-22).

9:3 Here Paul is referring to the Jewish people (cp. v. 4). Though some Jews, like Paul, the other apostles, and all the first disciples had believed in Jesus, the large majority rejected him. Paul's passion for his fellow Jews is seen in his willingness to face God's wrath, to be cursed, if that would bring them to faith. This attitude recalls that of Moses, who asked God to erase his name from "the book" if God would not forgive his people (Ex 32:30-32).

9:4 Israel received God's lavish grace in the form of his adoption of them as his special possession (Dt 14:1-2); their experience of his glory (Ex 16:7,10); the covenants issued to Noah, Abraham, Israel through Moses, and David; the giving of the law at Sinai (Ex 20), temple service, in which God chose to dwell among his people and receive their sacrifices for sin, and the various promises God issued to Israel.

9:6 The rejection of the Messiah by the majority of Jews does not mean that God's plan has failed. Paul demonstrates that throughout the Scriptures God has worked through a faithful remnant within Israel, and often the physical descendants of Abraham rejected God.

9:13 The verbs loved and hated, with the OT context (Mal 1:2-3), are covenantal terms referring not so much to God's emotions as to his actions. God chose Jacob and did not choose Esau. In any case, these names are not used in Malachi 1:2–3 to refer to individuals but to the nations founded by them: Israel and Edom.

9:14-29 Paul focuses on the freedom of God in election and why his freedom is just. The demonstration of mercy to some, and not all, is his free choice since mercy, by definition, is not required (vv. 15-18). As the Creator of all, God is free to do as he wills with his creation (vv. 20-21). He is free to create all for the sake of his glory (v. 23).

RIGHTEOUSNESS BY FAITH ALONE

10 Brothers and sisters, my heart's desire and prayer to God concerning them † is for their salvation. 2 I can testify about them that they have zeal for God, † but not according to knowledge. 3 Since they are ignorant of the righteousness of God † and attempted to establish their own righteousness, they have not submitted to God's righteousness. 4 For Christ is the end † of the law for righteousness † to everyone who believes, † 5 since Moses writes about the righteousness that is from the law: The one who does these things will live by them. † † 6 But the righteousness that comes from faith † speaks like this: Do not say in your heart, "Who will go up to heaven?" † † that is, to bring Christ down 7 or, "Who will go down into the abyss?" † † that is, to bring Christ up from the dead. † 8 On the contrary, what does it say? The message is near you, in your mouth and in your heart. † † This is the message of faith that we proclaim: 9 If you confess with your mouth, "Jesus is Lord," † and believe in your heart † that God raised him from the dead, † you will be saved. 10 One believes with the heart, resulting in righteousness, and one confesses with the mouth, resulting in salvation. 11 For the Scripture says, Everyone who believes on him will not be put to shame, † † 12 since there is no distinction between Jew and Greek, † because the same Lord † of all † richly blesses all who call on him. 13 For everyone who calls on the name of the Lord will be saved. † †

ISRAEL'S REJECTION OF THE MESSAGE

14 How, then, can they call on him they have not believed in? And how can they believe without hearing about him? † And how can they hear without a preacher? † 15 And how can they preach unless they are sent? As it is written: How beautiful † are the feet of those who bring good news. † † 16 But not all obeyed the gospel. † For Isaiah says, Lord, who has believed our message? † † 17 So faith comes from what is heard, † and what is heard comes through the message about Christ. † † 18 But I ask, “Did they not hear? ” Yes, they did:

Their voice has gone out to the whole earth, and their words to the ends of the world. † †

19 But I ask, “Did Israel not understand? ” First, Moses said,

I will make you jealous of those who are not a nation; †

I will make you angry by a nation that lacks understanding. † †

20 And Isaiah says boldly,

I was found by those who were not looking for me; I revealed myself to those who were not asking for me. † †

21 But to Israel he says, All day long I have held out my hands to a disobedient and defiant people. † †

10:2-3 In some respects, this statement resembles Paul’s own experience. He was zealous for God (Php 3:6), but was ignorant of God’s plans in Christ. Upon knowing Christ, Paul considered all his credentials in Judaism to be a loss (Php 3:8). Zeal had become especially commendable among Jews while internal and external forces threatened their faith. Mattathias, leader of the famed Jewish rebellion movement known as the Maccabees, appealed to such zeal: “Let every one who is zealous for the law and supports the covenant come out with me” (1 Macc 2:27).

10:4 As the end, or goal, of the law, Jesus is that to which the law pointed and is its fulfillment. Debate about this verse concerns what place the law now has in the lives of believers. Notwithstanding that issue, it is clear that Paul regards righteousness as no longer coming through adherence to the law. Rather, righteousness comes through faith in Christ (vv. 4-6).

10:9-10 Believing in your heart does not mean, “as opposed to in your head.” Heart and mouth are used here because they come from Deuteronomy 30:14, quoted in the previous verse.

10:12 It is extraordinary that Paul, having articulated the privileges and status of Israel (9:4-5), claims that there is no distinction between Jew and Greek. But the gospel clearly affirms this reality. All who call on God are richly blessed.

10:13 To call on a deity in Greco-Roman culture, as well as in Judaism (Jl 2:32), meant to seek assistance or help.

10:14-21 Paul employs a series of OT texts to support his two key points throughout this section. First, Israel cannot be excused for rejecting God's righteousness through Christ; they have had ample opportunity to understand it through what has been promised in the Prophets. Second, that God's righteousness is now available to the Gentiles should come as no surprise. See also "Ethics of Global Missions," p. 1323.

10:16 To obey the gospel in this context means to believe in Christ and live according to his lordship, as the quote from Isaiah 53:1 shows (see Jn 6:29 for a similar connection of obedience and faith).

ISRAEL'S REJECTION NOT TOTAL

11 I ask, then, has God rejected his people? † Absolutely not! † For I too am an Israelite, a descendant of Abraham, † from the tribe of Benjamin. 2 God has not rejected his people whom he foreknew. † Or don't you know † what the Scripture says in the passage about Elijah — how he pleads with God against Israel? 3 Lord, they have killed your prophets and torn down your altars. I am the only one left, and they are trying to take my life!
† † 4 But what was God's answer to him? I have left seven thousand for myself who have not bowed down to Baal. † † 5 In the same way, then, there is also at the present time a remnant chosen by grace. † 6 Now if by grace, † then it is not by works; otherwise grace ceases to be grace. † 7 What then? Israel did not find what it was looking for, † but the elect did find it. The rest were hardened, † 8 as it is written, God gave them a spirit of stupor, eyes that cannot see and ears that cannot hear, to this day. † † 9 And David says,
Let their table become a snare and a trap, a pitfall and a retribution to them.
10 Let their eyes be darkened so that they cannot see, and their backs be bent continually. † †

ISRAEL'S REJECTION NOT FINAL

11 I ask, then, have they stumbled so as to fall? Absolutely not! On the contrary, by their transgression, salvation has come to the Gentiles † to make Israel jealous. 12 Now if their transgression brings riches for the world, and their failure riches for the Gentiles, how much more will their fullness bring! † 13 Now I am speaking to you Gentiles. Insofar as I am an apostle to the Gentiles, † I magnify my ministry, 14 if I might somehow make my own people † † jealous and save some of them. † 15 For if their rejection brings reconciliation † to the world, what will their acceptance mean but life from the dead? † 16 Now if the firstfruits are holy, † so is the whole batch. And if the root is holy, so are the branches.
17 Now if some of the branches were broken off, † and you, though a wild olive branch, were grafted in among them † and have come to share in the rich root † of the cultivated olive tree, 18 do not boast that you are better than those branches. But if you do boast — you do not sustain the root, but the root sustains you. † 19 Then you will say, † "Branches were broken off so that I might be grafted in." 20 True enough; they were broken off because of unbelief, but you stand by faith. † Do not be arrogant, but beware, † † 21 because if God did not spare the natural branches, he will not spare you either. 22 Therefore, consider God's kindness and severity: severity toward those who have fallen but God's kindness † toward you — if you remain in his kindness. † Otherwise you too will be cut off. † 23 And even they, if they do not remain in unbelief, † will be grafted in, because God has the power to graft them in again. 24 For if you were cut off from your native wild olive tree and against nature were grafted into a cultivated olive tree, how much more will these — the natural branches — be grafted into their own olive tree?
25 I don't want you to be ignorant † of this mystery, † brothers and sisters, so that you will not be conceited: † A partial hardening has come upon Israel † until the fullness of the Gentiles has come in. † 26 And in this way all † Israel will be saved, as it is written,

SOURCES FOR ETHICS

When we consider sources for ethics, we may distinguish first between an ontological aspect (the source of ethics itself) and an epistemological aspect (the source of knowledge of ethics), each of which has implications for ethical authority.

THE ONTOLOGICAL ASPECT

The ontological question has to do with the nature of morality.

One common view is that of moral relativism, which understands morality to be subjective and created by humans (to enable a civil society and avoid anarchy or tyranny, to establish and protect individual rights, and so on), though proponents sometimes present their views as objective and authoritative. Furthermore, even though morality is considered to be subjective, it is derived in part by reflection on the world, so that human reason engages something that exerts itself as objective.

In contrast to subjective perspectives, Christian ethics holds that morality is objective and revealed by God. The ultimate source of ethics is God, who created the universe with moral order—determined by his character, purposes, and will—and graciously reveals to humans the reality of that order, and how to live according to that reality. This perspective is one of moral realism.

THE SOURCES OF ETHICAL KNOWLEDGE

Christians affirm that the Bible is the primary source of knowledge for ethics, but there are a range of secondary sources, including reason, tradition, and experience. A key question concerns how these sources are coordinated or related. Some consider the appeal to sola Scriptura as a denial of other sources. A better understanding, however, is that other sources have validity, but must be tested by and subordinated to Scripture as the primary source (the "norming norm"). It would be naïve to ignore or deny other sources, for they are inescapable and will influence or determine moral judgments whether acknowledged or not. More importantly, Scripture affirms them, even if it qualifies them.

Tradition, understood here as the practices and teachings of the church, shapes us and our understanding of God and of Scripture. We must not affirm tradition uncritically, for sometimes it develops in ways that stand in opposition to God's commandments in Scripture (Mt 15:3). Yet the problem is not tradition itself, but unfaithful traditions. Jesus embraced the prophetic tradition that faithfully transmitted what was revealed by God, and Scripture instructs believers to pass on what we have received (Dt 6:1-9; Mt 28:18-20; Jd 3). The test of tradition is its fidelity to Scripture.

Reason is also necessary to understand and apply the truth of God's Word and to convey it to others (Ac 17:17; 1Pt 3:15). But the Bible warns that fallen human reason suppresses the truth so that human minds are darkened and foolish (Rm 1:18,21), unable to discern the things of the Spirit (1Co 2:14). Yet, God's will is accessible to Spirit-filled reason (Rm 12:1-2; Col 1:9-10). Thus, the mind must be renewed by God's Spirit, and human reason must submit to and be tested by Scripture.

NATURAL LAW

A word on natural law is appropriate here. Natural law is reason-based and affirms that there is a moral order that is revealed in creation. Creation stands alongside Scripture as a witness to God's goodness and glory (Ps 19), and it reveals something of God's divine nature and power so that humans are held accountable (Rm 1:18-20). Natural law asserts that morality is objective and accessible to all, for human reason is able to discern proper conduct in accordance with nature. It appeals to some Christians because it is consistent with a biblical perspective without requiring an appeal to revelation.

Nevertheless, its usefulness is limited. Paul's argument from nature in Romans 1 is not an appeal to the effectiveness of natural law. On the contrary, it highlights the depth of human sin and rebellion, which has corrupted human desires and our ability to reason. Apart from God's grace manifested in the gospel, humans are in a hopeless situation. Natural law is not for that reason useless, but it depends upon and must be coordinated with revelation.

THE EXPERIENTIAL ASPECT

Experience is another source of knowledge, though it is viewed with great suspicion by many, and for good reason: humans are often self-deceived, and personal experience lacks moral accountability. Thus, appeals to it as a source of authority are dubious.

On the other hand, it would be a curious view of ethics to insist on its truth against all experience. Rather, we are invited to "taste and see that the LORD is good" (Ps 34:8); the faithful are able to confirm by their experience that God's Word is true and that his will is good (Rm 5:5; 12:2). Further, conscience is related to experience, and it may "accuse or even excuse" us (Rm 2:15), though it may be seared and untrustworthy (1Tm 4:1). Thus, conscience and experience must be tested by the Word of God.

CONCLUSION

In sum, tradition, reason, and experience can inform our ethics in a proper way, but they are often distorted by sin and so are not fully trustworthy. These sources should be recognized as important but secondary, to be tested by Scripture within the community of believers. The Bible itself is the only fully reliable source for understanding the nature and substance of ethics; thus, the Bible should not be made to conform to other sources. Rather, those sources must conform to its authority and teaching.

The task at hand is not to develop the content of Christian ethics, but we may specify briefly how the Bible functions as its primary source: • The whole of the Bible serves as a source for Christian ethics (2Tm 3:16-17), and not only its direct moral exhortation.

- The Bible defines the "moral field" for ethics, including God as Creator (and his character, purposes, and will), humans and the world in which we live, and the relationships between them. Specifically, the Bible presents a metanarrative that is essential for ethics, including the belief that the world was created to be good and was infused with moral order, yet it is disordered because of human sin, and yet again it is reordered by God, who by his steadfast love seeks to redeem and reconcile sinful humans and establish justice and peace. God gives a hope for a future that surpasses even the original goodness of creation. This metanarrative provides a worldview—a lens that sharpens our vision so that we can interpret and understand the world more clearly. This is important for ethics because our worldview (what we think about God, the world, and humans, etc.) shapes our ethics; it is contrasted with alternative worldviews and ethics.
- The Bible is also a source of moral exhortation, which operates within the larger framework described, and is focused on doing God's will. Ultimately, moral responsibility is not to a command or moral principle, but to a personal God, though there is no sharp line drawn between the two, since God reveals his will and character through his commands. We may delight in the commands of a gracious God, which light the path of life and keep us from destruction (Dt 30:11-20; Ps 119). Properly understood, the law is structured by love (Mt 22:37-40). Further, Jesus reveals that true morality and righteousness involves the whole self, not merely external conformity to the law (Mt 5–7). In addition, Jesus declares to his disciples that after his return to the Father, the Spirit will come and guide them into all truth (Jn 16:13). Indeed, within the community of believers, the Spirit brings to bear the truth of Scripture and knowledge of God's will, and gives believers the power to obey (Rm 12:1-2; Col 1:9-10).

In a text with great ethical significance, because it describes action within a larger vision of the world, Paul prays that new believers may be filled with the knowledge of his will in all wisdom and spiritual understanding, so that you may walk worthy of the Lord, fully pleasing to him: bearing fruit in every good work and growing in the knowledge of God, being strengthened with all power, according to his glorious might, so that you may have great endurance and patience, joyfully giving thanks to the Father, who has enabled you to share in the saints' inheritance in the light. He has rescued us from the domain of darkness and transferred us into the kingdom of the Son he loves. In him we have redemption, the forgiveness of sins. (Col 1:9-14) KENNETH T. MAGNUSON

11:1-10 Paul draws on several OT texts to demonstrate that God has not rejected his people, but has always preserved a faithful remnant from among the nation of Israel.

11:11 The idea of the Gentiles making Israel jealous is drawn from Deuteronomy 32:21: "I will provoke their jealousy with what is not a people; I will enrage them with a foolish nation."

11:17-18 Gentile Christians are encouraged in this letter to see they have a place in the promises given to Abraham. They are reminded, however, that they are supported by, and have been grafted into, the work that God did in and through the people of Israel. They should not be looked down upon, but neither should they look down upon their Jewish brothers.

11:17-24 Paul uses the image of an olive tree to represent the people of God. The root refers to the patriarchs (1:17; cp. Philo 279). The natural branches represent the Jewish people, their descendants. The wild olive branch refers to Gentile Christians, who have been grafted into the family tree by God's grace. The image powerfully underscores the unnatural privilege of Gentiles receiving the grace of God; they should not become complacent about it.

11:36 The notion of God as source, sustainer, and goal of all reality was common in Greco-Roman Stoicism. Jews of Paul's day picked up the notion and applied it to the God of Israel. Paul uses it within a fully Christianized worldview.

A LIVING SACRIFICE

12 Therefore, brothers and sisters, in view of the mercies of God, I urge you † to present your bodies as a living sacrifice, † holy and pleasing to God; this is your true worship. † 2 Do not be conformed † to this age, † but be transformed by the renewing of your mind, † so that you may discern what is the good, pleasing, and perfect will † of God.

MANY GIFTS BUT ONE BODY

3 For by the grace † given to me, I tell everyone among you not to think of himself more highly than he should think. † Instead, think sensibly, as God has distributed a measure of faith † to each one. 4 Now as we have many parts in one body, † and all the parts do not have the same function, 5 in the same way we who are many † are one body in Christ † and individually members of one another. 6 According to the grace given to us, we have different gifts: † If prophecy, † use it according to the proportion of one's † faith; 7 if service, † use it in service; if teaching, † in teaching; 8 if exhorting, † in exhortation; giving, with generosity; † leading, † with diligence; showing mercy, with cheerfulness. †

CHRISTIAN ETHICS

9 Let love be without hypocrisy. † Detest evil; † cling to what is good. 10 Love one another deeply as brothers and sisters. † Outdo one another in showing honor. † 11 Do not lack diligence in zeal; be fervent in the Spirit; † † serve the Lord. † 12 Rejoice in hope; † be patient in affliction; † be persistent in prayer. † 13 Share with the saints in their needs; † pursue hospitality. † 14 Bless those who persecute you; † bless and do not curse.

CHURCH AND STATE

The phrase “church and state” generally refers to the ways in which Christian churches and other houses of worship relate to the governing political authorities in any given society. More specifically, “church and state” denotes the particular relationship between the two throughout the American religious and political tradition. This relationship is as important as it has been controversial, and Christians have been wrestling with the intersection of faith and politics for two millennia.

The relationship is important because both God’s church and the state are ordained by God for particular purposes. The church universal is the bride of Christ, being made ready to meet the Bridegroom and comprised of all orthodox Christians, living out their faith in local churches (Rv 17:7-9). God’s church is the new Israel, partaking in the new covenant under Christ and helping to fulfill our calling to live holy lives together (Heb 10:24-25). Christians also know that government is “God’s servant for [our] good,” wielding coercive force to “punish those who do what is evil.” (Rm 13:4; 1Pt 2:14). All is well when each institution does its job. The state restrains evil and promotes the good; the church worships God, raises the next generation, and meets the spiritual and physical needs of a lost world by sharing the gospel, feeding the hungry, and clothing the naked (Mt 25:31-46; 28:19-20).

Yet it is rarely the case that all is well. Political leaders often see religious authority as a threat to their own power, or they wish to usurp the appeal of religion for their own purposes. Even Israel’s first king, Saul, confused the lines between God’s purposes by attempting as king to perform a sacrifice that God had reserved for his prophet, Samuel (1Sm 13).

Moreover, just as political leaders can abuse religion for political reasons, Christians have misused the reigns of coercive political power to enforce their particular religious beliefs and practices on others, including many fellow believers. Sadly, history is replete with the tragic and bloodstained consequences of political and ecclesial leaders violating the God-ordained purposes and boundaries of the church and the state.

Christian thinking about these matters falls into two broad categories. The first is how individual Christians should understand their identities as citizens of heaven (Php 3:20), and citizens of their earthly polities (Ac 22:22-29). Scripture instructs us to obey, honor, and pray for our political leaders (Rm 13:1; 1Tm 2:2), pay our taxes (Mk 12:13-17, Rm 13:7), and seek to "live at peace with everyone" (Rm 12:18). At the same time, our political loyalties are secondary. We are to "seek first the kingdom of God," and if the kingdom of man interferes, "we must obey God rather than people" (Mt 6:33; Ac 5:29).

If this first category focuses on individual duties for Christians, the second way of thinking concerns how churches and governments should interact from a macro perspective. That is, how might political institutions be arranged such that political leaders can best achieve government's purpose while at the same time allowing the church the freedom to fulfill its purposes?

It is in response to this question that the American experience with politics and religion is instructive. From the earliest colonies to the present time, the balance and potential tension between church and state has been a perennial concern. Some figures, like the early Baptist Roger Williams, were primarily worried about the state's propensity to interfere with the freedom of the church and the consciences of believers. Others, like Thomas Jefferson, were more concerned with the possibility of church leaders interfering in the political sphere by claiming exclusive privileges for particular denominations. On the one hand, the role of faith in public life was seen as both an incredible good to be protected, and on the other a potential powder keg of controversy and faction to be worried about.

The importance of religion is further evidenced by the privileged place it holds in the governing document of the United States, the Constitution. The first priority of the First Amendment is to protect religion and religious exercise from the federal government: "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof."

This language has led to the development of the establishment clause and free exercise jurisprudence. The former is concerned with whether the government favors religion in some manner; the latter addresses whether the religious beliefs and practices of citizens have been unduly infringed by the government. While originally the First Amendment only applied to the federal government, a subsequent legal development called "incorporation" means that states and local governments are subject to the religious clauses as well. The enormous challenge facing Christians and other citizens is how to interpret these ideas in the founding documents and apply them to contemporary situations and conflicts.

Opinions on what the American Founders meant by the religion clauses range from "strict separation" to "accommodation." Strict separationists follow Thomas Jefferson's language in his letter to a group of Danbury Baptists, in which he invokes a "wall of separation" between church and state. When it comes to the establishment clause, this view invests the government with a kind of watchdog role, such that the government will ensure that it will never appear to endorse religion. Strict separationists object to governmental support of religious schools, prayers at public events, and symbolic gestures like nativity scenes at city halls or "In God We Trust" on our coinage.

Accommodationists interpret the Constitution somewhat more broadly. The Founders' primary intention, they feel, was to prevent the establishment of a national church and to provide space for religious groups to flourish free from the intolerance that marked many European church-state arrangements. The Founders did not intend to erect a wall denying all cooperation between church and state, but envisioned a benign cooperation that would still protect religious liberty. Accommodationists would object to the government adopting a Presbyterian denomination as the official religion of the United States, but they would be more flexible about public prayers, the use of "In God We Trust," and similar matters.

Christians thinking about these matters should differentiate between historical debates about what the Founders meant and normative debates about what would be the best state of affairs for church and state. It is far too easy to read back into history the very views one presently holds and favors. The Founders themselves disagreed about these matters, though it is clear that faith was understood as intrinsically valuable and deserving of protection, and in some instances, promotion.

Fortunately, a Christian worldview rests on much more than the accomplishments of man—as admirable as some of those accomplishments may have been. Christians should continue to draw from Scripture in working and thinking together about how God's particular mandates for his church and for the state intersect. Given the fall, Christian attempts to live out their identities as citizens of heaven and of earth will always fall short; nevertheless, such endeavors will contribute to their being "salt" and "light" until the true King returns and establishes his reign forever (Mt 5:13-14; Rv 21:1-6).

12:1 Using sacrifice language metaphorically was common in the OT and in the Greco-Roman world (see Pss 50:23; 51:16-17; 141:2). The striking aspect of Paul's statement is that our bodies are living sacrifices. In Judaism, animal sacrifices involved the death of the animal offered; thus, a living sacrifice is an oxymoron. Paul can refer to believers this way because they have died with Christ and also live with him (Rm 6:8). The term living sacrifice captures these theological realities and applies them to Christian living.

12:2 This is a key verse for living according to a Christian worldview (see "Christian Worldview, the Great Commandment, and the Christian Life," p. 1181). Believers are not to think in the same patterns as the world around them. Rather, with renewed minds, they are to think according to God's ways so that they may discern the will of God. Clearly, faithful Christian living depends on right thinking; without the renewal of the mind, we are unable to discern what is pleasing to God. See "Christian Higher Education," p. 1471; "The Bible and Intellectual Pursuit," p. 1512.

12:3 Strikingly, the first thing Paul addresses regarding renewed, Christian thinking is humility. Humility is pleasing to God, but he hates pride (Is 2:11; Dn 4:37; Am 6:8). See also "Leadership and Biblical Ethics," p. 1501.

12:9-21 The central theme of this section is love and its applications. While the passage finds several parallels in Jewish and Greek ethical wisdom, much of Paul's instruction specifically parallels the teaching of Jesus (esp. 12:14,17-18,21).

12:9 Love, introduced here, continues to play a large role throughout the discussion of proper Christian living in the following chapters (e.g., 13:8-10; 14:15). Love is the central Christian virtue, reflecting the nature of God himself (1Jn 4:16) and the essence of the law (Mt 22:37-40).

12:13 Hospitality in the first century often entailed housing traveling believers, particularly preachers and missionaries. In a day in which hotels were neither safe nor wholesome, providing such accommodations was a key way of supporting them (see 3Jn 5-8).

12:14 Paul's instruction to bless those who persecute you has obvious parallels in the teaching of Jesus (Mt 5:44; Lk 6:27-28). Jesus's instruction to respond to persecution with love was unique in the ancient world. Most cultures and religions advocated recrimination and violence in response to harsh treatment.

12:15 To rejoice with those who rejoice and weep with those who weep is to identify with the experiences of others. This notion is found in Jewish sources prior to Paul: "Do not avoid those who weep, but mourn with those who mourn" (Sir 7:34).

A CHRISTIAN'S DUTIES TO THE STATE

13 Let everyone submit to the governing authorities, † since there is no authority except from God, † and the authorities that exist are instituted by God. 2 So then, the one who resists the authority is opposing God's command, and those who oppose it will bring judgment on themselves. 3 For rulers are not a terror † to good conduct, but to bad. Do you want to be unafraid of the authority? Do what is good, and you will have its approval. 4 For it is God's servant for your good. But if you do wrong, be afraid, because it does not carry the sword for no reason. For it is God's servant, an avenger † that brings wrath on the one who does wrong. 5 Therefore, you must submit, not only because of wrath but also because of your conscience. † 6 And for this reason you pay taxes, since the authorities are God's servants, continually attending to these tasks. † 7 Pay your obligations † to everyone: taxes to those you owe taxes, † tolls to those you owe tolls, respect to those you owe respect, † and honor to those you owe honor.

LOVE, OUR PRIMARY DUTY

8 Do not owe anyone anything, except to love one another, for the one who loves another has fulfilled the law. † 9 The commandments, Do not commit adultery; do not murder; do not steal; † do not covet; † † and any other commandment, are summed up by this commandment: Love your neighbor as yourself. † † 10 Love does no wrong to a neighbor. Love, therefore, is the fulfillment of the law.

PUT ON CHRIST

11 Besides this, since you know the time, it is already the hour † for you † to wake up from sleep, † because now our salvation is nearer than when we first believed. † 12 The night is nearly over, and the day is near; † so let us discard the deeds of darkness † and put on the armor of light. † 13 Let us walk with decency, † as in the daytime: not in carousing and drunkenness; † not in sexual impurity and promiscuity; not in quarreling and jealousy. 14 But put on the Lord Jesus Christ, † and don't make plans to gratify the desires of the flesh. †

13:1-7 Submission to proper authority is significant in the Christian worldview (see "Biblical View of Crime and Punishment," p. 105). Paul explains that governments are ordained by God. Even when foreign powers oppressed Israel, the biblical teaching continued to affirm God's ordination of their leadership (Dn 4:17). Significantly, the government of Paul's day was the Roman Empire, under Emperor Nero. Of course, government, like the rest of this world, is fallen and can be corrupted. When governments command disobedience to God, then we must obey God rather than people (Ac 5:27-32; see also the article, "How Should Christians Relate to Government?," p. 1213; "The Bible and Government Models," p. 768).

13:1 Emperor Claudius had expelled all the Jews and Jewish Christians from Rome in AD 49 (Ac 18:2). They returned when Claudius died in AD 54. The church in Rome, therefore, may have harbored some anti-government sentiment at the time of Paul's writing.

13:4 Secular rulers are God's servants, even if they serve him unwittingly. The Persian king Cyrus is even referred to as God's "anointed" (Is 45:1).

13:7 The historian Tacitus records Roman resistance to paying taxes in the mid-50s. This culminated in a tax revolt in AD 58, shortly after Paul wrote Romans. Whether or not Paul had in mind such resistance to paying taxes in Rome, it is clear that his exhortation to pay your obligations was directly relevant.

13:8-10 The idea that love fulfills the law shows Paul's indebtedness to the teaching of Jesus (Mt 22:34-40; Mk 12:28-34; Lk 10:25-28; Jn 13:34-35).

13:8 See "Personal Finances," p. 758.

13:12 The imagery of darkness was universally associated with evil, since it hides sinful activities. The day of the Lord is an important concept for the OT Prophets (e.g., Is 27; Jl 2:32) and NT writers (e.g., 1Co 5:5; 2Pt 3:10; also adapting the phrase to "the day of Christ"; e.g., Php 1:10), who envisage a day when God will save his people and judge his enemies.

THE LAW OF LIBERTY

14 Accept † anyone who is weak in faith, † but don't argue about disputed matters. 2 One person believes he may eat anything, † while one who is weak eats only vegetables. 3 One who eats must not look down on one who does not eat, † and one who does not eat must not judge one who does, † because God has accepted him. † 4 Who are you to judge † another's household servant? Before his own Lord he stands or falls. And he will stand, because the Lord is able † to make him stand.
5 One person judges one day to be more important than another day. † Someone else judges every day to be the same. Let each one be fully convinced in his own mind. † 6 Whoever observes the day, observes it for the honor of the Lord. † Whoever eats, eats for the Lord, since he gives thanks to God; † and whoever does not eat, it is for the Lord that he does not eat it, and he gives thanks to God.
7 For none of us lives for himself, and no one dies for himself. † 8 If we live, we live for the Lord; and if we die, we die for the Lord. Therefore, whether we live or die, we belong to the Lord. † 9 Christ died and returned to life † for this:
that he might be Lord over both the dead and the living. † 10 But you, why do you judge your brother or sister? Or you, why do you despise your brother or sister? For we will all stand before the judgment seat of God. † † 11 For it is written,

As I live, says the Lord, every knee will bow to me, † and every tongue will give praise to God. † †

EVANGELICALS AND THE GLOBAL SOUTH

The relationship of North American evangelicals to world Christianity is at once simple and complex. The simplicity concerns the character of the faith itself. All believers, in all times and places, are equal recipients of God's grace and his gifts, equal participants in the work of the Holy Spirit and as fellow heirs of Jesus Christ. In these terms, North American evangelicals merely display variations on common patterns of God's merciful dealings with humankind.

The clear message of Scripture is that all believers, wherever they are found, make up a universal entity. Believers present in one local expression of Christian faith are linked to all others in their local settings because all are joined to Christ. And this linkage is much more than just a jigsaw puzzle in which the pieces touch only those other pieces that are in closest proximity. Rather, the great image from Scripture is the body of Christ where circulation (meaning assistance), a unified nervous system (meaning communication), and coordinated muscular exertion (meaning common action) are essential for all. This body of Christ anticipates the eternal reality described in Revelation 7:9: "There was a vast multitude from every nation, tribe, people, and language, which no one could number, standing before the throne and before the Lamb. They were clothed in white."

Yet the relationship between North American evangelicals and the Global South is also complicated because of the history of Christianity over the last three centuries. For much of that period, evangelicals in North America were active participants in the Western missionary efforts that sought to spread Christianity throughout the world. Through the nineteenth century, Americans and Canadians followed the lead of Britain. Pioneering missionaries like Adoniram and Ann Judson went out from Massachusetts to Burma only a few years after the English cobbler William Carey had pioneered British missionary work in India. Lottie Moon left Virginia as a Southern Baptist missionary to China less than twenty years after Hudson Taylor founded the China Inland Mission as the English-speaking Protestant world's most extensive outreach in Far East Asia. Rufus Anderson of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions followed the lead of Henry Venn, leader of England's Church Missionary Society, in promoting the "three-self formula" as a missionary ideal: self-governing, self-financing, and self-reproducing.

From roughly the dawn of the twentieth century, the number of evangelical missionaries from the United States, having overtaken the number from Britain, took the lead in cross-cultural proclamation of the gospel. (As a comparative note, it is worth observing that Canada, with its smaller population, long contributed a larger proportion of that population to missionary service than did the United States.) North American missionary efforts have been especially significant in promoting Bible translation. At the forefront of those translating efforts has been the Wycliffe Bible Translators, with the Summer Institute of Linguistics as its academic arm. The Wycliffe organization was founded in 1942 by an American missionary to Central America, Cameron Townsend; thousands of North Americans subsequently contributed to the more than seven hundred completed, and many more in-process, Bible translations created since that time.

Beyond providing people and resources for Bible translations, American missionaries have planted new churches all over the world. They have trained disciples, provided immense quantities of Christian literature, founded schools to teach basic literacy, established universities for advanced learning, set up hospitals, assisted agricultural and industrial development, and—in general—tried to provide as many dimensions of the Christian faith to others as they have experienced themselves.

Within recent years, however, the relationship of North Americans to the rest of the Christian world has entered a new phase. It is suggested by the fact that Wycliffe workers now come from all parts of the globe.

Some formerly mission-receiving countries like South Korea have even contributed more personnel (as a proportion of their population) than the traditional mission-sending countries like the U.S.

Even more complications are introduced if we think of the United States as a country that receives missionaries from the Global South. In recent decades, Christian missions have in fact moved from "the West to the rest" to a pattern of believers going "from everywhere to everywhere" (an insightful exposition is Michael Nazir-Ali, From Everywhere to Everywhere: A World View of Christian Witness, 1991). And some of those believers are now evangelizing within North America.

For the most part, Christian missionaries to the United States work among immigrant populations. As an example, Mark Gornik has documented the presence of scores of mission works in New York City alone that are offshoots of Christian communities in Africa (Word Made Global: Stories of African Christianity in New York City, 2011). Missionary organizations like the El Shaddai movement from the Philippines (a lay charismatic organization) and the Christian Church Outreach Mission from Ghana (founded by Abraham Bediako) are among the larger groups that also sponsor missionaries in some American locations (as well as many in Europe). Increasingly, missionaries to the U.S. are also beginning to reach beyond immigrant communities to the general population.

The relationship between American evangelicals and the churches of the Global South involves one more complicating factor. This factor concerns the type of Christianity that has been spreading so rapidly in much of the non-Western world. That type increasingly resembles the type of Christianity that has flourished in the U.S.

The distinguished missiologist Andrew Walls has explained these parallels in several helpful works (esp. The Missionary Movement in Christian History: Studies in the Transmission of Faith, 1996; and in The Cross-Cultural Process in Christian History: Studies in the Transmission and Appropriation of Faith, 2002). He first points to what happened with Christianity when it was successfully transmitted from Europe to North America. That successful transmission required giving up church-state establishments, hierarchical societies, and aristocratic or monarchical governments in favor of the separation of church and state, egalitarian society, and democratic government. European observers did not believe that Christianity could survive without its traditional forms. But it did survive. In fact, from the late 1700s to the late 1800s, the United States experienced one of the most dramatic expansions of Christianity that had ever taken place in the long history of the church.

For the most part, Americans turned to voluntary, self-directed organization as the primary means for carrying on the work of the church. They practiced the faith by forming their own churches and religious agencies, generating their own financial support, and taking personal responsibility for spreading and upholding the faith. Evangelicals led in setting up churches in this pattern, and then in forming missionary agencies on the same basis.

The new American pattern embodied a much more informal Christianity and pushed consistently for ever-more flexible institutions and ever-newer innovations in responding to spiritual challenges. It established an affinity between Christianity and the American social movements of the age. The connections grew strong between Christianity—based on conversion and voluntary organization—on the one hand, and fluid, rapidly-changing, commerce-driven, insecure, and ethnically pluralistic society on the other. But that kind of nineteenth-century American setting now describes many of the world societies that Christian faith—based on conversion and voluntary organization—is growing so rapidly.

These newer societies tend to be competitive and not deferential, open to Christian witness but not officially Christian, allowing space for entrepreneurial activity while not restricting religious expression too drastically. To the extent that these conditions have developed, it is not surprising that styles of Christianity that flourished in North America's competitive, market-oriented, rapidly changing, and initiative-rewarding environment would also flourish when other places begin to look more like nineteenth-century America than fifteenth-century Europe.

American evangelicals continue to influence the Global South through missions. But so also has the Global South begun to do missions in the U.S. Much of Christianity through the entire world now resembles American forms of Christianity—not primarily because of direct American influence, but because Christianity meets humanity's greatest needs there in ways that it has done, and continues to do, here.

12 So then, each of us will give an account of himself to God. †

THE LAW OF LOVE

13 Therefore, let us no longer judge one another. † Instead decide never to put a stumbling block or pitfall in the way of your brother or sister. † 14 I know and am persuaded in the Lord Jesus that nothing is unclean in itself. † Still, to someone who considers a thing to be unclean, to that one it is unclean. † 15 For if your brother or sister is hurt by what you eat, you are no longer walking according to love. † Do not destroy, by what you eat, someone for whom Christ died. † 16 Therefore, do not let your good be slandered, † 17 for the kingdom of God is not eating and drinking, † but righteousness, peace, and joy † in the Holy Spirit. 18 Whoever serves Christ † in this way is acceptable to God and receives human approval. †

19 So then, let us pursue what promotes peace † and what builds up one another. † 20 Do not tear down God's work because of food. Everything is clean, but it is wrong to make someone fall by what he eats. † 21 It is a good thing not to eat meat, or drink wine, or do anything that makes your brother or sister stumble. † 22 Whatever you believe about these things, keep between yourself and God. Blessed is the one who does not condemn himself by what he approves. † 23 But whoever doubts stands condemned if he eats, † because his eating is not from faith, † and everything that is not from faith is sin.

14:1-23 Paul affirms Christian freedom but urges graciousness among people who differ on such things. On the matter of eating meat and observing certain days as holy, the issue appears to concern Jewish Christians who still feel bound to observance of the OT law, with its special holy days and requirements concerning foods that led some Jews to avoid all meat in the Roman world.

14:1 Someone weak in faith in this context does not refer to immaturity of faith; it refers, rather, to someone who cannot yet accept the freedom to eat and drink outside the parameters of Jewish restrictions.

14:5 The observance of some days as more important than others refers to Jewish holy days, such as the Sabbath, days of fasting, and various festivals. The "weak" regarded such days to still hold significance for Christian living.

14:10-12 Paul refers to the final judgment in which all will give an account . . . to God. Though Christians will avoid condemnation at judgment because of the saving work of Christ (8:1), nevertheless we will be accountable to God for things done in this life. It is therefore not appropriate for Christians to judge and condemn another; it is to God that we answer.

14:14 Jesus declared all foods "clean" (Mk 7:15-23), meaning that OT dietary restrictions were no longer to be upheld among his followers. So, Paul says nothing is unclean in itself (also Rm 14:20).

14:15 Paul regards love for others as more important than being "right" about disputable matters. Believers should not exercise their freedom in a way that causes others to stumble (cp. 1Co 8:13).

14:22-23 Paul emphasizes the place of conscience in the Christian life. While there is clearly a "correct" position regarding food and drink (cp. vv. 14,20), Paul understands that some believers' consciences will nevertheless be influenced by their history in Judaism. As such, each one should do as they think is right before God. The one who doubts should not eat, because his eating is not from faith.

PLEASING OTHERS, NOT OURSELVES

15 Now we who are strong have an obligation to bear the weaknesses of those without strength, † and not to please ourselves. 2 Each one of us is to please his neighbor for his good, to build him up. † 3 For even Christ did not please himself. † On the contrary, as it is written, The insults of those who insult you have fallen on me. † † 4 For whatever was written in the past was written for our instruction, † so that we may have hope through endurance and through the encouragement from the Scriptures. 5 Now may the God who gives † endurance and encouragement † grant you to live in harmony with one another, † according to Christ Jesus, 6 so that you may glorify the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ † with one mind and one voice.

GLORIFYING GOD TOGETHER

7 Therefore accept one another, † just as Christ also accepted you, to the glory of God. 8 For I say that Christ became a servant of the circumcised † on behalf of God's truth, † to confirm the promises to the fathers, † 9 and so that Gentiles † may glorify God for his mercy. † As it is written,
Therefore I will praise you among the Gentiles, and I will sing praise to your name. † †
10 Again it says, Rejoice, you Gentiles, with his people! † † 11 And again, Praise the Lord, all you Gentiles; let all the peoples praise him! † †
12 And again, Isaiah says,
The root of Jesse † will appear, the one who rises to rule the Gentiles; the Gentiles will hope in him. † † 13 Now may the God of hope fill you with all joy and peace as you believe † so that you may overflow with hope by the power of the Holy Spirit. †

FROM JERUSALEM TO ILLYRICUM

14 My brothers and sisters, I myself am convinced about you that you also are full of goodness, † filled with all knowledge, † and able to instruct one another.
15 Nevertheless, I have written to remind you more boldly on some points † because of the grace given me by God †

GRACE-FILLED LEADERSHIP

We sing the great hymn "Amazing Grace" to proclaim the sweetness of God's divine favor. We experience grace as pardon, for it removes our guilt as far as the east is from the west (Ps 103:12); as acceptance, for we are embraced and welcomed in God's sight; as joy and peace, for it delivers us from the frantic quest for happiness; as power, for it transforms us; and as hope, for it gives us confidence in God's plan.

Grace is an overarching term for all of God's gifts to humanity and all the blessings of salvation—all of which are manifested through God's own self-giving. By grace, God freely moves toward us to offer reconciling forgiveness and sonship in the family of God. Leaders in a grace-filled community need to experience God's enabling and renewing grace on a regular basis. Moreover, leaders need to help others receive this grace, as well as to model it, share it, and extend it.

Grace opens Christians to the things of God and to the truth ultimately revealed in Jesus Christ (Jn

1:16,18). Grace-filled leaders work to develop contexts that stress confessional essentials related to the three persons of the Trinity, including the authority of God made known in and through Holy Scripture, the majesty of Jesus Christ manifested in and through the cross, and the lordship of the Holy Spirit illuminated in and through his manifold life-giving ministries. The convictions on which a grace-filled community is built will focus on the Word, the cross, and the Spirit. Grace-filled leaders understand their responsibility to help believing communities shape and form their convictions in this manner, seeking to avoid libertinism on the one hand and legalism on the other.

Grace-filled leadership, then, involves distinguishing between confessional essentials that cannot be compromised and secondary or tertiary matters. Learning when and how to give deference and freedom in these matters is important for building a grace-filled community. Yet, a grace-filled community involves more than an orthodox confession, as important and foundational as this may be. Leadership for and participation in a grace-filled community reaches beyond belief to behavior; it brings with it a multifaceted challenge to live accordingly.

In Galatians 5:22-23, the apostle Paul identifies the character qualities of the fruit of the Spirit as "love, joy, peace, patience, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, gentleness, and self-control"; these are qualities to be emulated in a grace-filled community. Grace-filled leadership frees the Christian community to exercise its giftedness in behalf of one another. Grace releases and affirms, valuing the dignity of individuals. It also supports and encourages. Grace-filled leadership seeks to honor others through both words and actions, while rejoicing with those who rejoice, and mourning with those who mourn.

A grace-filled community, therefore, will seek to develop a context in which each person will experience the joy of making significant contributions in advancing shared goals, shared values, and a shared mission. All those who have received grace should seek to show and share grace with others. Grace enables us to offer forgiveness when we have been wronged and to claim responsibility and seek forgiveness when we have wronged others. Grace encourages believers to shun legalism and libertinism in order to work together in harmony and freedom.

Grace-filled communities, shaped and informed by a Christian worldview, offer a context in which we can learn from our mistakes, displaying respect for and open communication with one another. Ultimately, grace-filled leaders encourage all in the community of faith to evidence heartfelt thanksgiving for the grace that has been lavished on us in Christ, while pointing us toward a greater dependence on God.

anything except what Christ has accomplished through me † by word and deed

PAUL'S TRAVEL PLANS

22 That is why I have been prevented many times from coming to you. † 23 But now I no longer have any work to do in these regions, † and I have strongly desired for many years to come to you † 24 whenever I travel to Spain. † For I hope to see you when I pass through and to be assisted by you for my journey there, † once I have first enjoyed your company † for a while. 25 Right now I am traveling to Jerusalem † to serve the saints, † 26 because Macedonia † and Achaia † were pleased to make a contribution for the poor among the saints in Jerusalem. 27 Yes, they were pleased, and indeed are indebted to them. For if the Gentiles have shared in their spiritual benefits, † then they are obligated to minister to them in material needs. 28 So when I have finished this and safely delivered the funds † to them, † † I will visit you on the way to Spain. 29 I know that when I come to you, I will come in the fullness of the blessing † of Christ.

30 Now I appeal to you, brothers and sisters, through our Lord Jesus Christ and through the love of the Spirit, † to strive together with me in fervent prayers to God on my behalf. † 31 Pray that I may be rescued from the unbelievers in Judea, † that my ministry to † Jerusalem † may be acceptable to the saints, † 32 and that, by God's will, † I may come to you with joy † and be refreshed together with you.

33 May the God of peace be with all of you. † Amen.

15:1-3 The strong are those who, like Paul, know they are not bound by the ceremonial requirements of the law of Moses (cp. 14:14,20). But the obligation of the strong is to love others, not to please self. The ultimate good is not simply to be "correct" in theological understanding, but to build up one another in love (cp. Eph 4:16). In this way, the strong will follow Christ, who did not please himself.

15:8-12 Paul has argued throughout Romans that in Christ, God has fulfilled the promises to Abraham to bless the nations (i.e., Gentiles; chap. 4), without negating the privileges and blessings of Israel (chaps. 9–11). Gathering a series of OT quotations here, Paul demonstrates that it has always been God's intention to gather Gentiles in order that they may worship him.

15:15-21 Paul reveals his self-understanding as apostle to the Gentiles and his aim . . . to preach the gospel where Christ has not been named. This is in fulfillment of Paul's commissioning from the Lord (Ac 9:15; 22:21; 26:17-18).

15:16 Paul transforms OT sacrificial language so that he, as a minister of the gospel, is a priest, and converted Gentiles are an acceptable offering presented to God. This is typical for the way the NT transforms the OT sacrificial system (12:1; Heb 13:15).

15:24,28 Spain was only fully organized as a Roman province during Paul's lifetime. We are never told why Paul had this area in view as his destination, nor if he made it there. An early Christian writing, 1 Clement 5:7 (AD 96/97), suggests Paul went to Spain after the Roman imprisonment recorded in Acts 28. Since Clement was the bishop in Rome at the time of writing, his testimony must be taken seriously.

15:25-27 A practical outworking of Paul's understanding that the Gentiles are a "wild olive branch" grafted into the tree of God's people (11:17-24) is that they are willing to contribute to the financial needs of Jewish Christians in Jerusalem. They have shared in their spiritual benefits and so are willing to minister to them in material needs.

PAUL'S COMMENDATION OF PHOEBE

16 I commend to you † our sister Phoebe, who is a servant † of the church in Cenchreae. † 2 So you should welcome her in the Lord † in a manner worthy of the saints and assist her in whatever matter she may require your help. For indeed she has been a benefactor of many — and of me also.

GREETING TO ROMAN CHRISTIANS

3 Give my greetings to Prisca † and Aquila, † my coworkers in † Christ Jesus, † 4 who risked their own necks for my life. Not only do I thank them, but so do all the Gentile churches. 5 Greet also the church that meets in their home. † Greet my dear friend Epaenetus, who is the first convert † † to Christ from Asia. † † 6 Greet Mary, † who has worked very hard for you. † 7 Greet Andronicus and Junia, my fellow Jews † † and fellow prisoners. † They are noteworthy in the eyes of the apostles, † and they were also in Christ before me. 8 Greet Ampliatus, my dear friend in the Lord. 9 Greet Urbanus, our coworker in Christ, and my dear friend Stachys. 10 Greet Apelles, who is approved in Christ. Greet those who belong to the household of Aristobulus. † 11 Greet Herodion, my fellow Jew. † Greet those who belong to the household of Narcissus who are in the Lord. 12 Greet Tryphaena and Tryphosa, who have worked hard in the Lord. Greet my dear friend Persis, who has worked very hard in the Lord. 13 Greet Rufus, † chosen in the Lord; also his mother — and mine. 14 Greet Asyncritus, Phlegon, Hermes, Patrobas, Hermas, and the brothers and sisters who are with them. 15 Greet Philologus and Julia, Nereus and his sister, and Olympas, and all the saints who are with them. † 16 Greet one another with a holy kiss. † All the churches of Christ send you greetings.

WARNING AGAINST DIVISIVE PEOPLE

17 Now I urge you, brothers and sisters, to watch out for those who create divisions and obstacles contrary to the teaching that you learned. † Avoid them, † 18 because such people do not serve our Lord Christ † but their own appetites. † † They deceive the hearts of the unsuspecting with smooth talk and flattering words. †

PAUL'S GRACIOUS CONCLUSION

19 The report of your obedience has reached everyone. † Therefore I rejoice over you, but I want you to be wise about what is good, and yet innocent about what is evil. † 20 The God of peace † will soon crush Satan † under your feet. The grace of our Lord Jesus be with you. †

21 Timothy, † my coworker, and Lucius, † Jason, † and Sosipater, † my fellow countrymen, greet you.

22 I Tertius, who wrote this letter, † greet you in the Lord. †

23 Gaius, † who is host to me and to the whole church, greets you. Erastus, † the city treasurer, and our brother Quartus greet you. †

GLORY TO GOD

25 Now to him who is able to strengthen you † according to my gospel and the proclamation about Jesus Christ, † according to the revelation of the mystery kept silent † for long ages † 26 but now revealed and made known through the prophetic Scriptures, † according to the command of the eternal God to advance the obedience of faith † among all the Gentiles — 27 to the only wise God, through Jesus Christ — to him be the glory forever! † † Amen.

16:1 Letters of commendation were important in the ancient world. They were stamps of approval given to someone traveling so that others within a letter writer's network might house and help them. Thus, Paul here commends Phoebe to the believers in Rome. Cenchreae was the port on one side of Corinth. The mention of this location has led most scholars to agree that the letter to the Romans was written while Paul was in Corinth during his third missionary journey (AD 56–57; Ac 20:1-3).

16:2 Benefactors or patrons played a significant role in the first-century world, using their wealth and status to help and fund specific people or groups. Phoebe was apparently a wealthy woman who had supported Paul.

16:5 The first Christian churches met in private homes. Paul mentions three home churches in this chapter, indicating multiple churches within Rome. Prisca (Priscilla) and Aquila hosted one (vv. 3-5); believers within Narcissus's household hosted another (v. 11); and Asyncritus and others hosted the third (v. 14). Given the size of even wealthy Roman homes, these congregations would have consisted of no more than twenty to thirty people.

16:16 A kiss was a common greeting in the ancient world and particularly in Judaism. Such a greeting is mentioned often in the NT, and by the second century a "kiss of peace" was a standard part of Christian liturgy.

16:20 This verse echoes Genesis 3:15. It may seem odd for the God of peace to crush his adversary, but that is precisely the way in which peace will be achieved. See also “Satan and Demons,” p. 1611.

16:22 It was common in the ancient world to hire trained scribes, amanuenses, who would write down what an author dictated. Tertius, who is otherwise unknown to us, served in this role for the letter to the Romans.

1 CORINTHIANS

INTRODUCTION

First Corinthians is the most literary of Paul's letters. With a variety of stylistic devices—irony, sarcasm, rhetorical questions, alliteration, antithesis, personification, framing devices, hyperbole, repetition, picturesque words (with local color), double meanings, and other wordplays—Paul attempted to persuade his readers. He wanted to communicate to the Corinthians the necessity of accepting the Lord's authority over their lives.

CIRCUMSTANCES OF WRITING

AUTHOR: First Corinthians ascribes Paul as its author (1:1; 16:21). Biblical scholars are almost unanimous that Paul wrote the letter. He wrote it during the last year of his three-year ministry at Ephesus, probably a few weeks before Pentecost in the spring of AD 56 (15:32; 16:8; Ac 20:31).

BACKGROUND: During Paul's second missionary journey, he had a vision at Troas; he heard a man call to him, "Cross over to Macedonia and help us!" (Ac 16:9). That change in plans led Paul to Philippi, Thessalonica, Athens, and ultimately to Corinth (Ac 18:5). Paul ministered in Corinth for at least eighteen months (Ac 18:1-18). He left Corinth accompanied by Aquila and Priscilla (Ac 18:18), leaving them at Ephesus where they met and instructed "an eloquent man" named Apollos (Ac 18:24-26). Apollos then went to Corinth and had a powerful ministry there (Ac 18:27–19:1).

First Corinthians is the second letter that Paul wrote to the Corinthian church. He had written them an earlier letter that included an admonition not to mix with the sexually immoral (5:9). The writing of this second letter (1 Corinthians) was prompted by oral reports from Chloe's household about factional strife within the church (1:11). Paul had also received reports about an incestuous relationship among the membership (5:1), factions that arose during observance of the Lord's Supper (11:18), and confusion over the resurrection of the dead (15:12). As a result, Paul addressed these issues in 1 Corinthians. Apparently as he was writing the letter, he received a letter from the Corinthians asking his opinion on various issues (7:1,25; 8:1; 12:1; 16:1). Therefore, he included his replies within this letter to the Corinthian believers.

CONTRIBUTION TO THE BIBLE

First Corinthians contributes greatly to our understanding of the Christian life, ministry, and relationships by showing us how the members of the church—Christ's body—are to function together. Problems can arise in any church because the church is comprised of sinful people (redeemed certainly, but still prone to follow the tug of sin). Paul gave specific solutions to specific problems, but the underlying answer to all these problems is for the church and its members to live Christ-centered lives. It all comes down to living under the lordship and authority of Christ, the head of his body (the church).

STRUCTURE

Paul's writing is in the form of a letter, using the standard four parts of a first-century letter: salutation (1:1-3), thanksgiving (1:4-9), the main body (1:10–16:18), and a farewell (16:19-21). It is a pastoral letter, driven by the occasion and the present needs of the recipients.

Perhaps the most noteworthy feature of the way Paul structured his letter was his use of the word "about" to introduce a subject. It is apparent that "about" signals that Paul was responding to items on a list of questions that he had received—perhaps by way of a committee of men (16:17). These questions dealt with males and females in marriage (7:1); virgins (7:25); food offered to idols (8:1); spiritual gifts (12:1); the collection for the saints in Jerusalem (16:1); and Apollos (16:12).

CHRISTIAN WORLDVIEW ELEMENTS

TEACHINGS ABOUT GOD

God the Father is the supreme Lord, for whose glory all things are to be done (10:31). The theological centrality of Jesus's bodily resurrection is developed in the sustained argument of the "Resurrection Chapter" (chap. 15). His lordship over the church means that he has the right to order its life and worship. The Spirit's life-giving presence has brought the church into existence, has given each of its members "spiritual gifts" (chap. 12), and enables its members to live holy lives because he is the Holy Spirit.

TEACHINGS ABOUT HUMANITY

Humanity in this book is seen mainly within the context of Christian community. Redeemed people have been transformed by Christ, are called and enabled to love one another, and are destined for resurrection. Such persons, however, still struggle with sins such as divisiveness, sexual immorality, and disorder in worship.

TEACHINGS ABOUT SALVATION

This letter contains what may be the first-composed written summary of the NT understanding of redemption: "For I passed on to you as most important what I also received: that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures" (15:3). Further, this book emphasizes that God saves only those individuals who believe in Christ's death (1:21-22).

1 CORINTHIANS TIMELINE

Corinth is founded by Dorian Greeks. 1000

Corinth is ruled by Cypselus (657–627) and his son Periander. (627–585) Periander mints Corinthian coins and constructs the diolkos, a five-foot-wide rock-cut path that ran four miles between two seaports, Lechaion on the Gulf of Corinth and Cenchreae on the Saronic Gulf. 600

The Isthmian games begin and are held every two years to honor Poseidon, the god of the sea. 582

Temple of Apollo is constructed. 550

500–50 BC

Corinth sides with Sparta and prevails against Athens in the Peloponnesian War. 430

Population of Corinth reaches 100,000. 400

Phillip II of Macedon conquers Corinth. 338

After Phillip II's assassination, the Greeks at the Isthmian games choose Phillip's son, Alexander the Great, to lead them in war with Persia. 336

The Corinthians attempt to resist Roman expansion in Greece and are destroyed by the Roman general Lucius Mummius. 146

50 BC–AD 50

Julius Caesar rebuilds Corinth as a colony of Rome naming it Colonia Laus Julia Corinthiensis. 44 bc Augustus Caesar makes Corinth the capital of Achaia. 27 bc Jesus's trials, death, resurrection, and ascension Nisan 14–16 or APRIL 3–5, AD 33

Pentecost AD 33

Saul's conversion on the Damascus Road OCTOBER AD 34

AD 50–100

Paul arrives in Corinth and spends eighteen months planting the church. 50–51

Paul's hearing before Corinth's proconsul, Gallio, brother of the Roman philosopher Seneca 51

Paul writes 1 Corinthians from Ephesus. 56

Paul writes 2 Corinthians from Ephesus. 56

Paul spends the winter in Corinth, from where he writes Romans. 57

Clement of Rome, the earliest of the apostolic fathers, sends a letter from Rome to the church at Corinth. This is thought to be the earliest Christian document outside the books of the NT. 96

FAITH AND REASON

There are points of tension in the Scriptures concerning the relation of faith and reason. Paul reminds us that Christ sent him to proclaim the gospel, but not by relying on worldly wisdom. Indeed, Paul insists that the wisdom of the wise will be destroyed and that nothing will come of their cleverness. Instead, those saved are saved by the "foolishness" of the gospel (1Co 1:17-24).

But Paul also suggests that, in their wickedness, people are stifling the truth even as knowledge of God lies plain before their eyes. Since the world began, God's invisible attributes, power, and deity have been accessible to human reason through the things God has made (Rm 1: 19-20). Additionally, Paul uses a series of arguments to support the resurrection of the dead (1Co 15:12-20).

What follows is an exploration of this tension; it offers one Christian account of faith and reason.

WHAT IS REASON AND WHAT IS FAITH?

In its broadest sense, the term reason means those natural human powers that enable access to a variety of truths. Such powers include sense perception, intuition of necessary truths, making inferences, deciding what to do, memory, and testimony. More narrowly, reason refers to reliable methods of inquiry about the world. Paradigmatic examples include the practices of the natural sciences. Even more narrowly, reason refers to forms of inference used to appropriately support one statement on the basis of other statements.

Christians generally agree that faith is the proper and primary response to God (Father, Son, and Holy Spirit). For a Christian, faith involves trusting Christ with one's whole life (Pr 3:5; Jn 20:31; Heb 12:2). Such trust requires embracing as true the testimony of the Scriptures and the church. Trusting in this way means accepting as true and binding certain understandings of what the Scriptures teach (2Tm 3:14-17; 2Th

Taken together, full-orbed Christian faith thus has three aspects: affective (assurance, confidence—1Jn 5:14; Heb 10:22; 11:1-40), cognitive (knowledge or belief—Gn 15:6; Heb 11:3), and volitional (trust, obedience—Gn 12:1-4). Faith is both a state (e.g., assent or belief) and an activity (e.g., worship).

HOW DO FAITH AND REASON RELATE?

What is the relationship between faith and reason? Historically, three kinds of answers have been given.

1. THE CONFLICT MODEL

The conflict model contends that faith and reason are irreconcilably opposed to one another. Oxford biologist Richard Dawkins, who insists that faith and reason are enemies, provides a contemporary example. He endorses science as the paradigm of reason, contending that the claims essential to Christianity are unreasonable given the standards of science.

Have Christians endorsed the conflict model? The second-century church father Tertullian famously asked, "What indeed does Athens have to do with Jerusalem? What concord is there between the Academy and the Church? What between heretics and Christians. . . . With our faith, we desire no further belief. For this is our palmary faith, that there is nothing which we ought to believe besides."

If Tertullian is suggesting that faith is genuine only if one knowingly embraces a statement that is against or contrary to the deliverances of mere reason, then he endorses a conflict model.

2. THE INDEPENDENCE MODEL

The independence model denies that faith and reason are necessarily antagonistic ventures. Instead, faith and reason are conceived as fundamentally independent. Evolutionary biologist Stephen Gould contended that science and faith occupy different, nonoverlapping magisterium (teaching authority). Science attends to facts and theories about the natural world (the what and how). Religion is about morality, the meaning and purpose of human life (the why). So, science and religion, reason and faith, are independent domains.

The earlier quote by Tertullian may be understood as emphasizing the independence of faith and reason, if Tertullian is suggesting that faith is merely indifferent to the deliverances of mere reason, that faith is about our response to what God has done for the sake of our salvation.

In his book Credo, Karl Barth, the twentieth-century theologian writes about the relation of dogmatics and philosophy. His claim "that Dogmatics runs counter to every philosophy" seems to underscore a fundamental opposition between faith and reason. But he elaborates that "no philosophy can deliver the key to us. . . . The question of the 'proper' language of theology is ultimately to be answered only with prayer and the life of faith." Barth may be suggesting that reason and faith are independent from, but not necessarily in opposition to, one another.

3. THE HARMONY MODEL

For some, the domains of faith and learning overlap much more than the independence model endorses. The harmony model holds that faith and reason have mutual aims and that the methods of each can interact with, and support, the other. Geneticist and director of the National Institutes of Health, Francis Collins, insists that there is no essential conflict between faith as expressed in Christianity, and reason, as exemplified in the physical or social sciences. Both have similar aims: discovering the truth about how things actually are and responding properly to what is true.

Thomas Aquinas insists that faith and learning relate, ideally, in harmony. He argues that grace, which enables faith, doesn't destroy but rather completes nature (including reason). He holds that reason can demonstrate the preambles of the faith (that God exists, God is one, God is necessary), but by faith we know the articles of faith (Trinity, incarnation, resurrection). The latter are above or beyond reason, but not contrary to it. Reason can help us understand the articles of faith and, also, help defeat objections to faith. In short, faith and reason work together to give us the full truth about God, the world, and ourselves.

HOW SHOULD CHRISTIANS THINK?

What should Christians think about the nature of faith and reason? First, both faith and reason are God's gifts. Christians should receive them graciously and use them well.

Second, reason enables one to make many true judgments about the nature of things in the world, other persons, and self. Faith, likewise, gives humans access to many profoundly significant truths. Since both reason and faith are means of accessing truth, they share a cognitive end.

Faith, however, provides access to some truths that reason alone cannot access. These include that God is Triune, Jesus Christ is God incarnate, Jesus died and was resurrected, and Jesus's death and resurrection are the means of our salvation. Additionally, faith's access to such truths comes through willingness to accept God's testimony, especially through the Scriptures and the church's witness. Central to orthodox Christian conviction is that faith offers access to truths otherwise unavailable to reason.

The difference here between faith and reason is material, not formal. Reason also provides humans access to truths the Christian faith does not. For example, ordinarily, it is reason—not God's revelation—that helps humans know, for example, that chewing or smoking tobacco is harmful to one's health.

Moreover, reason is like faith in that reliance on the testimony of others is one of the ways reason functions to help humans acquire truth. For example, that a financial adviser is a reliable source of truth about stock market fluctuations means that her judgment that one should sell rather than buy a certain company's shares provides one a good reason to sell. Selling, however, is an act of faith (in a sense analogous to that of faith in God) in the trustworthiness of one's financial adviser, albeit a quite reasonable one.

CHRISTIANS AND THE HARMONY MODEL

How should a Christian think about the three models of the relation of faith and reason? Christians should embrace the harmony model, because the goal of both faith and reason is grasping the truth. When reason functions well, we are able to access the truth about a wide range of things. Faith operates to allow another means of access to truths, some of which may also be accessible to reason, in its normal operations, while others are not.

Still, we are fallible, finite, and fallen creatures. There are limits to our knowledge. Even for things within the grasp of our reasoning powers, we make mistakes because our powers are not developed or deployed properly. Additionally, we are sinful creatures, having distorted passions and a misshapen will. Not surprisingly, then, faith and reason may sometimes appear to either be opposed or simply independent ventures. In practice, when conflict or independence models are advocated, it is because some distorted or defective version of either faith or reason is being employed. But faith and reason, rightly understood, are unified both by being gifts of, and having their ultimate source in, God. So, in principle there is no essential conflict between them.

Still, the independence and conflict models point to something important. The Christian faith demands that our fundamental posture toward God be utter reliance on him and not merely an assent to a set of propositions. Reason impedes faith when it is taken to be a rival to one's ultimate and unconditional reliance on God, as revealed in Christ.

MICHAEL D. BEATY

GREETING

1 Paul, † called as an apostle † of Christ Jesus by God's will, † and Sosthenes our brother: †

2 To the church of God at Corinth, † to those sanctified † in Christ Jesus, called † as saints, with all those in every place who call on the name † of Jesus Christ our Lord — both their Lord and ours.

3 Grace to you and peace from God our Father † and the Lord Jesus Christ.

THANKSGIVING

4 I always thank † my God for you because of the grace of God given to you in Christ Jesus, 5 that you were enriched in him † in every way, in all speech and all knowledge. † 6 In this way, the testimony about Christ was confirmed among you, † 7 so that you do not lack any spiritual gift as you eagerly wait † for the revelation † of our Lord Jesus Christ. 8 He will also strengthen you to the end, † so that you will be blameless in the day of our Lord Jesus Christ. † 9 God is faithful; † you were called by him † into fellowship with his Son, † Jesus Christ our Lord.

DIVISIONS AT CORINTH

10 Now I urge you, brothers and sisters, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that all of you agree in what you say, that there be no divisions among you, and that you be united with the same understanding and the same conviction. 11 For it has been reported to me about you, my brothers and sisters, by members of Chloe's people, that there is rivalry † among you. 12 What I am saying is this: One of you says, "I belong to Paul," or "I belong to Apollos," † or "I belong to Cephas," † or "I belong to Christ." † 13 Is Christ divided? † Was Paul crucified for you? Or were you baptized in Paul's name? 14 I thank God † † that I baptized none of you except Crispus † and Gaius, † 15 so that no one can say you were baptized in my name. 16 I did, in fact, baptize the household † of Stephanas; † beyond that, I don't recall if I baptized anyone else. 17 For Christ did not send me to baptize, but to preach the gospel — not with eloquent wisdom, so that the cross † of Christ will not be emptied of its effect.

CHRIST THE POWER AND WISDOM OF GOD

18 For the word of the cross is foolishness to those who are perishing, but it is the power of God to us who are being saved. † 19 For it is written,
I will destroy the wisdom of the wise, and I will set aside the intelligence of the intelligent. † † 20 Where is the one who is wise? Where is the teacher of the law? † Where is the debater of this age? † Hasn't God made the world's wisdom foolish? 21 For since, in God's wisdom, the world did not know God through wisdom, God was pleased to save those who believe through the foolishness of what is preached.
22 For the Jews ask for signs † and the Greeks seek wisdom, 23 but we preach Christ crucified, † a stumbling block to the Jews and foolishness to the Gentiles. † 24 Yet to those who are called, † both Jews and Greeks, Christ is the power of God and the wisdom of God, 25 because God's foolishness is wiser than human wisdom, and God's weakness is stronger than human strength.

BOASTING ONLY IN THE LORD

26 Brothers and sisters, consider your calling: Not many were wise from a human perspective, † not many powerful, † not many of noble birth. 27 Instead, God has chosen † what is foolish in the world to shame the wise, and God has chosen what is weak in the world to shame the strong. 28 God has chosen what is insignificant and despised in the world † — what is viewed as nothing — to bring to nothing what is viewed as something, 29 so that no one † may boast in his presence. † 30 It is from him that you are in Christ Jesus, who became wisdom from God for us — our righteousness, † sanctification, † and redemption, † 31 in order that, as it is written: † Let the one who boasts, boast in the Lord. † †

1:1 Paul often mentions the co-senders of his letters. This Sosthenes could be the synagogue ruler who had been beaten in Corinth during Paul's visit (Ac 18:17).

1:5 Though their giftedness in speech and knowledge has caused problems within the Corinthian congregation (1Co 14), Paul nevertheless acknowledges that these are gifts from God.

1:6-9 Given the seriousness of the problems in the Corinthian congregation, the positive affirmation in these verses is striking. They underscore that God is the One who will strengthen these believers to the end; though the Corinthians have problems, God is faithful.

1:10 Christian unity is very important in the NT and must be central to a Christian worldview.

1:12-13 Apparently Christians in Corinth divided according to allegiances to their favorite teachers, a problem still common among believers today. That the teachers listed are all orthodox does not make things any better. Paul stresses that our loyalty is to Christ—not to any mere teacher. Only Christ was crucified for us.

1:18 That the cross seems like foolishness to outsiders, but is the power of God for salvation, is an apocalyptic theme. That Jesus died on a cross appears to be a weakness of Christianity in the eyes of the world, but God has revealed its power to those being saved.

1:20 The one who is wise refers to Greek philosophers. The teacher of the law probably has in view Jewish teachers (the same word is often translated "scribes" in the Gospels). The debater of this age refers to traveling orators who debated key ideas and became very popular in the NT era. None of these popular sources of wisdom could discover on their own God's way of accomplishing salvation.

1:22-25 Because hanging on a tree was a sign of God's curse (Dt 21:22–23), the idea of a crucified Messiah was a stumbling block to the Jews—it was scandalous. It was simply foolish to Gentiles, who regarded crucifixion as the just fate of serious criminals. Nevertheless, the gospel cannot be changed to accommodate the demands of culture. Rather, God's truth must be proclaimed no matter how foolish it may seem, for by this truth God will save those who believe.

1:27 Christianity does not advance by the popularity or impressiveness of its adherents.

PAUL'S PROCLAMATION

2 When I came to you, brothers and sisters, announcing the mystery † of God to you, I did not come with brilliance † of speech † or wisdom. 2 I decided to know nothing among you except Jesus Christ and him crucified. † 3 I came to you in weakness, † in fear, † and in much trembling. † 4 My speech † and my preaching were not with persuasive † words of wisdom † but with a demonstration of the Spirit's power, 5 so that your faith might not be based on human wisdom but on God's power. †

SPIRITUAL WISDOM

6 We do, however, speak a wisdom among the mature, † but not a wisdom of this age, or of the rulers † of this age, who are coming to nothing. † 7 On the contrary, we speak God's hidden wisdom in a mystery, a wisdom God predestined † before the ages for our glory. † 8 None of the rulers of this age knew this wisdom, because if they had known it, they would not have crucified the Lord of glory. † 9 But as it is written,

What no eye has seen, no ear has heard, and no human heart has conceived — God has prepared these things for those who love him. † †

10 Now God has revealed these things to us by the Spirit, since the Spirit searches everything, † even the depths of God. † 11 For who knows a person's thoughts † except his spirit † within him? In the same way, no one knows † the thoughts of God except the Spirit of God. 12 Now we have not received the spirit of the world, but the Spirit who comes from God, so that we may understand what has been freely given to us by God. 13 We also speak these things, not in words † taught by human wisdom, but in those taught by the Spirit, explaining spiritual things to spiritual people. † 14 But the person without the Spirit † does not receive what comes from God's Spirit, because it is foolishness to him; he is not able to understand it since it is evaluated † spiritually. 15 The spiritual person, however, can evaluate † everything, and yet he himself cannot be evaluated by anyone. 16 For who has known the Lord's mind, that he may instruct him? † †

But we have the mind of Christ. †

2:1 Paul's preaching is contrasted with the public speeches made by the sophists and orators of his day. They would follow a certain protocol for speaking, praising the city and employing elaborate eloquence designed to win over an audience.

2:2-3 Not only is Paul's message focused on the cross of Christ, but his ministry is decidedly "cruciform." He plays down human impressiveness and preaches a "foolish" message in the eyes of the world. But the message of the cross is the power of God for salvation (1:18) in spite of its weak appearance. So, too,

Paul's ministry may have appeared weak, but it was accompanied by the Spirit's power (2:4). See "Speaking to a Non-Christian about Jesus," p. XXXV.

2:4-5 In the Greek world, popular speakers gained a following by impressive display of oratorical skill. Paul deliberately pursued ministry in a contrasting way because he did not want people to be persuaded by impressive arguments. Rather, he wanted their faith to rest on God's power. Even today crowds can be drawn in a variety of ways, but Christian ministry rests on clear gospel proclamation.

2:6-9 Paul makes clear that there is wisdom in the gospel, but it is often not what the world considers wisdom. Indeed, God's wisdom is hidden, in keeping with the apocalyptic theme begun in 1:18. See "Special Revelation in Scripture," p. 705.

2:13 Spiritual people are people indwelt by the Holy Spirit—that is, they are Christians, not an elite group of super-Christians.

THE PROBLEM OF IMMATURITY

3 For my part, brothers and sisters, I was not able to speak to you as spiritual people but as people of the flesh, as babies in Christ. † 2 I gave you milk to drink, not solid food, since you were not yet ready for it. In fact, you are still not ready, 3 because you are still worldly. For since there is envy † and strife † † among you, are you not worldly and behaving like mere humans? 4 For whenever someone says, "I belong to Paul," and another, "I belong to Apollos," † are you not acting like mere humans?

THE ROLE OF GOD'S SERVANTS

5 What then is Apollos? What is Paul? They are servants through whom you believed, and each has the role the Lord has given. 6 I planted, † Apollos watered, but God gave the growth. 7 So then neither the one who plants nor the one who waters is anything, but only God who gives the growth. 8 Now he who plants and he who waters are one, † and each will receive his own reward according to his own labor. 9 For we are God's coworkers. † You are God's field, God's building. †
10 According to God's grace that was given to me, I have laid a foundation as a skilled master builder, † and another builds on it. But each one is to be careful how he builds on it. 11 For no one can lay any other foundation † than what has been laid down. That foundation is Jesus Christ. 12 If anyone builds on the foundation with gold, silver, † costly stones, † wood, hay, or straw, 13 each one's work will become obvious. For the day will disclose it, because it will be revealed by fire; † the fire will test the quality of each one's work. † 14 If anyone's work that he has built survives, he will receive a reward. 15 If anyone's work is burned up, he will experience † loss, but he himself will be saved † — but only as through fire. †

16 Don't you yourselves know that you are God's temple † and that the Spirit of God lives in you? † 17 If anyone destroys God's temple, God will destroy him; † for God's temple is holy, † and that is what you are.

THE FOLLY OF HUMAN WISDOM

18 Let no one deceive † himself. If anyone among you thinks he is wise in this age, † let him become a fool † so that he can become wise. † 19 For the wisdom of this world is foolishness † with God, since it is written, † He catches the wise in their craftiness; † † 20 and again, The Lord knows that the reasonings † of the wise are futile. † † 21 So let no one boast in human leaders, for everything is yours † — 22 whether Paul or Apollos or Cephas † or the world or life † or death † or things present or things to come † — everything is yours, 23 and you belong to Christ, † and Christ belongs to God.

3:1 While the Corinthians liked to think of themselves as spiritual people, they were, in fact, people of the flesh. Their values are all too influenced by the philosophy and culture of surrounding society, which means they are still babies in Christ and need to mature.

3:3-4 The behavior of the Corinthians shows their spiritual immaturity to the point that they look like unbelievers (worldly) rather than Christians.

3:6 Agricultural imagery would be immediately understood, since the area surrounding Corinth was rich for farming. While human factors, such as planting and watering, are indispensable and support the process, humans cannot make a crop grow. So too with the Corinthian congregation: Paul planted, Apollos watered, but only God can give the growth.

3:10 The agricultural imagery is now switched for that of an urban landscape. Since its inception in 44 BC, Corinth had been decorated with several new buildings. Of central significance for such building projects was the laying of the foundation. If the foundation was not laid correctly, the entire edifice would be in jeopardy.

3:11 Jesus Christ is the foundation of the church (which is "God's building," 3:9). The true church cannot be built on any other foundation.

3:13-15 This describes God's judgment of various works of ministry and whether or not they were appropriately conducted (like Paul's) or inappropriately conducted (like those of the people Paul is critiquing).

3:16-17 To claim that the congregation in Corinth is God's temple is extraordinarily significant. While God chose to dwell among his people first in a tabernacle, then in the Jerusalem temple, God's dwelling—Paul asserts—is now among the people of Christ, since the Spirit of God lives in them. This is an extension of Jesus's teaching that he would replace the temple (Jn 2:19-22). Those in Christ are incorporated into the building of which Christ is the foundation. They have become members of the temple by virtue of being one with him.

THE FAITHFUL MANAGER

4 A person should think of us in this way: as servants † of Christ and managers † of the mysteries of God. † 2 In this regard, it is required that managers be found faithful. † 3 It is of little † importance to me that I should be judged † by you or by any human court. † In fact, I don't even judge myself. 4 For I am not conscious of anything against myself, but I am not justified † by this. It is the Lord who judges me. 5 So don't judge † anything prematurely, before the Lord comes, † who will both bring to light what is hidden in darkness and reveal the intentions of the hearts. And then praise will come to each one from God. †

THE APOSTLES' EXAMPLE OF HUMILITY

6 Now, brothers and sisters, † I have applied these things to myself and Apollos † for your benefit, so that you may learn from us the meaning of the saying: "Nothing beyond what is written." The purpose is that none of you will be arrogant, favoring one person over another. 7 For who makes you so superior? What do you have that you didn't receive? If, in fact, you did receive it, why do you boast as if you hadn't received it? 8 You are already full! You are already rich! You have begun to reign as kings without us — and I wish you did reign, so that we could also reign with you! 9 For I think God has displayed us, the apostles, in last place, like men condemned to die: We have become a spectacle to the world, both to angels and to people. 10 We are fools for Christ, but you are wise in Christ! † We are weak, but you are strong! You are distinguished, but we are dishonored! 11 Up to the present hour we are both hungry and thirsty; we are poorly clothed, roughly treated, homeless; 12 we labor, working † with our own hands. † When we are reviled, we bless; when we are persecuted, we endure it; 13 when we are slandered, we respond graciously. Even now, we are like the scum of the earth, like everyone's garbage. †

PAUL'S FATHERLY CARE

14 I'm not writing this to shame you, but to warn you as my dear children. †
15 For you may have countless instructors in Christ, but you don't have many fathers. For I became your father † in Christ Jesus through the gospel.
16 Therefore I urge you to imitate me. 17 This is why I have sent † Timothy to you. He is my dearly loved and faithful † child in the Lord. He will remind you about my ways in Christ Jesus, just as I teach everywhere in every church.
18 Now some are arrogant, as though I were not coming to you. 19 But I will come to you soon, † if the Lord wills, and I will find out not the talk, but the power of those who are arrogant. 20 For the kingdom of God is not a matter of talk but of power. 21 What do you want? Should I come to you with a rod, † or in love and a spirit of gentleness? †

4:1 Paul, Apollos, Cephas, and all like them, are but servants of Christ. They are not to be venerated or esteemed. Moreover, they are managers of the mysteries of God. The manager of a household or estate held responsibility for its good order. Such a manager was often a slave. The manager did not possess the household as his own, but was its steward for the sake of its patriarch. Paul and others have responsibility for the administration of the mysteries of God, but they are simply serving their patriarch—God himself.

4:3-4 Paul's point is that the esteem or evaluation of people—even his esteem and evaluation of self—means nothing. It is the Lord who judges.

4:7 This is a valuable statement on the basis of Christian humility. Whatever gifts and abilities believers may possess, all come from God. There is no place for boasting among recipients of God's gifts.

4:8-13 Paul engages in biting satire in the first of these verses. It is a powerful condemnation of any theology that suggests that Christians should expect glory and honor in this life. Prosperity theology, which claims that God will bless the faithful with earthly riches in this life, is flatly unbiblical.

4:9 In the Roman arena, criminals or prisoners of war were paraded as a spectacle before fighting to the death. The apostles are recipients of the world's shame and scorn; they do not enjoy positions of power and glory in this life. See also "A Biblical View of Angels," p. 1531.

4:10 While the Corinthians glory in earthly status and praise, the apostles are dishonored in the eyes of the world. This is an outworking of Paul's theology of the cross: the message of the cross is foolishness to the world, but it is the power of God for salvation (1:18). By the same token, true Christian ministry has the appearance of weakness and foolishness from the world's perspective.

4:16 Imitation is a basic aspect of discipleship. Mentors, including Paul, are not perfect, but they should provide an example of faithfully following Christ, as Paul did.

4:20 Greek culture was captivated by the eloquence of words, or talk. But the kingdom of God does not consist of empty talk. Rather, it is constituted by power—that is, the spiritual efficacy that changes lives—evidence of God leading people to faith and holiness. Paul's ministry was characterized by a demonstration of the Spirit's power, while faith is based on God's power (2:4-5). The message of the cross—which appears weak and foolish—is the power of God for salvation (1:18). Thus, the kingdom of God is built by the transformative power of the cross, not by eloquence of speech.

IMMORAL CHURCH MEMBERS

5 It is actually reported that there is sexual immorality † among you, and the kind of sexual immorality that is not even tolerated † among the Gentiles † — a man is sleeping with his father's wife. † 2 And you are arrogant! Shouldn't you be filled with grief † and remove from your congregation the one who did this? 3 Even though I am absent in the body, I am present in spirit. † As one who is present with you in this way, I have already pronounced judgment on the one who has been doing such a thing. 4 When you are assembled in the name of our Lord Jesus, and I am with you in spirit, with the power of our Lord Jesus, 5 hand that one over to Satan for the destruction of the flesh, † so that his spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord. †

6 Your boasting is not good. Don't you know that a little leaven † † leavens the whole batch of dough? † 7 Clean out the old leaven so that you may be a new unleavened batch, as indeed you are. For Christ our Passover lamb † has been sacrificed. †

ENGAGING LGBT ADVOCATES

There are four key areas that together help us develop a Christian framework for responding well to LGBT advocates in the public square. Awareness consists of those things we should keep in mind as we engage LGBT advocates. Knowledge includes the facts and theory to which we may refer in conversation. Wisdom allows us to make important distinctions based on observation and reflection. Integrity involves our Christian character, informed by the Scriptures.

AWARENESS

Before we can discuss what it means for us to respond Christianly to any issue, we must first be aware of who God is. Remember the central statement about the character of God given to Moses on Mount Sinai in Exodus 34:6-7? He is the God who is gracious and merciful, slow to anger, and abounding in steadfast love. He is also a God of holy love, who by no means clears the guilty.

This God, the God of Sinai, is also the God embodied in our Lord Jesus Christ, in whom we find that grace and mercy instantiated. As former Archbishop of Canterbury A. M. Ramsey phrased it, "In this God there is no unChristlikeness at all." This is important because we as individuals, as the church, are to be a people who mirror him on the face of the earth.

So, who ought we to be as the people of God? James calls Christians to be swift to listen, slow to speak, and slow to become angry (Jms 1:19-20). Yet sometimes when I hear evangelicals dealing with LGBT issues in the public square, it's as though James said that we should be swift to speak, swift to get angry, and slow to listen. The tone we use speaks volumes, but it may not reflect our God.

We also need to be conscious of who we are as creatures. We humans are creatures full of longings for connections—not only connection with God, but also connections with other humans. Our will to relate mirrors something in the very nature of God, who has made us in his likeness. God is Trinity, and the will to relate is found on the inside of the heart of reality.

But we also know that we are creatures who live outside Eden. We live on the other side of "the Rupture," as Jacques Ellul put it, or, as Augustine put it centuries earlier, "the Fall." There is disorder now in our will to relate. As Blaise Pascal said, "We are the glory and the garbage of the universe." There is a paradox in who we are.

We should additionally be aware that not all LGBT advocates are themselves LGBT and that LGBT people differ in their desires for public policy. For example, some LGBT individuals want the benefits and rights of a heterosexual marriage to apply to a homosexual one, but others reject that as a sellout to the straight world. We need to be aware of the beliefs and values of the individuals to whom we are relating.

We also ought to be aware that there is a scandal attached to following Christ. If we want to follow Jesus at any level in our world, we will experience the scandal of the cross of Christ. This means that we can't take responsibility if people take offense when we try to stand up Christianly in the public square. That, however, is a very different story from our giving offense because we are swift to speak, swift to get angry, slow to hear, and treat the LBGT community in a cookie-cutter way. Paul says, "Give no offense to Jews or Greeks or the church of God" (1Co 10:32).

Awareness, therefore, consists of those things that we keep in mind as we engage with others in the public square.

KNOWLEDGE

Second, we need to engage with knowledge— that is, with a store of fact and theory that we can retrieve when the occasion makes it appropriate. For instance, we should seek to inform ourselves on the history of the relevant issues, understanding that LGBT matters are not merely associated with the modern era (see S. Donald Fortson and Rollin G. Grams, Unchanging Witness: The Consistent Christian Teaching on Homosexuality in Scripture and Tradition, 2016). We also need to know the seven or eight key texts in Scripture that speak to same-sex behavior (Gn 19; Lv 18:22; 20:13; Jdg 19; Rm 1:18-32; 1Co 6:9-11; 1Tm

1:8-11; and possibly Jd 5-7).

But in addition to these, we must also know the biblical texts about one-flesh union and appropriate sexual expression as is celebrated, for example, in the Song of Songs. Very often we go into the public square armed with only the texts that deal with homosexuality, but there is another strand of verses related to sexuality that we see foundationally in Genesis 2. Our Lord reiterates them in the Gospels (Mt 19), and the Pauline mission to the Gentile world reinforces them (Eph 5). The latter passage, in fact, is particularly important because Christ and the church share a union in difference, not a union in sameness. We thus need to present not just the negative but also the positive context for sexual connection. It is important to develop a theology of sexuality so that we don't sound fixated on one particular area or single issue. God created sex, understands how it works best, and has given us helpful guidelines in his Word.

As we familiarize ourselves with these key texts, it can be beneficial to have some knowledge of the alternative readings, too. For example, according to some books advocating homosexuality, Ruth and Naomi were lesbians. David was fleeing from Saul because of a homosexual love triangle involving Jonathan. Some LGBT advocates are ordained and some work as Christian lay people, so they may bring these ideas up in discussion. Therefore, we need to be familiar with the arguments and prepared to explain why we think they do not stand.

We should also be familiar with the popular arguments. For example, the "silence of Jesus" argument says that because the Gospels do not mention Jesus condemning homosexual practice, we should not condemn it either. But the absence of evidence is not the evidence of absence. Just because the Gospels don't record Jesus speaking directly to this issue doesn't mean that he never did (cp. Jn 21:25).

Another argument used to suggest that there is nothing sinful about homosexuality is "God created me this way." As Christians, we know that this perspective does not consider the fact that relationships and the whole creation order are disrupted outside of Eden. There is disorder in our bodies and in our desires. We need a resurrection of the body; indeed, the whole created order needs to be transfigured in Christ (cp. Rm 8:19-22).

This claim also reflects a rather simplistic understanding of how God relates as Creator to creation. The classic theologians distinguished between God as the immediate cause of an event and God as the remote cause, who does things through other creatures that he's made. The way in which God relates to his creation is a lot more complex than our rhetoric often suggests. If I accepted the argument "God created me this way" as it stands, I wouldn't take my migraine medicine—but I do.

Others argue, "It's unfair to deny me what my body craves." This is the naturalistic fallacy—that an "is" brings an "ought" with it. The fact that most women can biologically bear children doesn't mean that every woman has an obligation to become pregnant at least once. Males can sire thousands of children, but that does not mean they ought to do so. Biology isn't destiny, morally speaking.

WISDOM

Third, let us engage others with wisdom. One part of wisdom is making distinctions based on observation and careful reflection. We may need to distinguish different sorts of values and their opposites. We have moral values (good versus evil), intellectual values (truth versus error), and aesthetic values (beautiful versus ugly). Sometimes, when I hear the intensity with which some Christians engage LGBT advocates in the public square, I wonder if we are combining moral values with an aesthetic distaste for some of the practices of LGBT sex and, therefore, overreact.

Wisdom also sees a moral difference between feeling attraction toward the same sex and sexual practices with the same sex. When feelings of attraction become lust—attraction indulged—then the moral problem emerges. Such disordered attraction may indeed be a consequence of the fall, but feeling an attraction itself is not the sin. Lust is sin, whether homosexual or heterosexual in direction.

Wisdom also discerns a difference between those who have same sex curiosity (e.g., the teen surfing the web), same sex attraction (e.g., some fantasies and desires are for those of the same sex), same sex orientation (e.g., most of a person's fantasies and desires are for those of the same sex), and same sex identity (e.g., the person for whom LGBT defines how they see their core being). Wise pastoral responses will differ in each case.

Another part of wisdom is discerning where we're located in the stream of redemptive history. As far as I can see, the Western world is now post-Christendom, and I believe some of the intensity of the reaction in the public square from Christians seems based on the Christendom assumption. What drives our discussions? Is it the desire for biblical integrity, or is it a fear of the loss of cultural power? We need to ask ourselves questions like these. What are the biblical analogs for where we are placed by God? Are we like Israel in the land of promise, or are we people on pilgrimage? Do we look to Moses and the monarchy, or to Hebrews 11 and 1 Peter 1 and 2, seeking the city whose builder and maker is God? Our choice of analog will have significant implications for our practices.

If I am right that we are living post-Christendom and that we are a pilgrim people, then we may need to learn from the second-century Christians and those early apologists who had to reconnect with culture and explain Christian practices, particularly countercultural ones. Do you remember some of the criticisms of Christians in the second century? People said they were cannibals because they gathered together and ate someone's body and drank someone's blood. People called them incestuous, because "brothers" married "sisters." Apologists had to explain what the practices and language common to Christianity were about. Similarly, we may need a new order of apologists in the public square who cannot only articulate the Christian viewpoint on sexuality but who know how to defend it with grace and mercy.

SPIRITUAL INTEGRITY

Finally, we need to engage with spiritual and scriptural integrity. By "spiritual integrity" I mean an integrity of Christian character that's informed by the Scriptures. The mark of the believer in John 13:34-35 is loving other believers; the moral mandate of Matthew 22 is loving practice toward one's neighbor; and in his Sermon on the Mount our Lord taught us to love our enemies (Mt 5). I've met LGBT people in each of those categories—professing Christians, neighbors, and others who are ideologically driven, who see a threat to LGBT freedom in Christian teaching. Loving practice in all cases is really important—we are the body language of the invisible God.

In all of this, the practice of prayer is essential. If we're going to engage with LGBT advocates in the public square, do we really believe in the Holy Spirit? Do we believe in the God who can go before us as we seek to serve him? Do we believe in the reality of grace to change lives? Those things that we really pray about, that issue out of our character, show what our hearts are before God and toward others. Whatever we will bring into the public square will be shaped by the fact that we pray in reliance on the Spirit, and with trust in the transforming grace of God, before we even get there.

5:1 Sexual immorality (Gk porneia) was characteristic of pagan cultures, while Jews regarded it a perversion of God's intention for sex because it was outside of the covenant of marriage. Abstinence from sexual immorality was one of the four requirements for Gentiles to join the Christian church, according to the Jerusalem Council (Ac 15:29). But the Corinthians have fallen well short of this standard, with a case existing among them that is worse than Gentile (in this context, pagan) standards. This man engages in sex with his stepmother, which is explicitly forbidden in Leviticus 18:8 and in Roman law. The lex Iulia de adulteriis banned it on threat of exile.

5:2 When Christians refuse to repent of their clear sin, they are denying the gospel and thus must be removed from the church. The church's aim in taking such action is to see the offender come to repentance and be saved (5:5). The congregation's arrogance toward this issue shows how far they have strayed from a godly perspective.

5:4-5 For the unrepentant sinner, Paul prescribes that the church should hand that one over to Satan for the destruction of the flesh. This no doubt means that the church ought to expel such a person from their congregation (cp. 5:9-13; Mt 18:15-17). The contrast between being assembled in the name of our Lord Jesus and being handed over to Satan indicates a temporary exchange of lordship. If the sinner wants to continue in sin, he is choosing to live as the world lives, which is ruled by the evil one (2Co 4:4; Eph 2:1-2). Being given over to sinful desires and their consequences will ultimately demonstrate the futility and hopelessness of unrepentant living. Paul's hope is that this will lead to restoration of the sinner so that his spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord.

5:6-7 Leaven, or yeast, is commonly used as an illustration of sin. As leaven spreads through dough, so sin will spread through the church if it is not dealt with. Paul connects this with the unleavened bread of the Passover, stating that Jesus is the lamb that bears the sacrifice for sin, as celebrated in the Passover meal.

5:12-13 In our day, judging others is often considered the greatest evil. While the judgment of outsiders is to be left to God, there is a sense in which believers should judge those inside the church. This is not a "salvation-level" judgment, but one that discerns unrepentant sin and lovingly prescribes expulsion from the congregation (5:4-5).

LAWSUITS AMONG BELIEVERS

6 If any of you has a dispute against another, how dare you take it to court † before the unrighteous, † and not before the saints? 2 Or don't you know that the saints will judge the world? And if the world is judged by you, are you unworthy to judge the trivial cases? 3 Don't you know that we will judge angels — how much more matters of this life? 4 So if you have such matters, do you appoint as your judges those who have no standing † in the church? 5 I say this to your shame! † Can it be that there is not one wise person among you who is able to arbitrate between fellow believers? † 6 Instead, brother goes to court against brother, and that before unbelievers! †

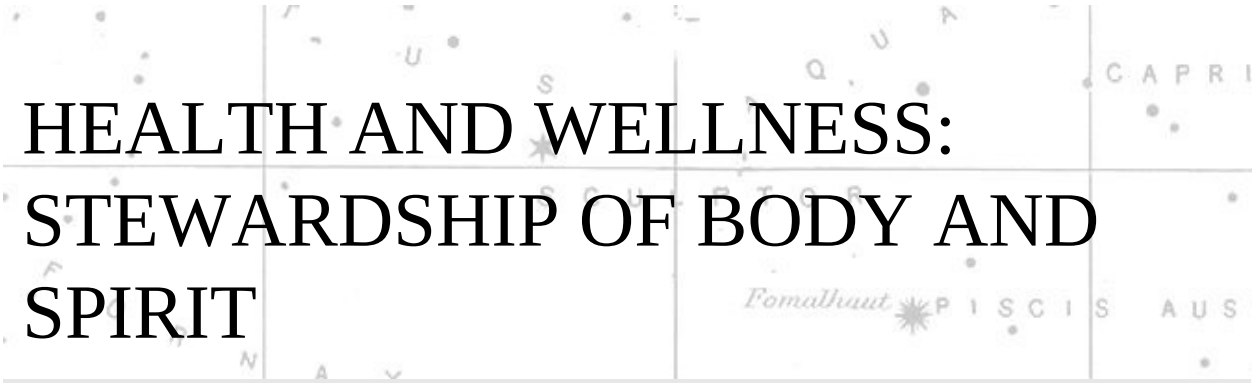
7 As it is, to have legal disputes against one another is already a defeat for you. † Why not rather be wronged? † Why not rather be cheated? † 8 Instead, you yourselves do wrong and cheat — and you do this to brothers and sisters!
9 Don’t you know that the unrighteous † will not inherit God’s kingdom? † Do not be deceived: No sexually immoral people, idolaters, † adulterers, † or males who have sex with males, † † 10 no thieves, † greedy † people, drunkards, verbally abusive people, † or swindlers † will inherit God’s kingdom.



HEALTH AND WELLNESS: STEWARDSHIP OF BODY AND SPIRIT

The importance of caring for the body and spirit seems hardly debatable from within a Christian framework of thought. Man did not become “a living being” until God “breathed” life into his body, which was created from “the dust from the ground” (Gn 2:7). Yet evidences of spiritual and bodily neglect abound in the world, and Christians are not exempt from the display. Generally, each of us can recite the list of activities that are suited to our own pursuit of wellness—a relative freedom from disorder and disease and also the experience of flourishing. We know a huge amount of information that, if actually heeded, would aid this pursuit. But we do not always heed it.

Some ask whether there is a connection between spiritual wellness and physical wellness. Multiple stories in Scripture give evidence that such a connection is present. The biblical narratives of Naaman the Syrian (2Kg 5), the woman with the issue of blood (Mt 9:20-26), and the man born blind (Jn 9) each connect spiritual and physical healing. “Have courage, daughter. . . Your faith has saved you,” said Christ to the bleeding woman, and she was immediately made well (Mt 9:22); this confirms that the whole human—spirit and body—responds to his touch. Conversely, Ananias and Sapphira died after lying to the Holy Spirit; this physical consequence arises out of their spiritual illness (Ac 5:1-10). And then there is Lazarus, friend to Jesus; he was dead for a corrupting four days before Jesus recalled his spirit to his body and he returned to life (Jn 11).

Thus, Scripture routinely connects spiritual and bodily wellness. In addition, medical and scientific evidence point to an intricate connection between wellness of spirit and body. Growing scientific knowledge from various domains such as psychology, neuroscience, medicine, and nursing underscore the inextricable wholeness of the human person.

But what about those who are spiritually thriving, that is, living in relationship with Jesus, but either do not achieve physical wellness or are called to give up wellness for Christ's sake, to be persecuted and martyred? Remembering the true purpose of the embodied spirit proves helpful in this matter. Scripture could not be clearer: "You are not your own, for you were bought at a price. So glorify God with your body" (1Co 6:19b-20). Romans 12:1-2 says, "Present your bodies as a living sacrifice, holy and pleasing to God; this is your true worship." In other words, God is glorified when we care for our bodies and use them to carry out his work. And he can be glorified, too, in even our physical infirmities or deaths—sometimes using our challenges to draw us closer to him and sometimes working through our struggles to help others see their need for him.

Importantly, since we are to worship God with our bodies, we are not free to do whatever we like with them. We should treat them as temples in which the Holy Spirit dwells, thus avoiding indulging in sexual sin or any other activity—like drunkenness or gluttony—that would grieve him (1Co 6:19; Eph 4:30).

Some suggest that physical wellness is a window through which we may see glimpses of spiritual wellness; they cite passages such as Proverbs 14:30: "A tranquil heart is life to the body." But we must be cautious—the story of the man born blind teaches that often our understanding is blurry; our perspective is limited. In that narrative the disciples asked Jesus about the afflicted man: "Rabbi, who sinned, this man or his parents, that he was born blind?" Jesus answered, "Neither . . . This came about so that God's works might be displayed in him" (Jn 9:2-3). Only God, then, has the clarity to judge the linkage between our bodily and spiritual health rightly.

We humans are stewards tending households on behalf of the owner. A wise and faithful steward does what the owner would do if he were present. And everyone knows that neglect of a house—or a body—leads to decay. Healthcare providers, in fact, see a great deal of disease and disorder arising from what appears to be neglect.

Not only should Christians in particular take care of their physical bodies, but they should participate in thriving Christian community for the sake of their spirits and the building up of one another. Such community includes the local congregation, the family unit, one's marriage, and one's circle of friends. We are designed for congregational life. And without Christian community, we weaken and shrivel under a shadow of loneliness that gets between us and the light of God's grace. This inevitably leads to a failure to thrive.

Similarly, we should take care of our spiritual health, quickly confessing our sins to God lest they hinder our relationships with him or hurt our physical wellness. David said, "When I kept silent [about my sin], my bones became brittle from my groaning all day long. For day and night your hand [God,] was heavy on me; my strength was drained" (Ps 32:3-4). We see a similar principle at work in strained relationships. Everyone knows that interpersonal disunity can breed hostility. If sustained, such hostility can harm a physical heart. We must take our relational struggles to God.

Scripture teaches that when Christ returns, his followers will receive resurrection bodies that undoubtedly will share many similarities with his (1Co 15:35-55). Like the earth whose restoration is described in Revelation 22, we will be made new and will no longer live under the curse of sin and death. Until then, we must have a godly aim for our current bodies. We must take care of them. Glorify God in them. Then, even as we approach the end of our mortal lives, we shall be well.

Absolutely not! 16 Don’t you know that anyone joined to a prostitute is one body anyone joined † to the Lord is one spirit † with him.

18 Flee † sexual immorality! Every other sin † a person commits is outside the 6:1 It is possible that Paul’s reaction against believers taking their disputes to court is due to the unrighteous nature of the legal system in Corinth—later sources speak to its corruption. But there are also theological reasons for dealing with such disputes in house (6:2-6).

6:2-5 The primary reason that believers should not take other believers to court is not due to any particular corruption in the Roman court system; corruption is not unique to any time or setting. Instead it is grounded in the responsibility given to the church to arbitrate among itself. It is clear that Paul has in mind trivial cases. These are probably matters of civil law (cp. 6:7-8), rather than criminal. Christians should not use these verses to avoid prosecuting criminal matters.

6:6 Believers ought to be able to sort out trivial matters amongst themselves, and it is shameful to take such disputes to outsiders for arbitration. Paul regards this as a bad witness to the unbelieving world.

6:9-11 The sins listed will keep people from heaven if they continue in them, unrepentant. But with repentance, all may be forgiven; some in the Corinthian congregation used to be like this but they were washed, sanctified, and justified. See "Christian Worldview and Same-Sex Marriage," p. 1499.

6:15-17 Paul draws on believers' union with Christ to argue against sexual immorality. What is done in the body is significant because bodies are a part of Christ's body. Since believers are joined to the Lord, they are not to become one body with a prostitute. Paul draws on the teaching of Genesis 2:24 regarding the one flesh union of marriage to undergird the purpose of sex as joining one person to another.

6:18-20 While all sin brings God's judgment, sexual sin brings particular trouble since it is sin against one's own body. Paul's theology of the body here rests on its housing of the Holy Spirit. Your body is a temple of the Holy Spirit, since the Spirit is in you. The Spirit's holiness contradicts the immorality of sexual sin, which is why the latter is seen as sin against the body. Furthermore, believers' bodies do not belong to them but to God, who bought us at a price, namely the death of the Lord Jesus. Having been redeemed by him, we are now to glorify God with our bodies. This is a particular challenge to the reigning worldview of western culture that esteems the freedom to pursue sexual desires without restraint. See also "The Mind-Body Problem," p. 1175.

PRINCIPLES OF MARRIAGE

7 Now in response to the matters you wrote † about: "It is good for a man not to use † a woman for sex." 2 But because sexual immorality is so common, † † each man should have sexual relations with his own wife, † and each woman should have sexual relations with her own husband.
3 A husband should fulfill his marital duty † to his wife, and likewise a wife to her husband. 4 A wife does not have the right over her own body, but her husband does. In the same way, a husband does not have the right over his own body, but his wife does. 5 Do not deprive † one another — except when you agree for a time, to devote yourselves to † prayer. Then come together again; otherwise, Satan may tempt you because of your lack of self-control. 6 I say this as a concession, not as a command. 7 I wish that all people were as I am. But each has his own gift † from God, one person has this gift, another has that.

A WORD TO THE UNMARRIED

8 I say to the unmarried † and to widows: † It is good for them if they remain as I am. 9 But if they do not have self-control, † they should marry, since it is better to marry † than to burn with desire.

ABOUT MARRIED PEOPLE

10 To the married I give this command † — not I, but the Lord — a wife is not to leave † her husband.

PURPOSE AND PARAMETERS OF SEXUAL RELATIONS

In our "hook-up, shack-up, break-up" society, the purpose of sex has become distorted. Hollywood personalities, television sitcoms, and social media portray sex as a casual, noncommittal exchange that involves multiple partners. Following this approach, however, often results in selfish habits, destructive behavior, and broken relationships.

This is not God's intention for sex. Sex is a sacred gift designed by God to be enjoyed in the context of a marriage relationship between one man and one woman for as long as they both live. Look at what Scripture affirms about sex: • Sex is good (Gn 1:31).

- Sex brings life (Gn 1:28; Ps 127:3-5).
- Sex reveals the beauty of gender differences (Gn 1:27-28).
- Sex provides unity and intimacy (Gn 2:24).
- Sex brings companionship (Sg 3:1).
- Sex provides comfort (Gn 24:67).
- Sex offers pleasure (Sg 2:17).
- Sex is healthy and reflects the exclusive, covenantal love in marriage (Pr 5:15-19; 1Co 7:4).
- Sex is a celebration of the intimate nature of the union between Jesus Christ and his bride, the church (Eph 5:22-32).

After sin entered the world (Gn 3:15), the beautiful bond between humanity and divinity dissolved. Thereafter, humans abused the good gift of sex that God had created by engaging in a wide variety of sexual perversions, including voyeurism (2Sm 11:2), adultery (2Sm 11:4), prostitution (Jdg 11:1), rape (Jdg 19:25), incest (2Sm 13:11-14), polygamy (Gn 4:19), homosexuality (Gn 19:1-13), and bestiality (Ex 22:19). In some cases, sexual sins became so prevalent that "God delivered [people] over in the desires of their hearts to sexual impurity, so that their bodies were degraded among themselves" (Rm 1:24).

When it comes to sex, humans tend to oscillate between two extremes. On the one hand, the temptation is to believe that sex is evil, or at least a necessary evil for the purpose of procreation. Influenced by the Greek philosophy of gnosticism—the belief that flesh is inherently evil—many living in the past two thousand years have succumbed to the view that sex is wrong. From great theologians like Augustine of Hippo to biblical exegetes like Origen of Alexandria (who castrated himself), the belief in the evilness of sex permeated a wide array of Christian traditions.

A genuinely biblical view of sex, however, cannot ascribe to this extreme. Sex is a good gift created by a great God. When practiced as God intended it, sex fosters mental, emotional, spiritual, and physical union within a marriage relationship. It is fun and deeply satisfying.

The other extreme is to believe that all sex is permissible. In the last century, our own culture has swung from sex as procreation to sex as recreation. The sexual revolution that surged in the Roaring Twenties and later manifested in the upheaval of social conventions in the fifties, sixties, and seventies accomplished much in glamorizing sexual prowess and creating an environment in which "free love" (sex without consequences) was valued highly while chastity was ridiculed as quaint and inhibited.

The effects of the sexual revolution have been catastrophic. Fueled by a bankruptcy of discretionary standards, a hostility toward traditional expressions of religion, and a groundswell in technological advancement, a permissible perception of sex has reached a historic summit in our society. Promiscuity is widely promoted through pop culture, and web-based personal media has instilled the $14 billion pornography industry into the consciousness of rising generations. Anyone anywhere can access sexually explicit content at almost any time—an unprecedented situation.

The bottom line is this: Sex is not the problem—we fallen humans are the problem. Thankfully, God has provided a way of redemption for us through the atoning work of Jesus Christ. Not only did Jesus take our sins on himself, but he also became sin on our behalf (1Co 5:21). Every affair, every lustful look, the making and using of every explicit website, Jesus conquered on the cross. As Christians, our sins have been crucified with Christ, and because of his sacrificial love, we can live victoriously over sexual sins. Although the temptations of our sinful nature still assault born-again Christians, God has offered a way of escape. The Bible encourages us that "God is faithful; he will not allow [us] to be tempted beyond what [we] are able, but with the temptation he will also provide a way out" (1Co 10:13). God has provided his Holy Spirit to help us and his Holy Scripture to instruct us; we do not have to live as slaves to sin.

Here are some governing principles for keeping the practice of sex within its biblical parameters: • Keep sex sacred by not allowing the culture to dictate your perception or practice of it. Sex is a physical act that represents a sacred reality. Just as God is one (Dt 6:4), so the husband and wife "become one flesh" (Gn 2:24).

- Keep sex mutual. The husband is not superior over the wife, or vice versa. Reciprocal affection reflects the mutual submission Paul describes in Ephesians 5:22-33. Each spouse must pursue the needs of the other in humility and love (Php 2:3-5; 1Co 7:3).
- Keep sex within the context of marriage (1Co 7:2-3). Any sexual contact, whether premarital or extramarital, is a violation of God's design, and according to Jesus, it is equivalent to committing adultery (Mt 5:28; Heb 13:4).
- Aggressively flee sexual temptation (Gn 39:12; Eph 5:3). This includes accepting or making romantic overtures outside marriage, lustful intentions, flirting with someone other than your spouse, sexting, having "friends with benefits," hooking up, viewing pornography, reading erotica, visiting strip clubs, and watching adult television shows and movies. God demands purity and has equipped us for holiness. Because we have been "raised with Christ" (Col 3:1), we are free to "set [our] minds on things above" (Col 3:2).
- Know that sexual attraction is not a sin. When outside of marriage we act on that attraction—whether by thought, word, or deed—it becomes sinful.
- Those who are unmarried should "not stir up or awaken love until the appropriate time" (Sg 2:7). Think, dress, and act in a way that does not lead others to temptation (1Pt 3:3-4; 1Tm 2:9-10; 1Co 8:9).
- Celibacy is a beautiful expression of God's love. Jesus affirms that some are called to celibacy (Mt 19:11-12; see also 1Co 7:7-9).
- Celebrate and practice spiritual disciplines such as prayer (Php 4:6), fasting (Mt 6:16-18), meditation (Jos 1:8), and Scripture memorization (Ps 119:9) to combat sexual temptation. Make a vow to God (Ec 5:4-6) and a covenant with your eyes (Jb 31:1).
- Surround yourself with unmarried and married role models who embody holiness and who will challenge you to do the same (Pr 13:20). Set an example for others in purity (1Tm 4:12).
- Remember, God will forgive those who repent of sexual sin. "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and righteous to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness" (1Jn 1:9).
- Resist the temptation to elevate one sexual sin above another, and practice observable love—kindness and compassion—for those who live outside the biblical parameters of sex (Jn 8:7; 13:34-35; 1Co 13:4-7; Mk 12:30-31; 1Pt 4:8).

When sex occurs within the parameters of a biblical worldview, God receives glory and husbands and wives receive joy in their marriages. Ultimately, sex points to the chief end of God's people—to glorify God and enjoy him forever. Sex foreshadows the mystical union that takes place between Christ and his church (Eph 5:30-32), and by practicing sex according to the original design of the Creator, we contribute to an attitude of worship that will change not only our hearts, our marriages, and our families, but that will also help us to be light and salt in our dark and bland society (Mt 5:13-14).

CHRISTIAN GEORGE

11 But if she does leave, she must remain unmarried or be reconciled to her husband — and a husband is not to divorce his wife. † 12 But I (not the Lord) say to the rest: If any brother † has an unbelieving wife and she is willing to live with him, he must not divorce her. 13 Also, if any woman has an unbelieving husband and he is willing to live with her, she must not divorce her husband. 14 For the unbelieving husband is made holy † by the wife, and the unbelieving wife is made holy by the husband. † Otherwise your children would be unclean, but as it is they are holy. 15 But if the unbeliever leaves, let him leave. A brother or a sister is not bound in such cases. God has called you † to live in peace. 16 Wife, for all you know, you might save your husband. Husband, for all you know, you might save your wife. †

VARIOUS SITUATIONS OF LIFE

17 Let each one live his life in the situation the Lord assigned when God called † him. † This is what I command in all the churches. 18 Was anyone already circumcised when he was called? He should not undo his circumcision. Was anyone called while uncircumcised? He should not get circumcised. 19 Circumcision does not matter and uncircumcision does not matter. Keeping God's commands is what matters. 20 Let each of you remain in the situation † in which he was called. 21 Were you called while a slave? Don't let it concern you. But if you can become free, by all means take the opportunity. † 22 For he who is called by the Lord as a slave † is the Lord's freedman. Likewise he who is called as a free man is Christ's slave. 23 You were bought † at a price; do not become slaves of people. 24 Brothers and sisters, each person is to remain with God in the situation in which he was called.

ABOUT THE UNMARRIED AND WIDOWS

25 Now about virgins: † I have no command from the Lord, but I do give an opinion as one who by the Lord's mercy † is faithful. † 26 Because of the present distress, I think that it is good for a man to remain as he is. 27 Are you bound to a wife? Do not seek to be released. Are you released from a wife? Do not seek a wife. 28 However, if you do get married, † you have not sinned, and if a virgin † marries, she has not sinned. But such people will have trouble in this life, † and I am trying to spare you.

29 This is what I mean, brothers and sisters: The time is limited, † so from now on those who have wives should be as though they had none, 30 those who weep as though they did not weep, those who rejoice † as though they did not rejoice, those who buy as though they didn't own anything, 31 and those who use the world as though they did not make full use of it. For this world in its current form is passing away. †

32 I want you to be without concerns. The unmarried man is concerned about the things of the Lord — how he may please † the Lord. 33 But the married man is concerned about the things of the world — how he may please his wife — 34 and his interests are divided. The unmarried woman or virgin is concerned about the things of the Lord, † so that she may be holy both in body and in spirit. But the married woman is concerned about the things of the world — how she may please her husband. 35 I am saying this for your own benefit, not to put a restraint on you, but to promote what is proper and so that you may be devoted to the Lord without distraction.

36 If any man thinks he is acting improperly toward the virgin he is engaged to, † if she is getting beyond the usual age for marriage, and he feels he should marry — he can do what he wants. He is not sinning; they can get married. 37 But he who stands firm in his heart (who is under no compulsion, but has control over his own will †) and has decided in his heart to keep her as his fiancée, will do well. 38 So then he who marries † his fiancée does well, but he who does not marry † will do better.

39 A wife is bound † as long as her husband is living. But if her husband dies, she is free to be married to anyone she wants — only in the Lord. 40 But she is happier if she remains as she is, in my opinion. And I think that I also have the Spirit of God.

7:4-5 To state that a wife has the right over her husband's body was countercultural in Paul's day. In Roman culture, the husband dominated his wife. Moreover, promiscuity of husbands was widely accepted, but promiscuity of wives was not. Paul clarifies that husband and wife belong to one another and that mutual fidelity is expected. See also "Career and Home Life," p. 774.

7:10,12 When Paul clarifies whether a statement is from him or from the Lord, he is not saying some of his statements are inspired but others are not. Rather, he is distinguishing between statements made by Jesus himself (see Mk 10:1-12) and statements that Paul is now making. He expects the Corinthians to obey both statements (also in 7:25).

7:10-11 In keeping with Jesus's teaching on marriage and divorce (Mk 10:1-12), the seriousness of the marriage covenant is to be respected by both partners. Neither husband nor wife is free to leave the other; or, if they do, they are not simply free to remarry (though note the concession in 7:15).

7:12-14 The first generation of the church saw many so-called mixed marriages, in which a husband or wife became a Christian while the spouse did not. Paul says this does not constitute grounds for divorce (unless the unbelieving partner wants to leave; 7:15). The believing partner is to respect the marriage covenant, which may even lead the unbelieving partner to faith (7:16). The mixed marriage is regarded as holy, so the believer need not worry that their marriage is not acceptable to God.

7:15 The one concession Paul acknowledges in this context (though see Mt 19:9) is if the unbelieving partner chooses to leave. In such a situation, the believer is not bound. It likely means that the believer is free to remarry.

7:17-24 New life in Christ makes earthly distinctions irrelevant. Each of the situations referred to (circumcision, uncircumcision, slavery, freedom) is related to social status in the Roman Empire. Circumcision divided Jews from pagans. Slavery was the lowest strata of society. While the slave may take the opportunity to become free if it presents itself, the point is that believers should not be concerned about social status. Their status in Christ is all that matters.

7:20-23 See "The Bible and Slavery," p. 1527.

7:26-27 Paul counsels single men and women to remain as they are because of the present distress. While it is difficult to know for certain what he has in mind, there is firm archeological and literary evidence indicating periods of severe famine in Corinth during this time. Modern western people rarely appreciate the crisis that famine represented in the ancient world, in which there were no supermarkets and limited capacity to preserve food. If famine is the cause of the distress in Corinth, Paul advises singles that it is not the best time to marry.

7:29-31 This apocalyptic section depicts a period of unsettled expectation. The time is limited is an apocalyptic warning of the imminence of the end of the age, perhaps sparked by the “the present distress” (v. 26), since natural disasters were often taken as reminders of the judgment to come. The apocalyptic tone of this section means that Paul is making a rhetorical point; he is not suggesting that married men should pretend to be single.

7:32-35 The reality of married life is that much of the believer’s energy and time is devoted to the marriage. This is appropriate, but the point is that remaining unmarried has certain advantages with respect to serving the Lord.

7:39 While a believer ought to remain married to an unbelieving partner (7:12-14), a believer must choose someone in the Lord if wanting to remarry after the death of a spouse.

FOOD OFFERED TO IDOLS

8 Now about food sacrificed to idols: † We know that “we all have knowledge.” Knowledge puffs up, † but love † builds up. 2 If anyone thinks he knows anything, he does not yet know it as he ought to know it. † 3 But if anyone loves God, † he is known † by him.

4 About eating food sacrificed to idols, then, we know that “an idol is nothing in the world,” † and that “there is no God but one.” † 5 For even if there are so-called gods, † whether in heaven or on earth — as there are many “gods” and many “lords” — 6 yet for us there is one God, the Father. † All things are from him, † and we exist for him. And there is one Lord, Jesus Christ. All things are through him, and we exist through him. †

7 However, not everyone has this knowledge. Some have been so used to idolatry up until now that when they eat food sacrificed to an idol, their conscience, being weak, is defiled. 8 Food will not bring us close to God. † We are not worse off if we don’t eat, and we are not better if we do eat. † 9 But be careful that this right of yours in no way becomes a stumbling block † to the weak. 10 For if someone sees you, the one who has knowledge, dining in an idol’s temple, won’t his weak conscience be encouraged † to eat food offered to idols? 11 So the weak person, the brother or sister for whom Christ died, † is ruined † † by your knowledge. † 12 Now when you sin like this against brothers and sisters and wound their weak conscience, you are sinning against Christ. 13 Therefore, if food causes my brother or sister to fall, I will never again eat meat, † so that I won’t cause my brother or sister to fall.

8:4 Or an idol has no real existence 8:8 Or bring us before (the judgment seat of) God 8:10 Or built up

8:1 In Greco-Roman cities, much of the meat available at markets would have come from sacrifices to pagan idols in local temples. For this reason, Jews often had their own markets. This raised a serious social issue for converted Gentiles concerning to what degree they could associate with unbelievers. This cultural issue gives Paul the opportunity to address the priority of love over knowledge.

8:4 Paul acknowledges that idols are nothing and therefore cannot really taint meat. The phrase, we know, connects back to the "knowledge" referred to in 8:1. Corinthians who understand this truth ought not be puffed up against fellow believers who are concerned about the connection to idols (8:7). See "Polytheism in Biblical Times," p. 653.

8:5-6 See "What is Globalization?" p. 1606.

8:9-13 The principle is that love for fellow believers trumps personal freedom. Believers are free to eat or not to eat, and knowledge understands that idols are nothing, but this knowledge and freedom must not be exercised in an unloving way. It is better to forgo freedom than to cause a brother or sister to fall.

PAUL'S EXAMPLE AS AN APOSTLE

9 Am I not free? Am I not an apostle? Have I not seen Jesus our Lord? Are you not my work in the Lord? 2 If I am not an apostle to others, at least I am to you, because you are the seal † of my apostleship in the Lord.
3 My defense to those who examine me is this: 4 Don't we have the right to eat and drink? † 5 Don't we have the right to be accompanied by a believing wife † like the other apostles, † the Lord's brothers, and Cephas? † 6 Or do only Barnabas † and I have no right to refrain from working? 7 Who serves as a soldier at his own expense? † Who plants a vineyard and does not eat its fruit? Or who shepherds a flock and does not drink the milk from the flock?
8 Am I saying this from a human perspective? Doesn't the law also say the same thing? 9 For it is written in the law of Moses, Do not muzzle an ox † while it treads out grain. † † Is God really concerned about oxen? 10 Isn't he really saying it for our sake? Yes, this is written for our sake, † because he who plows ought to plow in hope, † and he who threshes should thresh in hope of sharing the crop. † 11 If we have sown spiritual things for you, is it too much if we reap material benefits from you? 12 If others have this right to receive benefits from you, don’t we even more? Nevertheless, we have not made use of this right; instead, we endure everything † so that we will not hinder the gospel of Christ.

13 Don’t you know that those who perform the temple services eat the food from the temple, and those who serve at the altar † share in the offerings of the altar?
14 In the same way, the Lord has commanded that those who preach the gospel should earn their living by the gospel. †
15 For my part I have used none of these rights, nor have I written these things that they may be applied in my case. For it would be better for me to die than for anyone to deprive me of my boast! 16 For if I preach the gospel, I have no reason to boast, because I am compelled to preach † — and woe to me if I do not preach the gospel! 17 For if I do this willingly, I have a reward, but if unwillingly, I am entrusted † with a commission. 18 What then is my reward? To preach the gospel and offer it free of charge and not make full use of my rights in the gospel. †
19 Although I am free from all and not anyone’s slave, I have made myself a slave to everyone, in order to win † more people. 20 To the Jews I became like a Jew, to win Jews; to those under the law, like one under the law — though I myself am not under the law † — to win those under the law. †

TECHNOLOGY AND A CHRISTIAN WORLDVIEW

Technology and the Christian worldview are mutually intertwined. Technology is a word that comes from the Greek term tekne, meaning “art” or “craft” and the word logos, meaning “word” or “pattern.” In its oldest form the ancient Greek word technologia meant the systematic treatment of grammar, but then it evolved to mean the study of the mechanical arts and sciences. Now, in standard usage it generally means the newest inventions themselves.

Interestingly, the Sanskrit word that later gave rise to the Indo-European word tekne originally meant “carpenter.” In Greek we see that Jesus Christ is referred to in Scripture as a tekton, which shares this root. Christ is also referred to as the Word, or logos, in John 1:1. Thus, it is not insignificant that the primordial linguistic pattern of all our modern technology is deeply entwined with our earliest understandings of Jesus Christ as Builder, as Craftsman, as divine Word, and as Creator. In this sense we can see how all our technologies are but attempts at righting the world since it went wrong at the fall. But we should also pay attention to how much our technologies can unintentionally keep us distant, separated, and indifferent to one another.

TECHNOLOGY THROUGHOUT HISTORY

Today technology's chief benefit is to create efficiency in motion, labor, and communication. When we think of technology, we think of it as a laborsaving device.

But the history of technology is also the history of warfare, as the winners of wars write history and the winners of wars are always characterized by having technological superiority—otherwise they would not have won. Even in biblical cases where we perceive an exception to this rule—such as in the account of David versus Goliath, that of Pharaoh's army versus Moses and the Israelites at the Red Sea, or the narrative of Joshua and the battle for Jericho, we see the pattern revealed: what man thought was a better technology (bigger soldiers, larger armies, walled fortresses) led to a downfall. In each case, technological weakness gave God's people competitive advantage. For instance, • David's sling launched a stone that hit Goliath on his forehead, the one portion of his body that was not protected by armor; this was the original smart missile.

- Pharaoh's armies meant to crush the escaping Israelites along the banks of the sea, thinking them trapped there. But the God of the wind and tides gave Moses temporary command of these natural forces. Not only did Israel escape through the parted body of water, but also the enemy drowned as the water fell; this was the original weather warfare.
- Joshua obeyed God's command for his army to blow their trumpets around the walls of Jericho, and the fortress fell; this was the original use of sonic warfare.

Each of the above incidents involved the application of an incredibly efficient technology that required God's people to trust God in the face of what seemed impossible odds. And as that smart missile found its mark, as weather warfare overwhelmed Pharaoh, as sonic warfare toppled that wall, man was given new evidences that God is the Master Technologist, the Master Builder, the Master Designer, the Master Engineer, the Master Craftsman, and the Master Strategist. He is so capable, so completely knowledgeable about all things, that what looks impossible to us is always possible to him.

MODERN TECHNOLOGY

God's deployment of his technologies is always an act of love; by using them, he spares his people and saves their lives. By contrast, our technologies today are, often inadvertently, used in ways that have the opposite effect. They are primarily used to generate weapons of warfare or to harness oil, nuclear, hydro, or solar energy—substances that are themselves the cause of great wars. As of 2014, only eleven countries (out of the 194 countries in existence) were not engaged in some form of armed conflict that killed at least twenty-five of their own citizens.

This physical death toll fueled by new human technologies is perhaps paralleled by the unintended emotional toll associated with our modern communication technologies. Even though sending electronic messages over digital media has great advantages, messages received in this format often have the effect of making us feel insignificant and can lead to resentment. An e-mail wishing you well is nice, but not as nice as a card, not as nice as a phone call, and certainly not as nice as having a friend show up in person beside your hospital bed.

This disembodying effect of technology, in fact, encourages us to compensate for our loss by using mass media for twelve hours out of our sixteen-hour waking day. It appears that we actually overuse the technology to make us feel more connected—even as the greater use increases our feelings of loneliness. Today's Facebook user, for instance, has an average of 338 social media friends. That same user's "real friends," however, have gone down from five to two. Technology, though used as a compensation for the loss of the real thing in our lives, proves a poor substitute.

One strange thing about social media, for instance, is that it requires antisocial behavior for participation. It leads to a husband and wife sitting in the same room together, each engrossed in the screen rather than in connecting with each other through conversation. It encourages teens to withdraw from family activities in order to keep up with what their friends are doing online. This problem may explain why so many people end up taking pictures of their food and posting them as contributions to their friends' social lives. But to paraphrase Romans 14:17, "the kingdom of God is not eating and drinking" and taking beautiful selfies. Humans were created to live in face-to-face community.

If you've ever had a colleague ask you to email him when he could just as easily stop by your cubicle to chat, you know what depersonalization can feel like. Technology is convenient, it is efficient, and it is incredibly productive. But there is a price to pay for such convenience. Selfishness and thoughtlessness—such easy traps to fall into given our high-tech world—are the opposite of love.

TECHNOLOGY AND THE CHRISTIAN WORLDVIEW

When humanity failed to listen to God's prophets, God sent his Son, Jesus Christ, as the ultimate Messenger heralding his love for us. But just as the terrible tenants in the parable of the Vineyard killed the owner's son, we humans killed Jesus. When that act is viewed theologically, however, we see that this was precisely what was supposed to happen: our loving Creator God came to earth in human form in order to demonstrate that true love is willing to sacrifice self.

Technology can be an incredibly useful tool for solving immediate physical, practical, and technical problems. But as a mode of interaction between humans, it far too often sends a message of indifference rather than love. To correct the problem, and to truly love others as we love ourselves and as Christ both commanded and demonstrated, we must be willing to sacrifice the very convenience that the technology gives us. When, for instance, you receive the call that asks, "Are you sitting down?" you know you are about to hear information that takes your knees out from under you. When the sender of that message shows up in person to catch you as you fall—then you know you are loved. The burden somehow becomes a bit easier to bear. The intentional nonuse of technology could actually be the only way to really show someone that he is worth our time. That there is a God who really cares. It illustrates that we are willing to be inconvenienced on another's behalf, much as Jesus was willing to set aside all the ease and wonder of heaven for ours.

The ancient Israelites were called to be a people apart, worshiping God in the tabernacle and later the temple in Israel. The early Christians too were called to be a people set apart: worshiping God in spirit and in truth; replacing the ritual slaughter of animals on the altar with sharing Communion and fellowshiping together; and seeing to the needs of the poor and displaced among them. Modern followers of Jesus must pursue similar fellowship and charity, but we have a new task. The church is called to set herself apart from the surrounding culture by reembodying herself in all the ways that modern technology has disembodied her. Only by using our physical bodies to do small things with great love can we combat the silent spirit of the technological age and be the presence of the kingdom of God for the suffering world around us.

The Christian's call to imitate God in his self-giving sacrifice does not require each Christian to be a literal martyr, but our technological age does greatly increase our opportunity to martyr the small self—one's own ego, a love of convenience and ease—in order to demonstrate the physicality of the love that Christ first showed us. Christ's own description of such physical acts in Matthew 25:35-36 bears out their significance. "I was hungry and you gave me something to eat," Jesus said. "I was thirsty and you gave me something to drink; I was a stranger and you took me in; I was naked and you clothed me; I was sick and you took care of me; I was in prison and you visited me." In our technological time of digital disembodiment, our new calling as a people set apart must be presence in the age of absence.

21 To those who are without the law, † like one without the law — though I am not without God's law but under the law of Christ — to win those without the 9:1-18 Paul is an example of not demanding his rights but doing what is best for others.

9:20-21 Though Paul is not required to live under the law of Moses, Paul chooses to live like one under law in order to win Jews for Christ. Likewise, he is willing to live as a Gentile to win Gentiles. While some may accuse Paul of inconsistency, he is modeling what it means to use his freedom for the sake of others. See "Speaking to a Non-Christian about Jesus," p. XXXV.

9:24-27 Paul alludes to famous athletic events of the day—probably the Isthmian games, held close to Corinth in Isthmia. Athletes required self-control and discipline in order to win. Though free to do any number of things, they chose to do only what advanced their cause. Christians ought to choose to do what advances the kingdom, not just whatever they are free to do.

WARNINGS FROM ISRAEL'S PAST

10 Now I do not want you to be unaware, brothers and sisters, that our ancestors † were all under the cloud, † all passed through the sea, † 2 and all were baptized † into Moses † in the cloud and in the sea. 3 They all ate the same spiritual food, † 4 and all drank the same spiritual drink. For they drank from the spiritual rock † that followed them, and that rock was Christ. † 5 Nevertheless God was not pleased with most of them, since they were struck down in the wilderness. †

6 Now these things took place as examples for us, so that we will not desire † evil things as they did. † † 7 Don't become idolaters † as some of them were; as it is written, The people sat down to eat and drink, and got up to party. † † † 8 Let us not commit sexual immorality † as some of them did, † and in a single day twenty-three thousand people died. † 9 Let us not test Christ as some of them did † and were destroyed by snakes. † 10 And don't complain † as some of them did, † † and were killed by the destroyer. † †
11 These things happened to them as examples, and they were written for our instruction, † on whom the ends of the ages † † have come. † 12 So, whoever thinks he stands must be careful not to fall. † 13 No temptation has come upon you except what is common to humanity. But God is faithful; † he will not allow you to be tempted beyond what you are able, but with the temptation he will also provide a way out † so that you may be able to bear it.

WARNING AGAINST IDOLATRY

14 So then, my dear friends, flee from idolatry. 15 I am speaking as to sensible people. Judge for yourselves what I am saying. 16 The cup † of blessing † that we bless, is it not a sharing in the blood of Christ? The bread † that we break, is it not a sharing in the body of Christ? 17 Because there is one bread, we who are many are one † body, since all of us share the one bread. 18 Consider the people of Israel. † Do not those who eat the sacrifices participate in the altar? †
19 What am I saying then? That food sacrificed to idols is anything, or that an idol is anything? 20 No, but I do say that what they † sacrifice, they sacrifice to demons and not to God. I do not want you to be participants with demons!
21 You cannot drink the cup of the Lord and the cup of demons. You cannot share in the Lord's table and the table of demons. 22 Or are we provoking the Lord to jealousy? Are we stronger than he? †

CHRISTIAN LIBERTY

23 "Everything is permissible," † but not everything is beneficial. "Everything is permissible," † but not everything builds up. 24 No one is to seek his own good, but the good of the other person. †

25 Eat everything that is sold in the meat market, without raising questions for the sake of conscience, 26 since the earth is the Lord's, † and all that is in it. † † 27 If any of the unbelievers invites you over and you want to go, eat everything that is set before you, without raising questions for the sake of conscience. 28 But if someone says to you, "This is food from a sacrifice," do not eat it, † out of consideration for the one who told you, and for the sake of conscience. † 29 I do not mean your own conscience, but the other person's. For why is my freedom judged † by another person's conscience? 30 If I partake with thanksgiving, † why am I criticized because of something for which I give thanks?
31 So, whether you eat or drink, or whatever you do, do everything for the glory of God. † 32 Give no offense † to Jews or Greeks or the church of God, 33 just as I also try to please everyone in everything, not seeking my own benefit, but the benefit of many, † so that they may be saved.

10:1-5 Paul draws a parallel between the rescue of Israel through the Red Sea and new covenant salvation with its baptism and Communion (food and drink). Even though all the Israelites participated in these experiences (as do the Corinthians, as the following chapters show), some of the Israelites proved themselves to be unbelievers. The Corinthians are warned that participation in the essential aspects of Christian worship does not in itself assure salvation. This passage is a call to persevere.

10:7-8 Paul refers to Exodus 32 where the Israelites worship the golden calf and engage in sexual immorality. The combination of idolatry and sexual sin makes this a particularly relevant example for the Corinthians. Pagan religion typically combined the two offenses.

10:13 It is common to excuse various sins on the basis that they are too hard to resist. But no temptation has come to the Corinthians except what is common to humanity. Indeed, God's faithfulness means that he will provide a way out of temptation. This is both a comfort and challenge. There is comfort in the knowledge that it will always be possible to escape sin when tempted. It is a challenge because it means there is no excuse for indulging sinful nature.

10:14-22 Though idols are nothing, and food sacrificed to them is nothing (8:4; 10:19), believers should not participate in pagan sacrifices. Such is participation with demons that stand behind all false worship (v. 20). The parallel is drawn with the Lord's Supper (10:14-18): participation in the Supper is a sharing in the blood of Christ and in the body of Christ. And it is not possible to share in the cup and table of the Lord and those of demons.

10:31–11:1 The final conclusion of the matters addressed in 1 Corinthians 8–10 is that everything should be done for the glory of God. This involves seeking the benefit of others rather than self, as Paul who imitates Christ, illustrates. See "Biblical Models for Business," p. 782.

11 Imitate me, as I also imitate Christ. †

INSTRUCTIONS ABOUT HEAD COVERINGS

2 Now I praise you † because you remember me in everything and hold fast to the traditions † just as I delivered † them to you. 3 But I want you to know that Christ is the head † of every man, and the man is the head of the woman, † † and God is the head of Christ. † 4 Every man who prays or prophesies with something on his head dishonors † his head. 5 Every woman who prays or prophesies with her head uncovered dishonors her head, since that is one and the same as having her head shaved. † 6 For if a woman doesn't cover her head, she should have her hair cut off. But if it is disgraceful for a woman to have her hair cut off or her head shaved, let her head be covered.
7 A man should not cover his head, because he is the image † and glory of God. † So too, woman is the glory of man. 8 For man did not come from woman, but woman came from man. † 9 Neither was man created for the sake of woman, but woman for the sake of man. 10 This is why a woman should have a symbol of authority on her head, because of the angels. 11 In the Lord, however, woman is not independent of man, and man is not independent of woman. 12 For just as woman came from man, so man comes through woman, and all things come from God. † 13 Judge † for yourselves: Is it proper for a woman to pray to God with her head uncovered? 14 Does not even nature itself teach † you that if a man has long hair it is a disgrace † to him, 15 but that if a woman has long hair, it is her glory? † For her hair is given to her † as a covering. 16 If anyone wants to argue about this, we have no other † custom, nor do the churches of God.

THE LORD'S SUPPER

17 Now in giving this instruction I do not praise you, since you come together not for the better but for the worse. 18 For to begin with, I hear that when you come together as a church there are divisions among you, and in part I believe it. 19 Indeed, it is necessary that there be factions † among you, so that those who are approved may be recognized among you. 20 When you come together, then, it is not to eat the Lord's Supper. † 21 For at the meal, each one eats his own supper. † So one person is hungry while another gets drunk! 22 Don't you have homes in which to eat and drink? Or do you despise the church of God and humiliate those who have nothing? What should I say to you? Should I praise you? I do not praise you in this matter!

23 For I received from the Lord what I also passed on to you: † On the night when he was betrayed, the Lord Jesus took bread, 24 and when he had given thanks, broke it, and said, † "This is my body, which is † for you. Do this in remembrance of me." †

25 In the same way also he took the cup, after supper, and said, "This cup is the new covenant † in my blood. † Do this, as often as you drink it, in remembrance of me." 26 For as often as you eat this bread and drink the cup, you proclaim the Lord's death † until he comes. †

SELF-EXAMINATION

27 So then, whoever eats the bread or drinks the cup of the Lord in an unworthy manner will be guilty of sin against the body † and blood of the Lord. 28 Let a person examine himself; in this way let him eat the bread and drink from the cup. 29 For whoever eats and drinks without recognizing the body, † eats and drinks judgment † on himself. 30 This is why many are sick and ill among you, and many have fallen asleep. † 31 If we were properly judging ourselves, we would not be judged, 32 but when we are judged † by the Lord, we are disciplined, so that we may not be condemned † with the world.

33 Therefore, my brothers and sisters, when you come together to eat, welcome one another. † 34 If anyone is hungry, he should eat at home, so that when you gather together you will not come under judgment. I will give instructions about the other matters whenever I come. †

11:2 Traditions today, are typically thought of as negative. Here and elsewhere in the NT, however, they are regarded positively—referring to the teachings and practices handed down by Jesus and the apostles (see 2Th 2:15; 3:6). When Jesus rebuked adherence to traditions (for example, in Mk 7:1-13) he had human traditions in view; these had been made more important than God's instructions.

11:3 Considerable debate concerns the word head, with its normal use implying a kind of hierarchical authority, while some scholars have argued that it means "source" rather than "authority." Either way, Paul establishes an order involving God, Christ, man, and woman. A further complication is the fact that man and woman could mean "husband" and "wife." The order that Paul affirms has implications for the way corporate worship is to be conducted, as 11:4-16 expounds.

11:4 Covering a man's head was common in Roman religious cults. Possibly some Corinthian believers had adopted this pagan practice in their worship, which is why Paul forbids it. It dishonors Christ, his head.

11:5-6 Roman law prescribed shaving the head of women who committed adultery. Paul equates this with an uncovered head, which is why that practice dishonors her head (her husband).

11:7-9 Paul draws on the order of creation—man then woman (Gn 2:7,22)—to support the point that woman is the glory of man. See also "Imago Dei and the Distinctiveness of Humans," p. 27.

11:11-12 Though Paul establishes order between man and woman (11:3), he also affirms their mutual dependency.

11:14-15 Long hair was unusual for Roman men in the first century. It would be perceived as a man's pretending to be a woman. By the same token, it was normal for women to have long hair. Short hair on a woman would also be perceived as unnatural.

11:18 Paul's astonishment at divisions within the gathered church (in part I believe it) might sound naïve today. But it demonstrates how far from ideal this situation is, despite how common it seems today.

11:20-22 Although the Corinthians intend to celebrate the Lord's Supper, their carelessness toward one another negates the practice. It is possible some Corinthians were bringing their own food and drink to the gathering (each one eats his own supper), but it would be better for them to feast at home. This would at least prevent the humiliation of those who have nothing.

11:27-29 The problem is partaking in an unworthy manner, not the participation of unworthy people—no one is worthy. Participants must examine themselves and avoid partaking without recognizing the body—that is, the gathered people of Christ. Division and selfishness constitutes unworthiness of the Supper. See "Illness and a Christian Worldview," p. 646.

11:30 Having fallen asleep is a euphemism for death. Many in Corinth had died because they had carelessly participated in the Lord's Supper. This underscores the seriousness of the situation.

DIVERSITY OF SPIRITUAL GIFTS

12 Now concerning spiritual gifts: † brothers and sisters, I do not want you to be unaware. 2 You know that when you were pagans, you used to be enticed and led astray by mute † idols. † 3 Therefore I want you to know that no one speaking by the Spirit of God says, "Jesus is cursed," and no one can say, "Jesus is Lord," except by the Holy Spirit.
4 Now there are different gifts, † but the same Spirit. 5 There are different ministries, but the same Lord. 6 And there are different activities, but the same God produces each gift in each person. 7 A manifestation of the Spirit is given to each person † for the common good: 8 to one † is given a message of wisdom † through the Spirit, to another, a message of knowledge by the same Spirit, 9 to another, faith by the same Spirit, to another, gifts of healing † by the one Spirit, 10 to another, the performing of miracles, † to another, prophecy, † to another, distinguishing between spirits, † to another, different kinds of tongues, † to another, interpretation of tongues. 11 One and the same Spirit is active in all these, distributing to each person as he wills.

UNITY YET DIVERSITY IN THE BODY

12 For just as the body is one † and has many parts, and all the parts of that body, though many, are one body — so also is Christ. † 13 For we were all baptized by † one Spirit into one body — whether Jews or Greeks, whether slaves or free — and we were all given one Spirit to drink. † 14 Indeed, the body is not one part but many. 15 If the foot should say, "Because I'm not a hand, I don't belong to the body," it is not for that reason any less a part of the body. 16 And if the ear should say, "Because I'm not an eye, I don't belong to the body," it is not for that reason any less a part of the body. 17 If the whole body were an eye, where would the hearing be? If the whole body were an ear, where would the sense of smell be? 18 But as it is, God has arranged each one of the parts in the body just as he wanted. † 19 And if they were all the same part, where would the body be? 20 As it is, there are many parts, but one body. 21 The eye cannot say to the hand, “I don’t need you! ” Or again, the head can’t say to the feet, “I don’t need you! ” 22 On the contrary, those parts of the body that are weaker are indispensable. 23 And those parts of the body that we consider less honorable, † we clothe these with greater honor, and our unrespectable parts are treated with greater respect, 24 which our respectable parts do not need.

Instead, God has put the body together, giving greater honor to the less honorable, 25 so that there would be no division † in the body, but that the members would have the same concern for each other. 26 So if one member suffers, all the members suffer with it; if one member is honored, all the members rejoice with it.
27 Now you are the body of Christ, † and individual members of it. 28 And God has appointed these in the church: † first apostles, second prophets, third teachers, † next miracles, † then gifts of healing, † helping, administrating, various kinds of tongues. † 29 Are all apostles? Are all prophets? Are all teachers? Do all do miracles? 30 Do all have gifts of healing? Do all speak in other tongues? Do all interpret? † 31 But desire † the greater gifts. And I will show you an even better way.

12:3 The primary mark of being spiritual, or being prompted by the Spirit, is the affirmation of the lordship of Christ.

12:4-10 This is not a list of all possible gifts (since it differs with the lists in Rm 12 and Eph 4), but a representative list that demonstrates that different gifts are given to different people for different purposes.

12:12-26 The imagery of a group of people functioning as one body was common in the ancient world. Paul uses it here to illustrate unity of purpose alongside diversity of gifting and our need for one another.

LOVE: THE SUPERIOR WAY

13 If I speak human or angelic tongues † but do not have love, † I am a noisy gong † or a clanging cymbal. 2 If I have the gift of prophecy † and understand all mysteries and all knowledge, and if I have all faith so that I can move mountains † but do not have love, I am nothing. 3 And if I give away all my possessions, and if I give over my body in order to boast † but do not have love, I gain nothing.
4 Love is patient, † love is kind. Love does not envy, † is not boastful, is not arrogant, † 5 is not rude, is not self-seeking, † is not irritable, † and does not keep a record of wrongs. 6 Love finds no joy in unrighteousness but rejoices in the truth. † 7 It bears all things, believes all things, hopes all things, endures † all things.
8 Love never ends. † But as for prophecies, they will come to an end; as for tongues, they will cease; as for knowledge, it will come to an end. 9 For we know in part, and we prophesy in part, 10 but when the perfect comes, the partial will come to an end. 11 When I was a child, I spoke like a child, I thought like a child, I reasoned like a child. When I became a man, I put aside childish things.
12 For now we see only a reflection † as in a mirror, but then face to face. †
Now I know in part, but then I will know fully, † as I am fully known. † 13 Now these three remain: faith, hope, † and love — but the greatest of these is love.

13:1-13 This discussion of love sits in the midst of the discussion of spiritual gifts, because Paul's point is that love is the central issue in the use of gifts. It is even the proper motivation for desiring other gifts.

13:13 Faith, hope, and love are the hallmark characteristics of the Christian life (Rm 5:1-5; Col 1:4-5; 1Th 1:3). These embody faithful living regardless of giftedness, status, or role. And without love, the greatest of these, such things are all for nought (13:1-3).

PROPHECY: A SUPERIOR GIFT

14 Pursue love and desire spiritual gifts, and especially that you may prophesy. 2 For the person who speaks in another tongue † † is not speaking to people but to God, since no one understands him; he speaks mysteries in the Spirit. † 3 On the other hand, the person who prophesies speaks to people for their strengthening, † encouragement, and consolation. 4 The person who speaks in another tongue builds himself up, but the one who prophesies builds up the church. 5 I wish all of you spoke in other tongues, † but even more that you prophesied. The person who prophesies is greater than the person who speaks in tongues, unless he interprets so that the church may be built up.

6 So now, brothers and sisters, if I come to you speaking in other tongues, how will I benefit you unless I speak to you with a revelation † or knowledge or prophecy or teaching? 7 Even lifeless instruments that produce sounds — whether flute or harp † — if they don't make a distinction in the notes, how will what is played on the flute or harp be recognized? 8 In fact, if the bugle makes an unclear sound, who will prepare for battle? † 9 In the same way, unless you use your tongue for intelligible speech, how will what is spoken be known? For you will be speaking into the air. 10 There are doubtless many different kinds of languages in the world, none is without meaning. 11 Therefore, if I do not know the meaning of the language, I will be a foreigner † to the speaker, and the speaker will be a foreigner to me. 12 So also you — since you are zealous † for spiritual gifts, † † seek to excel in building up the church.
13 Therefore the person who speaks in another tongue should pray that he can interpret. 14 For if I pray in another tongue, my spirit † prays, but my understanding is unfruitful. † 15 What then? I will pray with the spirit, and I will also pray with my understanding. I will sing praise with the spirit, and I will also sing praise with my understanding. 16 Otherwise, if you praise with the spirit, † how will the outsider † say "Amen" † at your giving of thanks, since he does not know what you are saying? 17 For you may very well be giving thanks, but the other person is not being built up. 18 I thank † God that I speak in other tongues more than all of you; 19 yet in the church I would rather speak five words † with my understanding, in order to teach others also, than ten thousand words in another tongue.

20 Brothers and sisters, don't be childish in your thinking, but be infants in regard to evil and adult in your thinking. † 21 It is written in the law,

I will speak to this people by people of other tongues and by the lips of foreigners, and even then, they will not listen to me, † †

says the Lord. 22 Speaking in other tongues, then, is intended as a sign, not for believers but for unbelievers, while prophecy is not for unbelievers but for believers. 23 If, therefore, the whole church assembles together and all are speaking in other tongues and people who are outsiders or unbelievers come in, will they not say that you are out of your minds? 24 But if all are prophesying and some unbeliever or outsider comes in, he is convicted by all and is called to account by all. 25 The secrets of his heart will be revealed, and as a result he will fall facedown and worship God, proclaiming, "God is really among you." †

ORDER IN CHURCH MEETINGS

26 What then, brothers and sisters? Whenever you come together, each one † has a hymn, a teaching, a revelation, another tongue, or an interpretation. † Everything is to be done for building up. 27 If anyone speaks in another tongue, there are to be only two, or at the most three, each in turn, and let someone interpret. 28 But if there is no interpreter, that person is to keep silent in the church and speak to himself and God. 29 Two or three prophets should speak, and the others should evaluate. † 30 But if something has been revealed to another person sitting there, the first prophet should be silent. 31 For you can all prophesy one by one, so that everyone may learn and everyone may be encouraged. † 32 And the prophets' spirits are subject to the prophets, 33 since God is not a God of disorder but of peace.

As in all the churches of the saints, † 34 the women † should be silent in the churches, † for they are not permitted to speak, but are to submit themselves, as the law also says. 35 If they want to learn something, let them ask their own husbands † at home, since it is disgraceful for a woman to speak in the church. 36 Or did the word of God originate from you, or did it come to you only?

37 If anyone thinks he is a prophet or spiritual, he should recognize that what I write to you is the Lord's command. 38 If anyone ignores this, he will be ignored. † 39 So then, my brothers and sisters, be eager † to prophesy, and do not forbid speaking in other tongues. 40 But everything is to be done decently † and in order.

14:1-5 Prophecy is held up above speaking in another tongue precisely because prophecy benefits others and not just self. This desire to benefit others is the point of the admonition to pursue love.

14:2 There is debate as to whether Paul refers to an ability to speak other human languages (perhaps supernaturally, as in Pentecost; Ac 2:1-13), or "angelic" languages (13:1); that is, glossolalia. Much of the following discussion could fit either understanding.

14:34-36 These controversial verses need to be balanced by 1 Corinthians 11:5, in which it is clear that Paul expects women to pray and prophesy in the congregation. This means that the instruction, the women should be silent, does not indicate absolute silence but "quietness" with respect to the evaluation of prophecy. If her husband spoke the prophecy, she should ask him about it at home.

RESURRECTION ESSENTIAL TO THE GOSPEL

HINDUISM

Hinduism is a religion with approximately 820 million adherents, constituting roughly 13.5 percent of the world's total population. All but 6 percent of Hindus live within India, a country with more than one billion people. India has twenty-two constitutionally recognized languages and is home to the cultural contributions of 2,234 unique people groups. India is truly a beautiful and diverse kaleidoscope.

HISTORY OF HINDUISM

The history of Hinduism falls into four successive eras. The first era, the Vedic Period, lasted from 1500 to 1000 BC. That roughly covers the time of the biblical exodus through the prophetic ministry of Samuel and the anointing of King Saul. It was in this period that a migrant group known as the Aryans, or "noble ones," absorbed an older Indus Valley civilization and spoke Sanskrit, which remains the liturgical language of Hinduism. Hindus believe ancient seers and prophets heard and orally transmitted timeless truths during this Vedic Period. These eternal incantations were recognized as shruti, or divinely revealed teachings; they were codified into the authoritative Vedas. The oldest and most important is the Rig-Veda, which contains more than a thousand hymns and forms the sacred body of belief and practice for all Hindus. The remaining three collections (the Samaveda, Yajur Veda, and Atharvaveda) are used by priests and other specialists during worship rituals.

Further development of the scriptural canon occurred during Classical Hinduism (ca 1000–400 BC), the second great historical era. To the conclusion of each Veda was added an Upanishad containing philosophical and dialogical speculation about the relationship between the soul and eternal reality and the process of soul liberation. Brahmanas were also attached to each Veda as ritual commentaries offering further instruction about the utilization of the Vedas in worship. The Hindu scripture is thus an anthology comprised of four Vedas (hymns and incantations) with corresponding and supplemental Upanishads (philosophical and theological reflections) and Brahmanas (ritual instructions).

The Epic Era (400 BC to AD 400) was the third great historical period. Notable developments from that time include (1) the advent of yoga with various practices seeking inward withdrawal and release from the outer world, (2) the establishment of proper order within society based on karma and caste, and (3) the emergence of multiple epics which are popular and sometimes mythological stories meant to convey religious meaning. One well-known example is the Mahabharata epic; it contains the famous passage Bhagavad Gita, "Song of the Lord," and teaches soul liberation in the form of bhakti or total devotion and self-surrender to one god. (This represents a loose approximation of monotheism in practice, though not in theology.) Continuing and Contemporary Transformation forms a fourth historical era. Since AD 400, Hinduism has undergone numerous developments. Partly as a response to the growth of British colonialism and Christian missionary activity within India, the nineteenth century sparked a major renewal of Hinduism that resulted in far greater systemization in terms of theology, religious practice, and worldview. The twentieth century witnessed meaningful popularization of Hinduism within Euro-American contexts largely because of immigration, the historical importance of Mahatma Gandhi, and an amorphous spirituality propagated by some Western gurus.

KEY BELIEFS OF HINDUISM

Similar to other Eastern faiths and in contrast to a more linear view of history found in areas influenced by the Abrahamic religions, Hindus believe the universe undergoes cyclical processes of creation and destruction that lead to innumerable universes. In this view, the current age, Kali Yuga, began around 3000 BC and is destined for destruction and replacement after 432,000 years.

The supreme reality beyond this cyclical process of never-ending birth and death is Brahman. To know and be absorbed into Brahman, which is eternal, transcendent, and without limitation, is the ultimate goal of Hinduism.

Brahman is sometimes described as netti, netti meaning "neither this, neither that" to indicate the inherent impossibility of either human language or any singular divine manifestation to express the full totality of the actual reality of Brahman. Hinduism can therefore be described as monotheistic polytheism. There is one supreme reality (monotheistic) revealed through multiple gods and divine manifestations (polytheism) in order to convey the various characteristics and nuances of this one reality. Though there are over three thousand gods within the Hindu corpus, each god is properly understood as a limited manifestation of Brahman. Several of the most important gods include Vishnu, the preserver of the cosmos; Shiva, the divine dancer of creation and destruction; Durga or Devi, the protector from evil; Ganesha, the elephant-headed god presiding over obstacles; Lakshmi, the goddess of prosperity and good fortune; and Krishna, an avatar or human incarnation of Vishnu who established order in a time of chaos.

HINDUISM AND CHRISTIANITY

Given theological emphases and narratives attached to each god, the pantheon can seem vague, confusing, and overlapping to the uninitiated. This amalgamation emerges from a Hindu concentration on eternal truths residing outside of time rather than on concrete historicity. This is a significant divergence from Christianity's claim in 1 John 1:1-4 that Jesus was not simply a spiritual manifestation but lived in a verified historical context as a full human who was heard, seen, observed, and physically touched. While Hinduism teaches that Brahman can only be known indirectly and in a nonpersonal manner, Christianity categorically confesses Jesus as the full and complete incarnation of God (Jn 1:1-18; 1Co 8:5-6; Col 1:15-20) with whom there can be a personal relationship (Jn 3:16; Rm 10:9-10; 1Jn 4:9-10).

Furthermore, Christianity has a rather high view of the physical body, declaring in 1Co 6:19-20 that one's "body is a temple of the Holy Spirit" meant to "glorify God." Hinduism, on the other hand, understands the physical body as part of the bondage from which liberation is demanded. Each individual is comprised of an atman, or eternal soul, placed within the receptacle of a physical body that can be human, animal, or plant depending upon the soul's accrued karma. Karma is a neutral mechanism based on the actions one performed in previous lives. Inappropriate actions result in "hot" karma adversely affecting the future of each atman, while appropriate actions cause "cool" karma that ensures higher birth. The hope is to gain enough "cool" karma over many lifetimes in order to be born into a high enough state that gaining the liberating knowledge of Brahman is possible.

Thus, the main problem for Hinduism is not "hot" karma or sin per se, but ignorance—and in particular ignorance of Brahman as the one and supreme reality in which everything is in fact already encompassed. Liberation, called moksha, is attained through the absolute elimination of all desire, total inward withdrawal, and a deep experiential realization, or knowledge, that one's true self is already part of Brahman. Such knowledge can be gained through meditation that utilizes the sacred sound of Om, bodily renunciation and restraint, yoga and inward reflection, living according to the right dictates of one's caste, celebrating key festivals such as Diwali and Holi, participating in ritual worship at Hindu temples, engaging in personal and daily worship to an image of a god, and absolute love and self-surrender to a singular god (bhakti) in order to gain the knowledge of that particular aspect of Brahman. The path of salvation is therefore open to all individuals. But in reality, liberation from the painful and ongoing cycle of birth and death can only be achieved over many lifetimes and only by a few individuals at any particular historical moment.

The Hindu worldview can thus be summarized: the divinely revealed timeless truths of scripture (shruti) teach that knowledge of Brahman (the one supreme reality) brings liberation (moksha) for the individual, eternal soul (atman) from the painful cycle of samsara (a continuous and cyclical process of birth and death based on karma).

Against this Hindu worldview, Christianity offers a gospel of immediate salvation through a grace-filled personal relationship with Jesus, the unique fullness of God, and a salvation that does not deny the goodness of God's physical creation, but promises its ultimate redemption (Rm 8:18-25).

Given that less than 7 percent of India claims Christianity, multifaith dialogue remains essential—as does prayer for bold, humble, and protected public witness (Eph 6:19-20) in the midst of sporadic but regular Christian persecution emerging out of the close connection between Hinduism and Indian nationalism. According to Operation World, of the 639 worldwide unreached and unengaged people groups having a population of at least ten thousand, almost 75 percent are located within India.

ELIJAH M. BROWN

5 and that he appeared to Cephas, † then to the Twelve. † 6 Then he appeared to over five hundred brothers and sisters at one time; † most of them are still alive, but some have fallen asleep. 7 Then he appeared to James, † then to all the apostles. † 8 Last of all, as to one born at the wrong time, † † he also appeared to me. †

9 For I am the least of the apostles, † not worthy to be called an apostle, because I persecuted † the church of God. 10 But by the grace of God I am what I am, and his grace toward me was not in vain. On the contrary, I worked harder than any of them, yet not I, but the grace of God that was with me. † 11 Whether, then, it is I or they, so we proclaim and so you have believed.

RESURRECTION ESSENTIAL TO THE FAITH

12 Now if Christ is proclaimed as raised from the dead, † how can some of you say, "There is no resurrection of the dead"? † 13 If there is no resurrection of the dead, then not even Christ has been raised; 14 and if Christ has not been raised, then our proclamation is in vain, and so is your faith. † 15 Moreover, we are found to be false witnesses † about God, because we have testified † wrongly about God that he raised up Christ — whom he did not raise up, if in fact the dead are not raised. 16 For if the dead are not raised, not even Christ has been raised. 17 And if Christ has not been raised, your faith is worthless; you are still in your sins. 18 Those, then, who have fallen asleep in Christ † have also perished. 19 If we have put our hope in Christ for this life only, we should be pitied more than anyone.

CHRIST'S RESURRECTION GUARANTEES OURS

20 But as it is, Christ has been raised from the dead, the firstfruits † of those who have fallen asleep. 21 For since death † came through a man, † the resurrection of the dead also comes through a man. † 22 For just as in Adam all die, so also in Christ all will be made alive. †

23 But each in his own order: † Christ, the firstfruits; afterward, at his coming, those who belong to Christ. 24 Then comes the end, † when he hands over the kingdom to God the Father, † when he abolishes all rule and all authority and power. † 25 For he must reign † until he puts all his enemies under his feet. † 26 The last enemy to be abolished is death. † 27 For God has put everything under his feet. † † Now when it says “everything” is put under him, it is obvious that he who puts everything under him is the exception. 28 When everything is subject to Christ, then the Son † himself will also be subject to the one who subjected everything to him, so that God may be all in all. †

RESURRECTION SUPPORTED BY CHRISTIAN EXPERIENCE

29 Otherwise what will they do who are being baptized for the dead? † If the dead are not raised at all, then why are people baptized for them? † 30 Why are we in danger every hour? 31 I face death every day, † as surely as I may boast about you, brothers and sisters, in Christ Jesus our Lord. 32 If I fought wild beasts in Ephesus † as a mere man, what good did that do me? † If the dead are not raised, Let us eat and drink, for tomorrow we die. † † 33 Do not be deceived: “Bad company corrupts good morals.” 34 Come to your senses † † and stop sinning; for some people are ignorant about God. I say this to your shame. †

THE NATURE OF THE RESURRECTION BODY

35 But someone will ask, “How are the dead raised? What kind of body will they have when they come?” 36 You fool! What you sow does not come to life † unless it dies. 37 And as for what you sow — you are not sowing the body that will be, but only a seed, perhaps of wheat or another grain. 38 But God gives it a body as he wants, † and to each of the seeds its own body. 39 Not all flesh † is the same flesh; there is one flesh for humans, another for animals, another for birds, and another for fish. 40 There are heavenly bodies and earthly bodies, but the splendor † of the heavenly bodies is different from that of the earthly ones. 41 There is a splendor of the sun, another of the moon, and another of the stars; in fact, one star differs from another star in splendor. 42 So it is with the resurrection of the dead: Sown in corruption, raised in incorruption; † 43 sown in dishonor, † raised in glory; † sown in weakness, raised in power; † 44 sown a natural body, raised a spiritual body. If there is a natural body, there is also a spiritual body. 45 So it is written, The first man Adam became a living being; † † the last Adam † became a life-giving spirit. 46 However, the spiritual is not first, but the natural, then the spiritual.

47 The first man was from the earth, a man of dust; † the second man is † from heaven. 48 Like the man of dust, so are those who are of the dust; like the man of heaven, so are those who are of heaven. † 49 And just as we have borne the image † of the man of dust, we will also bear the image of the man of heaven. †

VICTORIOUS RESURRECTION

50 What I am saying, brothers and sisters, is this: Flesh † and blood † cannot inherit the kingdom of God, nor can corruption inherit incorruption. 51 Listen, I am telling you a mystery: We will not all fall asleep, but we will all be changed, 52 in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trumpet. † For the trumpet will sound, and the dead will be raised incorruptible, and we will be changed. 53 For this corruptible body must be clothed † with incorruptibility, † and this mortal body must be clothed with immortality. 54 When this corruptible body is clothed with incorruptibility, and this mortal body is clothed with immortality, then the saying that is written will take place:

Death has been swallowed up † in victory. † †

55 Where, death, is your victory?

Where, death, is your sting? † †

56 The sting of death is sin, and the power of sin † is the law. † 57 But thanks be to God, who gives us the victory † through our Lord Jesus Christ!

58 Therefore, my dear brothers and sisters, be steadfast, immovable, always excelling in the Lord's work, † because you know that your labor in the Lord is not in vain.

15:1-11 See "The Gospel and the Formation of a Christian Worldview," p. 1359; "Jehovah's Witnesses," p. 1575.

15:2 To believe in vain is similar to those who in some sense believed in Jesus but were clearly not converted (Jn 2:23-25).

15:3 The apostles saw Christ's death for our sins as fulfillment of Isaiah's Suffering Servant, who "was pierced because of our rebellion, crushed because of our iniquities" (Is 53:5; cp. 1Pt 2:21-25).

15:4 The resurrection of Jesus was likewise in fulfillment of the Scriptures. For example, Peter pointed to Psalm 16:10 in his Pentecost speech (Ac 2:27). Being raised on the third day may refer to Hs 6:2: "He will revive us after two days, and on the third day he will raise us up so we can live in his presence."

15:5-8 This impressive list of eyewitnesses to the resurrection of Jesus is difficult to account for apart from the historic reality of the physical resurrection of Jesus from the dead. While the five hundred brothers and sisters' witness is recorded only here, the clear implication is that the Corinthians may scrutinize their testimony for themselves, since most of them are still alive.

15:12 That some Corinthians can say there is no resurrection of the dead implies the influence of Greek philosophical thought, such as Paul encountered at the Areopagus (Ac 17:32).

15:14 The resurrection of Jesus is so central to Paul's gospel that, without it, our proclamation is in vain —so is our faith.

15:17 Forgiveness of sins depends on Jesus's resurrection of the dead (cp. Rm 4:25). The reason for this will become evident later (see the note on 15:56).

15:19 Without the resurrection of Christ, Paul's entire life and ministry lacks sense. His sufferings and persecutions are only meaningful in the light of eternal life. Without the hope of resurrection, his suffering is pitiable.

15:20 Firstfruits demonstrated the quality of the harvest to come. Jesus's resurrection is but the first of those to follow. Paul assumes the Jewish and Christian expectation of the resurrection of the righteous on the day of judgment (cp. Dn 12:2; Jn 11:24).

15:21-22 Death entered the world through Adam's sin (Gn 3), but resurrection is made possible by Jesus's sinless life, death for sin, and final conquering of death (cp. Rm 5:12-21). See "The Christian Worldview and the Early Chapters of Genesis," p. 32.

15:29 This is the only reference in the NT to the practice of baptism for the dead. Some have argued that the Corinthians were performing baptisms on behalf of deceased relatives and friends so they might go to heaven. While Paul could not condone such a practice, he does not condemn it here but simply continues to make his point about the need for resurrection. Also possible is the interpretation that this is a reference to the spiritually dead, so that Paul is asking what is the point of baptism at all if the dead are not raised?

15:30-32 If there is no resurrection, Paul's life and ministry does not make sense—see 15:19. He refers to fighting wild beasts in Ephesus, which may allude to the imperial cult that included wild beast shows. The metaphor points to the opposition he was experiencing in Ephesus—where he was writing this letter (16:8).

15:35-44 A possible criticism of resurrection was that people did not want to live in the same corrupted body for eternity. Paul argues that the current body is a seed that must die before it grows to become something else. It will be sown in corruption, raised in incorruption. While there will be some continuity with the natural body, the resurrection body will be fundamentally different.

15:45-49 Again Paul draws on the comparison between Adam and Christ (see 15:21-22; Rm 5:12-21), this time to contrast the natural body with the spiritual body. Being like Adam makes us fit for life on earth, but being like Christ makes us fit for heaven.

15:50 The transformation of our bodies is essential in order to inherit the kingdom of God, since our earthly bodies of flesh and blood are incompatible with it.

15:51-53 Whether alive or dead when Christ returns, all will be changed. Our corruptible, mortal bodies will be made incorruptible and immortal. See "Responses to Transhumanism," p. 615.

15:54-55 Death, the last enemy (v. 26), is finally overcome by the fact of resurrection. Without resurrection from the dead, there is no victory over this universal enemy of humanity. See "Illness and a Christian Worldview," p. 646.

15:56-57 The sting of death refers to a stinger, like that of a bee. Sin is the stinger for death; once a person is stung by sin, death in inevitable (Rm 6:23; Gn 3:17-19). The power of sin is the law, since the law makes sin truly sinful (Rm 7:13). But victory is ours through our Lord Jesus Christ. Jesus's death paid the penalty for sin, so that its consequences (death) would be nullified. By conquering sin, Jesus has conquered death.

15:58 The resurrection is the ground of perseverance. Our labor in the Lord is not in vain no matter how it appears on earth. Promise of resurrection offers purpose and confidence to do the Lord's work (16:10).

COLLECTION FOR THE JERUSALEM CHURCH

16 Now about the collection † for the saints: Do the same as I instructed the Galatian † churches. 2 On the first day of the week, † each of you is to set something aside and save in keeping with how he is prospering, so that no collections will need to be made when I come. † 3 When I arrive, I will send with letters † those you recommend to carry your gift to Jerusalem. † 4 If it is suitable for me to go as well, they will travel with me.

PAUL'S TRAVEL PLANS

5 I will come to you after I pass through Macedonia † — for I will be traveling through Macedonia — 6 and perhaps I will remain with you or even spend the winter, so that you may send me on my way wherever I go. 7 I don't want to see you now just in passing, since I hope to spend some time with you, if the Lord allows. † 8 But I will stay in Ephesus † until Pentecost, † 9 because a wide door † for effective ministry has opened for me † — yet many oppose me. 10 If Timothy comes, see that he has nothing to fear while with you, because he is doing the Lord's work, † just as I am. 11 So let no one look down † on him. Send him on his way in peace so that he can come to me, because I am expecting him with the brothers.

12 Now about our brother Apollos: † I strongly urged him to come to you with the brothers, but he was not at all willing to come now. However, he will come when he has an opportunity.

FINAL EXHORTATION

13 Be alert, stand firm in the faith, † be courageous, † be strong. 14 Do everything in love. †

15 Brothers and sisters, you know the household of Stephanas: They are the firstfruits † of Achaia † and have devoted themselves to serving the saints. I urge you 16 also to submit to such people, and to everyone who works and labors with them. 17 I am delighted to have Stephanas, Fortunatus, and Achaicus present, because these men have made up for your absence. 18 For they have refreshed my spirit † and yours. Therefore recognize † such people.

CONCLUSION

19 The churches of Asia † send you greetings. † Aquila and Priscilla † send you greetings warmly in the Lord, along with the church that meets in their home. † 20 All the brothers and sisters send you greetings. Greet one another with a holy kiss. †

21 This greeting is in my own hand † — Paul. 22 If anyone does not love the Lord, a curse be on him. Our Lord, come! † 23 The grace of the Lord Jesus be with you. † 24 My love be with all of you in Christ Jesus.

2Th 3:18

16:1 Paul was gathering a collection, a monetary gift, from the Gentile churches to give to the Jewish church in Jerusalem, which was suffering in poverty. In addition to alleviating suffering, Paul intended this gift to demonstrate the unity between Gentile and Jewish believers.

16:2 Gathering the donations on the first day of the week suggests the Corinthian church is already meeting on Sunday rather than on the Jewish Sabbath (see also Ac 20:7). See “Personal Finances,” p. 758.

16:6 Winter was a dangerous time for sea travel, so people typically traveled less in that season. Thus, Paul plans to spend his winter in one place, perhaps Corinth.

16:14 Doing everything in love is a good summary of much of the letter. Whatever the issue, the Corinthians need to act in love toward one another (e.g., 8:1).

16:20 A kiss was a common greeting in the ancient world and particularly in Judaism. Such a greeting is mentioned often in the NT, and by the second century a “kiss of peace” was a standard part of Christian liturgy.

2 CORINTHIANS

INTRODUCTION

Of all Paul's letters, none is more personally revealing of his heart than 2 Corinthians. At the same time, it is also the most defensive of any NT letter. In it Paul mounts a strong argument ("apology" in the positive sense) for his authority and ministry. A number of important doctrines are taught in the epistle, yet its greatest value may be that it reveals the heart and spirit of one of the most effective ministers of all time. We are thus shown that genuine ministry—although it may have to be guarded from attack—is commissioned by Christ and empowered by the Spirit.

CIRCUMSTANCES OF WRITING

AUTHOR: All biblical scholars agree that Paul wrote this letter (1:1; 10:1). It contains more personal information about him than any other letter, and its Greek style is especially like that of Romans and 1 Corinthians. Proposed chronologies of Paul's life and ministry include a number of variations. Yet for 2 Corinthians, the consensus is that the letter was written about AD 56 (from Ephesus during Paul's third missionary journey).

BACKGROUND: Although Bible students have often disagreed about the sequence of events that led to the writing of 2 Corinthians, the following scenario seems likely.

First Corinthians was not well received by the church at Corinth. Timothy had returned to Paul in Ephesus (1Co 4:17; 16:10). He reported that the church was still greatly troubled. This was partly caused by the arrival in Corinth of "false apostles" (2Co 11:13-15). These were perhaps Judaizers, asking Corinthian believers of Gentile heritage to live according to Mosaic regulations (Gl 2:14).

Paul visited Corinth a second time, the first time being his church-planting visit. He described this visit as sorrowful or "painful" (2:1; 13:2). Apparently the false apostles agitated the Corinthians to disown Paul. This second visit, not mentioned in Acts 19, occurred sometime during the apostle's long ministry in Ephesus.

Paul then wrote a (now lost) severe letter of stinging rebuke to Corinth from Ephesus (2:3-4,9). He sent this letter by Titus.

Titus came to Paul with the news that most of the Corinthian church had repented. They now accepted Paul's authority (7:5-7).

Paul decided to write the Corinthians one more time, expressing his relief but still pleading with an unrepentant minority. He promised to come to Corinth a third time (12:14; 13:1). This was fulfilled when Paul stayed in Corinth while on his way to Jerusalem with the financial collection from many churches (Ac 20:2-3).

CONTRIBUTION TO THE BIBLE

Second Corinthians contributes to our understanding of ministry. On this subject, we learn four key truths: (1) God was in Christ reconciling the world to himself and has given to us a ministry of reconciliation; (2) true ministry in Christ's name involves both suffering and victory; (3) serving Christ means ministering in his name to every need of the people; and (4) leaders in ministry need support and trust from those to whom they minister.

STRUCTURE

This letter follows the standard format found in the other letters bearing Paul's name. The salutation (1:1-2) and thanksgiving (1:3-11) at the beginning are followed by the main body of the letter (1:12–13:10). A final greeting (13:11-13) stands as the conclusion.

The body of 2 Corinthians is the most disjointed of Paul's letters. It is hard to miss Paul's change of tone from chapters 1–9 (which are warm and encouraging) to chapters 10–13 (which are harsh and threatening). Whatever one decides about the original unity of the letter, no doubt the major turning point of 2 Corinthians occurs at 10:1.

Largely because of the change in tone between the first part of the letter and the last part, some interpreters have proposed a different understanding of the original form of 2 Corinthians. They propose that two separate letters of Paul have been joined to make up what is now known as 2 Corinthians. What if, it is asked, chapters 10–13 were in fact the missing severe letter (2:4,9) written after 1 Corinthians but before 2 Corinthians 1–9? The major differences in tone between these chapters would be more readily accounted for if this were true.

However, it seems much more plausible that the letter originated in the form in which we now have it. All the ancient Christian writers knew the letter only in its present form, which is to say unified as one single letter. Surely within a single letter an author may address two different sets of issues (a majority concern and a minority concern) and use two different tones (encouraging and threatening).

CHRISTIAN WORLDVIEW ELEMENTS

TEACHINGS ABOUT GOD

God, the Father of Jesus Christ (1:3; 11:31) sovereignly sent Jesus as the great "indescribable gift" (9:15). Jesus is the source of all comfort for his people. By his death and resurrection, Jesus is Lord of the new creation (5:16-17). The life-giving Spirit has come as the "down payment," guaranteeing the believer's future (5:5). "Where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is freedom" (3:17).

TEACHINGS ABOUT HUMANITY

There were two kinds of people in the Corinthian church: those who submitted to genuine apostolic authority and those who did not. Paul sets forth a defense of his apostolic authority in light of the super-apostles' criticisms of him (chaps. 10–11). This book contains the most extensive teaching in Scripture about the status of redeemed humans between the death of the body and the resurrection. This is referred to as the intermediate state, when people are "with the Lord" in conscious bliss while waiting for the consummation (5:1-8).

TEACHINGS ABOUT SALVATION

This letter contains Paul's most extensive discussion on the contrast between the "old covenant" and the "new covenant" (chap. 3). Although salvation was real in the Mosaic era, it came with fading glory, for the old covenant was meant to be temporary. The new covenant arrived with Jesus Christ, and its glory can never be surpassed. The benefit to the believer in the new covenant era is incomparable (3:18).

GREETING

1 Paul, an apostle of Christ Jesus by God's will, † and Timothy † our † brother: To the church of God at Corinth, † with all the saints who are throughout Achaia. †

2 Grace to you and peace † from God our Father † and the Lord Jesus Christ.

THE GOD OF COMFORT

3 Blessed be † the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of mercies † and the God of all comfort. † 4 He comforts us in all our affliction, † so that we may be able to comfort those who are in any kind of affliction, through the comfort we ourselves receive from God. 5 For just as the sufferings † of Christ † overflow to us, so also through Christ our comfort overflows. † 6 If we are afflicted, † it is for your comfort and salvation. If we are comforted, it is for your comfort, which produces in you patient endurance of the same sufferings that we suffer. † 7 And our hope † for you is firm, because we know that as you share † in the sufferings, so you will also share in the comfort.

8 We don't want you to be unaware, brothers and sisters, of our affliction that took place in Asia. † We were completely overwhelmed — beyond our strength † — so that we even despaired † of life itself. 9 Indeed, we felt that we had received the sentence of death, so that we would not trust in ourselves but in God † who raises † the dead. 10 He has delivered † us from such a terrible death, † and he will deliver us. We have put our hope in him that he will deliver us again 11 while you join in helping us by your prayers. Then many will give thanks on our † behalf for the gift that came to us through the prayers of many.

A CLEAR CONSCIENCE

12 Indeed, this is our boast: The testimony † of our conscience † is that we have conducted ourselves in the world, and especially toward you, with godly sincerity and purity, not by human wisdom † but by God's grace. † 13 For we are writing nothing to you other than what you can read and also understand. I hope you will understand completely — 14 just as you have partially understood us — that we are your reason for pride, † just as you also are ours † in the day of our † Lord Jesus. †

A VISIT POSTPONED

15 Because of this confidence, I planned to come to you first, † so that you could have a second benefit, † 16 and to visit you on my way to Macedonia, † and then come to you again from Macedonia and be helped by you † on my journey † to Judea. † 17 Now when I planned this, was I of two minds? Or what I plan, do I plan in a purely human † † way so that I say “Yes, yes” and “No, no” at the same time? 18 As God is faithful, † our message to you is not “Yes and no.” 19 For the Son of God, † Jesus Christ, whom we proclaimed among you — Silvanus, † † Timothy, and I — did not become “Yes and no.” On the contrary, in him it is always “Yes.” † 20 For every one of God’s promises † is “Yes” in him. Therefore, through him we also say “Amen” † to the glory of God. † 21 Now it is God who strengthens us together with you in Christ, and who has anointed † us. 22 He has also put his seal on us and given us the Spirit in our hearts † as a down payment. †

23 I call on God as a witness, † on my life, that it was to spare you that I did not come to Corinth. † 24 I do not mean that we lord it over your faith, but we are workers with you for your joy, because you stand firm in your † faith.

1:7 Despite those who claim that faithful living always leads to prosperity in this life, Paul expects that following Christ will include suffering. See “Christians and Suffering,” p. 580.

1:8 We do not know what specific affliction Paul references here. Much of Paul’s ministry occurred in the province of Asia, located in modern Turkey.

1:12 Paul’s ministry is powered by God’s grace, not by human wisdom (1Co 1:18); it is characterized by sincerity and purity.

1:15-18 Paul had to change his plans concerning a return trip to Corinth, and some of the Corinthian believers had apparently been offended. Paul defends his behavior, stressing that the change in plans was not due to fickleness.

1:19-20 Paul's decisiveness is theologically grounded in the assurance of God's promises. What God has promised is "yes" in Christ, showing God to be trustworthy. Paul, likewise, seeks to keep his word.

2 In fact, I made up my mind about this: I would not come to you on another painful visit. † 2 For if I cause you pain, then who will cheer me other than the one being hurt by me? † 3 I wrote this very thing so that when I came I wouldn't have pain from those who ought to give me joy, because I am confident † about all of you that my joy will also be yours. 4 For I wrote to you with many tears out of an extremely troubled and anguished heart — not to cause you pain, but that you should know the abundant love I have for you.

A SINNER FORGIVEN

5 If anyone has caused pain, he has caused pain not so much to me but to some degree — not to exaggerate † — to all of you. 6 This punishment by the majority is sufficient for that person. 7 As a result, you should instead forgive † and comfort him. Otherwise, he may be overwhelmed by excessive grief. 8 Therefore I urge you to reaffirm your love to him. 9 I wrote for this purpose: to test your character † to see if you are obedient † in everything. 10 Anyone you forgive, I do too. For what I have forgiven — if I have forgiven anything — it is for your benefit in the presence of Christ, 11 so that we may not be taken advantage † of by Satan. For we are not ignorant of his schemes.

A TRIP TO MACEDONIA

12 When I came to Troas † to preach the gospel of Christ, even though the Lord opened a door † for me, 13 I had no rest † in my spirit because I did not find my brother Titus. † Instead, I said good-bye to them and left for Macedonia. †

A MINISTRY OF LIFE OR DEATH

14 But thanks be to God, † who always leads us in Christ's triumphal procession and through us spreads the aroma of the knowledge of him in every place. † 15 For to God we are the fragrance † of Christ among those who are being saved † and among those who are perishing. † 16 To some we are an aroma of death † leading to death, but to others, an aroma of life † leading to life. Who is adequate for these things? 17 For we do not market the word of God † for profit like so many. † On the contrary, we speak with sincerity in Christ, as from God and before God.

2:1-4 Since the writing of 1 Corinthians, the situation in the church seems to have worsened. Paul made another, painful, visit (see also 2:5). He then, with many tears, wrote them another letter, which has not been preserved.

2:5-10 The majority of the church punished the offender—most likely someone who made Paul's intervening visit "painful." But the goal of church discipline is always restoration. Forgiveness is always extended when there is genuine repentance.

2:11 The Bible is clear that Satan is real and personal and that he looks for ways to disrupt God's people.

2:14-17 Paul alluded to Rome's triumphal procession—one of the most spectacular celebrations in the ancient world. A conquering general would march through Rome displaying captives and plunder as evidence of his victories. Paul pictures himself, and those laboring with him, as ones captured by the victorious Christ. Incense was a common element of such events, and some of the conquered would be executed while others would be allowed to live. Paul compares gospel preaching to this aroma as it goes out proclaiming death to some (those who refuse to believe) and life to others (those who repent and believe).

LIVING LETTERS

3 Are we beginning to commend ourselves again? Or do we need, like some, letters of recommendation to you or from you? 2 You yourselves are our letter, written on our hearts, known and read by everyone. † 3 You show that you are Christ's letter, † delivered † by us, not written with ink but with the Spirit of the living God † — not on tablets of stone † but on tablets of human hearts. † †

PAUL'S COMPETENCE

4 Such is the confidence we have through Christ before God. 5 It is not that we are competent in † ourselves to claim anything as coming from ourselves, but our adequacy is from God. † 6 He has made us competent to be ministers of a new covenant, † not of the letter, † but of the Spirit. For the letter kills, but the Spirit gives life.

NEW COVENANT MINISTRY

7 Now if the ministry that brought death, chiseled in letters on stones, came with glory, † so that the Israelites were not able to gaze steadily at Moses's face because of its glory, which was set aside, 8 how will the ministry of the Spirit not be more glorious? 9 For if the ministry that brought condemnation had glory, the ministry that brings righteousness overflows with even more glory. 10 In fact, what had been glorious is not glorious now by comparison because of the glory that surpasses it. 11 For if what was set aside † was glorious, what endures will be even more glorious.

12 Since, then, we have such a hope, † we act with great boldness. 13 We are not like Moses, who used to put a veil over his face † to prevent the Israelites from gazing steadily until the end † of the glory of what was being set aside, 14 but their minds were hardened. † For to this day, at the reading of the old covenant, † the same veil remains; it is not lifted, because it is set aside only in Christ. † 15 Yet still today, whenever Moses is read, a veil lies over their hearts, 16 but whenever a person turns † to the Lord, the veil is removed. † 17 Now the Lord is the Spirit, and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is freedom. 18 We all, with unveiled faces, are looking as in a mirror at † † the glory of the Lord † and are being transformed † into the same image † from glory to glory; this is from the Lord who is the Spirit. †

3:1-3 Letters of recommendation played an important role in the ancient world, enabling people to receive housing and aid from others as they travelled, since a mutual friend vouched for them. Paul says the commendation, or proof of his ministry, is simply the Corinthian believers—the evidence of God at work in their lives. Unlike many traveling teachers of the time, Paul is not interested in their goods or their praise, but simply in their progress in Christ.

3:6 New covenant ministry is characterized by the Spirit, not by the letter, which refers to the law of Moses (3:7). The letter kills, because the law condemns all people of sin (Rm 7:13), while the Spirit gives life. The new covenant is therefore life-giving, while the old sentences people to death.

3:7-11 Paul draws on Exodus 34:29-32 to contrast the old and new covenants. When Moses descended from Mount Sinai, with the Ten Commandments chiseled in letters on stones, his face shone with the reflected glory of God. The glory of the old covenant, however, has been surpassed by that of the new.

3:7 Paul calls the old covenant the ministry that brought death because, as he said in the previous verse, the law cannot bring life. The law of Moses remains useful, however, since it convicts people of sin and points to the forgiveness found in Jesus Christ.

3:12-16 Moses used a veil to conceal the fading glory of his face (Ex 34:33-35). Paul uses this veil imagery to suggest that the glory of God is hidden to unbelieving Jews in his day; it is set aside only in Christ.

3:18 The glory of the Lord is not hidden to those in Christ. Being witnesses to the glory of God causes believers to be transformed in the likeness of God's glory, by the power of the Spirit. See also "Imago Dei and the Distinctiveness of Humans," p. 27.

THE LIGHT OF THE GOSPEL

4 Therefore, since we have this ministry because we were shown mercy, † we do not give up. † 2 Instead, we have renounced secret and shameful things, not acting † deceitfully or distorting the word of God, † but commending ourselves before God to everyone's conscience by an open display of the truth. † 3 But if our gospel is veiled, it is veiled to those who are perishing. 4 In their case, the god of this age † has blinded the minds of the unbelievers to keep them from seeing the light of the gospel of the glory of Christ, † † who is the image of God. † 5 For we are not proclaiming ourselves but Jesus Christ as Lord, † and ourselves as your servants for Jesus's sake. 6 For God who said, "Let light shine out of darkness," † has shone in our hearts to give the light of the knowledge † of God's glory † in the face of Jesus Christ.

TREASURE IN CLAY JARS

7 Now we have this treasure in clay jars, so that this extraordinary power † may be from God and not from us. 8 We are afflicted in every way but not crushed; we are perplexed but not in despair; 9 we are persecuted but not abandoned; we are struck down but not destroyed. 10 We always carry the death of Jesus † in our body, so that the life of Jesus may also be displayed in our body. 11 For we who live are always being given over to death † for Jesus's sake, so that Jesus's life may also be displayed in our mortal flesh. 12 So then, death is at work in us, but life in you. 13 And since we have the same spirit of faith in keeping with what is written, I believed, therefore I spoke, † † we also believe, and therefore speak. 14 For we know that the one who raised the Lord Jesus will also raise us with Jesus † and present us with you. 15 Indeed, everything is for your benefit so that, as grace extends through more and more people, it may cause thanksgiving † to increase to the glory of God.

16 Therefore we do not give up. † Even though our outer person is being destroyed, our inner person † is being renewed day by day. 17 For our momentary light affliction † is producing for us an absolutely incomparable eternal weight of glory. † 18 So we do not focus on what is seen, † but on what is unseen. For what is seen is temporary, but what is unseen is eternal.

4:2 Sophists and philosophers were regularly accused of employing trickery and deceit. Paul distinguishes himself from such traveling teachers.

4:4-6 The god of this age is Satan, the one who seeks to exalt himself as god. He blinds the minds of the unbelievers, but God is able to cause light to shine in the darkness, just as he did at creation, so that people will see the truth of the gospel. See also "Satan and Demons," p. 1611; "The Bible and Intellectual Pursuit," p. 1512.

4:7 Clay jars were common and quite fragile. This imagery provides a clear contrast between the frailty of the human body and the enduring power of the gospel. We do not make the gospel glorious. Rather, human weakness provides the setting in which the glory of the gospel can be seen.

4:14 The promise of the resurrection animates and enables perseverance through suffering and affliction.

4:16-17 The human body is subjected to decay, but the inner person is renewed by God's Spirit daily. The affliction suffered in the body is momentary because this body is temporary, but resurrection brings eternal . . . glory. See "Christians and Suffering," p. 580.

OUR FUTURE AFTER DEATH

5 For we know that if our earthly tent we live in † is destroyed, we have a building from God, an eternal dwelling in the heavens, † not made with hands. † 2 Indeed, we groan in this tent, desiring † to put on our heavenly dwelling, 3 since, when we have taken it off, † we will not be found naked. † 4 Indeed, we groan while we are in this tent, burdened as we are, because we do not want to be unclothed but clothed, so that mortality † may be swallowed up by life. 5 Now the one who prepared us for this very purpose is God, who gave us the Spirit as a down payment.

6 So we are always confident and know that while we are at home in the body we are away from the Lord. 7 For we walk by faith, † not by sight. † 8 In fact, we are confident, and we would prefer to be away from the body and at home with the Lord. † 9 Therefore, whether we are at home or away, we make it our aim to be pleasing † to him. 10 For we must all appear before the judgment seat † of Christ, † so that each may be repaid † for what he has done in the body, whether good or evil.

11 Therefore, since we know the fear of the Lord, † we try to persuade people. What we are is plain to God, and I hope it is also plain to your consciences. 12 We are not commending ourselves to you again, but giving you an opportunity to be proud of us, so that you may have a reply for those who take pride in outward appearance rather than in the heart. 13 For if we are out of our mind, † it is for God; if we are in our right mind, † it is for you. 14 For the love of Christ compels us, since we have reached this conclusion: If one died for all, † then all died. 15 And he died for all † so that those who live should no longer live for themselves, † but for the one † who died for them and was raised.

THE MINISTRY OF RECONCILIATION

16 From now on, then, we do not know anyone from a worldly perspective. † Even if we have known Christ from a worldly perspective, † yet now we no longer know him in this way. 17 Therefore, if anyone is in Christ, he is a new creation; † the old has passed away, and see, † the new has † come! †

18 Everything is from God, who has reconciled us to himself through Christ and has given us the ministry of reconciliation. † 19 That is, in Christ, God was reconciling the world † to himself, † not counting their trespasses against them, and he has committed the message of reconciliation to us.

20 Therefore, we are ambassadors † for Christ, since God is making his appeal through us. We plead on Christ's behalf: † "Be reconciled to God." 21 He made the one who did not know sin † to be sin † for us, † so that in him we might become the righteousness of God.

5:1-5 The earthly tent refers to our earthly bodies. Paul is not denigrating our bodies but longing for the resurrected state, the eternal dwelling.

5:4 Greek philosophy looked down on the physical body, regarding it a prison of the soul—in death, the soul is set free from the shackles of the body. But in keeping with Hebrew thought, Paul regards the body as an essential element of human life—even after death, which is why Jews expected a bodily resurrection of the dead. So, Paul does not want to be unclothed but clothed—he does not want to be left without a body, but longs for the resurrection.

5:10 Though there is no condemnation in Christ Jesus (Rm 8:1), all will appear before the judgment seat of Christ. Even believers will face consequences for things done in the body. When in Corinth, Paul faced the Roman governor Gallio, who sat on Corinth's impressive judgment seat (Gk bema). But Paul sees the judgment seat of Christ as being of far greater significance. He implies that Christ is the true Judge of all, not whichever mere mortal has temporary authority in the earthly town of Corinth.

5:13 The word translated out of our mind was used to refer to an orator who failed to persuade because of unpolished delivery. The Corinthians were unimpressed by Paul's inattention to popular, flashy rhetoric, but Paul is concerned for substance over style.

5:14-15 The death and resurrection of Jesus motivates Paul's ministry. His death spells the spiritual death of all who belong to him, while his resurrection achieves their spiritual life. So, those who live should no longer live for themselves, but for Christ who died for them and was raised.

5:16 Unlike the Corinthians, who judge Paul and others according to worldly standards of impressiveness, status, and glory, Paul's group does not know anyone from a worldly perspective. Worldly appearance is irrelevant; instead, Paul is concerned for the spiritual life and destiny of each individual. In the same way, it is possible to misjudge Christ by his earthly appearance.

5:19 Christ may not have seemed impressive from a worldly perspective, but it was in Christ that God reconciled the world to himself. See "The Incarnation of Jesus Christ," p. 1271.

5:20 Paul employs the imagery of Greco-Roman diplomacy to explain that he and his coworkers are ambassadors for Christ. An ambassadorial position was a high honor in Roman society, and Corinth was a prestigious city, so ambassador of Corinth was an elite position. But being an ambassador of Christ is a far greater honor and responsibility. The message Paul presents on Christ's behalf is "Be reconciled to God."

5:21 The ground for reconciliation with God (cp. 5:20) is the great exchange in which the sinless Christ became sin for us, so that in him believers become the righteousness of God. Jesus, even though he was righteous, suffered the penalty for sin so that believers would share in his righteousness following his vindication in resurrection (cp. Rm 4:25).

6 Working together with him, we also appeal to you, “Don’t receive the grace of God in vain.” 2 For he says:

At an acceptable time I listened to you, and in the day of salvation I helped you. † †

See, now is the acceptable time; now is the day of salvation! †

THE CHARACTER OF PAUL’S MINISTRY

3 We are not giving anyone an occasion for offense, so that the ministry will not be blamed. 4 Instead, as God’s ministers, we commend ourselves in everything: by great endurance, by afflictions, by hardships, by difficulties, 5 by beatings, by imprisonments, † by riots, by labors, by sleepless nights, by times of hunger, 6 by purity, † by knowledge, † by patience, † by kindness, † by the Holy Spirit, by sincere love, † 7 by the word of truth, † † by the power of God; † through weapons of righteousness for the right hand and the left, 8 through glory † and dishonor, through slander and good report; regarded as deceivers, yet true; 9 as unknown, yet recognized; as dying, yet see — we live; as being disciplined, yet not killed; 10 as grieving, yet always rejoicing; † as poor, yet enriching many; as having nothing, yet possessing everything. 11 We have spoken openly to you, Corinthians; our heart has been opened wide. 12 We are not withholding our affection from you, but you are withholding yours from us. 13 I speak as to my children; as a proper response, open your heart to us.

SEPARATION TO GOD

14 Don’t become partners with those who do not believe. For what partnership is there between righteousness and lawlessness? † Or what fellowship does light † have with darkness? † 15 What agreement does Christ have with Belial? † Or what does a believer have in common with an unbeliever? 16 And what agreement does the temple of God have with idols? † For we † are the temple of the living God, as God said:

I will dwell †
and walk among them, and I will be their God, † and they will be my people. † †

17 Therefore, come out from among them and be separate, says the Lord; do not touch any unclean thing, and I will welcome you. † †
18 And I will be a Father † to you, and you will be sons † and daughters to me, says the Lord Almighty. † †

6:3-10 Paul's hardship catalog is similar in certain respects to Stoic and Cynic discourse, in which teachers sought to exemplify the virtues of fortitude, self-sufficiency, and indifference to external circumstances. But in contrast to these virtues, Paul exemplifies weakness, dependence on God, and suffering through afflictions. The contrast with Stoicism demonstrates a lack of confidence in human "clay jars" in preference for God's power (4:7).

6:14–7:1 The instruction to not become partners with those who do not believe most likely refers to engaging in pagan worship. This becomes clear through the series of contrasts between righteousness and lawlessness, light and darkness, Christ and Belial (Satan), the believer and unbeliever, the temple of God and idols. Engagement with pagan religious practices was a serious issue for the Corinthians and is addressed at length in 1 Corinthians 8–10. Rather than become defiled by participation in pagan religion, believers are to cleanse ourselves from every impurity of the flesh and spirit.

7 So then, dear friends, since we have these promises, † let us cleanse ourselves from every impurity of the flesh and spirit, † bringing holiness to completion † in the fear of God. †

JOY AND REPENTANCE

2 Make room for us in your hearts. We have wronged no one, corrupted † no one, taken advantage of no one. 3 I don't say this to condemn you, since I have already said that you are in our hearts, to die together and to live together. 4 I am very frank with you; I have great pride in you. I am filled with encouragement; I am overflowing with joy in all our afflictions.
5 In fact, when we came into Macedonia, † we † had no rest. Instead, we were troubled in every way: conflicts † on the outside, fears † within. 6 But God, who comforts the downcast, † comforted us by the arrival of Titus, 7 and not only by his arrival but also by the comfort he received from you. He told us about your deep longing, your sorrow, and your zeal † for me, so that I rejoiced even more. 8 For even if I grieved you with my letter, † I don't regret it. And if I regretted it — since I saw that the letter grieved you, yet only for a while — 9 I now rejoice, not because you were grieved, but because your grief led to repentance. For you were grieved as God willed, so that you didn't experience any loss from us. 10 For godly grief produces a repentance that leads to salvation without regret, but worldly grief produces death. † 11 For consider how much diligence this very thing — this grieving as God wills — has produced in you: what a desire to clear yourselves, what indignation, what fear, what deep longing, what zeal, what justice! In every way you showed yourselves to be pure † in this matter. 12 So even though I wrote to you, it was not because of the one who did wrong, or because of the one who was wronged, but in order that your devotion to us might be made plain to you in the sight of God. 13 For this reason we have been comforted.

In addition to our own comfort, we rejoiced even more over the joy Titus † had, because his spirit was refreshed by all of you. 14 For if I have made any boast to him about you, I have not been disappointed; but as I have spoken everything to you in truth, † so our boasting to Titus has also turned out to be the truth. 15 And his affection toward you is even greater as he remembers the obedience of all of you, and how you received him with fear and trembling. 16 I rejoice that I have complete confidence in you.

APPEAL TO COMPLETE THE COLLECTION

8 We want you to know, brothers and sisters, about the grace of God that was given to the churches † of Macedonia: † 2 During a severe trial brought about by affliction, their abundant joy and their extreme poverty overflowed in a wealth of generosity on their part. † 3 I can testify that, according to their ability and even beyond their ability, of their own accord,

4 they begged us earnestly for the privilege of sharing † in the ministry to the saints, 5 and not just as we had hoped. Instead, they gave themselves first to the Lord and then to us by God's will. † 6 So we urged Titus that just as he had begun, so he should also complete among you this act of grace.

7 Now as you excel in everything — in faith, speech, knowledge, † and in all diligence, and in your love for us † — excel also in this act of grace. 8 I am not saying this as a command. Rather, by means of the diligence of others, I am testing the genuineness of your love. 9 For you know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ: Though he was rich, † for your sake he became poor, † so that by his poverty you might become rich. 10 And in this matter I am giving advice because it is profitable for you, who began last year not only to do something but also to want to do it. † 11 Now also finish the task, so that just as there was an eager desire, there may also be a completion, according to what you have. 12 For if the eagerness is there, the gift is acceptable according to what a person has, not according to what he does not have. † 13 It is not that there should be relief for others and hardship for you, but it is a question of equality. † 14 At the present time your surplus is available for their need, so that their abundance may in turn meet your need, in order that there may be equality. 15 As it is written: The person who had much did not have too much, and the person who had little did not have too little. † †

ADMINISTRATION OF THE COLLECTION

16 Thanks be to God, who put the same concern for you into the heart of Titus. 17 For he welcomed our appeal and, being very diligent, went out to you by his own choice. 18 We have sent with him the brother † who is praised among all the churches for his gospel ministry. † 19 And not only that, but he was also appointed by the churches to accompany us with this gracious gift that we are administering for the glory of the Lord himself and to show our eagerness to help. 20 We are taking this precaution so that no one will criticize us about this large sum that we are administering. 21 Indeed, we are giving careful thought † to do what is right, † not only before the Lord but also before people. 22 We have also sent with them our brother. We have often tested him in many circumstances and found him to be diligent — and now even more diligent because of his great confidence in you. 23 As for Titus, he is my partner † and coworker † for you; as for our brothers, they are the messengers † of the churches, the glory of Christ. † 24 Therefore, show them proof before the churches of your love and of our boasting † about you.

8:1-5 A wonderful portrait of Christian generosity is depicted here. The Macedonians' giving is not forced or manipulated but overflows from extreme poverty, as people in affliction gave beyond their ability, having begged for the privilege of sharing in the ministry to the saints. This confounds worldly expectation, testifying to Christian love and the gospel of Christ.

8:9 As typical for Paul, his exhortations are grounded in the grace of God in Christ. Christ's self-giving is the model for giving, and Paul translates the atonement into economic categories for the sake of illustration: Christ . . . became poor to make the Corinthians rich.

8:12 Eagerness to give is more important than how much is given. The gift is acceptable in measure with one's wealth, not his lack. This idea finds resonance in Jesus's commendation of the widow who gave "out of her poverty" (Mk 12:41-44). Jewish thought reflected the same sentiment (Tobit 4:8: "Measure your alms by what you have"), as did some Greek thinkers (Dio Chrysostom, Oration 7.93: "No gift is inadequate which is prompted by affection").

8:19-22 Paul took extra precautions to make sure people knew that all the gathered money was handled appropriately, and would be faithfully delivered to the Jerusalem church as promised. Integrity in ministry, especially in money matters, requires doing what is right, not only before the Lord but . . . before people. See also "Leadership and Biblical Ethics," p. 1501.

MOTIVATIONS FOR GIVING

9 Now concerning the ministry to the saints, it is unnecessary for me to write to you. 2 For I know your eagerness, and I boast about you to the Macedonians: † "Achaia † has been ready since last year," and your zeal † has stirred up most of them. † 3 But I am sending the brothers so that our boasting about you in this matter would not prove empty, and so that you would be ready just as I said. 4 Otherwise, if any Macedonians come with me and find you unprepared, we, not to mention you, would be put to shame in that situation. † 5 Therefore I considered it necessary to urge the brothers to go on ahead to you and arrange in advance the generous gift † you promised, so that it will be ready as a gift and not as an extortion. †

6 The point is this: † The person who sows sparingly will also reap sparingly, and the person who sows generously will also reap generously. 7 Each person should do as he has decided in his heart — not reluctantly or out of compulsion, since God loves † a cheerful giver. 8 And God is able † to make every grace overflow to you, so that in every way, always having everything you need, you may excel in every good work. 9 As it is written:

He distributed freely; †

he gave to the poor; his righteousness endures forever. † †

10 Now the one who provides seed for the sower and bread for food will also provide and multiply your seed and increase the harvest of your righteousness. † 11 You will be enriched † in every way for all generosity, which produces thanksgiving to God through us. 12 For the ministry of this service † is not only supplying the needs of the saints but is also overflowing in many expressions of thanks to God. 13 Because of the proof provided by this ministry, they will glorify God for your obedient confession of the gospel of Christ, and for your generosity † in sharing with them and with everyone. 14 And as they pray on your behalf, they will have deep affection for you because of the surpassing grace of God in you. 15 Thanks be to God for his indescribable gift!

9:1 The ministry to the saints is the offering being gathered for the impoverished Christians in Jerusalem (8:4).

9:7-8 God loves a cheerful giver because God gives out of love and grace, not obligation. Generosity should flow out of hearts shaped after God's own heart. God's generosity means that the Corinthians will have everything they need.

9:11 The giver will be enriched in their generosity, as Jesus taught: "It is more blessed to give than to receive" (Ac 20:35).

PAUL'S APOSTOLIC AUTHORITY

10 Now I Paul, myself, appeal to you by the meekness and gentleness of Christ — I who am humble among you in person but bold toward you when absent. 2 I beg you that when I am present I will not need to be bold with the confidence by which I plan to challenge certain people who think we are behaving according to the flesh. † 3 For although we live in the flesh, we do not wage war according to the flesh, 4 since the weapons of our warfare † are not of the flesh, but are powerful † through God for the demolition of strongholds. We demolish arguments 5 and every proud thing that is raised up against the knowledge † of God, and we take every thought captive to obey Christ. 6 And we are ready to punish any disobedience, once your obedience is complete.

7 Look at what is obvious. † If anyone is confident that he belongs to Christ, † let him remind himself of this: Just as he belongs to Christ, so do we. 8 For if I boast a little too much about our authority, which the Lord gave for building you up † and not for tearing you down, I will not be put to shame. 9 I don't want to seem as though I am trying to terrify you with my letters. 10 For it is said, "His letters are weighty and powerful, but his physical presence is weak and his public speaking amounts to nothing." 11 Let such a person consider this: What we are in our letters, when we are absent, we will also be in our actions when we are present.
12 For we don't dare classify or compare ourselves with some who commend † themselves. But in measuring themselves by themselves and comparing themselves to themselves, † they lack understanding. † 13 We, however, will not boast beyond measure but according to the measure of the area of ministry that God has assigned † to us, which reaches even to you. 14 For we are not overextending ourselves, as if we had not reached you, since we have come to you with the gospel of Christ.

HOW CAN WE EVALUATE COMPETING WORLDVIEWS?

When dealing with the subject of worldviews in conflict, it is imperative to frame the discussion in light of the teaching of Scripture. Perhaps the most relevant biblical passage is found in Paul's defense of his ministry in 2 Corinthians 10:3-5: "Although we live in the flesh, we do not wage war according to the flesh, since the weapons of our warfare are not of the flesh, but are powerful through God for the demolition of strongholds. We demolish arguments and every proud thing that is raised up against the knowledge of God, and we take every thought captive to obey Christ."

The text of Scripture is suffused with military metaphors like these. Indeed, Christians are called to be faithful soldiers, even donning armor and wielding swords and shields (cp. Eph 6:10-17). Nevertheless, it is important to remember who the enemies are and where the battle lines are drawn.

By the time Paul wrote 2 Corinthians, enemies of the gospel of Christ had determined that the best means of attacking it was to undermine the authority of God's spokesmen. Paul's letter to the Corinthians, therefore, is a rebuttal to his opponents' arguments. Yet, in this text, the apostle points out that the true enemies at work are not other persons, but their arguments.

Consequently, the right way to do battle is shaped by understanding the real enemy. Because the battle was not a fleshly battle, but a spiritual one, Paul trusted only spiritual weapons. Rather than appealing to the shallow desire of the Corinthians for persuasive rhetoric (1Co 1:18-25) or outward appearances (2Co 4:16-18), the apostle preferred the efficacy of divine power. As Paul explained earlier in 2 Corinthians 3, believers are those whose understanding is no longer darkened as if by a veil; they are "ministers of a new covenant" (v. 6). Miraculously, through the Lord who "is the Spirit," they see the world clearly—in stark contrast to the situation of "unbelievers" whose minds have been "blinded" by the god of this age (2Co 3:15-18; 4:3-4). If such people are going to be reached, it will require a power beyond earthly devices. Consequently, the Spirit goes to war on the Christian's behalf.

THE BATTLE OF IDEAS

Paul's call for spiritual warfare was no retreat from sound thinking, however. He spoke of arguments to be undermined and destroyed—those that oppose the knowledge of God. Paul faced a multitude of erroneous assertions—including that he was not a true apostle and was only passing himself off as one to build his sense of self-importance. Thus, his strategy involved using Word-empowered reasoning to tear down barriers erected against the truth (cp. Ac 17:16-34; 18:4; 19:8-10). But Paul did not stop with the task of demolishing falsehood; his goal was to "take every thought captive to obey Christ" (2Co 10:5). This remarkable phrase can be rendered "to take as prisoner of war." Every thought that is in rebellion to God must be made a prisoner and be made to submit to the authority of God in Christ Jesus as Lord.

The battle for hearts and minds will be won on the battlefield of ideas. Bad arguments must be tracked down and brought into captivity to the lordship of Christ, because ideas capture minds and create worldviews. Mindless Christianity will be heartless Christianity. And heartless Christianity is deadly.

Being a Christian in the world means not doing battle the way the world does. By giving true spiritual wisdom, God helps the believer to love his enemy even as he is deconstructing sinful ways of thinking. Since every thought is to be brought into captivity to Christ, believers are called to capture every arena of human endeavor for him. Christians should bring everything from architecture to zoology under his lordship. This means that urban planning, environmental science, politics, and international relations are worthy callings alongside church leadership, evangelism training, or seminary teaching. Every domain of thought represents important territory to be occupied for Christ. Faithful soldiers of Jesus engage the enemy with confidence and courage, remembering that ultimately the battle is the Lord's, and he is already victorious.

HOW TO EVALUATE WORLDVIEWS

Once we understand the stakes involved, we must turn our attention toward how to evaluate worldviews. When Pontius Pilate interrogated Jesus, he asked the most poignant of all questions that the human can ask: "Quid est veritas?", "What is truth?" Truth still matters, despite the pervasive cultural mood of pessimism and cynicism. This is why we continue to need investigative journalism. As the documentary filmmaker Errol Morris has concluded, it really does still matter who pulled the trigger. Whenever a crime occurs, we immediately want to know if there were surveillance cameras rolling as the incident unfolded.

The most important matter to bring up in this connection are three so-called tests for truth that are recognized by philosophers. They are, variously, the coherence test, the pragmatic test, and the correspondence test. The coherence test demands that any worldview be internally consistent; its beliefs must hold together in a rational manner. If a man wants to be an absurdist, that certainly is his own business, and there is little use in talking with him—except to show him where he is cheating against his own reliance on irrational behavior and thought. The coherence test for truth queries the internal logic of a set of claims. Every worldview contains propositions: statements of fact about the way things are.

But simply because a worldview is not absurd does not by itself make it true. The pragmatic test for truth asks what sort of outcomes result from a set of beliefs; what sort of prudential practices flow from a perspective? We are familiar with this test of truth when it comes to teaching young people about the dangers of promiscuity. Abstinence starts looking pretty sensible when you talk about the realities of unwanted pregnancies, sexually transmitted diseases, and even heartbreak. In other words, we should expect that if something is true, embracing it should contribute to human flourishing. We live in an age of big data, sociological findings, and polls. All of these are indicators that people understand the importance of real world application from their worldview. Just as is the case with the coherence test, the pragmatic test by itself cannot fully account for what we expect from a truth claim. Indeed, the notion that "it's true because it works," is a dangerous idea because truth becomes limited to what "works" for individuals, which is subjective.

What we really want to say is that something works because it is true. Practical utility points to something beyond itself, which points us to the third test for truth that unites the first two and ties them together: the correspondence theory of truth. Any true utterance should refer beyond the mere words that are spoken, or the ever-changing nature of human experience, to something greater, something transcendent, something that remains solid whether or not humans acknowledge it. Francis Schaeffer used to call this "True Truth." It's not just what is true for me, or true for you, or even a group, but what is true for all people, at all times, and in all places. This is indistinguishable from the deep, abiding sense of "oughtness" that humans possess. In Mere Christianity, C. S. Lewis refers to this as the Tao—the universal sense that people are not free to simply do whatever they please; there is a court of final appeal, a real category to which we refer as "justice."

Today we live in an age of relativism, the idea that each person or group sets their own criterion of truth. All beliefs are as true as any other belief, the relativist surmises. As Friedrich Nietzsche once wrote, "There are no facts, only interpretations." But think about that statement for a second—anyone who says that is, in essence, asking you not to believe his proposals. So don't. Relativism states that all views are true, which is itself an absolute statement of fact, which is self-refuting. Not all beliefs can be true because each worldview contains truth claims that are irreconcilable with other worldviews. Everybody, therefore, can't be right. Logicians call this insight the law of the excluded middle. Any given proposition must be either true or false. Finding out what is true is the task not only of the philosopher or apologist, but of every Christian.

15 We are not boasting beyond measure about other people's labors. On the contrary, we have the hope † that as your faith increases, our area of ministry will be greatly enlarged, 16 so that we may preach the gospel to the regions beyond you † without boasting about what has already been done in someone else's area of ministry. † 17 So let the one who boasts, boast in the Lord. † †

10:1-2 In this last portion of the letter Paul more directly confronts his opponents. The last part of 10:1 contains their charge against him (see also v. 10). Paul's opponents viewed his humility negatively since it was expected that people would show their importance by aggressive self-assertion. Paul's gentleness was seen as timidity. Nevertheless, when he comes, he is willing to be bold with those who are unrepentant—though he prefers not to be.

10:3-4 Paul adopts warfare imagery to stress the nature of his ministry. War is not waged according to the flesh; that is by the mechanics of worldly disputes. He refers instead to a spiritual battle (cp. Eph 6:10-17), in which their weapons are powerful through God. The imagery of strongholds refers to bulwarks built to protect cities from invasion. The word also appears in the Greek version of Proverbs 21:22, suggesting that Paul is the wise man described in the proverb, who brings down the fortresses of a city of warriors with the weapon of wisdom. See "The Crisis of the Christian Mind," p. XXV.

10:5 Warfare imagery continues as every thought is taken captive to obey Christ. The imagery suggests that Paul is a general, who presents people's thoughts as captives to the Lord of the army.

10:10 Paul's critics in Corinth drew attention to his weak physical presence and the unimpressive quality of his public speaking. The only physical description of Paul from antiquity comes from the second-century fictional work, The Acts of Paul and Thecla: "small of stature, with a bald head and crooked legs, in a good state of body, with eyebrows meeting and nose somewhat hooked." However accurate this description, any judgment on the basis of appearance fails to understand the wisdom of the cross, in which apparent weakness is actually the power of God (1Co 1:18). As for Paul's public speaking, the Corinthians compared Paul to the trained orators who engaged in various rhetorical techniques in order to impress and persuade (see the note on 5:13). Such a comparison fails to grasp that genuine preaching is based on God's power rather than technique (1Co 2:1-5).

PAUL AND THE FALSE APOSTLES

11 I wish you would put up with a little foolishness † from me. Yes, do put up with me! † 2 For I am jealous † for you with a godly jealousy, † because I have promised you in marriage to one husband — to present a pure † virgin to Christ. 3 But I fear that, as the serpent † deceived † Eve † by his cunning, your minds may be seduced from a sincere and pure † devotion to Christ. † 4 For if a person comes and preaches another Jesus, † whom we did not preach, or you receive a different spirit, † which you had not received, or a different gospel, † which you had not accepted, you put up with it splendidly!

5 Now I consider myself in no way inferior to those “super-apostles.” † 6 Even if I am untrained in public speaking, † I am certainly not untrained in knowledge. † Indeed, we have in every way made that clear to you in everything. 7 Or did I commit a sin by humbling † myself so that you might be exalted, † because I preached the gospel of God to you free of charge? † 8 I robbed other churches by taking pay from them to minister to you. 9 When I was present with you and in need, I did not burden anyone, since the brothers who came from Macedonia † supplied my needs. † I have kept myself, and will keep myself, from burdening you in any way. 10 As the truth of Christ is in me, this boasting of mine will not be stopped † in the regions of Achaia. † 11 Why? Because I don’t love you? God knows I do!

12 But I will continue to do what I am doing, in order to deny † an opportunity to those who want to be regarded as our equals in what they boast about. 13 For such people are false apostles, † deceitful workers, disguising themselves as apostles of Christ. 14 And no wonder! For Satan disguises himself as an angel of light. 15 So it is no great surprise if his servants also disguise themselves as servants of righteousness. Their end will be according to their works. †

PAUL’S SUFFERINGS FOR CHRIST

16 I repeat: Let no one consider me a fool. But if you do, at least accept me as a fool so that I can also boast a little. 17 What I am saying in this matter † of boasting, I don’t speak as the Lord would, but as it were, foolishly. 18 Since many boast according to the flesh, I will also boast. 19 For you, being so wise, gladly put up with fools! † 20 In fact, you put up with it if someone enslaves you, if someone exploits † you, if someone takes advantage of you, if someone is arrogant toward you, if someone slaps † you in the face. 21 I say this to our shame: We have been too weak for that!

But in whatever anyone dares to boast — I am talking foolishly — I also dare: 22 Are they Hebrews? † So am I. Are they Israelites? So am I. Are they the descendants of Abraham? † So am I. 23 Are they servants of Christ? I’m talking like a madman — I’m a better one: with far more labors, many more imprisonments, far worse beatings, many times near death.

24 Five times I received the forty lashes minus one from the Jews. † 25 Three times I was beaten with rods. † Once I received a stoning. † Three times I was shipwrecked. † I have spent a night and a day in the open sea. 26 On frequent journeys, I faced dangers from rivers, dangers from robbers, † dangers from my own people, † dangers from Gentiles, dangers in the city, dangers in the wilderness, dangers at sea, and dangers among false brothers; 27 toil and hardship, many sleepless nights, hunger and thirst, often without food, cold, and without clothing. † 28 Not to mention † other things, there is the daily pressure on me: my concern for all the churches. 29 Who is weak, and I am not weak? Who is made to stumble, † and I do not burn with indignation?
30 If boasting is necessary, I will boast about my weaknesses. 31 The God and Father † of the Lord Jesus, who is blessed forever, knows I am not lying. 32 In Damascus, † a ruler † under King Aretas guarded the city of Damascus in order to arrest me. 33 So I was let down in a basket through a window in the wall and escaped from his hands. †

11:2 As in Ephesians 5:22-33, Paul sees the church as the bride of Christ, just as Israel was pictured as God's bride in the OT (e.g., Ezk 16). Furthermore, the church is currently living between the betrothal and the actual wedding feast (Rv 19:6-9). Unlike modern engagements, a Jewish betrothal was legally binding and required a divorce for termination (Mt 1:18-20). Purity within the betrothal period was taken seriously, and the father of the bride was responsible for his daughter's chastity. Paul views himself like a father of the Corinthian church and is jealous for its purity.

11:3-4 Paul draws a parallel between the deception of Eve by the serpent (Gn 3:1-6) and the Corinthians' acceptance of another Jesus, a different spirit, or a different gospel. Such falsehoods are inspired by the evil one and will seduce the Corinthians away from a sincere and pure devotion to Christ. See "Spiritual Warfare," p. 1454; "The Bible and Intellectual Pursuit," p. 1512.

11:5-9 "Super-apostles" is an ironic, even sarcastic, term for those who oppose Paul with a high view of themselves. Paul did not prove his importance in the way that traveling preachers of the day did—with impressive rhetoric, charging high fees, and self-exaltation. As a result, some said he was untrained (1Co 2:1-4).

11:13-15 Their reliance on rhetorical technique, self-confidence, and human glory reveals these "super-apostles" (v. 5) to be, in fact, false apostles. Just as Satan disguises himself as an angel of light, so they present themselves as servants of righteousness. They are not (see also "Satan and Demons," p. 1611). In keeping with Jewish and Christian expectation, their judgment will be according to their works (Ps 62:12; Rm 2:6-8).

11:16-21 Paul is in the difficult situation of needing to defend his apostleship (and thus the gospel he has preached), without exalting himself as his opponents have done. Thus, he says he will engage in foolish boasting since they seem to put up with fools (the false teachers) so well.

11:22-33 When Paul goes to "boast" he turns quickly to his sufferings and weaknesses rather than his accomplishments. These constitute his credentials as a preacher of the wisdom of the cross, in which apparent weakness is in fact the power of God for salvation (1Co 1:18).

SUFFICIENT GRACE

12 Boasting is necessary. It is not profitable, but I will move on to visions † and revelations † of the Lord.

THE HOLY TRINITY

The word trinity (from the Latin term trinitas) is mentioned nowhere in the Bible, but the doctrine of the Trinity is thoroughly biblical. The Christian church confesses with the people of Israel, "The LORD our God, the LORD is One" (Dt 6:4), the famous Shema Israel affirmed that was quoted by Jesus himself (see Mk 12:29-39). Jesus believed and taught the oneness of God as foundational to his own messianic vocation. And in the NT the one, eternal, and living God of the Bible, the only real God, is further revealed as three personal agents: the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit. Together these agents plan, provide, and perform the salvation of sinners.

To be sure, the doctrine of the Trinity is foreshadowed in the OT. Genesis opens on a triadic note: "In the beginning God created . . . and the Spirit of God was hovering over the surface of the waters. Then God said, 'Let there be light'" (Gn 1:1-3). Even the plural form of God's name, Elohim, sometimes coupled with a singular verb, while not a proof of the Trinity as such, does "point indirectly," as Tom Oden wrote, "to some mysterious plurality in the intra-subjectivity of God."

If the doctrine of the Trinity is budding in the OT, it bursts into full flower in the New. Here, self-differentiation in God is presented with unmistakable clarity through the incarnation. Nowhere is this more clearly shown than in the baptism of Jesus. There the voice of the Father from heaven identified the One being baptized by John in the Jordan as his beloved Son, while the Spirit of God descended like a dove, attesting to the unique Sonship of Christ and inaugurating his public ministry (Mt 3:13-17). Subsequently, Jesus commanded his disciples to be baptized in the one name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit (Mt 28:19-20). John Chrysostom put it well in writing that the NT teaches that the Father is God, the Son is God, the Spirit is God, and God is One.

The mature doctrine of the Trinity that came to full expression in the classic creeds of the fourth century was a necessary implication of Christian conversion in the first. Just as the Father sent his Son into the world, so too he has sent into our hearts his Spirit—who is the Spirit of the Son no less than the Spirit of the Father (Gl 4:4-6). It is the Spirit who places the believer in Christ, and it is the Spirit who cries out to the Father, on behalf of the believer, that special word of familial intimacy Jesus used when addressing God: "Abba" (Rm 8:15-17). In other words, through believing in Jesus, being baptized in God's triune name, and communing with the risen Christ in the Lord's Supper, the early Christians came to know and love increasingly the one eternal God—the Father who had sent his Spirit-conceived Son to die on the cross for their sins. This is the same Father who also sent the Spirit of his risen Son into their hearts, giving them a new life fit for eternity.

The doctrine of the Trinity is the necessary theological framework for understanding the story of Jesus as the story of God. The church's teaching about the Trinity bears witness to both the OT affirmation, "God is One," and the NT confession, "Jesus is Lord." It is not surprising, however, given the complex nature of the doctrine of the three-in-one God, that both God's oneness and his triune-ness have been doubted and denied and debated throughout the history of the church. Modalism teaches that Father, Son, and Holy Spirit are simply names or roles taken by one person at different moments in time, as if our Maker is an actor who plays three parts in a multi-act drama. Tritheism goes to another extreme, positing three deities working together in a cluster. Neither view is faithful to the Bible's teaching about God.

The doctrine of the Trinity was forged on the anvil of the church's encounters with heresy. In the second century, Marcion proposed that the entire OT be expunged from the Bible as the antiquated revelation of a Jewish deity made irrelevant by the coming of Jesus. The church of that time responded wisely, claiming the OT as Christian Scripture and by declaring that the Father of Jesus was none other than the God of Israel. In doing so, the church affirmed a fundamental connection between creation and redemption.

Several centuries later, a man named Arius denied both the lordship and deity of Jesus Christ. In AD 325 the church responded at the Council of Nicaea that the One Christians adored and loved in their worship—Jesus the Redeemer—was of the same essence (homoousios) as the Father.

Later, there arose others known as the Pneumatomachi, "the Spirit-fighters," who understood the Holy Spirit as a force, an energy, a power—but not God. Against those who thus denied the deity of the Holy Spirit, the church declared that God is one in essence and three in persons. The Holy Spirit is a person in eternal relationship with the Father and the Son—one God forever and ever. Edward Cooper put it this way in his 1805 hymn, "Father of Heaven, Whose Love Profound": Jehovah! Father, Spirit, Son, mysterious Godhead, Three in One, Before Thy throne we sinners bend; grace, pardon, life, to us extend.

One of the most serious challenges to the doctrine of the Trinity came with the rise of Islam. In Islam, the principle of tawhid, which means "unity," is defined as a kind of oneness marked by the solitary character of the being of God—that is, Unitarianism. But the unity of God cannot be reduced to a unit.

On the contrary, in the biblical view, relationship is constitutive for God himself: the Father gives, the Son obediently receives, and the Holy Spirit proceeds from both of them. John of Damascus used the beautiful Greek word perichoresis to describe the personality and mutuality of the three divine persons. In the eternal and blessed intercommunion of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit, the one true God is united without confusion and divided without separation. The doctrine of the Trinity is crucial for understanding the biblical God of holiness and love.

The Holy Trinity is not a puzzle to be solved; it is a mystery to be adored. The doctrine of the Trinity, though infinitely complex, is not a matter for philosophical speculation but rather an essential teaching of the faith that evokes wonder, love, and praise. The doctrine should not only be believed, but also taught, preached, and made central in every act of public worship.

We can never fully fathom or comprehend completely the reality of the God who is one-in-three and three-in-one; nevertheless, we can confess our Trinitarian faith joyfully, reverently, and with a sense of humility. To sing, pray, and worship the one triune God of holiness and love is to bridge heaven and earth. The white-robed throng of saints and martyrs gathered around the throne of God join their voices with other heavenly beings to sing, day and night: "Holy, holy, holy, Lord God, the Almighty, who was, who is, and who is to come" (Rv 4:8; 7:9-17). Those of us still in this world are invited to join their chorus and to add our voices to theirs, proclaiming the truths shared by Reginald Heber in his famous hymn of 1826: Holy,

Holy, Holy! Lord God Almighty!
All Thy works shall praise Thy name in earth and sky and sea.
Holy, Holy, Holy! Merciful and mighty!
God in three persons, blessed Trinity.

TIMOTHY GEORGE

2 I know a man in Christ who was caught up † to the third heaven fourteen years ago. Whether he was in the body or out of the body, I don't know; God knows. 3 I know that this man — whether in the body or out of the body I don't beyond what he sees in me or hears from me, 7 especially because of the extraordinary revelations. Therefore, so that I would not exalt myself, a thorn in the flesh † was given to me, a messenger of Satan † to torment me so that I would not exalt myself. 8 Concerning this, I pleaded with the Lord three times that it would leave me. 9 But he said to me, "My grace is sufficient for you, for my power † is perfected in weakness." †

Therefore, I will most gladly boast all the more about my weaknesses, so that Christ's power may reside in me. 10 So I take pleasure in weaknesses, insults, hardships, persecutions, and in difficulties, for the sake of Christ. † For when I am weak, then I am strong. †

SIGNS OF AN APOSTLE

11 I have been a fool; you forced it on me. You ought to have commended me, since I am not in any way inferior to those "super-apostles," even though I am nothing. † 12 The signs † of an apostle † were performed with unfailing endurance among you, including signs and wonders † and miracles. † 13 So in what way are you worse off than the other churches, except that I personally did not burden you? Forgive me for this wrong!

PAUL'S CONCERN FOR THE CORINTHIANS

14 Look, I am ready to come to you this third time. † I will not burden you, since I am not seeking what is yours, but you. For children ought not save up for their parents, but parents for their children. 15 I will most gladly spend and be spent for you. † † If I love you more, am I to be loved less? 16 Now granted, I did not burden † you; yet sly as I am, I took you in by deceit! † 17 Did I take advantage of you by any of those I sent you? 18 I urged Titus † to go, and I sent the brother with him. Titus didn't take advantage of you, did he? Didn't we walk in the same spirit † and in the same footsteps?
19 Have you been thinking all along that we were defending ourselves to you?
No, in the sight of God we are speaking in Christ, and everything, dear friends, is for building you up. † 20 For I fear that perhaps when I come I will not find you to be what I want, and you may not find me to be what you want. Perhaps there will be quarreling, † jealousy, † angry outbursts, selfish ambitions, † slander, † gossip, arrogance, and disorder. † 21 I fear that when I come my God will again † humiliate me in your presence, and I will grieve for many who sinned before and have not repented † of the moral impurity, sexual immorality, † and sensuality † they practiced.

12:1 Boasting is necessary in this situation because Paul is forced to provide his credentials against those of the false teachers, who are leading people away from the true gospel.

12:2-4 The third heaven, or paradise, was a Jewish way of referring to the highest heaven—the abode of God. Paul had some sort of special, spiritual experience. He mentions it only here, in the third person, and it occurred fourteen years previously. Such experiences are not normal, nor essential. Paul mentions it only because he is pressed to prove his status.

12:4 Similar visionary accounts in Judaism focused on heavenly secrets being revealed to an individual, but Paul's experience involved inexpressible, non-human, words. This further underscores the uniqueness of the event.

12:7-9 We do not know exactly what this thorn in the flesh was. The reference to flesh has led some to posit a physical ailment. While the messenger of Satan has led others to point to the persecution Paul endured. Then again, both phrases could refer to a struggle with some kind of sin. Regardless, the point is that this suffering was allowed to keep Paul humble—and to remind him to trust in God rather than in himself. See “Christians and Suffering,” p. 580.

12:10 This verse articulates the central point of 2 Corinthians 10–13: it is in weakness that Christ’s power is mediated. Paul’s entire ministry has adopted a cruciform character, causing him to reject the symbols of success that the world values, and, sadly, that the Corinthians have valued.

12:11-12 Paul finally speaks plainly about the matter at hand. He is not in any way inferior to those “super-apostles” and the Corinthians’ assessment of Paul is completely off. They have valued worldly markers of strength and success, while Paul has exhibited the power of Christ through weakness.

FINAL WARNINGS AND EXHORTATIONS

13 This is the third time I am coming to you. † Every matter must be established by the testimony of two or three witnesses. † † 2 I gave a warning when I was present the second time, and now I give a warning † while I am absent to those who sinned before and to all the rest: If I come again, I will not be lenient, 3 since you seek proof of Christ speaking in me. † He is not weak in dealing with you, but powerful among you. 4 For he was crucified † in weakness, but he lives † by the power of God. For we also are weak in him, † but in dealing with you we will live † with him by God’s power.

5 Test † yourselves to see if you are in the faith. Examine yourselves. Or do you yourselves not recognize that Jesus Christ is in you? — unless you fail the test. † 6 And I hope you will recognize that we ourselves do not fail the test. 7 But we pray to God that you do nothing wrong — not that we may appear to pass the test, but that you may do what is right, † even though we may appear to fail. 8 For we can’t do anything against the truth, † but only for the truth. 9 We rejoice when we are weak and you are strong. † We also pray that you become fully mature. † 10 This is why I am writing these things while absent, so that when I am there I may not have to deal harshly with you, in keeping with the authority the Lord gave me for building up † and not for tearing down. †

11 Finally, brothers and sisters, rejoice. † Become mature, be encouraged, † be of the same mind, † be at peace, † and the God of love † and peace will be with you. 12 Greet one another with a holy kiss. † All the saints send you greetings.

13 The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the love † of God, and the fellowship of the Holy Spirit be with you all. † †

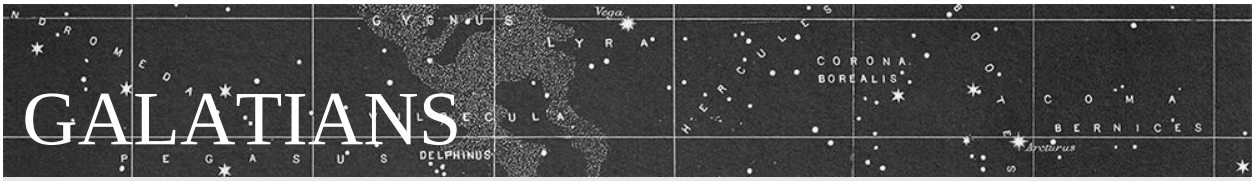
13:1-4 In his previous visit to Corinth, Paul was gentle toward those in rebellion and this was seen as weakness. Since they have now been warned twice, Paul is prepared to act powerfully by rebuking them and applying discipline on his return visit.

13:5 While the Corinthians have been happy to assess Paul, they need to examine themselves. Self-scrutiny was a popular tool among Greek philosophers, used to improve conduct. Clearly there is room for improvement in the conduct of the Corinthians, but here Paul is concerned with whether or not they are in the faith—whether Jesus Christ is in them. Conduct hardly matters if they do not really have Christ.



GALATIANS

INTRODUCTION

Galatians, which may be the earliest of Paul's letters, is also his most intense. It gives us a strong presentation of the truth that sinners are justified and live godly lives by trusting in Jesus alone.

CIRCUMSTANCES OF WRITING

AUTHOR: The author's name is "Paul," and he claims to be "an apostle" of Christ (Gl 1:1). The autobiographical information in the letter is consistent with what is known about the apostle Paul from Acts and his other letters. Theologically, everything in Galatians agrees with Paul's views elsewhere, notably in Romans.

BACKGROUND: It is not certain where the Galatian churches were located or when Paul wrote Galatians. The reason is that, during the NT era, the term Galatians was used both ethnically and politically. If "Galatians" is understood ethnically, the founding of the Galatian churches is only implied in the NT. On Paul's second missionary journey, he "went through the region of Phrygia and Galatia" (Ac 16:6) in north central Asia Minor (near the modern capital of Turkey—Ankara). His later visit to the same general area is recorded in Acts 18:23 and 19:1. This is where a group from Gaul (modern France) invaded in the third century BC, and it became known as Galatia.

Understood politically, "Galatians" can refer to those living in the southern part of the Roman province of Galatia. That region included the cities of Pisidian Antioch, Iconium, Lystra, and Derbe, where Paul worked to plant churches, as recorded in Acts 13:14–14:23.

The view that Galatians was written to the area where the ethnic Galatians lived is called the "North Galatian" theory. The possible dates of writing related to this understanding range from AD 52 or 53, if shortly after the second missionary journey, to AD 56, if written about the same time as Romans, to which it is similar theologically.

The view that Galatians was sent to churches in the southern portion of the Roman province of Galatia is known as the "South Galatian" theory. Some holding this view date Galatians in the early 50s, but others as early as AD 48 or 49, before the Jerusalem Council, which is usually dated to about AD 49. If the earlier date here is correct, Galatians is among the earliest of the NT books.

Another key consideration is comparing the basis of contention in Galatians to the topic of debate at the Jerusalem Council. The problem addressed in Galatians is that "the works of the law" of Moses (2:16-17; 3:2; cp. 5:4), notably circumcision (5:2; 6:12-13), were added by some teachers to what was required in being justified before God. This is the same issue that Acts records as the reason why the Jerusalem Council met (Ac 15:1,5), supporting the idea that the existing problem in the Galatian churches was part of the reason for the Jerusalem Council.

If Galatians was written after the Jerusalem Council, it is inconceivable that Paul would not have cited the conclusions of the council, which supported his works-free view of the gospel. This strongly implies that the Jerusalem Council had not yet occurred when Paul wrote Galatians.

CONTRIBUTION TO THE BIBLE

There is much about the life and movements of the apostle Paul that is only known—or filled in significantly—from Galatians 1:13–2:14 (and the personal glimpse in 4:13-14). Among these factors are Paul's sojourn in "Arabia" (1:17) and descriptions of two trips to Jerusalem (1:18-19; 2:1-10). Paul described a confrontation with Peter (2:11-14) that is mentioned nowhere else in the NT.

In the middle third of Galatians, certain aspects of the gospel's OT background are explained in unique ways. Notable are: (1) the curse related to Jesus being crucified, as cited from Deuteronomy 21:23 (Gl 3:13); (2) Jesus fulfilling the prophecy of the singular physical "seed" of Abraham (3:16; see Gn 22:18); (3) the roles of the law as prison (3:22-23) and guardian (3:24-25) until Christ; and (4) the extended allegory of the slave and free sons of Abraham (4:21-31).

Galatians tells us much about the ministry of the Holy Spirit in relation to the Christian life. After the Spirit's role in the ministry of adoption (4:5-6), believers are commanded to "walk by the Spirit" (5:16), be "led by the Spirit" (5:18) and "keep in step with the Spirit" (5:25), as well as "sow to the Spirit" and "reap" the related eternal harvest (6:8). The moment-by-moment outcome of that kind of sensitivity to the ministry of the Holy Spirit is what is meant by "the fruit of the Spirit" (5:22-23).

STRUCTURE

The book of Galatians follows the typical pattern for a first-century letter, with the exception of the element of thanksgiving: salutation (1:1-5), the main body (1:6–6:15), and a farewell (6:16-18). Contrasting concepts are prominent in the letter: divine revelation vs. human insight, grace vs. law, justification vs. condemnation, Jerusalem vs. Mount Sinai, sonship vs. slavery, the fruit of the Spirit vs. the works of the flesh, and liberty vs. bondage.

CHRISTIAN WORLDVIEW ELEMENTS

TEACHINGS ABOUT GOD

God is the Father of Jesus who brings about all things related to salvation (including setting apostles apart for service, 1:15). Jesus is the Son of God by whose death righteousness is provided (2:21). The Holy Spirit is given to all believers, enabling them to subdue "the flesh" and to grow in Christian character—"the fruit of the Spirit" (chap. 5).

TEACHINGS ABOUT HUMANITY

Galatians contrasts two kinds of people in the world. First, there are those under God's curse (3:10). This includes persons who suppose that they can attain salvation by doing good works. They are doomed to live according to the evil works of the flesh and will not be part of God's kingdom. Second, there are those who, by God's grace, have been set free from the curse by faith in Christ who bore the curse by his death (3:13). Such persons live according to the Spirit's power and will "reap eternal life" (6:8).

TEACHINGS ABOUT SALVATION

Galatians stands as Paul's passionate testimony that salvation is a gift of God's grace. It is unearned and undeserved and must be received by faith alone. Paul is careful not to turn faith into a work, for he argues that "faith came" (3:23-25) to those who were helpless slaves (see also Eph 2:8; Php 1:29). This view of salvation so strongly gripped the apostle that if someone offered a different doctrine, let "a curse be on him" (1:8).

GALATIANS TIMELINE

300 BC–AD 33

The Galatians, Celts of European origins, invade Asia Minor. 278 BC

Mark Antony and Pompey reward the Galatians with additional territory for supporting Rome in its wars against the Mithridates. 63–36 BC

Amyntas, king of Galatia, wills his kingdom to Rome at his death. 25 BC

Jesus's trials, death, resurrection, and ascension NISAN 14–16 or APRIL 3–5, AD 33

AD 34–46

Saul's conversion on the Damascus Road OCTOBER 34

Paul returns to his native Tarsus. 37–40

Barnabas travels from Antioch of Syria to find Paul. SUMMER 40

Barnabas and Saul serve together in Antioch. 41

Emperor Caligula is murdered by members of his Praetorian Guard. Claudius succeeds him as emperor. 41

Judea experiences severe famine. 46

AD 41–49

Paul, Barnabas, and John Mark make their first missionary journey. 47–49

From Syrian Antioch, Paul writes his letter to the Galatians, assuming the destination of the letter was the churches of southern Galatia: Iconium, Lystra, and Derbe. 49

Barnabas and Paul travel from Antioch to Jerusalem for the conference dealing with the question of whether Gentiles had to be circumcised in order to be saved. 49

Paul and Barnabas part ways over the question of whether John Mark should be allowed to join them on a second missionary journey. 49

AD 49–51

Paul and Silas team up for an overland journey to revisit cities of south Galatia as the first segment of Paul's second missionary journey. 49

Timothy joins Paul and Silas as they travel through north Galatia to Troas. 49

Paul, Silas, and Timothy sail from Troas to Macedonia, planting the church in Philippi. 50

Paul and his companions move from Philippi to Thessalonica and Berea. 50

As a result of much persecution, Paul and his companions split up, with Paul going to Corinth by way of Athens. 50–51

GREETING

1 Paul, † an apostle — not from men or by man, but by Jesus Christ and God the Father † who raised him from the dead † — 2 and all the brothers who are with me: To the churches of Galatia. †

3 Grace to you and peace from God the Father and our Lord † Jesus Christ, 4 who gave himself for our sins † to rescue us from this present evil age, † according to the will of our God and Father. † 5 To him be the glory forever and ever. Amen.

NO OTHER GOSPEL

6 I am amazed that you are so quickly turning away from him who called † you by the grace of Christ and are turning to a different gospel — 7 not that there is another gospel, † but there are some † who are troubling you and want to distort the gospel of Christ. 8 But even if we or an angel † from heaven should preach to you a gospel contrary to what we have preached to you, † a curse be on him! † 9 As we have said before, I now say again: If anyone is preaching to you a gospel contrary to what you received, † a curse be on him!
10 For am I now trying to persuade people, † or God? † Or am I striving to please people? If I were still trying to please people, I would not be a servant of Christ.

PAUL DEFENDS HIS APOSTLESHIP

11 For I want you to know, brothers and sisters, that the gospel preached by me is not of human origin. 12 For I did not receive it from a human source and I was not taught it, but it came by a revelation † of Jesus Christ. † 13 For you have heard about my former way of life † in Judaism: † I intensely persecuted † God's church and tried to destroy it. 14 I advanced in Judaism beyond many contemporaries among my people, because I was extremely zealous for the traditions of my ancestors. † 15 But when God, who from my mother's womb set me apart and called † me by his grace, was pleased 16 to reveal his Son † in me, so that I could preach him among the Gentiles, I did not immediately consult with anyone. † 17 I did not go up to Jerusalem † to those who had become apostles † before me; instead I went to Arabia † and came back to Damascus. †

18 Then after three years I did go up to Jerusalem † to get to know Cephas, † † and I stayed with him fifteen days. 19 But I didn't see any of the other apostles except James, † the Lord's brother. 20 I declare in the sight of God: I am not lying in what I write to you.

21 Afterward, I went to the regions of Syria † and Cilicia. † 22 I remained personally unknown to the Judean churches that are in Christ. 23 They simply kept hearing: "He who formerly persecuted † us now preaches the faith † he once tried to destroy." 24 And they glorified God because of me. †

1:4 Paul refers to the current time as this present evil age because Satan has ascendancy in this fallen world. Jesus has come to rescue us and to inaugurate the coming age in which evil will be destroyed and the rule of Christ will be complete.

1:6 From Paul's other letters we would expect a thanksgiving here. Instead this letter begins with rebuke, indicating the seriousness of the situation—the Galatians are turning to a different gospel.

1:8-9 It is a serious matter to change or distort the gospel. Paul's gospel came by "a revelation of Jesus Christ" (1:12), meaning it is not a human invention. The authority of the gospel does not rest with Paul—if he, or even an angel from heaven should preach a different gospel, they are not to be believed. The curse to which Paul refers is the final judgment of God producing damnation.

1:11–2:10 This entire section is intended to support the claim of 1:11-12—that Paul's gospel is not of human origin but came by a revelation of Jesus Christ. After his encounter with the risen Christ (Acts 9,22,26), Paul did not immediately consult with anyone (1:16), and only met the apostles years later (1:18; 2:1). His gospel was not derived from others or taught to him; it came directly from Christ.

1:11-12 The authority of Paul's message does not rest on his credentials (cp. 1:8), even though he is an apostle appointed by Jesus Christ (1:1). Even the apostle Peter could be mistaken (2:11), so apostleship is not the final authority. Christ is the One who has authorized the gospel that Paul preached.

1:15 Like the prophets Isaiah (Is 49:1) and Jeremiah (Jr 1:5), Paul was appointed a spokesman for God before he was born.

1:17 This period was not simply a time of meditation. Paul immediately began preaching in Damascus (Ac 9:20), and the mention of Arabia refers to the incident recorded in 2 Corinthians 11:32-33, indicating that Paul's preaching had led to persecution.

1:18 Cephas is the Aramaic name for Peter. In this letter Paul switches back and forth between these two names for the same person.

PAUL DEFENDS HIS GOSPEL AT JERUSALEM

2 Then after fourteen years I went up again † to Jerusalem with Barnabas, † taking Titus † along also. 2 I went up according to a revelation † and presented to them the gospel I preach among the Gentiles, but privately to those recognized as leaders. I wanted to be sure I was not running, and had not been running, in vain. 3 But not even Titus, who was with me, was compelled to be circumcised, even though he was a Greek. 4 This matter arose because some false brothers † had infiltrated our ranks to spy on the freedom we have in Christ Jesus in order to enslave us. 5 But we did not give up and submit to these people for even a moment, so that the truth † of the gospel would be preserved for you.

6 Now from those recognized as important (what they † once were makes no difference to me; God does not show favoritism † †) — they added nothing to me. 7 On the contrary, they saw that I had been entrusted with the gospel for the uncircumcised, † just as Peter † was for the circumcised, 8 since the one at work in Peter for an apostleship to the circumcised was also at work in me for the Gentiles. 9 When James, † Cephas, † † and John † — those recognized as pillars † — acknowledged the grace that had been given to me, they gave the right hand of fellowship to me and Barnabas, agreeing that we should go to the Gentiles and they to the circumcised. 10 They asked only that we would remember the poor, † which I had made every effort to do.

FREEDOM FROM THE LAW

11 But when Cephas † came to Antioch, I opposed him to his face because he stood condemned. † 12 For he regularly ate with the Gentiles before certain men came from James. However, when they came, he withdrew and separated himself, because he feared those from the circumcision party. 13 Then the rest of the Jews † joined his hypocrisy, † so that even Barnabas was led astray by their hypocrisy. 14 But when I saw that they were deviating from the truth of the gospel, I told Cephas † in front of everyone, “If you, who are a Jew, live like a

Gentile † and not like a Jew, † how can you compel Gentiles to live † like Jews? " †

15 We are Jews by birth and not "Gentile sinners," 16 and yet because we know that a person is not justified by the works of the law † but by faith in Jesus Christ, † even we ourselves have believed in Christ Jesus. This was so that we might be justified by faith in Christ † and not by the works of the law, because by the works of the law no human being will † be justified. 17 But if we ourselves are also found to be "sinners" while seeking to be justified by Christ, † is Christ then a promoter † † of sin? Absolutely not! † 18 If I rebuild † those things that I tore down, I show myself to be a lawbreaker. †

19 For through the law I died to the law, † so that I might live for God. † 20 I have been crucified with Christ, and I no longer live, but Christ lives in me. † The life I now live in the body, † I live by faith in the Son of God, † who loved † me † and gave himself † for me. † 21 I do not set aside the grace of God, for if righteousness comes through the law, † then Christ died † for nothing.

2:3 Paul has been preaching that salvation comes by faith alone, and thus Gentiles need not be circumcised. The apostles in Jerusalem affirmed this since Titus, a Greek (or Gentile), was not required to be circumcised.

2:7 Paul's primary task was taking the gospel to the uncircumcised Gentiles, while Peter's was primarily to the circumcised Jews. Nevertheless, Paul did preach to Jews (Ac 13:13-43) and Peter also preached to Gentiles (Ac 10). This was a primary focus, but not an exclusive one.

2:9 Pillars was a term used by the Jews for leading teachers. These pillars supported the church, or temple of God, by their apostolic teaching.

2:10 Care for the poor is a significant concern throughout Scripture. Paul brought funds for poverty stricken Christians in Jerusalem (Ac 11:27-30) and continued to gather a collection for these believers (Rm 15:22-29; 1Co 16:1-4; 2Co 8:1–9:15).

2:11-14 It is extraordinary that Paul so sharply criticizes Cephas (Peter), but the heart of the matter is the integrity of the gospel. The presenting situation was the matter of table fellowship between Jews and Gentiles. That is, should Jewish and Gentile Christians eat together? Jews typically did not associate with Gentiles in order to preserve their ethnic and religious purity, and eating together was a sign of close fellowship (That is why Jesus was criticized for eating with sinners; Lk 15:2). Paul will go on to argue that both Jews and Gentiles are justified by faith, not by works or ethnic heritage. The gospel, therefore, eliminates the barriers between Jews and Gentiles, and Cephas should not hesitate to eat with anyone in Christ.

2:15 Paul is not saying that Jews have not sinned (see 2:17). Jews commonly referred to non-Jews as Gentile sinners.

2:16 The crux of Paul's message in this letter is that no one, Jew or Gentile, is justified by the works of the law. All are justified by faith in Christ. In this way, there is no distinction between Jew and Greek (3:28).

2:18 Those things that I tore down likely refers to the law of Moses. Paul razed the law by preaching that it is no longer binding, having been fulfilled by Christ. Salvation comes by faith in Christ alone.

2:19 Paul died to the law because he has been crucified with Christ. Christ redeemed us from the curse of the law by his crucifixion (3:13), paying the penalty that the law demanded for sin. By Paul's participation with Christ, he can say he has also died (with Christ) to the law.

2:20 Because Paul has been crucified with Christ, the "old Paul" no longer lives. His new life is powered by Christ in him and is lived by faith.

JUSTIFICATION THROUGH FAITH

3 You foolish † Galatians! Who has cast a spell on you, † before whose eyes Jesus Christ was publicly portrayed † as crucified? † 2 I only want to learn this from you: Did you receive the Spirit by the works of the law or by believing what you heard? † 3 Are you so foolish? After beginning by the Spirit, are you now finishing by the flesh? 4 Did you experience † † so much for nothing — if in fact it was for nothing?

EQUALITY OF THE SEXES

In the biblical account of creation there is a complete equality between men and women; neither sex is given prominence over the other, a truth related to the fact that male and female are both created in God's image. Further, Scripture teaches that in the redeemed state of those who are "in Christ" there is neither male nor female (Gl 3:28), another nod to the equality of the sexes. We cannot, however, bypass the teaching that a distinction between the roles or functions carried out by women and men is addressed in Genesis 2:18-25.

We must acknowledge that women have at times been regarded as second-class members of the human race—not by God's design but as a result of the fall. Beginning with the creation narrative, there are indications that women and men are equal in God's sight. In Genesis 1:26-27 we find clear teaching that women, as well as men, possess the image of God. This passage declares that mankind who was created in the divine image is both male and female, for both sexes bear the image of their Creator. But both women and men have sinned, falling short of the glory of God (Gn 3; Rm 3:23).

The attitude of Jesus toward women is quite telling. Mary and Martha were members of Jesus's circle of friends. Jesus demonstrated care and concern for the Samaritan woman at the well (Jn 4). He commended the faith of a woman suffering from hemorrhage (Mt 9:20-22), as well as the devotion of the woman who anointed him at Bethany (Mt 26:6-13). Following his resurrection, Jesus first appeared to women and commissioned them to tell the disciples the good news that he was risen (Jn 20:14-18).

As we previously noted, women are equal with men in redemption. It should be observed that the Galatians 3 passage is a reference to equality in salvation, in the righteous standing individuals enjoy before God when they place saving faith in Christ; it was not intended to address matters of service within the church. All who are in union with Christ, who have been baptized in Christ, have put on Christ (Gl 3:27). Women, like men, are recipients of the gifts of God's Spirit (Rm 12; 1Co 12–14). The Spirit came on women and men at Pentecost (Ac 2), and brought salvation to women like Lydia (Ac 16), as well as the daughters of Philip (Ac 21).

Questions related to service and leadership are raised by passages that restrict women in certain roles (1Co 11:3-16; 14:33-38; 1Tm 2:8-15). Still, in both the OT and the NT, there are examples of women in key roles. These persons include Deborah, (Jdg 4–5), Esther, Mary (Ac 1), Priscilla (Ac 18), Phoebe (Rm 16), and Chloe (1Co 1), to name a few.

Men and women are granted a position of unusual dignity and significance throughout Scripture. The roles of wife, mother, and educator, which are often given to women in the Bible, are seen as honorable roles. The woman in Proverbs 31 is praised for active service outside of the home as well as within it. Women, as well as men, have a glorious place and destiny in God's plan and purpose. Symbolically, the church, which includes the redeemed women and men throughout the ages, is represented in the concluding book of the Bible as a woman, the bride of Christ. We celebrate the wonderful news that men and women have been redeemed in Christ and that men and women have been gifted for service for the glory of God.

DAVID S. DOCKERY

5 So then, does God give you the Spirit and work miracles † among you by your doing the works of the law? Or is it by believing what you heard — 6 just like Abraham who believed God, † and it was credited to him for righteousness? † †

7 You know, then, that those who have faith, these are Abraham's sons. † 8 Now the Scripture saw in advance that God would justify the Gentiles by faith and proclaimed the gospel ahead of time to Abraham, † saying, All the nations † will be blessed through you. † † 9 Consequently those who have faith are blessed with Abraham, † who had faith. †

LAW AND PROMISE

10 For all who rely on the works of the law are under a curse, † because it is written, † Everyone who does not do everything written in the book of the law is cursed. † † 11 Now it is clear that no one is justified before God by the law, because the righteous will live † by faith. † † 12 But the law is not based on faith; instead, the one who does these things will live by them. † † 13 Christ redeemed us from the curse of the law by becoming a curse for us, † because it is written, Cursed is everyone who is hung on a tree. † † 14 The purpose was that the blessing of Abraham would come to the Gentiles by Christ Jesus, so that we could receive the promised Spirit through faith. †

15 Brothers and sisters, I'm using a human illustration. No one sets aside or makes additions to a validated human will. † 16 Now the promises were spoken to Abraham and to his seed. He does not say "and to seeds," as though referring to many, but referring to one, and to your seed, † † who is Christ. 17 My point is this: The law, which came 430 years later, † does not invalidate a covenant previously established by God † and thus cancel the promise. 18 For if the inheritance is based on the law, it is no longer based on the promise; but God has graciously given it to Abraham through the promise.

THE PURPOSE OF THE LAW

19 Why then was the law given? † It was added for the sake of transgressions † until the Seed to whom the promise was made would come. The law was put into effect through angels † by means of a mediator. † 20 Now a mediator is not just for one person alone, but God is one. † 21 Is the law therefore contrary to God's promises? Absolutely not! For if the law had been granted with the ability to give life, then righteousness would certainly be on the basis of the law. 22 But the Scripture imprisoned everything under sin's power, † † so that the promise might be given on the basis of faith † in Jesus Christ to those who believe. †

23 Before this faith † came, we were confined under the law, imprisoned until the coming faith was revealed. † 24 The law, then, was our guardian until Christ, † so that we could be justified by faith. 25 But since that faith † has come, we are no longer under a guardian, 26 for through faith you are all sons of God in Christ Jesus.

SONS AND HEIRS

27 For those of you who were baptized into Christ have been clothed with Christ. † 28 There is no Jew or Greek, slave or free, † male and female; † since you are all one † in Christ Jesus. 29 And if you belong to Christ, then you are Abraham's seed, heirs † according to the promise. †

3:1 Paul asks who has cast a spell on the Galatians, referring to the influence of evil spells. Paul is speaking metaphorically to say that the Galatians are acting as though they have been bewitched, causing them to miss the significance of Christ's work.

3:2-6 Paul's questions are intended to show that the Galatians' own effort, or works of the law, has achieved nothing. The Spirit was received by faith; miracles were performed by God not by works of the law; and Abraham was credited with righteousness by faith (not by effort).

3:7-9 Paul undermines Jewish ethnic privilege by declaring that those who have faith . . . are Abraham's sons. This realigns the heritage of the patriarch so that Jews would not simply trust in their biological relation to Abraham as guaranteeing their status before God. Rather, Paul draws on Genesis 12:3 to argue that God always intended to justify the Gentiles by faith. Just as Abraham had faith and it was credited to him as righteousness (3:6; Gn 15:6), so Gentiles with faith are blessed with Abraham.

3:10-14 Paul draws on Scripture to show that the law condemns, since no one keeps it perfectly, but faith brings life (Dt 27:26; Hab 2:4). Christ has dealt with the penalty for sin that the law demands by becoming a curse for us (Dt 21:23). Because of his sin sacrifice, Gentiles may receive the blessing of Abraham and the Spirit through faith in Christ.

3:16 Paul draws on the promises made to Abraham and to his seed (Gn 12:7)—"To your offspring (seed) I will give this land"—and interprets the seed to refer to Christ. He will go on to argue that those in Christ are the true inheritors of the promises to Abraham, rather than his physical descendants.

3:17 The promises to Abraham are not superseded by the law, which came 430 years later. In other words, the law does not overshadow the promise, just as the works of the law do not supplant faith.

3:19 The law was given for the sake of transgressions, meaning that its primary purpose was to convict humanity of sin until the Seed (Christ) . . . would come (3:21-23; cp. Rm 3:19-20). The mediator refers to Moses, while the reference to angels reflects Jewish traditions associating angels with the giving of the law.

3:24-25 The law . . . was our guardian until Christ. The word guardian refers to a "boy-leader"—usually a slave who had responsibility to conduct a boy to and from school, and for his general behavior. Once the boy became of age, the guardian was no longer needed. Paul likens the law to such a guardian. It is the baby-sitter of God's people until they come of age with the coming of Christ. In this way faith takes the place of the law.

3:26 To be a son was to enjoy the status of privilege. The son was the inheritor of his father's estate, and unlike a slave, the son was an honored member of the family. In Christ Jesus, even Gentiles become heirs of God through the promises to Abraham. See also "A Biblical View of Adoption," p. 1367.

3:28 Believers are united as one in Christ. Social distinctions and status no longer separate them. Gender and ethnicity are not eradicated, but they do not divide the body of Christ.

4 Now I say that as long as the heir † is a child, he differs in no way from a slave, though he is the owner † of everything. 2 Instead, he is under guardians and trustees until the time set by his father. 3 In the same way we also, when we were children, were in slavery under the elements † of the world. † 4 When the time came to completion, God sent his Son, † born of a woman, † born under the law, 5 to redeem those under the law, so that we might receive adoption as sons. † 6 And because you are sons, God sent the Spirit of his Son † into our † hearts, crying, "Abba, † Father!" † 7 So you are no longer a slave † but a son, † and if a son, then God has made you an heir. †

PAUL'S CONCERN FOR THE GALATIANS

8 But in the past, since you didn't know God, † you were enslaved to things † that by nature are not gods. 9 But now, since you know God, † or rather have become known by God, how can you turn back again to the weak and worthless † elements? † Do you want to be enslaved to them all over again?
10 You are observing special days, months, seasons, and years. † 11 I am fearful for you, that perhaps my labor for you has been wasted.
12 I beg you, brothers and sisters: Become like me, for I also became like you.
You have not wronged me; 13 you know † that previously I preached the gospel to you because of a weakness of the flesh. 14 You did not despise or reject me though my physical condition was a trial for you. † On the contrary, you received me as an angel of God, as Christ Jesus himself.

15 Where, then, is your blessing? For I testify to you that, if possible, you would have torn out your eyes and given them to me. 16 So then, have I become your enemy because I told you the truth? † 17 They court you eagerly, but not for good. They want to exclude you from me, so that you would pursue them. 18 But it is always good to be pursued † in a good manner — and not just when I am with you. 19 My children, † I am again suffering labor pains † for you until Christ is formed in you. 20 I would like to be with you right now and change my tone of voice, because I don't know what to do about you.

SARAH AND HAGAR: TWO COVENANTS

21 Tell me, you who want to be under the law, don't you hear the law? 22 For it is written that Abraham † had two sons, one by a slave † and the other by a free woman. 23 But the one by the slave was born as a result of the flesh, while the one by the free woman was born through promise. 24 These things are being taken figuratively, for the women represent two covenants. One is from Mount Sinai † and bears children into slavery — this is Hagar. † 25 Now Hagar represents Mount Sinai in Arabia † and corresponds to the present Jerusalem, † for she is in slavery with her children. 26 But the Jerusalem above † is free, and she is our mother. 27 For it is written, †

Rejoice, childless woman, † unable to give birth.
Burst into song and shout, you who are not in labor, for the children of the desolate woman will be many, more numerous than those of the woman who has a husband. † †

28 Now you too, brothers and sisters, like Isaac, † are children of promise. †
29 But just as then the child born as a result of the flesh persecuted the one born as a result of the Spirit, † so also now. † 30 But what does the Scripture say? "Drive out the slave and her son, for the son of the slave will never be a coheir with the son of the free woman." † † 31 Therefore, brothers and sisters, we are not children of a slave but of the free woman. †

4:2 See the note on 3:24.

4:3 On elements, see the note on Colossians 2:8.

4:5-7 In the ancient world, typically only sons were heirs (see the note on 3:26). Paul states that all believers, Jews and Gentiles, men and women, have become sons of God in Christ Jesus; we are thus heirs.

4:10 Special days, months, seasons, and years refer to observances of the Jewish calendar. The Galatians' keeping of these observances suggests that they consider themselves still under law.

4:21-31 Paul engages in an extended typology, extracting a theological principle from the history of Abraham's two sons and applying it to his argument. Though Paul uses the word allegory (translated figuratively in v. 24), this is not an allegory of the type made famous by the Jewish philosopher, Philo of Alexandria, which downplayed the historical nature of the OT. The key point of the typology is that one of Abraham's sons was birthed by the free woman . . . born through promise (Isaac; 2:22; Gn 21:2), while the other was born of the slave woman Hagar as a result of the flesh (Ishmael; 2:23; Gn 16:5). The two women therefore represent two covenants—the old covenant that keeps people enslaved to sin under the law, and the new covenant that gives people freedom and sonship by faith in Christ. Children of the promise are therefore free and live by faith in the promise, while children of the flesh are slaves and live according to the law.

FREEDOM OF THE CHRISTIAN

5 For freedom, Christ set us free. Stand firm † then and don't submit again to a yoke of slavery. † 2 Take note! I, Paul, am telling you that if you get yourselves circumcised, Christ will not benefit you at all.
3 Again I testify to every man who gets himself circumcised that he is obligated to do the entire law. 4 You who are trying to be justified by the law are alienated from Christ; you have fallen from grace. † 5 For we eagerly await † through the Spirit, by faith, the hope † of righteousness. 6 For in Christ Jesus neither circumcision nor uncircumcision accomplishes anything; what matters is faith † working through love. †

7 You were running well. Who prevented you from being persuaded regarding the truth? † † 8 This persuasion does not come from the one who calls you. † 9 A little leaven † leavens the whole batch of dough. 10 I myself am persuaded in the Lord you will not accept any other view. But whoever it is that is confusing you will pay the penalty. † 11 Now brothers and sisters, if I still preach circumcision, why am I still persecuted? In that case the offense of the cross † has been abolished. 12 I wish those who are disturbing you might also let themselves be mutilated!
13 For you were called † to be free, brothers and sisters; only don't use this freedom as an opportunity † for the flesh, but serve one another through love.
14 For the whole law is fulfilled † in one statement: Love your neighbor as yourself. † † 15 But if you bite and devour † one another, watch out, or you will be consumed by one another.

THE SPIRIT VERSUS THE FLESH

16 I say then, walk by the Spirit † and you will certainly not carry out the desire of the flesh. 17 For the flesh desires † what is against the Spirit, and the Spirit desires what is against the flesh; these are opposed to each other, so that you don't do what you want. † 18 But if you are led by the Spirit, you are not under the law.
19 Now the works of the flesh are obvious: † sexual immorality, † moral impurity, † promiscuity, † 20 idolatry, † sorcery, † hatreds, † strife, † jealousy, † outbursts of anger, † selfish ambitions, † dissensions, † factions, † 21 envy, † † drunkenness, carousing, † and anything similar. I am warning you about these things — as I warned you before — that those who practice such things will not inherit the kingdom of God. † 22 But the fruit of the Spirit † is love, † joy, † peace, patience, † kindness, † goodness, faithfulness, 23 gentleness, † and self-control. † The law is not against such things. † 24 Now those who belong to Christ Jesus † have crucified the flesh † with its passions and desires. † 25 If we live † by the Spirit, let us also keep in step with the Spirit. [26] Let us not become conceited, provoking one another, envying one another. †

5:1 Political freedom is not in view here; freedom from the regulations of the law is. For instance, circumcision, though commanded in the law, now does no spiritual good (5:2).

5:3 There is no provision to keep only part of the law. The man who gets himself circumcised for the sake of keeping the law, therefore, is under the entire law. That means he will be a lawbreaker, since no one can keep the law (3:10).

5:9 Leaven (yeast) was commonly used as an illustration of sin in Jewish thought. As leaven permeates dough, this law-based thinking can easily infiltrate the church.

5:13 For freedom, Christ set us free (5:1), but this freedom is not a license for indulging the desires of the flesh. Instead, freedom should be harnessed for the exercise of love in service of one another.

5:14 Somewhat ironically, given the anti-law polemic of the letter, Paul appeals to Leviticus 19:18 to undergird his exhortation to love. As Jesus taught, love fulfills the law (Mt 22:34-40).

5:16 Walking by the Spirit means living according to the direction of the Spirit. Rather than living according to the instructions of the law, believers are indwelt by God himself. If we live in step with him, the desire of the flesh will not be followed.

5:17 Paul acknowledges that all believers will continue to experience tension between the flesh and the Spirit. This is caused by the overlap of the ages: the flesh belongs to this present evil age (1:4), while the Spirit belongs to the age to come (Eph 1:13-14). Until the resurrection of our bodies, believers will continue to experience this tension. Nevertheless, Paul exhorts Christians to follow the Spirit, not the flesh (6:8). See also “Do My Beliefs Fit a Christian Worldview?” p. 1461.

5:19-21 This vice list resembles several such lists found in the ancient world. It is representative of the works of the flesh, and is not meant to be comprehensive. For example, murder is absent from the list. Though believers are justified by faith, not works (2:16), those who persist in such sins without repentance will not inherit the kingdom of God.

5:22-23 Opposite to the vice list of 5:19-21 is this virtue list of the fruit of the Spirit. The word fruit emphasizes that the Spirit produces these characteristics in the life of the believer. This is not a checklist of things to do; rather, it is representative of the character of someone who walks by the Spirit (5:16). See “Biblical Models for Business,” p. 782.

CARRY ONE ANOTHER’S BURDENS

6 Brothers and sisters, if someone is overtaken in any wrongdoing, you who are spiritual, restore such a person with a gentle † spirit, † † watching out for yourselves so that you also won't be tempted. †
2 Carry one another's burdens; in this way you will fulfill the law of Christ. †
3 For if anyone considers himself to be something when he is nothing, † he deceives himself. 4 Let each person examine his own work, † and then he can take pride in himself alone, and not compare himself with someone else. 5 For each person will have to carry his own load.
6 Let the one who is taught the word share † all his good things with the teacher. 7 Don't be deceived: God is not mocked. For whatever a person sows he will also reap, 8 because the one who sows to his flesh will reap destruction from the flesh, but the one who sows to the Spirit † will reap eternal life † from the Spirit. 9 Let us not get tired † of doing good, † for we will reap at the proper time if we don't give up. 10 Therefore, as we have opportunity, let us work † for the good † of all, especially for those who belong to the household † of faith. †

CONCLUDING EXHORTATION

11 Look at what large letters I use as I write to you in my own handwriting.
12 Those who want to make a good impression in the flesh † are the ones who would compel you to be circumcised † — but only to avoid being persecuted † for the cross † of Christ. 13 For even the circumcised don't keep † the law themselves, and yet they want you to be circumcised in order to boast about your flesh. 14 But as for me, I will never boast about anything except the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ. The world has been crucified to me through the cross, and I to the world. 15 For † both circumcision and uncircumcision † mean nothing; what matters instead is a new creation. † 16 May peace come to all those who follow this standard, and mercy even to the Israel † of God! †
17 From now on, let no one cause me trouble, because I bear on my body the marks of Jesus. † 18 Brothers and sisters, the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with your spirit. † Amen.

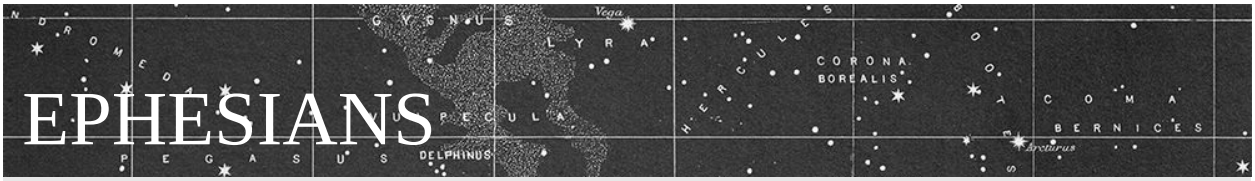
6:1 The spiritual ones are not a special group within the church. They are those who have received the Spirit (3:14; 4:6-7) and are thus led by the Spirit (5:18,25). They are to gently restore someone who has been overtaken in any wrongdoing. Rather than using harsh condemnation, the church is to discipline and restore by the principle of love.

6:2 Since love fulfills the law (5:14), carrying one another's burdens fulfills the law of Christ—the law of love.

6:9 The proper time refers to the final judgment. Throughout the NT, perseverance in obedience is tied to the confidence that God will sort all things out on the final day.

6:14 Paul will only boast in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, which is to boast in the appearance of weakness (cp. 1Co 1:18). The priorities, strength, and glories of this world are no longer relevant to him because it has been crucified to him, and he to it. His old self, belonging to the world, has died; his new self is alive to God (2:19-20).



EPHESIANS

INTRODUCTION

Paul's letter to the Ephesians is an anthem to the sovereign grace of God displayed toward sinners in Christ. It contains some of the worst news ("you were dead in your trespasses and sins") and best news ("but God . . . made us alive with Christ") in all of Scripture. In view of this grace, Paul calls believers to "live worthy of the calling" we have received.

CIRCUMSTANCES OF WRITING

AUTHOR: Paul referred to himself by name as the author of the book of Ephesians in two places (1:1; 3:1). Many regard this book as the crown of all of Paul's writings. Today some scholars think the book contains a writing style, vocabulary, and even some teachings that are not typical of the apostle. If that is the case, then it would mean a disciple of Paul had surpassed him in theological insight and spiritual perception. Of such an erudite disciple the early church has no record. Furthermore, pseudonymity (a writer writing under someone else's name) probably was not practiced by early Christians. We can conclude, in line with the undisputable acceptance of Pauline authorship in the early church, that there is no reason to dispute the Pauline authorship of Ephesians.

BACKGROUND: Paul penned the letter while in prison (3:1; 4:1; 6:20). Disagreement exists concerning whether Paul was imprisoned in Caesarea (Ac 24:22) around AD 57–59 or in Rome (Ac 28:30) in about 60–62 when he wrote this letter. Paul most likely wrote Colossians, Philemon, and Philippians during the same imprisonment. Tradition suggests that Paul wrote the letter from Rome around 60–61, which would have transpired while Paul was under house arrest in guarded rental quarters (Ac 28:30).

Relatively little is known about the recipients of the letter called Ephesians. Some important and early manuscripts do not contain the words "at Ephesus" (1:1). The letter was carried to its destination by Tychicus, who in Ephesians 6:21 and Colossians 4:7 is identified as Paul's emissary. The Ephesian and Colossian letters probably were delivered at the same time since in both letters the apostle noted that Tychicus would inform the churches concerning Paul's situation.

We can suggest the following possible scenario. While Paul was imprisoned in Rome, the need arose to respond to new religious philosophies influencing the Asia Minor area. The impetus to write the letters came to Paul from Epaphras, who informed him of the threats to Christianity in the Lycus Valley. In response, Paul wrote a letter to the church at Colossae. About the same time (either shortly before or shortly thereafter), he penned a more expansive and general letter intended for churches in Asia Minor, including Laodicea (see Col 4:16) and Ephesus.

CONTRIBUTION TO THE BIBLE

The letter to the Ephesians was probably a circular letter, with Ephesus being the primary church addressed. Paul stayed at Ephesus, the capital city of the province of Asia, for almost three years (see Ac 20:31). The fact that it was a circular letter helps explain the absence of personal names of Ephesian believers. From its inception Paul intended for the letter to gain a wider audience than that which would be found in Ephesus alone. After the Ephesians read it, the letter would have been routed to Colossae, Laodicea, and other churches in the area. Known to be a letter of the apostle Paul, the letter was readily accepted as Scripture by the recipients.

STRUCTURE

The salutation and structure of Ephesians are quite similar to Colossians. Many topics are commonly treated in both letters. The message is strikingly similar. Of the 155 verses in Ephesians, over half contain identical expressions with those in Colossians. Colossians, however, is abrupt, argumentative, and seemingly compressed. Ephesians presents a bigger, finished picture that is meditative, instructive, and expansive.

Though Ephesians and Colossians contain many similarities, it is important to observe the distinctives of Ephesians. When the content of Ephesians that is common to Colossians is removed, there remain at least seven units of material unique to Ephesians.

1:3-14	An expanded benediction
2:1-10	A confessional statement on the new life
3:14-21	A prayer to understand the mystery of Christ
4:1-16	An extended exhortation to Christian unity
5:8-14	A section on walking in the light
5:23-32	A theological expansion on the household roles
6:10-17	A unique picture of the Christian's spiritual warfare

CHRISTIAN WORLDVIEW ELEMENTS

TEACHINGS ABOUT GOD

Ephesians is filled with texts that contribute to a fully orbed doctrine of the Trinity. God the Father is the One whose eternal plan for the church has now been revealed. Jesus the Son is the exalted Head of the body, the church, and the One for whose glory the church exists. The church is a house or temple in which God's Spirit lives, yet the Spirit fills each believer individually.

TEACHINGS ABOUT HUMANITY

Ephesians shows the dreadful condition of all who are still in their natural condition: "dead in your trespasses and sins" (2:1). Paul summarizes this as "without hope and without God" (2:12). The alternate group is those whom God has changed and who are in a supernatural state: "made alive with Christ" (2:5). Old distinctions between Jew and Gentile used to count for something, but now in the church they no longer apply.

TEACHINGS ABOUT SALVATION

The best-known and most-loved NT summary of the gospel is Ephesians 2:8-9, with its emphasis on grace and faith. Ephesians also notes God's delight in electing persons to salvation. The language of predestination to eternal life is pronounced (1:5,11), as is Paul's notion that "Christ loved the church and gave himself for her" (5:25). (The long-standing theological dispute about divine election—predestination—is a matter of discerning the basis of God's choice. All students who take the Bible seriously affirm divine predestination; the debate is simply over its basis.)

GREETING

1 Paul, † an apostle of Christ Jesus by God's will: †
To the faithful saints † in Christ Jesus † at Ephesus. † †

2 Grace to you and peace from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

GOD'S RICH BLESSINGS

3 Blessed is the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who has blessed us with every spiritual blessing in the heavens in Christ. † 4 For he chose us in him, before the foundation of the world, to be holy and blameless in love before him. † † 5 He predestined us to be adopted as sons through Jesus Christ for himself, according to the good pleasure of his will, 6 to the praise of his glorious grace † that he lavished on us in the Beloved One. †

7 In him we have redemption † through his blood, the forgiveness † of our trespasses, according to the riches of his grace 8 that he richly poured out on us with all wisdom and understanding. † 9 He made known to us the mystery of his will, † according to his good pleasure that he purposed in Christ † 10 as a plan for the right time † — to bring everything together in Christ, † both things in heaven and things on earth † in him. †

11 In him we have also received an inheritance, † because we were predestined † according to the plan of the one who works out everything in agreement with the purpose of his will, 12 so that we who had already put our hope † in Christ might bring praise to his glory. †

13 In him you also were sealed with the promised Holy Spirit † when you heard the word of truth, † the gospel of your salvation, and when you believed. 14 The Holy Spirit is the down payment † of our inheritance, until the redemption of the possession, to the praise of his glory.

PRAYER FOR SPIRITUAL INSIGHT

15 This is why, since I heard about your faith in the Lord Jesus and your love for all the saints, 16 I never stop giving thanks for you as I remember you in my prayers. 17 I pray that the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the glorious Father, † would give you the Spirit † † of wisdom and revelation † in the knowledge of him. 18 I pray that the eyes of your heart may be enlightened so that you may know what is the hope † of his calling, † what is the wealth of his glorious inheritance in the saints, 19 and what is the immeasurable greatness of his power † toward us who believe, according to the mighty working of his strength.

GOD'S POWER IN CHRIST

20 He exercised this power in Christ by raising him from the dead and seating him at his right hand † in the heavens † —

PREACHING AND TEACHING A CHRISTIAN WORLDVIEW

Craig Bartholomew and Michael Goheen define worldview as "an articulation of the basic beliefs embedded in a shared grand story that are rooted in a faith commitment and that give shape and direction to the whole of our individual and corporate lives" (The Drama of Scripture) Worldviews answer perennial human questions like these: Where did we come from? What's gone wrong with the world, and how do we fix it? How should we live our lives?

The shaping of a Christian worldview is a lengthy process that blends a host of influences, from one's family background and education to cultural and media influences and most importantly, to the work of Scripture and the Holy Spirit in the individual heart. Worldviews are not overnight creations. So how, then, do we go about preaching and teaching the Christian worldview to others?

BE ROOTED IN SCRIPTURE

The Christian worldview is rooted in the Word of God. To "think Christianly" requires that one have a grasp of and commitment to biblical truth. Thus, it is essential that any preaching and teaching which seeks to communicate a Christian worldview must be solidly based on the teachings of Scripture.

This practice requires not only a dedication to biblical truth but also an understanding of valid hermeneutical principles so that we can be sure that what is being taught is itself faithful to the authentic meaning of Scripture. We want to teach and preach what God is actually saying to us in his Word, and that means we must be able to "rightly [divide] the word of truth" (2Tm 2:15, KJV).

This means that the effective biblical preacher and teacher will have an understanding of various biblical genres and how they will require varying interpretive approaches. For example, teaching principles that emerge from Pauline texts will typically require a more literal approach, while preaching from poetic texts will require an understanding of the more symbolic and image-filled nature of those texts. We can create great distress and confusion when we seek to turn a metaphor into a doctrine.

The effective interpreter will also need to be a faithful exegete so that he is accurately presenting the truth of God's Word. This involves some awareness of biblical languages and historical background. For example, in 1 Corinthians 8 Paul warns believers about eating meat that has been sacrificed to idols, lest doing so lead new believers astray. If one interprets this as simply a prescription about the use of meat sacrificed to idols, then it has little relationship to twenty-first century believers in the West, where we are unlikely to find such a section in the meat department at the local grocery store. If, however, this text is dealing with a more significant principle—that of conscience and how to relate to other believers who abstain from certain practices because of conscience—then this is a text that has an important message for contemporary Christians.

BE AWARE OF CULTURE

The effective teaching of a Christian worldview requires a solid foundation in Scripture, but that is only part of the story. To use John Stott's image of preaching, we must also be able to build a bridge that connects the biblical world to the contemporary one. Such a bridge requires that we understand the world in which our listeners live, so that we can engage them within their own context.

Thus, preaching and teaching a Christian worldview not only requires a grasp of the biblical truth that shapes such a worldview, but an awareness of the contemporary culture in which our listeners live and work. That does not mean simply attacking popular culture; it means understanding the trends and events that contribute to shaping that culture. In a sense, we must learn the language of a culture if we are to communicate with those who reside within it.

Christian leaders need not immerse themselves in the negative elements of contemporary culture in order to address that world. For example, we need not watch pornography in order to understand its dangers. But those who wish to engage culture must at least be conversant with that culture, through reading, study, and observation. In addition to reading the secular press, the Christian should also take advantage of excellent faith-based resources in the form of websites, periodicals, and books in order that he might better understand and interpret contemporary cultural influences from a Christ-centered perspective.

BE FOCUSED ON APPLICATION

Haddon Robinson explains that "in application, we attempt to take what we believe is the truth of the eternal God, given in a particular time, place and situation, and apply it to people in the modern world, who live in another time, another place, and a very different situation." Through providing practical and godly counsel, we teach others to apply God's Word to daily life.

Making such application often will involve drawing general principles from the specific details of biblical texts, and that requires identifying the timeless truth that connects the ancient text with the contemporary situation. It is easy to connect "then" and "now" with certain texts, but many other texts require additional work if we are to find a point of connection between the biblical context and the world in which our listeners live. For these, we work with a ladder of abstraction that connects the two worlds. Visualize a ladder that has several spans, going to different places depending on what level you step on. We will select the level that will connect our text with the reality of our own time and culture. As we climb that ladder we want to make sure that the biblical and contemporary situations are truly similar, or comparable, at the points at which we are connecting them.

Though making application often involves offering real-life examples of putting a text into practice, there is danger at this point. It is possible for us, in the process of offering such application, to give the impression that our specific suggestions about ways to live out a text carry the force of Scripture. They do not, and we must be careful to avoid falling into the trap of legalism when we do application.

It is important to remember to keep the theological and practical elements linked. We want to share vital theological truths with listeners, but we don't want to leave them thinking that such truths are abstract ideas with no practical application; therefore, we must show them the implications of such theological ideas for their lives. Likewise, even as we talk about the practical acts of obedience and service that God requires, we should work to keep that linked to theological truth—we serve and obey because of who God is and because of what he has already done for us. It is his grace that saves us, not our acts of obedience.

If we don't keep the practical solidly linked to the theological, the result may foster a self-righteousness that depends on actions rather than God's grace. This is a danger when our sermons become so lifestyle-oriented ("don't smoke, drink, chew, or go with girls that do"), that listeners lose sight of the fact that we are saved by grace—a message that must be front and center. Nevertheless, since grace does not make obedience optional, we must find a balance in our preaching and teaching to properly present both elements of biblical truth.

As we apply biblical truth in conversations and from the pulpit, we give our listeners handles by which they can grasp the implications of those truths and see how to put them into action as they live out their Christian lives in their work, family, and worship.

1:3-10 Though these verses are broken up for clarity in translation, they are all one sentence in the original Greek—a powerful expression of praise to God for his saving grace (see praise, 1:6,12,14).

1:3 This verse serves as a summary statement for the section to follow (1:3-14): in Christ, God has blessed us with every spiritual blessing. The following verses articulate several of these spiritual blessings. The "in Christ" (also "in him," "through him") language permeates the entire section.

1:4 For he chose us in him refers to the election of God's people, chosen before the foundation of the world. There is considerable debate as to whether this election refers to all individuals in Christ or simply to a people in Christ—with individuals not necessarily predestined. The purpose of this election is to make a people holy and blameless in love before God.

1:5 Adoption in the Roman world meant that a child received all the legal rights of a natural born offspring, including the family name and status. Believers therefore receive full status as children of God, through Jesus Christ. See also "A Biblical View of Adoption," p. 1367.

1:7 Redemption recalls the major saving event of Israel's history, namely the exodus out of slavery in Egypt. Redemption in Christ refers to the forgiveness of . . . trespasses through his blood.

1:9 Mystery, as typical in Paul's writings, refers to the unveiling of the will of God through the work of Christ. The content of the mystery is stated in v. 10.

1:10 The mystery revealed in Christ is that God intends to bring everything together in Christ in a cosmic reconciliation.

1:11 To receive an inheritance was the right of sons. As adopted sons of God (1:5), believers will inherit his riches. Inheritance language also has a background in the OT, with the promised land of Canaan promised to God's people as their "inheritance." In Christ, however, our inheritance is one of heavenly glory. See "Divine Providence and Naturalism," p. 1355; "Ultimate Origins and the Christian Worldview," p. 846.

1:13 In the first century, people commonly marked their significant possessions with a seal. Thus, the Holy Spirit marks God's people as his own.

1:14 As in today's world, a down payment was paid to secure a legal claim. Thus, God has given his Holy Spirit to believers as a guarantee of their inheritance to come (1:11).

1:17 God of our Lord Jesus Christ recalls the description of God in 1:3. While fully God, Jesus could still say, "I am ascending to my Father and your Father, to my God and your God" (Jn 20:17). When Paul prays they might receive the Spirit of wisdom and revelation, he is not praying that they receive new insights on par with Scripture. Rather, he is praying that the Holy Spirit will lead them into greater knowledge of God (in the knowledge of him).

1:20 The right hand was the position of power in relation to a king, as well as an expression of messianic expectation (Ps 110). Thus, Jesus is not only raised from the dead but enthroned, as described in 1:21-22.

1:21-22 Paul describes the cosmic and comprehensive sweep of Jesus's authority. Christ's work has consequences beyond simply the human realm—he is Lord over the entire spiritual realm, with its rulers, authorities, powers, and dominions. Ephesus was part of a region with a strong interest in spiritual forces, so Christ's supremacy over the heavens has great significance for their understanding of reality. Paul's description of the spiritual realm is in keeping with Jewish cosmology, in which the heavens are occupied with good and bad spiritual forces (see "Spiritual Warfare," p. 1454; "Satan and Demons," p. 1611). Jesus is seated above them with absolute authority in this age but also in the one to come. The age to come is the time when, according to Jewish theology, God will restore King David's kingdom on earth.

FROM DEATH TO LIFE

2 And you were dead † in your trespasses and sins 2 in which you previously lived according to the ways of this world, † according to the ruler of the power of the air, † the spirit † now working in the disobedient. † 3 We too all previously lived among them in our fleshly † desires, carrying out the inclinations † of our flesh and thoughts, and we were by nature children under wrath † as the others were also. 4 But God, who is rich in mercy, † because of his great love † that he had for us, † 5 made us alive † with Christ even though we were dead † in trespasses. You are saved by grace! 6 He also raised us up with him and seated us with him in the heavens in Christ Jesus, † 7 so that in the coming ages † he might display the immeasurable riches † of his grace through his kindness † to us in Christ Jesus. 8 For you are saved by grace † through faith, and this is not from yourselves; it is God's gift — 9 not from works, so that no one can boast. 10 For we are his workmanship, created † in Christ Jesus for good works, which God prepared ahead of time † for us to do.

UNITY IN CHRIST

11 So then, remember that at one time you were Gentiles in the flesh — called “the uncircumcised” by those called “the circumcised,” † which is done in the flesh by human hands. † 12 At that time you were without Christ, excluded from the citizenship of Israel, and foreigners to the covenants of promise, † without hope † and without God in the world. 13 But now in Christ Jesus, you who were far away have been brought near by the blood † of Christ. 14 For he is our peace, who made both groups one † and tore down the dividing wall of hostility.
In his flesh, 15 he made of no effect the law consisting of commands and expressed in regulations, so that he might create † in himself one † new man from the two, resulting in peace. 16 He did this so that he might reconcile both to God in one body † through the cross by which he put the hostility to death. † 17 He came and proclaimed the good news † of peace to you who were far away and peace to those who were near. † 18 For through him we both have access † in one spirit to the Father. † 19 So then you are no longer foreigners and strangers, but fellow citizens with the saints, and members of God’s household, 20 built on the foundation of the apostles and prophets, † with Christ Jesus himself as the cornerstone. 21 In him the whole building, being put together, † grows into a holy temple in the Lord. † 22 In him you are also being built together † for God’s dwelling † in the Spirit.

2:1-6 Salvation is pictured as resurrection with Christ. Apart from Jesus, all people are spiritually dead, living according to the ways of this world and under the influence of the spirit now working in the disobedient (Satan). Only God can alter the situation—he made those of us who trust in Jesus alive, raised us up, and seated us with Christ. See “Fall and Redemption,” p. 12.

2:2 The ruler of the power of the air is Satan (see also 2Co 4:4). He is a usurper who seized authority with the fall of Adam. Everyone outside of Christ is under the influence of the devil. Even though we carry out our own inclinations (2:3), we do so under his sway. The spiritual realm is in constant interaction with the realm of humanity.

2:3 All people are by nature children under the wrath of God because of sin and rebellion. We are this way by our own deeds and because, as descendants of Adam, we inherit a sinful nature.

2:4 God is the only one able to reverse the situation of sinful humanity, which finds itself spiritually dead, under the authority of the evil one, and subject to God's wrath (2:1-3). God is motivated by his rich mercy and great love.

2:5 Salvation by grace is grounded on God's making alive the spiritually dead. "Dead" people cannot reach out to God to alter their standing with him. Thus, God's grace is the only means of salvation.

2:6 Seated . . . in the heavens is the spiritual location of all believers. This is because, by faith, believers are so connected to Christ that where he is, there we are too—spiritually.

2:7 In 1:3-14, Paul stressed that God's gracious saving work leads to the praise of his grace. Here again God's saved people will, for all eternity, display the immeasurable riches of his grace . . . in Christ Jesus.

2:8-9 These verses state the inevitable conclusion of the argument of 2:1-7. Given humanity's spiritual death, the only recourse for salvation is by the grace of God. Human achievement could not contribute, and there is no room for boasting.

2:10 Rather than boasting in our performance, we must realize we are his workmanship—God's product, created in Christ Jesus. We are saved by God's works, not our own. Once Paul has established that salvation can only be by God's grace, he then addresses the importance of good works—they are not a part of human salvation, but believers are to be engaged in them once they have been saved. But even here there is no room for boasting, since such good works were prepared ahead of time for us to do.

2:11 Jewish people divided the world into Jews (the circumcised) and Gentiles (the uncircumcised). Since circumcision was the mark of the covenant, it indicated who belonged to the people of God and who did not.

2:12 Before Christ, Gentiles were in the bleak situation of not belonging to the citizenship of Israel (i.e., God's people). They did not have access to the covenants God made with Abraham, Moses, and David; therefore, they were without hope and without God.

2:14 In the Jerusalem temple a four-and-a-half-foot wall divided the outer Court of the Gentiles from the inner court. Only Jews could enter the inner court, and Gentiles were threatened with death if they crossed the barrier. In fact, the imprisonment from which Paul writes this letter began because he was falsely accused of taking a Gentile past the barrier (Ac 21:28-29). Paul uses this image to say that in Christ there is no longer any such dividing wall of hostility. In Christ, Jew and Gentile are reconciled as God's people.

2:16 Just as the work of Jesus brought peace between Jew and Gentile, so in the church today there is no basis for hostility or superiority between people groups.

2:21-22 The church, composed of Jew and Gentile, is being put together by God as the new temple in the Lord. While the temple once stood as a sign of Israel's privilege, and the lack of Gentile access to God, now Jews and Gentiles have been built together to become the temple in which God dwells in the Spirit.

PAUL'S MINISTRY TO THE GENTILES

3 For this reason, I, Paul, the prisoner † of Christ Jesus on behalf of you Gentiles — 2 you have heard, haven't you, about the administration of God's grace that he gave to me for you? 3 The mystery was made known to me by revelation, † as I have briefly written above. 4 By reading this you are able to understand my insight into the mystery of Christ. † 5 This was not made known to people † in other generations as it is now revealed to his holy apostles and prophets † by the Spirit: 6 The Gentiles are coheirs, members of the same body, and partners in the promise † in Christ Jesus through the gospel.

THE BIBLE AND CIVIL RIGHTS

The Bible was central to the thought, rhetoric, and development of the Civil Rights Movement. This was influenced by the essential role of black churches and preachers in the organization of the movement. Not only was the movement characterized by meetings in churches and the singing of Negro spirituals, it was also marked by biblical themes and language. Although many non-Christians participated in and supported the aims of the Civil Rights Movement, the underlying truth claims about the nature of all humanity, regardless of ethnicity, were grounded in the Scriptures.

The central intellectual strain behind the movement focused on the issue of the equality of all humans, since they were "created . . . in the image of God" (Gn 1:27), no matter the color of their skin. Throughout the black freedom struggle in American history, the biblical teachings on creation and human dignity were foundational to the arguments being put forth both by scholars and by everyday people. Even those who were illiterate knew from the rhetoric of the movement that God had created all people from one man (Ac 17:26). This distinguishes the Civil Rights Movement from other revolutions that may have been rooted in political, economic, philosophical, or other ideas. This unique biblical foundation provided a basis for the invocation of the God revealed in the Bible to be a participant in the movement—just as he had empowered the exodus.

In his famous "Letter from Birmingham Jail" written April 16, 1963, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. used biblical examples as a defense when he was accused of being an interloper and an extremist for participating in demonstrations, sit-ins, and boycotts. When justifying his presence in Birmingham, Dr. King noted that he was invited by local organizers, as well as noting the example of OT prophets leaving their villages to proclaim "thus saith the Lord" wherever God would send them. Additionally, he applauded the apostle Paul's travels in response to the call for help from the believers in Macedonia.

Grounding the movement morally in the Bible, King said, "A just law is a manmade code that squares with the moral law or the law of God." Therefore, the movement was able to attack laws that supported segregation and discrimination as laws that were ungodly, unjust, and against the clear teaching of Scripture. Certainly, America's founding documents—the Declaration of Independence and the US Constitution—were an important part of the discourse, but the moral motivation and spiritual energy of the movement were grounded in the Bible. King even identified segregation as "sin" and called its proponents "sinful." He grounded his understanding of civil disobedience in the biblical example of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, who refused to bow to the laws of Nebuchadnezzar because of their loyalty to a higher law—God's law. This was a vital part of his argument against passive or indifferent clergy, who sometimes grounded their opposition to King's actions in the rhetoric of "law and order." Many of the preachers involved in the movement would cite OT prophets, especially Hosea and Amos, when "prophesying" against corrupt officials—especially sheriffs and other law enforcement officers that would attack protestors and demonstrators.

In a provocative section of his letter, King responds to charges that his activities will bring about negative consequences—conflict, possibly violent, between demonstrators and local law enforcement. The Baptist preacher chastised his critics by likening them to those that would say that the teachings, actions, and devotions of Jesus the Christ "precipitated the evil act of crucifixion." This thinking was flawed and unethical in King's mind. In contrast to the violence that was brought to bear on protestors, King noted that the non-violent approach of the Civil Rights Movement was grounded in "the Negro church" and its biblical understanding of loving one's neighbor and praying for one's enemies.

Some of the clergy that refused to support King's efforts suggested that the church should not get involved in "secular" affairs. Additionally, they retorted that the church's business was the saving of souls, not political concerns. The letter responds that such a neglect of social concerns is not logical, ethical, or biblical. In fact, King finds it a strange understanding of Christian ethics, saying, "I have watched many churches commit themselves to a completely otherworldly religion which makes a strange, un-Biblical distinction between body and soul, between the sacred and the secular."

Finally, the Bible and its sweeping story are on display in an extended passage where King cites biblical leaders and figures from church history in defense against the assertion that he was an extremist.

> Though I was initially disappointed at being categorized as an extremist, as I continued to think about the matter I gradually gained a measure of satisfaction from the label. Was not Jesus an extremist for love: "Love you enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you." Was not Amos an extremist for justice: "Let justice roll down like waters and righteousness like an everflowing stream." Was not Paul an extremist for the Christian gospel: "I bear in my body the marks of the Lord Jesus." Was not Martin Luther an extremist: "Here I stand; I cannot do otherwise, so help me God." And John Bunyan: "I will stay in jail until the end of my days before I make a butchery of my conscience." And Abraham Lincoln: "This nation cannot survive half slave and half free." And Thomas Jefferson: "We hold these truths to be selfevident, that all men are created equal . . ." So the question is not whether we will be extremists, but what kind of extremists we will be. Will we be extremists for hate or for love? Will we be extremists for the preservation of injustice or for the extension of justice? In that dramatic scene on Calvary's hill three men were crucified. We must never forget that all three were crucified for the same crime—the crime of extremism. Two were extremists for immorality, and thus fell below their environment. The other, Jesus Christ, was an extremist for love, truth, and goodness, and thereby rose above his environment. Perhaps the South, the nation, and the world are in dire need of creative extremists.

Martin Luther King, Jr. served many roles in the Civil Rights Movement: he was its face, an ethicist, a theologian, an organizer, and a public relations agent. In all of these roles, his thinking and rhetoric was shaped and influenced by the Bible. Thus, so was the larger movement.

KEVIN SMITH

7 I was made a servant of this gospel by the gift of God's grace that was given to me by the working of his power. † 8 This grace was given to me — the least of all the saints — to proclaim to the Gentiles the incalculable riches † of Christ, 9 and to shed light for all about the administration of the mystery hidden for ages in God who created † all things.
10 This is so that God's multi-faceted wisdom † may now be made known

PRAYER FOR SPIRITUAL POWER

14 For this reason I kneel † before the Father † 15 from whom every family in heaven and on earth is named. 16 I pray that he may grant you, according to the riches † of his glory, † to be strengthened with power † in your inner being † through his Spirit, 17 and that Christ may dwell in your hearts through faith. I pray that you, being rooted and firmly established in love, 18 may be able to comprehend with all the saints what is the length and width, height and depth of God's love, † 19 and to know Christ's love that surpasses knowledge, so that you may be filled with all the fullness of God.

20 Now to him who is able † to do above and beyond all that we ask or think † according to the power † that works in us — 21 to him be glory in the church and in Christ Jesus to all generations, forever and ever. Amen. †

3:2 The wording here assumes the readers know about Paul's ministry to the Gentiles. Some would, of course, have known his ministry in person. But since he has been away several years from Ephesus, others may have only heard about it.

3:3 Mystery, as typically in Paul, refers to the unveiling of the will of God through the work of Christ. The content of the mystery is stated in 1:10, but more details are offered in 3:6-7.

3:5-6 The mystery, or riddle, once hidden to previous generations, has now been revealed: the Gentiles are coheirs and share in the promise in Christ Jesus. The mystery left unresolved through the OT was how God would fulfill his promise to Abraham that all people would be blessed through him (Gn 12:3). Now, in Christ, that mystery has been solved: through the gospel, Gentiles are included in the blessings to Abraham. See also "God's Purposes in a Christian's Participation in Missions," p. 1191.

3:10 The rulers and authorities in the heavens are malevolent supernatural powers (cp. 1:20-22). The existence of the church through the work of Christ declares God's multi-faceted wisdom to such powers.

3:14-15 Human fatherhood is derived from God's own Fatherhood. It is not the case, as is sometimes argued, that God's Fatherhood is an anthropomorphism—an attribution of human characteristics to God—but, rather, it is the other way around.

3:17 Paul prays that Christ might dwell in their hearts; this is not a prayer for conversion, but for maturity, as these believers begin to look more and more like the dwelling place of Jesus—rooted and firmly established in love.

UNITY AND DIVERSITY IN THE BODY OF CHRIST

4 Therefore I, the prisoner in the Lord, † urge you to live worthy of the calling you have received, 2 with all humility † and gentleness, with patience, † bearing † with one another in love, † 3 making every effort to keep the unity † of the Spirit † through the bond of peace. 4 There is one body and one Spirit † — just as you were called to one hope † † at your calling — 5 one Lord, † one faith, † one baptism, 6 one God † and Father † of all, who is above all and through all and in all. †

7 Now grace was given to each one of us † according to the measure of Christ's gift. 8 For it says:

When he ascended † on high, he took the captives captive; he gave gifts to people. † †

9 But what does "he ascended" mean except that he † also descended to the lower parts of the earth? † † 10 The one who descended is also the one who ascended far above all the heavens, † to fill all things. † 11 And he himself gave some to be apostles, some prophets, some evangelists, some pastors and teachers, 12 equipping the saints for the work of ministry, to build up the body of Christ, † 13 until we all reach unity in the faith and in the knowledge of God's Son, † growing into maturity with a stature † measured by Christ's fullness. 14 Then we will no longer be little children, tossed by the waves and blown around by every wind of teaching, † by human cunning with cleverness in the techniques of deceit. 15 But speaking the truth in love, let us grow in every way into him who is the head † — Christ. 16 From him the whole body, fitted and knit together † by every supporting ligament, promotes the growth † of the body for building up itself in love by the proper working of each individual part.

LIVING THE NEW LIFE

17 Therefore, I say this and testify in the Lord: You should no longer live as the Gentiles live, in the futility of their thoughts. 18 They are darkened in their understanding, excluded from the life of God, because of the ignorance that is in them and because † of the hardness of their hearts. 19 They became callous and gave themselves over to promiscuity for the practice of every kind of impurity † with a desire for more and more. †

20 But that is not how you came to know Christ, 21 assuming you heard about him and were taught by him, as the truth † is in Jesus, 22 to take off † † your former way of life, † the old self † that is corrupted by deceitful desires, 23 to be renewed † in the spirit † of your minds, 24 and to put on † † the new self, the one created † according to God's likeness † in righteousness and purity of the truth.

25 Therefore, putting away † lying, speak the truth, each one to his neighbor, † † because we are members of one another.

A BIBLICAL VIEW OF MARRIAGE

God loves marriage. The Bible, after all, begins with a marriage as lonely Adam receives his bride, Eve, and celebrates with the world's first love song (Gn 2:22-25). The Bible ends with a marriage as Jesus, the Lamb of God, receives his bride, the church, at the great marriage supper of the Lamb (Rv 19:7). And Jesus, anticipating that final marriage supper, performed his first miracle at a wedding celebration (Jn 2:1-11).

The Bible presents marriage as the sacred, foundational institution designed by God for human flourishing, the well-being of children, and the advancement of his kingdom.

Marriage is a gift to all humanity. Dr. Robert George of Princeton University puts it this way: In all observed societies some form of marriage exists, as the means whereby the work of one generation is dedicated to the well-being of the next. Marriage does not merely protect and nurture children; it is the shield against sexual jealousy and a unique form of social and economic cooperation, with a mutually supportive division of roles that more than doubles the effectiveness of each partner in their shared bid for security. (The Meaning of Marriage) While culture today exerts a significant influence on our attitudes and behavior surrounding marriage, Christians should desire to know what God thinks about this most sacred of institutions that he designed and loves. If God left us no instructions about marriage, we could go about it according to our personal or societal whims. But he hasn't left us uninformed. His revelation in Scripture guides us to his design for marriage, and through embracing it we will see his human creatures flourish.

PEOPLE NEED COMPANIONSHIP

After God created the heavens and the earth and all that lives therein, he created man in his own image to rule and manage his creation. He did not create us all the same, but "he created them male and female" (Gn 1:27). In the process of creation, God repeatedly declared his creation good (Gn 1:4,10,12,18,21,25,31). But there was one exception. God stated that it was not good for man to be alone, to exist as a solitary being (Gn 2:18). Without human companionship, creation was incomplete. If man was alone there could be no procreation and, more importantly, no possibility for man to experience the kind of intimate relationship that exists within the Godhead. And so God created woman to complement the man and thus complete the good design he had for humanity.

In his delight with Eve, Adam calls her "bone of my bone and flesh of my flesh; this one will be called 'woman,' for she was taken from man" (Gn 2:23). In the next verse we read, "This is why a man leaves his father and mother and bonds with his wife, and they become one flesh" (v. 24).

As seventeenth-century Bible commentator Matthew Henry wrote, "Eve was not taken from Adam's head that she should rule over him, nor from his feet, to be trampled under foot, but she was taken from his side that she might be his equal, from under his arm that she might be protected by him, near his heart, that he might cherish and love her."

In this way men and women provide companionship for each other in laboring together interdependently in God's kingdom work and in having children and nurturing families to populate God's creation.

ONE MAN AND ONE WOMAN

At creation God established marriage as the union of one man and one woman. Since then, our fallen state has created all kinds of distortions in God's design for marriage, including the moral confusion of our day. But God clearly demonstrates his design for one man and one woman to come together in this sacred union.

It is critical to understand that while God made man and woman as equals, he also created them to be different from one another. Men and women are not interchangeable; they are complementary. In marriage they become one flesh (Gn 2:24), one functioning unit, especially in procreation. H. C. Leupold explains that becoming one flesh "involves the complete identification of one personality with the other in community of interests and pursuits, a union consummated in intercourse" (Exposition of Genesis, vol. 1, p. 137).

In our culture it is vital to remind ourselves that in addition to the joy of husband and wife, sexual intercourse is designed for procreation. Marriage, sex, and children go together. The family, which is central to God's design for his kingdom, is made possible through the procreative act that brings together one man and one woman and defines the one-flesh unity of marriage. "Reproductive technologies" aside, only a man and a woman, complementing one another, can create another human person.

MARRIAGE IS A COVENANTAL RELATIONSHIP

Just as God and his bride, the church, are bound together by the new covenant of Christ crucified (Lk 22:19-20; Heb 9:15; 12:22-24), so husband and wife are bound together by the covenant of marriage (Mal 2:14).

While some talk about marriage as a contract, marriage is not a contract. It is a covenant. Contracts are agreements of "consideration given for consideration received." They are fifty-fifty arrangements in which one partner puts something in expecting to get something out. And contracts are over once they are fulfilled or when both parties agree to break them. Covenants, then, are radically different. In covenants, both parties are expected to give one hundred percent, offering consideration even when none is received in return. Covenants are established by solemn vows invoking the name of God. And covenants are never fulfilled, can never change, and there is no point short of death at which the account can be closed. Those bound together by the covenant of marriage in the name of God through solemn vows witnessed by family and friends are sealed with God's divine blessing in a permanent relationship. "Therefore," as Jesus said, "what God has joined together, let no one separate" (Mk 10:9).

Since marriage is a life-long commitment, the Christian's goal should not be just to have a "good" marriage, but to have a godly one. And while our fallen nature does not provide for marital bliss all the time, we must remember that where sin abounds, grace abounds (Rm 5:20) and where grace abounds, so does the potential for life-long, loving marriage. While the Bible acknowledges the concession of divorce under certain circumstances, this falls short of God's ideal for marriage (Mt 19:1-9; 1Co 7:10-16).

DEATH TO SELF

A wedding day marks an end of a single man and a single woman who have been working on their own. Once the vows are said and the marriage sealed, the two become one. As Peter J. Leithart puts it, The wedding day is only the beginning of death. A man and a woman who go through a ceremony and then live as they have always lived have not really understood what marriage requires. Death at a wedding is a call to continual dying. At their wedding, a man and woman die to singleness, to the old relation with parents, to old habits and plans, and that death has to be worked out throughout the course of the marriage. ("When Marriage is Dying," Touchstone Magazine) WITNESS TO THE WORLD

In their complementarity, married couples represent to the world the beauty and mystery of the love relationship God has with his people. Beginning in the OT, God referred to his people as his bride, bound to him by covenant (Is 54:5-8; Ezk 16:8; Hs 2:19-20). He calls Israel's breaking of the covenant "adultery" and "prostitution" (Ezk 23; Hs 2:2-13). At the same time, he promises that a day will come when "as a groom rejoices over his bride, so your God will rejoice over [Israel]" (Is 62:5b).

That same promise carries over into the NT. Paul concludes his instructions about Christian marriage with this statement: "This mystery is profound, but I am talking about Christ and the church" (Eph 5:32). Christian marriages demonstrate the love of God to a world in need of that love, and every wedding day anticipates the day Jesus will return to glorify and honor his bride, the church, and be with her forever (Rv 19:7-9; 21:2,9).

4:2 For the sake of unity, Paul exhorts virtues that enhance harmonious relationships—humility, gentleness, patience, bearing with one another in love. Greek philosophers occasionally spoke of the value of gentleness, but never humility and patience. These qualities are distinctly Christian, reflecting God's desire for his people to embody a spirit of brokenness and meekness (Ps 34:18; Is 66:2; Mt 5:3-5).

4:4-6 The word one occurs seven times in these verses, stressing the theological unity of the church. Even if believers must work at keeping relational unity, unity is already a fact of the church due to these common factors.

4:7 While the unity of the church has already been strongly asserted in 4:1-3, the diversity of the church is grounded in the gifting of grace to each individual. As explored below, differing gifts to the church provide a healthy diversity for its growth and maturity (4:11-13).

4:8 Psalm 68 celebrates God's victory over his enemies and the deliverance of his people through his king. Paul uses the psalm to present Jesus as the King who has overthrown his enemies. As triumphant King, he now extends gifts to his people (cp. Ac 2:33).

4:9 The phrase he descended to the lower parts of the earth is often understood to refer to Christ's incarnation. More likely it refers to Christ's proclamation of victory over the evil spiritual forces of darkness, following his death (1Pt 3:19).

4:11-13 See "The Worship and Service of God," p. 810.

4:11 While it is common to think of gifts (or abilities) being given to individuals (as in 4:7), here people are the gifts given to the church: apostles, prophets, evangelists, and pastors and teachers. The fact that some—not all—are to occupy these roles indicates the need for diversity within the church.

4:12 These gifts to the church (see 4:11) are not to do the entire ministry within the church, but they are to equip others for the work of ministry. This indicates ministry is the work of all the members—not simply those with special responsibilities and roles.

4:13 While diversity within the church is essential, the goal of diversity is to help God's people work toward unity, which is a mark of maturity.

4:14 Sea travel in the first century was often perilous, and Paul had just experienced shipwreck on his trip to Rome (Ac 27). Thus, the image of being tossed by the waves was a particularly compelling way to communicate instability and danger.

4:16 The body is an excellent metaphor for the church since the importance of its unity is assumed, but it also demonstrates the essential importance of diversity (cp. 1Co 12:12-31).

4:17 Though most believers in Ephesus are Gentiles (not Jewish), the term "Gentiles" here refers to unbelievers, in keeping with its OT usage.

4:23 As in Romans 12:1, renewal takes place in the mind. Spirit here could refer to the human spirit being renewed, or to the Holy Spirit who is doing the renewing. See "The Bible and Intellectual Pursuit," p. 1512.

4:25-32 The commands in this section all promote healthy relationships within the body of the church. Moreover, most involve a "new for old" ethic. That is, the negative behavior is to be replaced by a positive one. The thief should not only cease stealing; he should provide for others' needs. Foul language is to be replaced by words that are building up others. Anger and wrath should be replaced with kindness and compassion. Therefore, be imitators of God, as dearly loved children,

A BIBLICAL VIEW OF CHILD REARING

In the Bible, parenting involves demonstrating a godly life, living according to a biblical worldview, and educating children in the truths of Scripture. Children learn passively by watching parents model a consistent connection with God's Word and a kingdom outlook. Children learn actively as parents lead them in cherishing and memorizing Scripture, and as the family participates in a local body of believers.

GODLY PARENTS

Christian parents are to be examples of godliness so that children can imitate them. When God promised Abraham a son (Gn 18:19), God stated that he chose Abraham because he expected him to lead his children and household to keep the ways of the Lord.

Similarly, Paul told Timothy (2Tm 3:14-15) to practice the faith that he had learned because Timothy knew the lives of those who taught him (his grandmother and mother, 2Tm 1:5). Children are to watch their parents' lives and, because of godly parents, imitate their faith.

LIVING ACCORDING TO A BIBLICAL WORLDVIEW

Living according to a biblical worldview means we must look both at personal life experience and at the world in light of God's purposes. Parents need to show children how both past history and current events unfold under the sovereignty of God and the lordship of Christ. Jesus is Lord of the past, present, and future. He is to rule over all relationships.

A biblical worldview should give the child a sense of security and purpose. Each child is part of God's great story. History moves toward God's glory, and God is controlling its destiny.

Parenting from a biblical worldview also involves sharing personal victories and answered prayer. Parents must talk about God's goodness with their children. (It is not enough to practice godliness and have real victories. It is a parent's responsibility to share the victory and answered prayer with his children.) Children need to hear how God works in their world and in their parents' lives. In Bible times, children did not have books to read, television programs, and computer games; instead, they heard the stories of faith from their parents and grandparents. At religious celebrations such as Passover, they not only experienced the celebration, but also heard the stories and participated in the celebratory and commemorative rituals. Holy days reminded them of their salvation and the promises of God.

The OT reveals that God intends for people to celebrate the events that demonstrate his working in history. God spoke to the people of Israel at Mount Horeb (Dt 4:9-10) so that they would fear the Lord. They were to remember what they saw and heard so they could pass it on to their children and grandchildren. God instructs fathers to explain Passover to their sons (Ex 13:14) so their sons will understand that God brought them out of the slavery of Egypt.

Because God is a God of discipline and order, children should be taught to submit to authority. First Peter 5:5-6 tells the young men to submit to the authority of elders and that we all are to humble ourselves under the mighty hand of God. It is the parent's responsibility to teach children not only that they have significant value (being made in the image of God—Gn 1:27), but also that they have a responsibility for their attitudes and actions. A biblical worldview acknowledges God's authority and his order. Children learn to submit to their parents in order to learn to submit to God's authority. Parents treat their children with the same love and respect with which God treats us (Eph 6:1-4). God is not punitive or harsh, but he guides our lives through formative discipline, shaping us toward godliness as we submit to him. Children submit to parental authority as parents use formative discipline to teach them self-control and order.

TEACHING AND MEMORIZING SCRIPTURE

In the OT, the fathers taught the boys to obey the Torah. Israelite children in OT times would see the father daily tie the phylacteries to his arm and to his head while teaching his son Deuteronomy 6:5. At twelve years of age, the boy's observations turned to personal experience. He felt the sensation of this reality as his father tied the phylacteries to his arm and forehead. The daily ritual and tradition reinforced Scripture. The child learned by using his senses: sight, sound, speech, and touch.

In the early NT era, it was the parents' responsibility to take sons to the synagogue for five years of half-day religious instruction, beginning at age five. When a son came home at noon, the parents provided an opportunity for him to learn a trade. Learning Scripture was so important that the child began his day with religious instruction.

In both Old and NT times, mothers taught daughters from their Scriptures. They learned how to be wives and mothers, how to carry on the traditions of holy days, and how to comply with the dietary laws that were part of their faith.

FAMILY DEVOTIONS

Psalm 78:3-8 instructs us to tell the stories of our Christian heritage to our children. This involves the practice of family worship. Family worship is a time to lead children in hearing, understanding, and memorizing God's Word. This is one occasion in which parents can teach their offspring to pray, or share about a personal victory and answered prayer. It is a time to pray and praise God as a family and to be an example of God's love in action. It is a time for the family to say together, "How can we serve the Lord so that we contribute to God's purposes?" Family involvement in missions (providing food, cleaning a home, sharing clothing, purchasing toys, visiting the elderly, going on a mission trip) broadens a child's perspective and helps to create a global Christian worldview.

FAMILY SCRIPTURE MEMORY

Christian parents are to teach spiritual truth to their children in age-appropriate ways, utilizing various means of instruction. Deuteronomy 6:4-9 inscructs parents to teach God's truths when they sit at home, when they walk along the road, when they lie down, and when they get up. They are to put God's truth on their doorposts. Christian parents, then, should fill their homes and life experiences with opportunities to share Scripture. Children grow spiritually through memorizing Scripture, singing Scripture, and seeing it applied in their parents' lives.

PARTICIPATE IN CHURCH

In both the Old and NT, children learned to value interconnectedness within a body of believers. OT life revolved around friends with shared faith. Trips to the temple were a joyous occasion for friendship and community. NT churches were bonded by a mutual purpose. Christian friends were cherished and times of worship were precious. Parents today need to teach children the value of belonging to a local body of believers (1Co 12:12-26). Children, through the church, see many different Christians working out their salvation—and as a result learn unity and love (Php 2:2).

CONCLUSION

Parenting is intensely personal. Guiding young individuals to maturity requires creativity. Like adults, children have individual personalities, gifts, and talents. A child should never doubt parental love. Through each stage of life, godly parents can find that God's grace is sufficient.

LIGHT VERSUS DARKNESS

6 Let no one deceive you with empty arguments, for God's wrath † is coming everything visible is light. Therefore it is said:

Get up, sleeper, † and rise up from the dead, † and Christ will shine on you. †

CONSISTENCY IN THE CHRISTIAN LIFE

15 Pay careful attention, then, to how you live — not as unwise people but as wise — 16 making the most of the time, † † because the days are evil. 17 So don't be foolish, but understand † what the Lord's will † is. 18 And don't get drunk † with wine, † which leads to reckless living, but be filled by the Spirit: † 19 speaking to one another in psalms, hymns, and spiritual songs, singing and making music with your heart to the Lord, 20 giving thanks always for everything to God the Father in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, 21 submitting to one another in the fear of Christ. †

WIVES AND HUSBANDS

22 Wives, † submit † † to your husbands † as to the Lord, 23 because the husband is the head of the wife † as Christ is the head † of the church. He is the Savior of the body. † 24 Now as the church submits to Christ, so also wives are to submit to their husbands in everything. 25 Husbands, love your wives, † just as Christ loved † the church and gave himself † for her 26 to make her holy, cleansing † her with the washing of water by the word. 27 He did this to present the church to himself in splendor, without spot or wrinkle or anything like that, but holy and blameless. † 28 In the same way, husbands are to love their wives as their own bodies. He who loves his wife loves himself. 29 For no one ever hates his own flesh but provides and cares for it, just as Christ does for the church, 30 since we are members of his body. † 31 For this reason a man will leave his father and mother and be joined to his wife, † and the two will become one flesh. † † 32 This mystery † is profound, but I am talking about Christ and the church. 33 To sum up, each one of you is to love his wife as himself, and the wife is to respect her husband.

5:1 The imitation of God is explained in the surrounding verses—God loved us in the work of Christ (4:32; 5:2).

5:5 Sexual immorality (Gk porneia) was a pervasive problem among the Gentiles; all kinds of inappropriate sexual relations were a part of life in the Gentile world. People guilty of such sins can be forgiven (5:8; 1Co 6:11). The point is that people who continue in these ways without repentance demonstrate that they have not been converted. See “Purpose and Parameters of Sexual Relations,” p. 1397.

5:14 This quotation is not from the OT, which is unusual for Paul, who normally cites the Hebrew Bible. This is probably an oral tradition passed on in the early church. In the context of resisting sin (5:6-12), the citation encourages believers to embrace their resurrected status in Christ (cp. 2:5) and to live accordingly.

5:17 Understanding the Lord’s will refers, in particular, to living in the way described in this passage, and understanding what such living would look like in other settings.

5:18 In the worship of Dionysius (or Bacchus), drunkenness was the means to being filled with the spirit of this god. The filling of the Holy Spirit leads instead to proper living, including corporate worship, thankfulness, and healthy relationships (5:19-21). See also “A Biblical View of Music,” p. 727.

5:19 Corporate worship involves speaking to one another in psalms, hymns, and spiritual songs. Our engagement with God is enhanced by engagement with one another.

5:21 In the first century, submission referred to a voluntary yielding to someone with authority, whether in a military context, within the church (1Pt 3:5), or with regard to governing authorities (Rm 13:1). While many understand this verse to endorse a reciprocal “mutual submission,” it is more likely referring to submission as appropriate within the various relationships found within a church, such as those included in the household code to follow (5:22–6:9).

5:22-24 The submission of a wife to her husband is grounded in Christ’s headship of the church, rather than in cultural, patriarchal expectations of the ancient world.

5:25 Husbands are to lead by love. This is a sacrificial love in which a man puts the benefit of his wife ahead of his own. Christ modeled such love toward the church, giving himself for her. This kind of leadership was counter-cultural in the ancient world, in which husbands often treated their wives in a domineering and demeaning fashion.

5:26-27 The OT prophet Ezekiel pictures the relationship between Jerusalem and God as a marriage covenant, in which God “washed [her] with water, rinsed off [her] blood, and anointed [her] with oil” (Ezk 16:9). Christ has so washed the church with the washing of water by the word, indicating that the OT marriage between God and his people has been transfigured to Christ and the church.

5:31-32 Citing an essential text about marriage (Gn 2:24), Paul indicates that the husband-wife relationship was intended from the beginning to be a symbol of Christ and the church.

CHILDREN AND PARENTS

6 Children, obey † your parents in the Lord, because this is right.
2 Honor your father and mother, which is the first commandment with a promise, 3 so that it may go well with you and that you may have a long life in the land. † † † 4 Fathers, don’t stir up anger † in your children, but bring them up in the training † and instruction of the Lord.

SLAVES AND MASTERS

5 Slaves, obey your human † masters † with fear and trembling, † in the sincerity † of your heart, as you would Christ. 6 Don't work only while being watched, as people-pleasers, but as slaves of Christ, do God's will † from your heart. 7 Serve with a good attitude, as to the Lord and not to people, † 8 knowing that whatever good each one does, slave or free, he will receive this back from the Lord.

SPIRITUAL WARFARE

S piritual warfare is a reality. From Genesis to Revelation, the Scriptures paint a picture of a cosmic battle that is largely unseen. Satan is, in fact, the "roaring lion, looking for anyone he can devour" (1Pt 5:8). Our enemy is an accuser (Rv 12:10), a deceiver (Rv 20:10), a murderer and a liar (Jn 8:44). He is the "ruler of this world" (Jn 12:31), the "dragon" who dares to fight against the angels of God (Rv 12:7).

As believers, we wrestle against principalities and powers (Eph 6:12) that work to lure us into sin. The powers disguise themselves as "angels of light," seeking to infiltrate the church through false teachings (2Co 11:1-15). The enemy seeks to steal, kill, and destroy (Jn 10:10). Satan is not, however, the focus of the Bible—God is.

Indeed, it was God who put in place the enmity between the seed of the woman and the seed of the serpent that would lead to the enemy's defeat at Christ's cross (Gn 3:15). God is the warrior who led his people across the Red Sea (Ex 15:3). David fought the Philistine giant, not with a sword and a javelin, but in the name of the Lord whose battle it was (1Sm 17:45-47). Jahaziel likewise assured Jehoshaphat of God's presence in the midst of battle by saying, "Do not be afraid or discouraged because of this vast number, for the battle is not yours, but God's" (2Ch 20:15).

Moreover, Paul challenged believers to put on God's armor, not human armor (Eph 6:11). God is our shield (Gn 15:1; Ps 28:7), and it is he who wears righteousness as body armor and the helmet of salvation (Is 59:17). This sovereign God even allows spiritual battles to take place in our lives in order to accomplish the greater good of his will (see Jb 1–2).

Because the Bible's story is about the One who will ultimately cast the devil into the lake of fire (Rv 20:10), our task as spiritual warriors is not to know Satan well—it is to know God so intimately that Satan's counterfeit becomes obvious by comparison. To know God and to recognize his sovereignty is to understand that we gain spiritual victory only through Christ, who has been raised above every power and authority (Eph 1:20-23).

VICTORY IN SPIRITUAL WARFARE

Believers need not fear the enemy, for we have the sword of the Spirit, the Word of God, as a primary weapon in battle (Eph 6:17). It is the Word that reminds us that Satan has been disarmed by the cross of Christ (Col 2:15), his power is limited by the will of Almighty God (Jb 1:10-12), and he will ultimately be bound (Rv 20:10). Like Jesus in the wilderness temptations, we can defeat our enemy through confidence in the Word (Mt 4:1-11).

Our victory is anchored in the central story of the Scriptures: the event of the cross. Jesus took on himself the sin of the world, paid the penalty for that sin, and conquered death (2Co 5:21; 1Jn 2:2). He ultimately broke Satan's power by his obedience "to the point of death—even to death on a cross" (Php 2:8). Through his shed blood, Christ has redeemed us (Eph 1:7) and placed us on the winning side of this spiritual battle. Indeed, we are on the offensive, daily living out the triumph of the cross.

The world sees our victory in spiritual warfare not by our strategies and techniques, but by our walking in truth and righteousness. The defeat of the enemy is consequently evident by how we live. And, for many believers who face persecution today, the enemy's defeat will also be seen by how they die. What surely seems a loss from a human perspective will instead be an announcement of mighty victory in heaven.

CAUTIONS IN SPIRITUAL WARFARE

Interest in the topic of spiritual warfare today has, however, often resulted in faulty understandings of warfare strategies. For example, some "warfare" writers and practitioners emphasize demonic exorcism as a primary tactic. Scholars debate whether or not demon possession occurs today, but it is difficult to prove that possession never occurs—especially when considering frontier mission fields in animistic cultures. Nevertheless, the Bible does not present exorcism as a chief ministry strategy. Jesus exorcised demons, yet he did so in the context of preaching and teaching ministry (see, e.g., Mk 1:21-28). He did not adopt elaborate exorcism rituals common in his day, nor did he go demon-hunting.

Jesus's approaches to exorcism were, in fact, varied. Often he spoke to the demon (e.g., Lk 8:29), but not always (Lk 13:10-17). He was not always physically present with the demon-possessed person (Mt 15:22-28). Only once is there evidence that he asked the name of a demon (Mk 5:9), and that was not to gain authority over the evil spirit. "Rebuking" language is common (e.g., Lk 4:35; 9:42), but not universal. Nowhere in the Bible is there a clear, reproducible exorcism ritual; thus, teaching such a pattern is biblically unwarranted.

Equally problematic are the implications that there are particular symptoms of possession and specific steps in exorcisms—again, such conclusions are not evident in Scripture. Demonic manifestations included, among other things, physical symptoms (e.g., Mt 9:32-33; 12:22), self-inflicted wounds (Mk 5:5), falling (Mk 9:18), and supernatural strength (Mk 5:3-4). Such diverse descriptions, however, are just that: descriptions rather than expectations.

Further, some "exorcists" assert that demons can possess believers. This conclusion is biblically indefensible. The Scriptures teach that believers are indwelt by and sealed by the Spirit of God (2Co 1:22; Eph 1:14), and the One in us is more powerful than the one that rules the world (1Jn 4:4). The Scriptures contain no example of a demon-possessed believer.

Others affirm the existence of "territorial spirits," or demonic beings that inhabit or reside over a region. Some warfare practitioners teach that we must cast down these demons before effectively doing evangelism in an area. The biblical evidence for such demons is weak at best (e.g., Dn 10:1-14), and nowhere is there a mandate for identifying or "praying down" these powers. A process of aggressively attacking territorial demons implies that the air must be cleared before the gospel can be effective. The implication is thus that the word of the cross as "the power of God" (1Co 1:18) apparently needs help in some situations. Such an implication demeans the power of the Word.

CHRISTIANS AND THE ARMOR OF GOD

How, then, should we respond to the issue of spiritual warfare? We must first recognize its reality. Even those who believe that exorcisms are unwarranted cannot deny the continued reality of spiritual warfare. The enemy still seeks to destroy God's people, and to deny that is to invite defeat.

Second, we must proclaim the Word of God. Potent and life changing, the message of the cross frees the blinded minds of the unbelieving (2Co 4:3-4) and equips believers for good works (2Tm 3:16-17). The proclamation of the Word is, in fact, an act of warfare against Satan's kingdom. It is no wonder, then, that the enemy so viciously strikes those who stand on the Scriptures—the very Word that promises us victory even in death (Heb 2:14-15).

Third, we must teach believers how to put on the full armor of God and resist the enemy (Eph 6:11; Jms

4:7). Putting on the armor is about learning to walk in truth, righteousness, and faith. It is about reading and proclaiming the Word of God while standing firmly on the gospel. When our strategies for discipleship—a fundamental element of spiritual warfare preparation—are weak, we send new believers into a lethal context unarmed. Defeat is then almost inevitable.

As followers of Christ, we are to wear the full armor of God, proclaim the gospel to unbelievers, and disciple believers. Taking on the enemy is not about a formula or a technique. It is about a lifestyle—a Bible-saturated, God-centered, Jesus-glorifying, Spirit-filled, prayer-driven lifestyle.

6:5-8 Slavery in the Roman Empire was significantly different from the kind of slavery typified in North America in the nineteenth century. Constituting one third of society, Roman slavery was not ethnicity-based, and people under considerable debt would put themselves into slavery until debt was repaid. Moreover, slaves could rise to significant positions of authority within a household, and even within civic government. Nevertheless, slaves were regarded as the property of their owners. Paul does not explicitly challenge the institution of slavery; he instructs believers as to how they should conduct themselves within it. See also "The Bible and Slavery," p. 1527.

6:9 Slave masters are reminded that they too have a Master . . . in heaven; thus, they ought not to domineer or mistreat their slaves. Again, the institution of slavery is not challenged: the focus here is that believers must occupy their respective roles in a manner befitting Christ.

6:11-12 Ephesus was a center for magic and the demonic (Ac 19:11-20), and such powers are in view here (see also "Satan and Demons," p. 1611). Unlike typical ideas of the time, security against such forces does not come from magical incantations but from holding fast to God's truth as 6:14-17 indicates. Christians put on this armor by believing the gospel, resting in its truths, and trusting in the Word of God.

6:14-17 The items of armor listed here picture that of the typical Roman soldier, but they are also drawn from OT descriptions of the armor that God, or his Messiah, wears in battle against his enemies (e.g., Is 11:5; 21:5; 52:7; 49:2; 59:17). Though Christ is already victorious over the spiritual forces of darkness (1:20-22), believers must still face them in spiritual warfare. Until Christ returns, spiritual warfare will remain a threat for which believers must be prepared. By sharing in the armor of the Lord, Christians are able to take their stand.

6:18-20 Prayer is central in the spiritual struggle; it involves praying for all the saints and for those proclaiming the gospel that they might do so with clarity and boldness. Paul does not hesitate to ask other believers to pray for him. See “Prayer and Recovery from Illness,” p. 1551.

PHILIPPIANS

INTRODUCTION

Philippians is Paul's most warmly personal letter. After initial difficulties in the city of Philippi (Ac 16), a strong bond developed between Paul and the converts there. Paul wrote to thank the church for a gift it had recently sent him in prison and to inform them of his circumstances.

CIRCUMSTANCES OF WRITING

AUTHOR: Paul the apostle wrote this short letter, a fact that no scholar seriously questions.

BACKGROUND: The traditional date for the writing of Philippians is during Paul's first Roman imprisonment (AD 60–62); few have challenged this conclusion.

Paul planted the church at Philippi during his second missionary journey (AD 51) in response to his "Macedonian vision" (Ac 16:9-10). This was the first church in Europe (Ac 16).

The text of this letter from Paul suggests several characteristics of the church at Philippi. First, Gentiles predominated. Few Jews lived in Philippi, and, apparently, the church had few. Second, women had a significant role (Ac 16:11-15; Php 4:1-2). Third, the church was generous. Fourth, they remained deeply loyal to Paul.

Philippi, the ancient city of Krenides, had a military significance. It was the capital of Alexander the Great, who renamed it for his father Philip of Macedon, and it became the capital of the Greek Empire (332 BC). The Romans conquered Greece, and in the civil war after Julius Caesar's death (44 BC), Antony and Octavius repopulated Philippi by allowing the defeated armies (Brutus and Cassius) to settle there (eight hundred miles from Rome). They declared the city a Roman colony. It flourished, proud of its history and entrenched in Roman political and social life. In his epistle to the Philippians, Paul alluded to military and political structures as metaphors for the church.

Paul wanted to thank the church for their financial support (4:10-20). He also addressed disunity and the threat of heresy. Disunity threatened the church, spawned by personal conflicts (4:2) and disagreements over theology (3:1-16). The heresy came from radical Jewish teachers. Paul addressed both issues personally and warmly.

The church at Philippi sent Epaphroditus to help Paul in Rome. While there he became ill (2:25-28). The church learned of Epaphroditus's illness, and Paul wished to ease their concern for him. Some people possibly blamed Epaphroditus for failing his commission, but Paul commended him and sent him home. Perhaps Epaphroditus carried this letter with him.

CONTRIBUTION TO THE BIBLE

Paul's letter to the Philippians teaches us much about genuine Christianity. While most of its themes may be found elsewhere in Scripture, it is within this letter that we can see how those themes and messages impact life. Within the NT, Philippians contributes to our understanding of Christian commitment and what it means to be Christlike.

STRUCTURE

Philippians can be divided into four primary sections. Paul had definite concerns that he wanted to express, and he also wrote to warn about false teachers who threatened the church. Many of Paul's letters can be divided into theological and practical sections, but Philippians does not follow that pattern. Paul's theological instruction is woven throughout the fabric of a highly personal letter.

CHRISTIAN WORLDVIEW ELEMENTS

TEACHINGS ABOUT GOD

For his glory, God the Father has both exalted Jesus Christ and called a people to know him. Jesus, by very nature God, humbled himself by death on a cross but thereby has been exalted with the greatest name. The Spirit of God enables all true worship and provides help for God's people.

TEACHINGS ABOUT HUMANITY

In Philippians there are two essential categories of human beings: enemies of the cross of Christ and those who know him (3:18-20). The former are destined for destruction, the latter for resurrection. Among those who know him, however, some proclaim him purely, but others do so from false motives (1:15-18).

TEACHINGS ABOUT SALVATION

Salvation is presented from the viewpoint of knowing Christ. Knowing Christ, more than just the remedy for sins, is a valuable treasure for which everything else in life is to be happily cast aside. This applies not only to whatever good things one was and did before, but it also means that Jesus's followers will joyfully suffer (as he did). They will ultimately share in his resurrection.

GREETING

1 Paul † and Timothy, † servants of Christ Jesus: To all the saints in Christ Jesus who are in Philippi, † including the overseers † and deacons. †
2 Grace to you and peace from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

THANKSGIVING AND PRAYER

3 I give thanks to my God for every remembrance of you, † 4 always praying with joy for all of you in my every prayer, 5 because of your partnership in the gospel from the first day † until now. † 6 I am sure of this, that he who started a good work † in you † will carry it on to completion † until the day of Christ Jesus. 7 Indeed, it is right † for me to think this way about all of you, because I have you in my heart, † and you are all partners with me in grace, both in my imprisonment † and in the defense † and confirmation of the gospel. 8 For God is my witness, † how deeply I miss all of you † with the affection of Christ Jesus. 9 And I pray this: that your love † will keep on growing † in knowledge and every kind of discernment, † 10 so that you may approve the things that are superior † and may be pure † and blameless † in the day of Christ, † 11 filled with the fruit † of righteousness † that comes through Jesus Christ to the glory † and praise of God.

ADVANCE OF THE GOSPEL

12 Now I want you to know, brothers and sisters, that what has happened to me has actually advanced the gospel, † 13 so that it has become known throughout the whole imperial guard, and to everyone else, that my imprisonment is because I am in Christ. 14 Most of the brothers have gained confidence in the Lord from my imprisonment and dare even more to speak the word † † fearlessly. 15 To be sure, some preach Christ out of envy and rivalry, † but others out of good will. 16 These preach out of love, † knowing that I am appointed for the defense of the gospel; 17 the others proclaim Christ out of selfish ambition, † not sincerely, thinking that they will cause me trouble in my imprisonment. 18 What does it matter? Only that in every way, whether from false motives † or true, Christ is proclaimed, and in this I rejoice. Yes, and I will continue to rejoice 19 because I know this will lead to my salvation † † through your prayers and help from the Spirit † of Jesus Christ. † 20 My eager expectation and hope † is that I will not be ashamed about anything, but that now as always, with all courage, Christ will be highly honored in my body, whether by life † or by death. †

LIVING IS CHRIST

21 For me, to live is Christ † and to die is gain. † 22 Now if I live on in the flesh, this means fruitful † work † for me; and I don't know which one I should choose. 23 I am torn between the two. I long to depart and be with Christ † — which is far better † — 24 but to remain in the flesh is more necessary for your sake. 25 Since I am persuaded of this, I know that I will remain and continue with all of you for your progress and joy in the faith, † 26 so that, because of my coming to you again, your boasting † in Christ Jesus † may abound.

27 Just one thing: As citizens of heaven, live your life † worthy of the gospel of Christ. Then, whether I come and see you or am absent, I will hear about you that you are standing firm † in one † spirit, in one accord, † contending together for the faith † of the gospel,

DO MY BELIEFS FIT A CHRISTIAN WORLDVIEW?

A worldview is a set of beliefs we hold about reality that help us make sense of the world. In Kingdom Triangle, J. P. Moreland focuses on intellectually analyzing our worldviews and how we should live in light of them. He suggests we ask the following questions when seeking to understand how any given worldview sees the world: (1) What is real?

(2) What are the nature and limits of knowledge?

(3) Who is well-off? What is the good life?

(4) Who is a really good person?

(5) How does one become a really good person?

Sometimes people compare a worldview to a set of eyeglasses through which we see reality. It is true that a worldview helps provide an interpretive grid by which we can understand. However, as with glasses, our experiences always are mediated (filtered) by the lenses. We cannot experience or access reality directly if our worldviews are like glasses. And if we cannot access reality directly, what can we be interpreting? It seems that we could not even get started. Also, there are many things that we can experience directly.

For example, when she was very young, my daughter could see an apple before she had any beliefs about apples. She formed a concept of apples from seeing them many times, and then after that could form a belief that something she sees is an apple. She could see the thing as it is, compare it with her concept, realize it is an apple, and then form a belief that it is an apple. Our ability to experience reality directly (though not perfectly or exhaustively) is crucial for understanding many other beliefs, and it provides a way to test them.

So, in terms of seeing reality, a worldview is not merely like a set of glasses, but instead is "a habituated way of directing our attention (or inattention)" to aspects of reality (Moreland, Kingdom Triangle, 33). How well we learn to direct our attention to the various aspects of reality is crucial to developing beliefs that fit well with it. Once we have discovered good reasons to trust the Bible as God's revelation, then we can see that our learning about any aspect of reality needs to conform to what God has made known through general revelation (creation) and special revelation (Scripture). We can know much about reality through studying creation (e.g., Rm 1), yet our understanding of it needs to be brought under Christ's lordship and his written Word, the Scriptures.

This surfaces another crucial aspect, the "worldview fit" of our beliefs. In Jesus are found all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge (Col 2:3), and he is the truth (Jn 14:6). He knows all truth and should be accepted as Lord over everything, including all of our thoughts, attitudes, and beliefs. All of our beliefs need to be submitted to him for his direction and wisdom. As his disciples (learners), we must go to him if we are to grow in grace and knowledge (2Pt 3:18). That means we must go to him through the Scriptures. We also must go to him prayerfully, listening in complete dependence on his Spirit to lead and guide us into all truth in all subjects—even in our jobs.

Why? First, we were made to be in an intimate heart-and-mind unity with God, but sin has disrupted that and separated our hearts and minds from him. Apart from the lordship of Christ, our default heart attitude is to usurp God and define for ourselves what is good, evil, and real (Gn 3:5). Even though believers have the Spirit, we easily can underestimate the pull of our flesh to war against the Spirit (Gl 5:17).

Second, often we do not take seriously that apart from God, we can do nothing (Jn 15:5; Zch 4:6). Even if we know the Scriptures well, it is easy to have lofty hearts that subtly seek to rule over the Spirit. Our thoughts are not God's thoughts (Is 55:9), so to the extent that we do not come before him with humble, dependent hearts and minds, we will live out of our flesh, which will yield all manner of beliefs that are off the mark.

Third, it is no accident that God's greatest command is to love him with all our hearts, souls, minds, and strength (Lk 10:27; cp. Mk 7:20-23), so we can be in a deep heart-and-mind unity with him (cp. 2Co 10:5). We must cling devotedly and reverently to God (Pr 1:7). If we stress loving God with our hearts but not our minds, we can indulge sentimental, fleshly desires. Conversely, if we overemphasize knowledge at the expense of love, we'll be arrogant and fleshly (1Co 8:1b). Consider Solomon, who loved God and was gifted beyond all others in wisdom and knowledge (1Kg 3), yet at best he had half a heart devoted to God (vv. 1-2) and eventually corrupted both himself and Israel.

In light of all of this, here are some further tests that will help identify the fit of your beliefs with the Christian worldview: (1) Are you seeking God in a given matter for fullness of truth, thereby being teachable (Pr 3:5-6)? Or, are you dogmatic, declaring what you think is right according to how you have granted authority to your own interpretations?

(2) To what extent does a given belief fit with God's kingdom perspective? Does it fit well with the reality, presence, and priority of his kingdom (Mt 6:33)?

(3) To what extent does a given belief promote or encourage your fleshly desires or the movement of God's Spirit in your life?

(4) Does the belief in question exalt you, or does it exalt the Lord?

Finally, here are five considerations in light of our present times that will help us ensure that our beliefs accord with the Christian worldview. First, since the Lord knows all truth, our beliefs should correspond to and be grounded in what reality is like, regardless of subject matter. This means we must have broad interests and learning if we wish to develop a good comprehension of the Christian worldview. One who chooses not to do the difficult work of probing, reading, and dialoguing with others will inevitably adopt beliefs that do not actually correspond with reality.

Second, our beliefs should cohere together. They should not be internally contradictory since God is not a God of confusion (1Co 14:33).

Third, some Christians today suggest postmodern approaches to truth and Christian faith. That view needlessly separates us from direct apprehension of reality and leads to us defining God and reality for ourselves, which is exactly what Satan wants (cp. Gn 3:5).

Fourth, others are advocating "Christian physicalism," which does away with the immaterial aspect of the human and thus may seem to fit better with strong materialist themes in modern science, but that leads to many troubles.

Fifth, Christianity claims to be the truth, yet in Western societies people often think religion gives us only opinions, which leads to religious relativism (pluralism). If we adopt relativism, it will undermine all attempts to be disciples and to develop a Christian worldview, for Scripture claims to give us knowledge of reality, not just opinions about it. The Christian worldview never has been just about mere opinion or blind faith; it is about knowledge given by God. To obtain that knowledge, we must love God and continually compare our beliefs to reality as God has revealed it.

1:1 Some have said that the early church had no clear structure or leadership, but already here we see the presence of recognized overseers (or elders, or pastors) and deacons.

1:3-11 Paul's thanksgiving for the Philippians is rooted in their partnership in the gospel and his deep affection for them. This is arguably Paul's most joyous letter, as he regards the Philippians as his genuine partners in the cause of Christ (4:10-19).

1:6,10 The day of Christ Jesus refers to Christ's return and draws on the OT concept of "the day of the Lord" (e.g., Is 13:6-9), a day of judgment. But here "the day" has been adapted to refer to Christ, the promised Messiah, who will reign with justice and righteousness (Is 9:7).

1:12-13 What has happened to me refers to Paul's imprisonment (probably) in Rome. But his suffering has advanced the gospel (Rm 8:28), having given Paul a higher profile along with opportunities to speak before significant Roman authorities.

1:17 The only known reference to selfish ambition before the NT is in Aristotle's Politics (5.3), in which it describes aspiration for power through unjust means. Likewise, Paul refers to those who proclaim Christ for their own gain.

1:21 Death is an enemy (1Co 15:26). It is only gain because Christ has conquered it, and it leads believers into God's presence.

1:23 See "The Eternal State," p. 1622.

1:27 The Philippians are described as citizens of heaven—a striking designation for those belonging to Philippi, a privileged Roman colony. Christians would be seen as bad citizens of Philippi, refusing to engage in worship of the Roman emperor and other such pagan practices. But as citizens of heaven, they are to live in a manner worthy of the gospel.

1:29 Suffering for Christ is an essential aspect of discipleship (see also Jn 16:33; 2Tm 3:12; 1Pt 2:21), and is even described as a gift—it has been granted to you . . . to suffer for him.

CHRISTIAN HUMILITY

2 If then there is any encouragement in Christ, if any consolation of love, † if any fellowship with the Spirit, † if any affection and mercy, †
2 make my joy complete by thinking the same way, † having the same love, † united in spirit, intent on one † purpose. 3 Do nothing out of selfish ambition † or conceit, † but in humility † consider others as more important † than yourselves. 4 Everyone should look out not only for his own interests, † but also for the interests of others. †

CHRIST'S HUMILITY AND EXALTATION

5 Adopt the same attitude as that of Christ Jesus,

6 who, existing in the form of God, did not consider equality with God † as something to be exploited. † 7 Instead he emptied himself † by assuming the form of a servant, † taking on the likeness of humanity. † And when he had come as a man, 8 he humbled himself by becoming obedient to the point of death — even to death on a cross. † 9 For this reason God highly exalted him † and gave him the name
that is above every name, 10 so that at the name of Jesus every knee will bow † — in heaven † and on earth and under the earth † — 11 and every tongue † will confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory † of God the Father.

LIGHTS IN THE WORLD

12 Therefore, my dear friends, † just as you have always obeyed, † so now, not only in my presence but even more in my absence, work out your own salvation with fear and trembling. 13 For it is God who is working in you both to will and to work according to his good purpose. 14 Do everything without grumbling † and arguing, † 15 so that you may be blameless † and pure, † children of God who are faultless † in a crooked † and perverted † generation, † among whom you shine like stars in the world, 16 by holding firm to the word † of life. Then I can boast † in the day of Christ † that I didn't run or labor for nothing. 17 But even if I am poured out † as a drink offering † on the sacrificial service of your faith, I am glad and rejoice with all of you. 18 In the same way you should also be glad and rejoice with me.

TIMOTHY AND EPAPHRODITUS

19 Now I hope in the Lord Jesus † to send Timothy † to you soon so that I too may be encouraged by news about you. 20 For I have no one else like-minded who will genuinely care about your interests; 21 all seek their own interests, † not those of Jesus Christ. † 22 But you know his proven character, because he has served with me in the gospel ministry like a son with a father. 23 Therefore, I hope to send him as soon as I see how things go with me. 24 I am confident in the Lord that I myself will also come soon. †

25 But I considered it necessary to send you Epaphroditus † — my brother, coworker, and fellow soldier, as well as your messenger and minister to my need † — 26 since he has been longing for all of you and was distressed because you heard that he was sick. 27 Indeed, he was so sick that he nearly died. However, God had mercy on him, and not only on him but also on me, so that I would not have sorrow upon sorrow. 28 For this reason, I am very eager to send him so that you may rejoice again when you see him and I may be less anxious. 29 Therefore, welcome him in the Lord with great joy and hold people like him in honor, 30 because he came close to death for the work † of Christ, risking his life to make up what was lacking in your ministry to me.

2:2 Thinking the same way refers to unity in thinking about the gospel, not to an artificial uniformity in all areas of life.

2:3 Genuine humility is seen in considering others as more important than self, and looking to the interests of others (2:4). Such humility is modeled on Christ, rather than on any notion of false humility that plays down one's gifts or abilities. On selfish ambition, see the note on 1:17.

2:5-11 As elsewhere in Paul, the example of Christ, particularly at the cross, is the basis of ethics. See also "Leadership and Biblical Ethics," p. 1501.

2:6 Jesus exists in the form of God and yet is distinct from God the Father. Statements such as this form the basis for the doctrine of the Trinity (see "The Incarnation of Jesus Christ," p. 1271).

2:7 Jesus emptied himself not by disowning his deity, but by humbling himself as the verse describes. He voluntarily veiled his glory. Some take the phrase likeness of humanity to suggest that Jesus did not truly become human but merely "appeared" to be human (as in the early Christological heresy Docetism). The verse, however, also says that Jesus came as a man.

2:8 The stress, even to death on a cross, demonstrates the horror of crucifixion in the ancient world. Even in brutal times, the cross was ghastly.

2:9 Jesus taught that "the one who humbles himself will be exalted" (Lk 18:14). Leaving the side of the Father, and humbling himself to the point of death on a cross, is the greatest personal lowering possible. It is fitting, then, that God highly exalted Jesus, giving him the name that is above every name.

2:10 The ancients understood the universe to consists of three spheres: heaven, earth, and under the earth. Thus, there will be universal cosmic acknowledgment—including angels, demons, humans, and all of creation—of the lordship of Christ.

2:15 As Israel was to be a "light for the nations" (Is 49:6), so the church is to shine the light of Christ like stars in the world.

2:17 The drink offering alludes to OT libation sacrifices (e.g., Nm 15:10). Paul imagines his life poured out as a sacrifice to God.

2:19-30 Timothy and Epaphroditus are servants who have adopted the same attitude as Christ Jesus (2:5). They are more concerned for the Philippians than for their own welfare.

KNOWING CHRIST

3 In addition, my brothers and sisters, rejoice † in the Lord. To write to you again about this is no trouble for me and is a safeguard for you.

2 Watch out for the dogs, watch out for the evil † workers, watch out for those who mutilate the flesh. 3 For we are the circumcision, † the ones who worship by the Spirit † of God, boast in Christ Jesus, † and do not put confidence in the flesh — 4 although I have reasons for confidence in the flesh.
If anyone else thinks he has grounds for confidence in the flesh, I have more:

CHIEF PURPOSE OF HUMANITY

The perennial question in philosophy is this: what is the meaning of human life? Another way to express the question is this: what is the end or purpose for which God created the world and the humans who inhabit it? Is there any objective meaning to life, or is every investment a matter of personal preference with no deeper meaning to be found?

GOD THE CREATOR

It is important to recognize that God did not create humans to satisfy anything that was lacking in him. As Acts 17:24-25 says, “The God who made the world and everything in it—he is Lord of heaven and earth—does not live in shrines made by hands. Neither is he served by human hands, as though he needed anything, since he himself gives everyone life and breath and all things.”

Orthodox Christianity affirms that God is triune, eternally enjoying fellowship between the Father, Son, and Spirit. Though God did not create anything to satisfy a deficiency within himself, we glean from the doctrine of the Trinity that just as God is inherently relational, so we are made as beings to live in community with one another, and ultimately to enjoy fellowship and unity with God and every facet of his creation. We see this relational aspect of creation in Scripture, for the Lord God said, “It is not good for the man to be alone. I will make a helper corresponding to him” (Gn 2:18). Accordingly, God fashions the woman from the rib of Adam and presents her as a suitable helper to him (Gn 2:23). Most importantly, God created us to walk and have fellowship with him (Gn 3:8).

FOUNDATION FOR MEANING FROM THE EXISTENCE OF GOD

A theistic framework provides a rational account for the existence of an objectively meaningful and subjectively satisfying foundation for meaning in our lives. In his article, “Religion Gives Meaning to Life,” Louis Pojman notes that if theism is true and there is a benevolent supreme being governing the universe, then other things result.

1. THEISM OFFERS A SATISFYING EXPLANATION OF THE ORIGINS AND SUSTENANCE OF THE UNIVERSE.

Humans are not the product of chance or an impersonal big bang, nor are we merely a blind collocation of particles in motion. Rather, we are endowed with God-like properties that make us unique in creation, but also accountable as to how we exercise dominion over and relate to other parts of it (Gn 1:26). As divine image-bearers we are rational, emotional, and volitional.

That being said, we are more than rational creatures; we are also created for love. Jesus teaches that we are to love the Lord our God with all of our hearts, souls, strength, and minds, and to love our neighbors as ourselves (Lk 10:27). By cooperating with God in his creation plan, we fulfill the purpose for which he created us and find satisfaction and meaning in life. We cooperate by knowing the gifts God has given us, and by using them in such a way that God receives the praise (Mt 5:16; 1Co 13:1-13; Eph 4:7-16). Since each individual is endowed with spiritual gifts, his personal meaning is found in utilizing these gifts for Christ and his kingdom. Moreover since God interacts in history, and history is directed toward the union of Christ and his church, each investment of these spiritual gifts is bound up in a larger story—one that spills over into the afterlife.

2. THEISM CAN EXPLAIN HOW THE UNIVERSE IS SUFFUSED IN GOODNESS AND THAT GOD WILL WIN OUT OVER ALL THE EVIL WE SEE IN THE WORLD

WE SEE IN THE WORLD.

Scripture affirms that God is perfectly good (1Ch 16:34; Pss 100:5; 136:1; 145:9). God looked on his creation and proclaimed it good (Gn 1:31). Unfortunately, Adam and Eve did not honor the end for which they were created. Instead of choosing fellowship and communion with God, they sought their own destiny independent from him. Thus begins the story of broken relationships and suffering that results from evil. Jesus, however, takes the broken world and recreates it, restoring what was lost in Adam's rebellion (2Co 5:17). Ultimately evil and death are defeated at the resurrection (1Co 15), and in the end God makes a new heaven and new earth (Rv 22:1-5).

3. GOD LOVES AND CARES FOR US, AND AS A RESULT OF HIS LOVE WE HAVE A DEEPER MOTIVE FOR MORALLY GOOD ACTIONS, INCLUDING ACTS OF SELF-SACRIFICE.

4. THEISTS HAVE AN ANSWER TO THE QUESTION "WHY BE MORAL?"

As noted above, God is the source of all that is good. But what is more, the existence of God best explains why we have moral duties. A duty is an obligation we have to perform, or a certain action we must refrain from performing. For example, we have a duty to fulfill the great commission and the Great Commandments. We have a duty not to envy, gossip, malign, slander, or hate. Duties come from persons in authority, and there is no higher moral authority than God himself.

God provides a rich account of where our moral actions find both their value and our obligations. Moral decision making is significant for one's life. As John Cottingham explains, "Without an overarching structure that confers meaning on life, and without a normative pattern or model to which the meaningful life must conform, then a meaningful life reduces to little more than an engaged life in which the agent is systematically committed to certain projects he makes his own, irrespective of their moral status." Accordingly, Fulfillment and meaning pursued in ways that involve deceiving or hurting others, or making use of them as mere instrumental fodder for one's own success, closing one's heart and mind to the voice of one's fellow creatures—these are modes of activity that make one less human. To put the matter somewhat grandly, a meaningful life will be oriented as far as possible toward truth and beauty and goodness, or at least by striving toward those ideals.

5. ALL PERSONS ARE OF EQUAL WORTH.

Since every person is crafted in the image of God, each is intrinsically valuable—and not simply valuable as a means to an end. God loves each person, for all are created in him and for him. Paul affirms the equal worth of persons, for Christ died as a sacrifice for all persons (Gl 3:28).

6. LIFE AFTER DEATH ALSO GUARANTEES THAT THERE WILL BE NO UNACCOUNTED-FOR INJUSTICES.

As the teacher concludes Ecclesiastes, "Fear God and keep his commands, because this is for all humanity. For God will bring every act to judgment, including every hidden thing, whether good or evil" (12:13-14).

In essence, the chief purpose of humanity is to claim every endeavor and institution in life for Christ. But what is more, when justice is brought to bear and all relationships are made whole, then God's original plan for all creation will be realized—each aspect of the good creation is at peace (shalom; Gn 1:26-27); that is, there is shalom in all of creation, all relationships, and all stewardship.

JEREMY A. EVANS

5 circumcised the eighth day; † of the nation of Israel, † of the tribe of Benjamin, † a Hebrew born of Hebrews; regarding the law, † a Pharisee; 6 regarding zeal, † persecuting † the church; regarding the righteousness that is in the law, † blameless. †

7 But everything that was a gain to me, I have considered to be a loss because of Christ. 8 More than that, I also consider everything to be a loss in view of the surpassing value † of knowing Christ † Jesus my Lord. Because of him I have suffered the loss of all things and consider them as dung, so that I may gain Christ † 9 and be found in him, not having a righteousness of my own from the law, † but one that is through faith in Christ † — the righteousness from God based on faith. † 10 My goal is to know him and the power of his resurrection and the fellowship of his sufferings, † being conformed to his death, † 11 assuming that I will somehow reach the resurrection from among the dead.

REACHING FORWARD TO GOD'S GOAL

12 Not that I have already reached the goal or am already perfect, but I make every effort to take hold † of it because I also have been taken hold of by Christ Jesus. 13 Brothers and sisters, I do not † consider myself to have taken hold of it. But one thing I do: Forgetting what is behind † and reaching forward to what is ahead, 14 I pursue as my goal the prize promised by God's heavenly † call in Christ Jesus. † 15 Therefore, let all of us who are mature think this way. And if you think differently about anything, God will reveal † this also to you. 16 In any case, we should live up to whatever truth we have attained. 17 Join in imitating me, brothers and sisters, and pay careful attention to those who live according to the example you have in us. 18 For I have often told you, and now say again with tears, that many live as enemies of the cross † of Christ. 19 Their end is destruction; their god is their stomach; their glory † is in their shame. They are focused on earthly things, 20 but our citizenship is in heaven, and we eagerly wait for a Savior from there, the Lord Jesus Christ. 21 He will transform the body of our humble condition into the likeness of his glorious † body, † by the power that enables him to subject everything to himself.

3:2 This strong warning has in view Jewish-Christian teachers who say that in addition to believing in Jesus one must also be circumcised and follow OT purity regulations in order to be saved. Dogs were considered unclean because they would eat anything. This is, therefore, a stinging term to use for those overly concerned with purity regulations.

3:3 Circumcision was the mark of belonging to the old covenant. Paul says believers in Jesus are now the true circumcision, meaning the true people of God. But the mark of the new covenant is the Spirit of God rather than a change to the flesh.

3:5 Paul has impeccable Jewish credentials. He was circumcised on the right day according to the law of Moses (Gn 17:12; Lv 12:3). And while some Jews grew up with Greek customs and language, a Hebrew born of Hebrews grew up speaking Aramaic, immersed in Jewish culture. To be a Pharisee was to belong to the most zealous Jewish sect regarding obedience to the law.

3:8 The term translated dung can refer to food scraps, garbage, manure, or human dung. This is Paul's assessment of his claims to righteousness apart from Christ (see Is 64:6).

3:10-11 Paul views his life and ministry in conformity with Christ's death, as sharing in his sufferings. But he also knows the power of Christ's resurrection, believing he will also reach the resurrection from among the dead.

3:17 Imitating godly examples, and living so as to be such an example to others, is a key aspect of Christian discipleship.

3:19 Stomach refers metaphorically to "desires." These people simply obey their own desires; they worship their appetites. As a result they glory, or boast in, things that are actually their shame.

3:20 On heavenly citizenship, see the note on 1:27. In the Roman world, rulers—especially Roman emperors—were often regarded as a "savior." Since our citizenship is in heaven, we wait for a Savior from there, the Lord Jesus Christ. The Philippians' ultimate allegiance is to this Lord, who governs their true home. See also "Church and State," p. 1374.

3:21 The transformation of the body into the likeness of his glorious body refers to the bodily resurrection of the faithful. Elsewhere Paul teaches that our resurrected bodies will be like the glorious body of Jesus (1Co 15:42-49). See also "The Mind-Body Problem," p. 1175.

4 So then, my dearly loved and longed for brothers and sisters, my joy and crown, † in this manner stand firm † in the Lord, dear friends.

PRACTICAL COUNSEL

2 I urge Euodia and I urge Syntyche to agree in the Lord. 3 Yes, I also ask you, true partner, † to help these women who have contended for the gospel at my side, along with Clement and the rest of my coworkers whose names are in the book of life. 4 Rejoice in the Lord always. I will say it again: Rejoice! 5 Let your graciousness † be known to everyone. The Lord is near. † 6 Don't worry about anything, but in everything, through prayer and petition with thanksgiving, present your requests to God. 7 And the peace of God, which surpasses † all understanding, will guard your hearts and minds in Christ Jesus. †

8 Finally † brothers and sisters, whatever is true, † whatever is honorable, † whatever is just, † whatever is pure, † whatever is lovely, whatever is commendable — if there is any moral excellence † and if there is anything praiseworthy — dwell on these things. 9 Do what you have learned and received † and heard from me, and seen in me, and the God of peace will be with you.

APPRECIATION OF SUPPORT

10 I rejoiced in the Lord greatly because once again † you renewed your care for me. † You were, in fact, concerned about me but lacked the opportunity to show it. 11 I don't say this out of need, for I have learned to be content in whatever circumstances I find myself. 12 I know both how to make do with little, and I know how to make do with a lot. † In any and all circumstances I have learned the secret of being content — whether well fed or hungry, whether in abundance or in need. 13 I am able to do all things through him † who strengthens me. †

14 Still, you did well by partnering with me in my hardship.

15 And you Philippians † know that in the early days of the gospel, † when I left Macedonia, † no church shared with me in the matter of giving and receiving except you alone. 16 For even in Thessalonica † you sent gifts for my need † several times. 17 Not that I seek the gift, but I seek the profit † † that is increasing to your account. 18 But I have received everything in full, † and I have an abundance. I am fully supplied, † having received from Epaphroditus † what you provided — a fragrant offering, an acceptable sacrifice, pleasing † to

God. [19] And my God † will supply all your needs according to his riches in glory in Christ Jesus. [20] Now to our God and Father † be glory forever and ever. † Amen. †

FINAL GREETINGS

[21] Greet every saint in Christ Jesus. The brothers who are with me send you greetings. [22] All the saints send you greetings, especially those who belong to Caesar's † household. † [23] The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ be with your spirit. † †

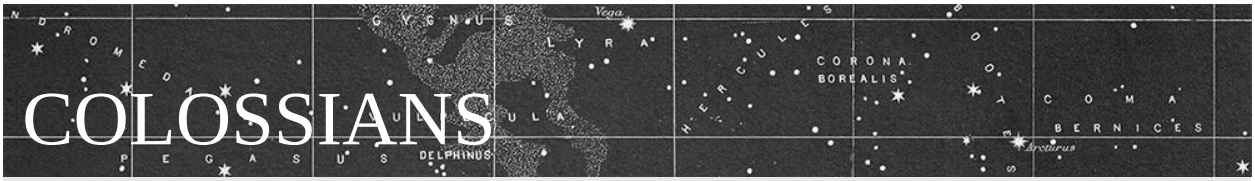
4:3 The book of life refers to a record of the names of people who belong to God. Moses preferred his own name to be deleted for the benefit of the whole generation of rebellious Israelites (Ex 32:32-33), and Isaiah looked forward to a time when blessings would be showered on those whose names are recorded in it (Is 4:3).

4:5 The Lord is near. Christian ethics is shaped by the reality of the return of Christ.

4:11 Paul has learned to be content through his dependence on God's strength (4:13). This is not the kind of contentment Stoicism advocated, which depended on self-sufficiency rather than on God.

4:17 Not that I seek the gift. Paul wants to thank the Philippians for their partnership, but also to make it clear that he is not seeking further gifts. Primarily, he desires their spiritual growth.

4:19 This verse is not a promise that we will have whatever we want. Instead it is a promise that when we are generous, God will provide for our needs. Generosity depends on trusting God for his provision.



COLOSSIANS

INTRODUCTION

Paul's letter to the church at Colossae is one of the Prison Letters (along with Ephesians, Philippians, and Philemon). Paul's desire with this letter was to correct the false teachings that were cropping up in the church. In doing so, Paul presented a clear picture of Jesus Christ as supreme Lord of the universe, head of the church, and the only one through whom forgiveness is possible.

CIRCUMSTANCES OF WRITING

AUTHOR: Colossians retains its place among the epistles of Paul, who identified himself as the author (1:1; 4:18). The church fathers unreservedly endorsed Pauline authorship (Irenaeus, Adv. Haer., 3.14.1; Tertullian, De Praescr. Haer., 7; Clement of Alexandria, Strom., 1.1; cp. Justin, Dialogue, 85.2; 138.2). A close reading of Colossians reveals a considerable number of lexical, grammatical, and theological similarities with the other Pauline writings (1:9,26; 2:11-14,16,20-21; 3:1,3,5-17). Also favoring the authenticity of Colossians as a letter of Paul is its close connection with Philemon, an epistle widely regarded as Pauline.

BACKGROUND: During his ministry in Ephesus (Ac 19:10), Paul sent Epaphras to spread the gospel in the Lycus Valley. Epaphras subsequently established the church at Colossae (1:7; 4:12-13). The city's population consisted mostly of Phrygians and Greeks, but it also included a significant number of Jews. The church, likewise, was mostly composed of Gentiles (1:21,27; 2:13), but it also had Jewish members (2:11,16,18,21; 3:11). When Epaphras (Phm 23) informed Paul of certain heretical teachings that had spread there, Paul wrote the letter to the Colossians as a theological antidote.

Paul wrote Colossians during his first Roman imprisonment (4:3,10,18; cp. Ac 28:30-31; Eusebius, Hist. Eccl., 2.22.1) in the early AD 60s. Together with Philemon, Philippians, and Ephesians, Colossians is commonly classified as a "prison letter." All four letters share several personal links that warrant this conclusion (Col 1:7; 4:7-8,17; Eph 6:21-22; Phm 2,12,23).

CONTRIBUTION TO THE BIBLE

Colossians provides one of the Bible's fullest expressions of the deity and supremacy of Christ. This is most evident in the magnificent hymn of praise (1:15-20) that sets forth Christ as the image of the invisible God, the Creator and sustainer of the universe, and the head of his body, the church. In Christ are all the "treasures of wisdom and knowledge" (2:3), because in him "the entire fullness of God's nature dwells bodily" (2:9). The supremacy of Christ also has implication for believers' salvation (2:10,13,20; 3:1,11-12,17) and conduct (3:5–4:6). Colossians contributes to Scripture a high Christology and a presentation of its implications for the believer's conduct.

STRUCTURE

Colossians may be divided into two main parts. The first (1:3–2:23) is a polemic against false teachings. The second (3:1–4:17) is made up of exhortations to proper Christian living. This is typical of Paul's approach, presenting a theology position first, a position on which the practical exhortations are built. The introduction (1:1-2) is in the form of a Hellenistic, personal letter.

Notable in the final section are the mention of Onesimus (4:9), which links this letter with Philemon; the mention of a letter at Laodicea (4:16) that may have been Ephesians; and Paul's concluding signature which indicates that the letter was prepared by an amanuensis (secretary; see 4:18).

CHRISTIAN WORLDVIEW ELEMENTS

TEACHINGS ABOUT GOD

God is the Father of Jesus, and his fullness is in his Son (1:19; 2:9). Jesus is especially the "firstborn" (1:15,18). Colossians 1:15-18 is the most elevated passage in Paul's letters presenting the identity of Christ. When Jesus returns, his people will appear with him in glory (3:4). The Spirit is mentioned only once (1:8), as the source of love.

TEACHINGS ABOUT HUMANITY

Because Colossians was first written to stop false teachings, it shows just how easy it is for people to be led astray from truth, particularly in matters of eternal destiny. In every age, powerful enemies of truth oppose genuine understanding of God and the human condition. Apart from Christ, all are "dead in trespasses" (2:13). Christ brings new life and transformation of relationships, particularly within the home (3:18–4:1).

TEACHINGS ABOUT SALVATION

Any understanding of salvation that is "Jesus plus . . ." is defective. Good works, keeping Jewish law, accepting certain philosophical principles, and other positive human accomplishments cannot add anything to what Jesus has already achieved. Therefore salvation is a matter of being rightly related to him by faith and refusing to trust anything else, no matter how valuable. Christ allows nothing to rival him in redeeming sinners.

COLOSSIANS TIMELINE

430–190 BC

Herodotus describes Colossae as "a great city of Phrygia" strategically located on the main road from Ephesus and Sardis eastward to the Euphrates. 430

Xenophon describes Colossae as a "populus" city, wealthy and large. 400

Cyrus and his army spend seven days in Colossae as he moves from Sardis east to take the throne of Persia. 400

Laodicea founded by Antiochus II who named it for his wife, Laodice 262–246

The regions of Colossae, Hieropolis, and Laodicea become subject to the Pergamenes after the battle of Magnesia. 190

130 BC–AD 18

Hieropolis comes under Roman rule after being established earlier in the second century. 129 BC

A sizeable Jewish population lives in the region of Colossae, Hieropolis, and Laodicea. 62 BC

Laodicea receives from Rome the title of a free city. 10 BC

In his Geography, Strabo describes Colossae as a small town. Laodicea was then the growing city in the Lycus Valley because of its location, its banking, and its trade of black sheep wool. AD 7–18

A destructive earthquake in the region of Colossae, Hieropolis, and Laodicea ad 17

GREETING

1 Paul, an apostle of Christ Jesus by God's will, † and Timothy † our brother: 2 To the saints in Christ at Colossae, who are faithful brothers and sisters.

Grace to you and peace from God our Father. †

THANKSGIVING

3 We always thank God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, when we pray for you, 4 for we have heard of your faith in Christ Jesus and of the love you have for all the saints 5 because of the hope reserved for you in heaven. You have already heard about this hope in the word of truth, † the gospel 6 that has come to you. It is bearing fruit † and growing all over the world, † just as it has among you since the day you heard it and came to truly appreciate † God's grace. † † 7 You learned this from Epaphras, † our dearly loved fellow servant.
He is a faithful minister of Christ † on your † behalf, 8 and he has told us about your love in the Spirit. †

PRAYER FOR SPIRITUAL GROWTH

PRAYER FOR SPIRITUAL GROWTH

9 For this reason also, since the day we heard this, we haven't stopped praying for you. We are asking † that you may be filled with the knowledge † of his will † in all wisdom and spiritual understanding, † 10 so that you may walk worthy of the Lord, fully pleasing to him: bearing fruit in every good work † and growing in the knowledge of God, † 11 being strengthened † with all power, † according to his glorious † might, so that you may have great endurance and patience, joyfully 12 giving thanks to the Father, who has enabled you † to share in the saints' inheritance in the light. † 13 He has rescued † us from the domain of darkness and transferred us into the kingdom † of the Son † he loves. † 14 In him we have redemption, † the forgiveness of sins.

THE CENTRALITY OF CHRIST

CHRISTIAN HIGHER EDUCATION

The notion that colleges and universities can be deeply Christian in their mission is hardly a modern concept. Many of today's Christian institutions of higher learning were founded in the middle 1800s, while many European and North American schools were established centuries earlier and have deep roots in Christianity.

Over time, the leaders of many of these institutions untethered their decision making from the convictions of their forebears. As a result, these schools today do not resemble the Christian intent of their founders. Several reasons account for the drift away from Christ-centeredness and biblical authority. One is that over time faculty no longer were expected to teach from a perspective that all learning is connected to all truth—truth authored and ordered by God, truth that transcends all of life and all disciplines.

KNOWLEDGE AND THE GOD OF TRUTH

Christians who see life from a biblical worldview understand learning differently. They do not believe that scholarship and faith are incompatible. Rather than education disconnected from faith, Christian thinkers believe that all knowledge falls within the realm of God's sovereignty and should be studied with that in mind. They believe that all matters related to the arts and sciences—in fact, the entirety of life—were created by God as good and contain truth that ultimately points back to him.

In Colossians 1, Paul summarizes Christ's dominion over all of life. It's a passage often cited in advocating for the great Christian intellectual tradition. Notice the repetition of the phrase "all things" in verses 16 and 17, strengthening the biblical argument that a Trinitarian God is the Creator of all things, the object of all things, and the connector of all things. Of Jesus the Son the passage says, "He is the image of the invisible God, the firstborn over all creation. For everything was created by him, in heaven and on earth, the visible and the invisible, whether thrones or dominions or rulers or authorities—all things have been created through him and for him. He is before all things, and by him all things hold together" (1:15-17).

INTEGRATIVE TEACHING

Christian colleges and universities teach from the perspective that God is the Creator of all things and that God holds all things together. Teaching this way is often referred to as "integrative teaching." In the ideal Christian higher education setting, God's created and connecting truth ought to be evident throughout the entire curriculum and community. Christian higher education is not "Christian" because faculty members sign a faith statement or students are required to attend chapel. Christian higher education is "Christian" when the understanding throughout the institution is that the entirety of knowledge and wisdom comes from God and points toward God.

Being part of a Christian college or university, therefore, means students grapple with the truths within each academic discipline and among all academic disciplines by seeing them as under God's sovereignty. This is what the Dutch theologian Abraham Kuyper meant when he said, "There is not a square inch in the whole domain of our human existence over which Christ, who is Sovereign over all, does not cry, 'Mine!'" The same is argued by Christian scholars John Henry Newman, Arthur Holmes, Mark Noll, George Marsden, and others, who say that learning separated from faith is woefully incomplete.

This approach to learning is what characterizes Christian higher education, and it must stay as a distinguishing mark of an exemplary Christian university. In the world's marketplace of ideas, the person and work of Jesus Christ and the implications of a biblical worldview currently hold little sway, yet they are vitally important to the Christian's assessments of and responses to dominant cultural ideologies. The role of Christian higher education is to preserve and advance the Christian intellectual tradition and to glorify God.

CHRISTIANITY FOR ALL OF LIFE

As Christian higher education enables Christians to think from the center of all knowledge—knowing that God is the Author of all truth—students begin asking new questions.

"How do faith and reason intersect in all of life and not run on separate tracks?"

"How should I live in a way that honors Christ and brings glory to God in the world of finance or law, medicine or politics, art or media?"

"What does it mean to think Christianly about the big questions of our times?"

"How does a biblical worldview influence the way I run my business or give away my money, nurture my family, or serve my community?"

Both the curricular programs in Christian higher education as well as cocurricular activities create a community in which students explore the answers to these and other worldview questions within a theological framework. Christian higher education is far more than sprinkling Christian flavorings on a college degree. Instead, it is an intellectually robust and academically holistic way of thinking.

To get there, scholars at the university need to be intentional about integrative thinking—the idea that academic disciplines are not disconnected from each other but are held together, since all truth is within the realm of God's ordered creation. An integrated faculty in Christian higher education allows professors to set aside time for discussing what God's revealed Word brings to bear on their respective disciplines and on the educational mission of the institution. This notion of integration brings together faculty from the social sciences, theology, the arts, the physical sciences, the humanities, business, education, and so forth, into a community with a shared approach to the connectedness of all things. If most of what is taught in the classrooms of a self-identified Christian college is indistinguishable from what is taught in non-Christian schools, then integration is evidently not a priority, and a full understanding of a Christian worldview is being short-changed.

EDUCATION AND SPIRITUAL FORMATION

Since a Christian college or university provides a foundation for intellectual development, academic competence will accompany thought leadership in church and society. Much happens within the life of a university to cultivate this discipline of the mind and soul together. It is the idea Paul writes about to the church in Rome, explaining that spiritual transformation takes place "by the renewing of [the] mind" (Rm 12:2).

Colleges or universities that appoint faculty who are first-rate scholars, have a deep love for Christ, and who are well-articulated integrators of scholarship and faith will impact generations of students. Such Christian thought leaders shape communities, congregations, and cultures for the advancement of Christ's kingdom.

Because God's Word bears witness to the truth of Christ at the core of all things, a Christ-centered university must be biblically grounded. The cornerstone of the evangelical movement from its starting point was an ineradicable belief in the authority of the Bible, alongside serious scholarship. Such commitment to the revealed Word of God is at the core of exemplary Christian universities. Being a Christian college or university means that the Christian Scriptures—as originally intended and as understood through the ages—have a central role in all programs.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION AS WORSHIP

Christian higher education is an act of worship, built on the lordship of Christ over all things—including our lives. Scholarship separated from loving God is a type of idolatry. By seeing all of life and vocation as a holy calling, graduates of Christian higher education should be alive in a way that encourages others to see Christ's redemptive work and to receive God's grace.

Learning this way is not an act of self-enrichment. It is an act of worshiping Creator God. This is what Jesus meant when he called his followers to love the Lord with all their hearts, souls, strength, and minds (Mt 22:37; Lk 10:27). The purpose of theology is not mere intellectual exercise, but doxology, an expression of praise to God. We study all of God's truths so that we may love God more.

GREEK PHILOSOPHY AND ITS INFLUENCE ON CHRISTIAN THEOLOGY

Twenty-four centuries after he lived in Athens, Plato's legacy looms large, for as A.N. Whitehead famously quipped, Western thought is "a series of footnotes to Plato." Given Plato's repute, his influence within Christian theology is unsurprising. Indeed, Christians have long grappled with Platonism, generally finding it useful for biblically grounded theology. C. S. Lewis validates Plato's theological worth in The Last Battle when Professor Digory Kirke exclaims, "It's all in Plato, all in Plato: bless me, what do they teach them in these schools?"

EARLY CHRISTIAN VIEWS

Whether the Bible's authors knew Plato's dialogues or Platonist philosophers is debatable. We know, however, that the NT's authors lived in an age shaped by Platonic philosophy. We also know that the early church fathers studied and wrote about Platonism. Their interpretation of Scripture emerged in light of Greek philosophy, especially Platonism.

Tertullian (AD 160–220) questioned Platonism's value. He cited Colossians 2:8: "Be careful that no one takes you captive through philosophy and empty deceit based on human tradition, based on the elements of the world, rather than Christ." He recalled Paul's missionary encounter with the Athenian philosophers, and posed some memorable questions: "What indeed has Athens to do with Jerusalem? What concord is there between the Academy and the Church? What between heretics and Christians? . . . Away with all attempts to produce a mottled Christianity of Stoic, Platonic, and dialectic composition! . . . With our faith, we desire no further belief."

On a fideistic understanding of Tertullian, faith in Christ and philosophical reflection are irrelevant or even opposed. Fideism—from the Latin word fides, meaning "faith"—views faith and reason as separate, perhaps even contradictory endeavors.

Context matters, however, for rightly interpreting Paul's teaching and Tertullian's instruction. In the church's first centuries, various philosophies might easily have co-opted Christianity for their own purposes. Paul and Tertullian demonstrate appropriate concern for the preeminence of Christ and caution against heresy. Yet they do not reject philosophy. They confidently reason, address complex ideas, and adopt concepts coined by philosophers, even while unstintingly putting Christ first. By testing Greek philosophy "according to Christ," they show how faithful Christians can discern truth and refute error.

Many church fathers accordingly used Platonism to aid biblical understanding, including Justin Martyr (AD 100–165), Clement of Alexandria (AD 150–215), Origin (AD 182–254), Basil of Caesarea (AD 330–379), Gregory of Nyssa (AD 335–394), and Augustine of Hippo (AD 354–430). Justin Martyr wrote, "Whatever things were rightly said . . . are the property of us Christians. For next to God, we worship and love the Word . . . [and] all the writers were able to see realities darkly through the sowing of the implanted word that was in them." Clement speculated that philosophy was God's gift, "a schoolmaster to bring the Hellenic mind—as the law, the Hebrews—to Christ." Philosophy was "a preparation . . . for him who is perfected in Christ." Augustine praised God for a providential encounter with "some books of the Platonists," whereby he discerned Christianity's intellectually fulfilling possibilities. He invoked a biblical metaphor: "I fixed my mind upon the gold which you willed that your people should bring with them from Egypt: for it was yours, wherever it was." God let the Israelites plunder Egyptian gold in their exodus for the promised land. Similarly, God invites us to exploit Plato's philosophical "gold" in our pilgrimage.

CHRISTIAN USES OF PLATONISM

Platonism provides rich resources for expressing biblical instruction about (1) God's being, (2) the nature of evil, and (3) humanity's highest hopes.

The Bible teaches of God's perfection (Mt 5:48), eternality (Dt 33:27), and unfathomable wisdom, power, and goodness (Jb 38–42). Yet Scripture does not explain how the divine attributes relate to each other. Platonism can help. Plato developed a philosophy—a metaphysics, epistemology, and ethics—in which perfect being, knowledge, and goodness are inextricably interconnected. Platonism thereby offers philosophical categories that enrich biblical understanding and undergird Christian doctrine.

For example, Platonists perceive that perfection entails eternality, for what is perfect is necessarily changeless (since changing the perfect would mar it), and what never changes is necessarily eternal (since it cannot cease to be unless it changes). What is perfect and eternal also outshines everything in truth, beauty, and goodness (since otherwise it would lack perfection). Plato could not conceive that something so described could be an impersonal force or property of matter. He envisioned it rather as a Being—a suprapersonal, superrational Mind, the "Maker and Father" of all, who desires that "all things should be good." Plato's conception of God, in short, binds together major biblical teachings about God's nature, making sense of the inseparable unity of perfectly divine being and perfectly divine essence.

The same philosophical framework clarifies the nature of evil. Because ultimate being—God himself—is identical with perfect goodness, anything lacking goodness also in some way lacks being. Evil is a privation not only of goodness, but of existence. A good thing's corruption mars its very being. Evil is therefore always lesser than, weaker than, good. Where evil seems to prevail, it succeeds only in a parasitic parody of good. The theological upshot is crucial. Through both biblical faith and philosophical reason we can speak confidently about evil's limits. Wickedness shall not abide and evil will not stand (Ps 1), for God's superabundant being and goodness ensure what Augustine confessed: "evil utterly is not." C. S. Lewis offers a fine literary illustration. In The Great Divorce, his fabulous "dream" of heaven and hell, he encounters "Bright People" possessed of a grace-filled goodness that gives them a readily apparent solidity, a "weight of glory." He also meets "Ghosts," whose insubstantial presence reflects their manifold sins. Sin has deprived them of being. Evil has literally unmade them.

Platonism proves helpful in a final area. We know the Father's loving adoption brings hope of eternal life through Christ (Jn 3:16; 1Pt 1:3), and we wait in the Spirit to gather in God's light (Rv 22:5). Plato helps little with the substance of our highest hopes. Nevertheless, he offers an alluring account of the form of our heavenly sight of God. Our hearts' desire finds rest atop a metaphorical "ladder of love," which we ascend to behold divine Beauty itself. Tracing the lineaments of Plato's dramatization of human longing, theologians write of contemplative wonder at the sight of God, whereby we see God in effortless, endlessly delightful, intellectual vision. And in what theologians call theosis, our adoration of God transforms us, making us more like God as our participation in the divine life grows. Loving ascent, contemplative wonder, intellectual vision, participatory understanding, mimetic transformation—such theologically rich conceptions of heavenly life are indebted to Platonism. Plato has aided Augustine, Bonaventure, Aquinas, Dante, Milton, Bunyan, Tolkien, and Lewis in writing of our hoped-for sight of God.

PLATONISM'S SHORTCOMINGS

Lucy Beckett says Plato's acknowledgement "of the unity in God of truth, goodness and beauty, fitfully intelligible but not yet visible in the Word made flesh, [is] unique in the pre-Christian world." From the church's early life to now, Platonic concepts and arguments have enriched biblical theology. Key elements of our doctrine of God, evil's limits, and Christian beatitudes are indebted to Platonism. Yet Plato was not a Christian and his dialogues are not in the Bible.

Two major shortcomings arise. First, Plato denigrates the material world and the body instead of honoring God's good creation. Plato thus embraces a body-soul dualism, privileges the soul over the body, and does not countenance bodily resurrection. Second, Plato cannot fathom the self-emptying love of the incarnate Son of God. It is not only that he lived before Jesus. That God could become a man is altogether beyond Plato's imagination. Because he lacks Trinitarian theology and devalues matter, the idea of the Word become flesh (Jn 1:14) could not occur to him.

Recently so-called open theists have questioned traditional doctrines supposedly distorted by Platonism. God's simplicity (the unity of his existence and essence), aseity (absolute independence and self-existence), and omniscience are allegedly defective doctrines supported by Platonism but not the Bible. However, we should be wary of abandoning centuries-old Christian teaching. Church fathers, medieval scholastics, reformation leaders, and modern theologians formulated doctrine "according to Christ," realizing that Platonism offers subordinate assistance. Again, Beckett says it well: "It is not the case that Plato's philosophy makes sense of the revelation of God in Christ, but that the revelation of God in Christ, the Incarnation and Resurrection that healed Plato's soul-body dualism, makes sense of Plato's philosophy, the sense that Plato himself could not make."

23 if indeed you remain grounded and steadfast in the faith † and are not shifted

PAUL'S MINISTRY

24 Now I rejoice in my sufferings † for you, and I am completing in my flesh what is lacking in Christ's afflictions for his body, † that is, the church. 25 I have become its servant, according to God's commission that was given to me for you, to make the word of God fully known, 26 the mystery hidden for ages and generations but now revealed to his saints. 27 God wanted to make known among the Gentiles the glorious wealth of this mystery, which is Christ † in you, the hope † of glory. 28 We proclaim him, warning and teaching everyone with all wisdom, so that we may present everyone mature in Christ. [29] I labor for this, striving † with his strength that works powerfully in me. †

1:1 Paul's ministry does not spring simply from his desires, but from obedience to God's will.

1:2 In the NT, all Christians are saints because they have been made holy in Christ and set apart for God (which is the basic meaning of the word).

1:3 Thanksgivings are common in Paul's letters. In addition to the role they play in the letters as a whole, they underscore the importance of giving thanks, which is a fundamental aspect of life before God in both Testaments (see for example Pss 7:17; 9:1; 30:4; Eph 5:4, 20). See also Colossians 2:7; 3:15,17; 4:2.

1:5 The hope reserved for the Colossians in heaven is the cause of their love for fellow believers (v. 4). Christian living is radically focused on eternity, and the certain hope in God's promises in the gospel animates living today. Furthermore, this gospel is the word of truth. God is the source of truth and has revealed it in his gospel (also vv. 6,12).

1:7 Epaphras is dearly loved by Paul. Terms of affection are used freely and often (cp. 4:7,9), demonstrating the type of community experienced by early Christians.

1:9-10 Unceasing prayer for the churches is a common refrain in Paul's letters. Prayer for one another is a basic Christian practice. See also "Sources for Ethics," p. 1371.

1:11 Strikingly, all God's strength and might is required for endurance and patience. These hallmarks of the Christian life are to shape our existence in this world.

1:12 The inheritance recalls Israel's possession of the promised land of Canaan (Nm 18:20; Dt 10:19), but this is an inheritance in the light—it's not a physical place on earth, but a share in heavenly glory.

1:13 Just as God rescued Israel from Egypt's rule and brought them to the promised land, so the Father has rescued us from the rule and tyranny of darkness (the opposite of light; v. 12), brought under the rule of Christ.

1:15 The OT forbids any image of God, but Jesus is the proper image of God—the One who reveals to us what the invisible God is like (cp. Jn 1:18; 14:9). He is the firstborn over all creation, meaning he is the descendent of David who reigns as King: "I will also make him my firstborn, greatest of the kings of the earth" (Ps 89:27). The term "firstborn" does not imply that Jesus is a created being (cp. Col 1:16). See also "Hinduism," p. 1408.

1:16 Jesus is the Creator of everything . . . in heaven and on earth, the visible and the invisible. The Bible is clear that there is only one Creator God, and Paul identifies Jesus with him. He did not create by shaping preexistent material (Heb 11:3), and his creations are not limited to the visible realm. On the biblical view, the spiritual realm—including angels and heaven—are as real as any material aspect of creation. See also "A Biblical View of Angels," p. 1531.

1:17 See "Divine Providence and Naturalism," p. 1355.

1:18 As the firstborn from the dead, Jesus's resurrection is the guarantee of the resurrection of the righteous that will occur on the day of judgment.

1:19 This is an important verse concerning the incarnation and deity of Jesus. All the fullness of God was in him (see also 2:9), so in Jesus we encounter the true God in all his fullness. See "Jehovah's Witnesses," p. 1575.

1:20 At the cross God reconciles everything to himself, whether things on earth or things in heaven. The cross has cosmic implications and cannot be reduced to merely personal terms. God is at work setting all things right, and individual salvation is a part of that work. See also "The Bible and Creation Care," p. 24.

1:21 See "The Bible and Intellectual Pursuit," p. 1512.

1:23 If indeed you remain . . . steadfast in the faith. The NT consistently holds out the necessity of perseverance in the faith (e.g., Mt 24:12-13; Jn 15:6; Heb 3:12; Jms 5:19-20; 1Jn 2:19). Such perseverance is nevertheless the result of God's grace (Php 2:13). That the gospel has been proclaimed in all creation under heaven probably refers to the cosmic scope of the gospel; Christ's work has been made known to the spiritual and earthly realms.

1:24 What is lacking in Christ's afflictions. Paul is not saying that Christ's sufferings are inadequate for salvation. That would contradict what he says in 1:19-20 and 2:15 (and in other letters). Rather, he is referring to further suffering required of Christ's servants for the sake of the church (see 2Co 1:5-6; 4:10-12). The work of Christ must be made known in order for the church to grow (Col 1:25).

1:26-27 For various religions in the first century, mystery referred to special knowledge reserved for certain people. In Paul's usage it refers to the secret of how all peoples would be blessed through Abraham (Gn 12:3). This mystery has now been made clear—it is Christ in you. Christ enables the Gentiles to participate in the blessings promised to Abraham.

1:29 Divine sovereignty and human responsibility work together, rather than negating one another. Paul labors, knowing that his striving is possible because it is God's strength that works powerfully in him.

2 For I want you to know how greatly I am struggling † for you, for those in Laodicea, † and for all who have not seen me in person. 2 I want their hearts to be encouraged † and joined together in love, so that they may have all the riches of complete understanding and have the knowledge of God's mystery † — Christ. † † 3 In him are hidden all the treasures of wisdom † and knowledge. †

CHRIST VERSUS THE COLOSSIAN HERESY

4 I am saying this so that no one will deceive you with arguments that sound reasonable. 5 For I may be absent in body, but I am with you in spirit, † rejoicing to see how well ordered you are and the strength of your faith in Christ.
6 So then, just as you have received † Christ Jesus as Lord, † continue to live in him, 7 being rooted and built up in him † and established in the faith, just as you were taught, † and overflowing with gratitude.
8 Be careful that no one takes you captive through philosophy and empty deceit based on human tradition, † based on the elements of the world, rather than Christ. † 9 For the entire fullness † of God's nature dwells bodily † in Christ, 10 and you have been filled by him, who is the head † over every ruler and authority. 11 You were also circumcised in him with a circumcision not done with hands, by putting off the body of flesh, † in the circumcision of Christ, † 12 when you were buried with him † in baptism, in which you were also raised with him † through faith in the working of God, who raised him from the dead. † 13 And when you were dead in trespasses and in the uncircumcision of your flesh, he made you alive with him and forgave us all our trespasses. 14 He erased the certificate of debt, with its obligations, that was against us and opposed to us, and has taken it away by nailing it to the cross. †

A RESPONSE TO POSTMODERN EPISTEMOLOGIES

P*ostmodernism* is a term that has numerous, sometimes contradictory meanings. As the expression suggests, it signifies a reaction against, or a stage after modernism. While the notion of the modern itself carries several meanings, the one intended by advocates of the postmodern turn is no doubt the one favored in the Enlightenment and beyond: the belief in improvement; in a more satisfactory, more efficient approach to thought and life than that embraced before modernity.

René Descartes is regarded the father of modern thought because of his affirmation that human rationality is a "rock of indubitability." This view is sometimes known as foundationalism. According to advocates of postmodernism, this modern ethos has led to an oppressive use of rationality. The essence of the postmodern approach is thus anti-foundationalist. According to Jean-François Lyotard, the postmodern condition centers on "incredulity toward metanarratives." As he explains, "The narrative function is losing its functors, its great hero, its great dangers, its great voyages, its great goal. It is being dispersed in clouds of narrative language." And then he raises this question: "Where, after the metanarratives, can legitimacy reside?" His own answer is that it must lie in "mini-narratives."

The major root of postmodernism is the exhaustion of the modern belief in objective truth. Realism gave way to anti-realism. In a world that was becoming increasingly global and overloaded with information, postmodernism seemed to face such confusion with a philosophy of relativism. As culture critic Terry Eagleton puts it, "Postmodernism gets off the ground when it is no longer a matter of having information about the world, but a matter of the world as information." And, he adds, instead of the disciplined method of the modern we have the rather "cynical openness" of the postmodern.

POSTMODERNISM AND LATE MODERNITY

One of the more obvious self-defeating aspects of postmodernism is its near relativism. Lyotard's claim that there are no metanarratives, for example, seems close to becoming a narrative of its own. Declaring that there are no absolute truths is dangerously close to stating an absolute truth. Here is the struggle, felt by postmodernist Stanley Fish: Moreover, not only is there no one who could spot a transcendent truth if it happened to pass through the neighborhood, but it is difficult even to say what one would be like. Of course we would know what it would not be like; it would not speak to any particular condition, or be identified with any historical production, or be formulated in the terms of any national, ethnic, racial, economic, or class traditions. (There's No Such Thing as Free Speech: And It's a Good Thing, Too, 1994, p. 8) It is difficult to imagine that someone with professor Fish's acumen could miss the irony here. His dictum that transcendent truth cannot be manifested sounds strangely like a transcendent truth.

This has led commentators like Henri Blocher to affirm that we are not, nor can be, truly postmodern, but we are perhaps in "modernity-post," or late, "hyper-modernity." That is, we may be in the death throes of the modern ethos but we have not left it. In this he follows Craig M. Gay who affirms that the expression "postmodern" is "increasingly used to suggest that we have entered into an entirely new cultural situation in which none of the old 'modern' rules and habits of mind need be taken seriously anymore. All such suggestions are mistaken and misleading." He goes on to say, "the essential features of 'postmodernism'—however this term is defined—are demonstrably modern in origin. Indeed, I would contend that 'postmodernity' represents only a kind of extension of modernity, a kind of 'hyper-modernity.'"

Does such a logical impossibility mean we are no longer postmodern? Some have contended that we now are in a phase of post-postmodernism. But that is rather difficult to grasp. Jacques Derrida was once asked whether deconstruction was dead. "Of course it is," he answered, "and yet it is all around us." Perhaps this is one of the conundrums of our times. By rights postmodernism ought to have died under the weight of its own claims. Yet it lingers on in the atmosphere. One finds it present in some sectors more than others. For example, in literary criticism, there is still a strong postmodern partiality. Popular culture, and expressions of it such as MTV, will carry some of the pastiche, sound-bite mentality of the postmodern. Other sectors, such as science and technology, are less inclined to the postmodern. Most of us would not like our airplane pilot or surgeon to be postmodern!

THE CHRISTIAN ALTERNATIVE

What is the Christian and biblical alternative to postmodernism? It certainly is not a return to the Enlightenment, foundationalist view of truth. Based as it was on Cartesian rationalism, it leaves us with no real "rock of indubitability," because human reason is not connected with anything beyond it, anything transcendental. Immanuel Kant (1724–1804) tried to remain modern by rescuing the possibility of valid human knowledge from skepticism, connecting human experience to ideals. But this only leaves us without any warrant for the authority of such ideals. At the same time, we cannot embrace the pure relativism to which postmodernism can lead.

Various thinkers have offered the worldview of "critical realism" as an alternative to both the modern and the postmodern approach. According to this view a connection can be made between some of our sense data and real objects, but other sense data cannot be so connected. The difficulty with this approach is that one has not truly objective nor transcendental warrant for making any connection.

A better way is to ground all knowledge in God himself, the Creator. We may know truly (though never exhaustively) because God has condescended to reveal himself to his creatures. That connection is sure, because God has the power and authority to make it. Thus, we need be neither postmodern nor modern. Instead we are dependent on divine revelation.

2:3 In contrast to the so-called "Colossian heresy" (see the note on 2:16-18), Christ is the source of all wisdom and knowledge. Believers need not seek such things through other means, apart from Christ.

2:6-7 The Colossians are exhorted to continue in the way they began—by receiving Christ Jesus as Lord. They are to continue in him in order to grow and become established in the faith. There is no need to look elsewhere for the attainment of spiritual maturity.

2:8 The concern here is not the discipline of philosophy per se, but any approach to understanding life that ignores God's revelation based in Christ and instead relies merely on human understanding. Elements of the world (also in v. 20) most likely refer to the fundamental building blocks of creation—the basic components of reality. Human thinking is based on observable elements of the world, but this cannot reveal the whole truth about God's creation.

2:9-10 The fullness of God dwells bodily in Christ, and believers have been filled by Christ (see "The Incarnation of Jesus Christ," p. 1271). This means that true spiritual fullness is attained through our union with Jesus, not through the so-called "Colossian heresy" (see the note on vv. 16-18). Every ruler and authority includes demonic forces of darkness. Since Christ is the head over even those powers, Christians need not fear them. More broadly (since every authority is in view), Christians must be obedient to Christ before any other authority (see Ac 5:29). These two verses affirm the supremacy and sufficiency of Jesus. He is head over all other powers (he is supreme), and in him the fullness of God is attained (he is sufficient).

2:11 Physical circumcision was the mark of membership in the old covenant. In the new covenant, God's people are no longer marked by this physical sign but by being spiritually united to Christ (a circumcision not done with hands).

2:12 Being buried with him and raised with him refers to our participation with Christ. By faith, believers are connected to Christ so that his death becomes our spiritual death. His resurrection is our spiritual resurrection.

2:14 A certificate of debt was a common means of tracking indebtedness in the ancient world. Whatever their level of debt to God, following their many trespasses (v. 13), God has canceled the debt by nailing it to the cross.

2:15 Rulers and authorities refer to forces of evil in the spiritual realm. By Christ's work on the cross (v. 14), God has disarmed and disgraced these rulers. His triumph over them draws on the image of a Roman triumph, in which the conquering Roman army would celebrate its success with a triumphal procession through Rome. The defeated king and his warriors were humiliated by being shackled at the back of the parade, turned into a spectacle for mockery and insult. The irony is that in going to a cross, Jesus was likewise shamed and mocked. But in this apparent weakness, God was overpowering the rulers of darkness. This demonstrates the cosmic scope of the work of Christ; it is not limited to the atonement of human sin. Rather, by dealing with human sin, Christ has overcome the evil powers that work in concert with it (cp. Eph 2:1-3; see also "Spiritual Warfare," p. 1454; "Satan and Demons," p. 1611).

2:16-18 These verses describe what scholars have dubbed "the Colossian heresy," which is a mishmash of Jewish and pagan religious practices followed to attain spiritual fulfillment. Since it is known only from this letter, some scholars have doubted that Paul describes a formal spiritual movement, but rather a collection of practices known in the region at this time. See also "A Biblical View of Angels," p. 1531.

2:16 Food and drink, a festival, a new moon, and a Sabbath all refer to Jewish religious practices and observances.

2:18 Ascetic practices refer to different forms of self-denial, which were thought to attract God's favor (see also 2:23). The worship of angels and visionary experiences reflect pagan spiritual practices.

2:20-23 The elements of this world—see the note on v. 8—come with regulations—Don't handle, don't taste, don't touch. But these regulations are human commands and doctrines, having no value in dealing with inner spiritual realities.

THE LIFE OF THE NEW MAN

3 So if you have been raised with Christ, seek the things above, where Christ is, seated at the right hand of God. † 2 Set your minds on things above, not on earthly things. † 3 For you died, † and your life is hidden with Christ in God. 4 When Christ, who is your † life, appears, † then you also will appear with him in glory. †

A BIBLICAL VIEW OF WORK

Work is central to human life. Between work in the home, on the job, in schools, and in neighborhoods, the overwhelming majority of our waking hours is taken up by it. How we work, and how we view work, is a major factor determining the shape of our whole lives. And a culture's understanding of work is one of its most important defining elements, as important to its identity and functioning as its understanding of sexuality, justice, or worship.

When the Holy Spirit changes the way we work, he changes the way we live—all day, every day. This is why, throughout history, a biblical view of work has been central to Christian spiritual and cultural revival. From Gregory the Great and the scholars of the High Middle Ages to Martin Luther and John Calvin to the Wesleyan movement and twentieth-century heroes like Martin Luther King Jr., it's always the same story: if you look at Christian reformers who had a huge impact on our lives, you always find they had a lot to say about work.

Work presents one of the most central and far-reaching contrasts between the Bible's teaching and the way human cultures naturally tend to think. In the ancient world, a common element among pagan religions was the teaching that the gods don't work; they made people to work so they wouldn't have to. Work is mere toil and drudgery in this view, a curse. In the modern world, as the influence of Christianity on our worldview has receded, we increasingly view work either in similar terms—as a curse, mere toil, and drudgery—or else as an idol, an obsession, what we trust in to provide money, power, status, security, and self-expression.

We certainly do experience pain, frustration, and injustice in our work. Most people aren't going to pay attention to any view of work if it doesn't begin from our lived experience of suffering. Moreover, those who idolize work are right that human work is one of the world's most powerful forces: it can take a pile of sand, a puddle of oil, and a few other basic elements, and transform them into a smartphone capable of recording video and beaming it around the world.

GOD AS A WORKER

The Bible makes a shocking and outrageous claim that transforms both the suffering of work and the power of work. It makes this claim boldly right on its first page (Gn 1:26-30; 2:15) and again on its last (Rv 21:24-26; 22:5). In the OT, this claim has a central place in the Ten Commandments (Ex 20:9), the Mosaic law (Lv 19:9-18; Dt 25:13-16), the Wisdom books (Pr 12:11-14; 16:3; 18:9; 22:29; 24:27; 31:1,13-31; Ec 3:22;

5:6; 9:10), the prophetic witness against injustice to the poor (1Sm 8:14; 1Kg 21:1-19; Is 3:13-15; 5:8-10; 10:1-2; Hs 5:10; Mc 2:1-4,8-9), and much more. In the NT it has a central place in the parables (forty-five of the fifty-two parables draw on work and business as images of spiritual life). It also appears in the teachings of Jesus (Mk 10:42-45; Jn 13:1-20), the conflict between Jesus and his enemies (Mt 12:1-8; Mk 2:23–3:6; Lk 6:1-11; 13:10-17; 14:1-6; Jn 5:1-18; 7:23; 9:14-41), and the ethics of the letters (Eph 4:28; Col 3:23-24; 1Th 4:11; 2Th 3:10-12; 1Tm 5:8; 2Tm 2:6; 1Pt 2:18-25).

The Bible claims that God is a Worker, and work is a primary reason he created humanity, because when we work rightly, we glorify God by loving him and neighbor. Because he is love, God works (Gn 2:2-3; Jn 5:17), and so do we. God also rests, appreciating the beauty of the divine work (Gn 1:31–2:3), and so do we. Through our work we exercise stewardship over the world God created. When we work faithfully as God's stewards, we manifest the glory of the holy love of God, and we make the world under our care manifest it as well.

WORK AS STEWARDSHIP

We serve God as stewards of his world individually, and also collectively, as we labor together in households and businesses and trade our work with each other through economic exchange. Thus we were made as an image of the holy love that is the triune God, unity in diversity and diversity in unity.

This claim is shocking and outrageous to our natural sensibilities because it transforms the suffering of work. We experience toil, frustration, and injustice in our work not because work is bad, but because we are bad (Rm 3:23). Work is not a curse, but our work is one of the main places where we experience the curse on our sin that God, in his holy love, has ordained (Gn 3:17-19).

This is also a reason why the Bible's shocking claim is necessary if we are to have any hope for joy, peace, and righteousness. If Jesus is in us through our faith in the gospel, we can take comfort that God is using our perseverance through the suffering of our work to transform us (cp. Jms 1:2-4; Rm 8:28). Worldly people working in worldly ways are shaping themselves, all day every day, into ever more worldly people. But we, as we make the difficult choice to keep on working faithfully, day in and day out, are shaped into Christlikeness by King Jesus.

THE POWER OF WORK

The Bible's claim about work is also shocking and outrageous to our natural sensibilities because it transforms the power of work. The enormous power of our work is indeed breathtaking; even God himself seems amazed at it (Gn 11:6). But this power was given to us to glorify the holy love of God by serving God and neighbor. When we trust in our work rather than in God for identity, security, and provision, we fall into a monstrous evil that will enslave us, turn us against each other, make us miserable, and bring us to ruin.

Doing our daily work with ethical integrity for the love of God and neighbor in Jesus is a high and difficult calling. Moreover, a special responsibility rests on business leaders to order work ethically, as an expression of voluntary stewardship and mutual love. Another responsibility falls on political leaders to protect this ordering of work. The complex challenge of extending the opportunity of gainful work to the poor and the oppressed also weighs on us.

But this too is a reason why the Bible's shocking claim is necessary if we are to have any hope for joy, peace, and righteousness. Those who follow God's calling in their work discover a new kind of life. For them, glorifying God by loving God and neighbor as a citizen of God's kingdom is not a special activity they squeeze into a few hours a week, or an add-on they are constantly straining to shoehorn into their daily routine. It is their daily routine. Our work, done in this way, is the main way we give God a return on his investment in us (Mt 25:14-30). It allows us to feed the hungry, clothe the naked, and visit the sick (Mt 25:31-46) These are among the good works we were saved to do (Eph 2:10), which force even the enemies of God to give him glory (Mt 5:16; 1Pt 2:15).

This is not just one more biblical truth among thousands of others. It is a central pattern in the narrative of Scripture. It is one of the deep, defining elements of the biblical testimony. That only makes sense. Work takes up the overwhelming majority of our lives and is central to our understanding of who we are as individuals and as cultures. Why are we surprised that the Bible says God designed us with work at the center? Or that Holy Spirit transformation of our work has always been—and continues to be today—one of the most important paths to spiritual and cultural reformation?

5 Therefore, put to death what belongs to your earthly nature: sexual immorality, impurity, † lust, † evil desire, and greed, † which is idolatry. † 6 Because of these, God's wrath † is coming upon the disobedient, † 7 and you once walked in these things when you were living † in them. 8 But now, put away † all the following: anger, † wrath, † malice, † slander, † and filthy language from your mouth. † 9 Do not lie † to one another, since you have put off † the old self † with its practices 10 and have put on † the new self. 3:1 Participation in the resurrection of Christ has ethical implications; believers are to seek the things above.

3:2 Earthly things must not be understood as everyday life, while things above refers to spiritual—as opposed to physical—realities. The biblical worldview does not divide life into the categories of sacred and secular. Rather, "earthly things" refers to sin—the same Greek phrase occurs in 3:5, where it is translated "what belongs to your earthly nature" and is clearly identified with sin.

3:3-4 The old lives we knew prior to placing faith in Jesus have already died, and our new lives are hidden with Christ. This refers to the invisibility of the spiritual reality of being with Christ. However, when Christ . . . appears, believers will appear with him in glory. The reality, now hidden, will one day be revealed for all to see.

3:5 We must not toy with sin or seek merely to contain it. It must be put to death (see also Rm 6:11; 8:13). Believers have already died with Christ (Col 2:20), so this instruction involves putting into practice what is already a spiritual reality. Sexual immorality refers to any kind of sexual practice outside marriage. Greed is singled out as idolatry, indicating that the love of money and love of God are incompatible (Mt 6:24).

3:9-10 Putting off the old self and putting on the new draws on the metaphor of clothing, which was common in the ancient world. Clothing was seen to define a person's status. Removing the old self means that believers will no longer live in their former ways. The new self is being renewed . . . according to Christ.

3:11 The gospel overcomes all cultural barriers, uniting believers in Christ. Greeks typically divided the world into two groups, Greek and barbarian (with Scythians being an even lower level of barbarians). Jews divided the world into Jew and Gentile (circumcision and uncircumcision). In the church, no such distinctions stand.

3:12-14 Believers are to be "clothed" with these characteristics (see note on vv. 9-10), with love being the garment placed over the top of all others.

3:13 Christian ethics are always grounded in Christ, as here we are to forgive because Christ has forgiven us.

3:16-17 The importance of thankfulness in the Christian life is stressed as the word of Christ leads to gratitude, and we are to give thanks to God in all that we do.

3:16 The church as a whole, and thus believers individually, are to be saturated with the gospel (the word of Christ). The singing of psalms, hymns, and spiritual songs are to be a vehicle for teaching and admonishing one another, as well as an opportunity for expressing gratitude in your hearts. See "A Biblical View of Music," p. 727.

3:17 That everything we do can and should be done in the name of the Lord Jesus shows that all of life matters to God. We must not think of certain activities as spiritual and others as unspiritual. All appropriate activities are spiritual when done in his name.

3:18–4:1 This section expands on the idea of doing everything in the name of the Lord, emphasizing family life. The gospel shapes every area of life. Thus, the exhortations given here are not merely cultural ideas but flow out of the gospel (3:16). A number of first-century writings address family responsibilities in a format similar to this, but they do not typically address the responsibility of the one in leadership (husbands, parents, masters). The gospel shapes leadership as well as submission.

3:22–4:1 The instructions to slaves and masters is not an endorsement of slavery (see "The Bible and Slavery," p. 1527). Slavery in the Roman Empire was significantly different from the kind of slavery typified in North America in the nineteenth century, which constituted one third of society. Slavery was not ethnicity-based, and people under considerable debt would put themselves into slavery until their debt was repaid. Moreover, slaves could rise to significant positions of authority within a household, and even within civic government. Nevertheless, slaves were regarded as the property of their owners. Paul does not challenge the institution of slavery; rather, he instructs believers as to how they should conduct themselves within it. See also "Biblical Models for Business," p. 782.

4 Masters, † deal with your slaves justly and fairly, since you know that you too have a Master in heaven.

SPEAKING TO GOD AND OTHERS

2 Devote yourselves † to prayer; stay alert in it with thanksgiving. 3 At the same time, pray also for us that God may open a door † to us for the word, to speak the mystery of Christ, † for which I am in chains, † 4 so that I may make it known as I should. 5 Act wisely toward outsiders, making the most of the time. † 6 Let your speech always be gracious, seasoned with salt, † so that you may know how you should answer each person. †

4:5 Making the most of the time in this context refers to taking every opportunity to explain the gospel ("the mystery of Christ;" v. 3) to outsiders, i.e., unbelievers. Here the concern has moved from behavior within the church to engagement with those outside it. See also "A Biblical View of Retirement," p. 175.

4:6 Speech that is seasoned with salt may draw on the use of salt for flavoring or possibly its use as a preservative. Either way, believers' speech is to be of benefit to others.

4:9 Onesimus is the subject of Paul's letter to Philemon. He was a runaway slave who become a Christian through Paul's ministry.

4:10 Mark (also known as John Mark) abandoned Paul during his first missionary journey (Ac 13:13), but here we see that he has been reconciled to Paul. Mark is the author of the Gospel bearing his name.

4:12 The prayer of Epaphras for the Colossians mirrors Paul's prayer in 1:9-14.

4:16 The letter from Laodicea refers to a nonextant letter Paul wrote to the church in that city. Paul's instruction reflects the early church practice of sharing Paul's letters with other churches. By the end of the first century, multiple churches had their own collections of Paul's letters.

1 THESSALONIANS

INTRODUCTION

Paul spent a very short time in the city of Thessalonica, but he was able to establish a church during his stay. There may have been little time for instruction of the new converts, so it is not surprising that Paul wrote a letter to address some questions.

CIRCUMSTANCES OF WRITING

AUTHOR: No serious objections have been made to dispute that Paul was the author of 1 Thessalonians (1:1). The greeting also mentions Silvanus and Timothy. Sometimes Paul wrote from the team perspective, but he was the primary author (2:18; 3:2).

BACKGROUND: About AD 50 the missionary team led by Paul and Silas left Philippi and traveled westward on the Roman road known as the Via Egnatia. They proceeded toward the strategic capital city of the Roman province of Macedonia—Thessalonica.

Thessalonica was a large port city on the Aegean Sea in modern-day Greece, with a population of about two hundred thousand. The city was filled with pagan worshipers of idols, the full pantheon of Greek and Roman gods, and was well known for its emperor worship. Thessalonica was loyal to Caesar, and he had granted its citizens many privileges.

As was his custom, Paul found the local Jewish synagogue and started teaching there. For three Sabbaths he reasoned with the Jews from the Scriptures. He explained and demonstrated that the promised Messiah had to suffer and rise from the dead. After explaining the life, death, and resurrection of Jesus, he then stated boldly, “This Jesus I am proclaiming to you is the Messiah” (Ac 17:3). Some of the Jews were persuaded, along with some of the devout Greeks who were worshipers at the synagogue, and some of the prominent women. They joined Paul and Silas, and the church in Thessalonica was born.

There were Jews in the city who were not persuaded, and they became jealous of what Paul and Silas had done. They incited the people into an uproar and attacked Jason’s house where the missionary team had been staying. Wanting to drag Paul and Silas out before the crowd, they found only Jason and some new believers. They dragged these out before the city authorities. The rulers, not wanting more unrest, forced Jason and the rest of the brothers to make a financial payment of security to ensure that there would not be a repeat of such a disturbance. That very night the Thessalonian believers sent Paul and Silas away to Berea, where they could continue their ministry (Ac 17:1-9).

From Berea Paul went to Athens. He wanted to see the Thessalonians again. When he could endure the separation no longer, he sent Timothy to encourage the Thessalonian believers (1Th 3:2). Timothy came back with an encouraging report about the Thessalonian church (3:6). Paul wrote to them from Corinth in response to Timothy’s report. Based on the archaeological evidence of a dated inscription mentioning Gallio, proconsul of Achaia, by name (Ac 18:12) and correlating this with Paul’s visit to Corinth when Gallio was there, 1 Thessalonians can be reliably dated at AD 50 or 51. This would make 1 Thessalonians the earliest of Paul’s letters with the probable exception of the book of Galatians.

CONTRIBUTION TO THE BIBLE

First Thessalonians contributes to our understanding of the second coming of Christ. Paul wrote to correct some misunderstandings of this doctrine, and in the process he showed us that Christ’s return gives us true hope. First Thessalonians and 1 Corinthians (chap. 15) are the only books that explicitly mention that Christians who are alive at Christ's return will be changed and will meet Christ in the air without dying.

STRUCTURE

First Thessalonians follows the standard form for a first-century letter: greeting (1:1), thanksgiving (1:2-4), body (1:5–5:22), and farewell (5:23-28). The body of the letter does not follow Paul's typical structure of presenting doctrine first, followed by practical exhortation based on that doctrine. Instead, 1 Thessalonians moves back and forth between the doctrinal and the practical.

CHRISTIAN WORLDVIEW ELEMENTS

TEACHINGS ABOUT GOD

God is the Father who actively works to bring about salvation. He is presently working holiness into his children. Jesus died and rose again at his first coming, and he will return in glory at his second coming. The Spirit, the active agent by whom God makes the gospel alive, is God's gift, enabling his people to have great joy (1:5-6; 4:8).

TEACHINGS ABOUT HUMANITY

There are only two kinds of people: those who have received the word of God and those who have rejected it (2:13-16). The destiny of the one group is the experience of the wrath of God, leading to their destruction. The destiny of the other group is to be with the Lord forever. This latter group is called on to live a holy life that pleases God.

TEACHINGS ABOUT SALVATION

The basis of salvation is Jesus's death and resurrection (4:14; 5:10). The letter summarizes salvation as past, present, and future in this way: "You turned to God from idols to serve the living and true God and to wait for his Son from heaven, whom he raised from the dead—Jesus, who rescues us from the coming wrath" (1:9-10).

GREETING

1 Paul, Silvanus, † † and Timothy: †
To the church of the Thessalonians † in God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

Grace to you and peace. †

THANKSGIVING

2 We always thank God for all of you, making mention of you constantly in our prayers. 3 We recall, in the presence of our God and Father, † your work produced by faith, † your labor motivated by love, and your endurance inspired by hope in our Lord Jesus Christ. † 4 For we know, brothers and sisters loved † by God, † that he has chosen you, † 5 because our gospel did not come to you in word only, but also in power, in the Holy Spirit, † and with full assurance.

You know how we lived among you † for your benefit, 6 and you yourselves became imitators of us and of the Lord when, in spite of severe persecution, you welcomed the message † with joy from the Holy Spirit. 7 As a result, you became an example to all the believers in Macedonia † and Achaia. † 8 For the word of the Lord rang out from you, not only in Macedonia and Achaia, but in every place that your faith † † in God has gone out. Therefore, we don't need to say anything, 9 for they themselves report † what kind of reception † we had from you: how you turned † to God from idols † to serve the living † and true † God 10 and to wait † for his Son † from heaven, whom he raised from the dead † — Jesus, who rescues us † from the coming wrath. †

1:3 The Thessalonian believers are marked by the central characteristics of faith, love, and hope. Their work, labor, and endurance flow out of these.

1:4-5 Paul is confident of their salvation because of how their lives had been impacted by the gospel (1:3,6-7; 2:13). Power may refer to miraculous deed, but just as likely it refers to the powerful changes in the lives of those who heard (see 1:9-10).

1:6-7 The typical pattern of discipleship is seen here: the Thessalonians imitated Paul, who was following the Lord; thus, the Thessalonians became a pattern for others to follow. The severe persecution they suffered most likely refers to social harassment rather than physical violence. At the time of writing (in the 50s), Christians were not yet suffering the physical persecution that would rise in the following decades.

1:9 As Gentiles, the Thessalonians once worshiped false gods and idols, as was universal within the Gentile world. Their conversion to Christianity meant turning away from false worship and all it entailed, in order to serve the living and true God.

1:10 Waiting for Jesus's return from heaven is a fundamental element of the Christian life. The expectation of the coming of Christ ought to shape Christian belief and behavior (cp. 4:13-18; 5:1-11). Part of that expectation involves rescue from the coming wrath. Jesus rescues us from the Father's righteous anger toward sin.

PAUL'S CONDUCT

2 For you yourselves know, brothers and sisters, that our visit † with you was not without result. 2 On the contrary, after we had previously suffered † and were treated outrageously in Philippi, † as you know, we were emboldened by our God to speak the gospel of God to you in spite of great opposition. 3 For our exhortation didn't come from error or impurity † or an intent to deceive. † 4 Instead, just as we have been approved by God to be entrusted † with the gospel, † so we speak, not to please people, but rather God, † who examines our hearts. † 5 For we never used flattering speech, as you know, or had greedy † motives † — God is our witness † — 6 and we didn't seek glory † from people, either from you or from others. 7 Although we could have been a burden as Christ's apostles, † instead we were gentle † among you, as a nurse † nurtures her own children. 8 We cared so much for you that we were pleased to share with you not only the gospel of God but also our own lives, because you had become dear to us. 9 For you remember our labor and hardship, brothers and sisters. Working † night and day so that we would not burden any of you, we preached God's gospel to you. 10 You are witnesses, † and so is God, of how devoutly, righteously, † and blamelessly † we conducted ourselves with you believers. 11 As you know, like a father with his own children, † 12 we encouraged, comforted, and implored each one of you to live worthy of God, † who calls you into his own kingdom † and glory. †

RECEPTION AND OPPOSITION TO THE MESSAGE

13 This is why we constantly thank God, because when you received the word of God that you heard from us, you welcomed it not as a human message, but as it truly is, † the word of God, † which also works effectively in you who believe. 14 For you, brothers and sisters, became imitators of God's churches in Christ Jesus that are in Judea, † since you have also suffered † the same things from people of your own country, † just as they did from the Jews 15 who killed the Lord Jesus † and the prophets and persecuted us. † They displease God and are hostile to everyone, 16 by keeping us from speaking to the Gentiles so that they may be saved. As a result, they are constantly filling up their sins to the limit, † and wrath has overtaken them at last. †

PAUL'S DESIRE TO SEE THEM

17 But as for us, brothers and sisters, after we were forced to leave you † for a short time (in person, not in heart †), we greatly desired and made every effort to return † and see you face to face. 18 So we wanted to come to you — even I, Paul, time and again — but Satan † hindered us. 19 For who is our hope or joy † or crown † of boasting † in the presence of our Lord † Jesus at his coming? † Is it not you? † 20 Indeed you are our glory † and joy!

2:5-8 In the ancient world, traveling teachers often showed their importance by being demanding and pushy. Some would use various methods of deception to gain followers and financial benefit. Paul's behavior was a stark contrast to this.

2:16 Completing or filling up a certain amount of sins is common biblical imagery (e.g., Gn 15:16; Dn 8:23-25). Paul is saying that certain Jewish people opposed to the message of Jesus have continued the pattern of rejecting God's ways, leading to final judgment.

2:18 We do not know exactly how Satan hindered Paul from returning to Thessalonica, but the apostle clearly recognizes demonic influence in the hindering of his plans.

ANXIETY IN ATHENS

3 Therefore, when we could no longer stand it, we thought it was better to be left alone in Athens. † 2 And we sent Timothy, † our brother and God's coworker † in the gospel of Christ, † to strengthen and encourage you concerning your faith, 3 so that no one will be shaken by these afflictions. For you yourselves know that we are appointed to this. 4 In fact, when we were with you, we told you in advance that we were going to experience affliction, and as you know, it happened. 5 For this reason, when I could no longer stand it, I also sent him to find out about your faith, fearing that the tempter had tempted you and that our labor might be for nothing.

ENCOURAGED BY TIMOTHY

6 But now Timothy has come to us † from you and brought us good news about your faith and love. He reported that you always have good memories of us and that you long to see us, as we also long to see you. † 7 Therefore, brothers and sisters, in all our distress and affliction, we were encouraged about you through your faith. 8 For now we live, if you stand firm † in the Lord. 9 How can we thank God for you in return for all the joy † we experience before our God because of you, 10 as we pray very earnestly night and day to see you face to face † and to complete what is lacking in your faith? †

PRAYER FOR THE CHURCH

11 Now may our God and Father † himself, and our Lord Jesus, † direct our way to you. 12 And may the Lord cause you to increase and overflow with love † for one another † and for everyone, just as we do for you. 13 May he make your hearts blameless † in holiness † before our God and Father at the coming † of our Lord † Jesus with all his saints. Amen. †

3:3-4 Affliction and persecution are to be expected in the Christian life (2Tm 3:12; 1Pt 2:21).

3:13 The coming of our Lord Jesus with all his saints is explained at greater length in 4:13-18.

THE CALL TO SANCTIFICATION

4 Additionally then, brothers and sisters, we ask and encourage you in the Lord Jesus, that as you have received instruction from us on how you should live and please God — as you are doing † — do this even more. 2 For you know what commands we gave you through the Lord Jesus.

3 For this is God's will, † your sanctification: † that you keep away † from sexual immorality, 4 that each of you knows how to control his own body † in holiness and honor, 5 not with lustful passions, † like the Gentiles, who don't know God. 6 This means one must not transgress against and take advantage † of a brother or sister in this manner, because the Lord is an avenger of all these offenses, as we also previously told and warned you. 7 For God has not called us to impurity † but to live in holiness. 8 Consequently, anyone who rejects this does not reject man, but God, who gives you his Holy Spirit. †

LOVING AND WORKING

9 About brotherly love: You don't need me to write you because you yourselves are taught by God † to love one another. † 10 In fact, you are doing this toward all the brothers and sisters in the entire region of Macedonia. † But we encourage you, brothers and sisters, to do this even more, 11 to seek to lead a quiet life, † to mind your own business, † and to work † with your own hands, as we commanded you, 12 so that you may behave properly † in the presence of outsiders and not be dependent on anyone. † †

THE COMFORT OF CHRIST'S COMING

13 We do not want you to be uninformed, brothers and sisters, concerning those who are asleep, so that you will not grieve like the rest, who have no hope. † 14 For if we believe that Jesus died and rose † again, † in the same way, through Jesus, † God will bring with him those who have fallen asleep. 15 For we say this to you by a word from the Lord: † We who are still alive at the Lord's coming † will certainly not precede those who have fallen asleep. † 16 For the Lord himself will descend from heaven with a shout, † † with the archangel's † voice, and with the trumpet of God, and the dead in Christ † will rise first. 17 Then † we who are still alive, who are left, will be caught up together with them in the clouds † to meet the Lord in the air, and so we will always be with the Lord. 18 Therefore encourage † one another with these words.

4:3 In the NT, God's will typically refers to specific things he has revealed, such as growing in holiness (sanctification) and avoiding sexual sin.

4:5 Sexual immorality was rampant in the ancient Gentile world as in ours. Some religious movements even encouraged it. The rejection of such behavior, and the pursuit of holiness, is fundamental for Christian ethics because this call to purity comes from God himself (4:8).

4:7-8 The rejection of God's call to holiness is a rejection of God.

4:11-12 Work and personal responsibility are basic aspects of the Christian life. Working with your own hands does not mean that manual labor is the only appropriate labor for Christians. It refers to doing meaningful work rather than being idle. See "A Biblical View of Work," p. 1478.

4:13 Using sleep as a symbol for death was common in the ancient world in general, and in the Bible in particular (e.g., Dt 31:16; 1Kg 2:10; Jn 11:11-13; Ac 13:36). In biblical usage, the euphemism those who are asleep expresses hope that the dead will one day rise, as though they have only been napping.

4:14 Jesus's own death and resurrection is the ground of hope for the dead in Christ. Those who have fallen asleep will be brought with Jesus when he comes.

4:16 The dead in Christ will rise first when the Lord comes. And this coming will not occur in secret, but will be publicly known, with a shout, with the archangel's voice, and with the trumpet of God.

4:17 The Latin translation of the phrase caught up is where we get the term rapture. But contrary to some popular notions, this event will not occur in secret (cp. 4:16). The word translated to meet was used in the ancient world for a delegation of citizens who would meet a dignitary outside their city before escorting him in. Christians, then, are caught up together with the dead in Christ to meet the Lord as he returns in triumph.

4:18 The resurrection of the dead in Christ is typically a basis for comfort and perseverance (1Co 15:58). It is the reason that, though we mourn, we do not do so as those who have no hope (4:13).

THE DAY OF THE LORD

5 About the times and the seasons: † Brothers and sisters, you do not need anything to be written to you. 2 For you yourselves know very well that the day of the Lord † will come just like a thief † in the night.
3 When they say, "Peace and security," then sudden destruction † will come upon them, like labor pains on a pregnant woman, and they will not escape.
4 But you, brothers and sisters, are not in the dark, for this day to surprise you like a thief. † 5 For you are all children of light and children of the day. We do not belong to the night or the darkness. † 6 So then, let us not sleep, like the rest, but let us stay awake and be self-controlled. 7 For those who sleep, sleep at night, and those who get drunk, get drunk at night. 8 But since we belong to the day, let us be self-controlled † and put on the armor † of faith and love, and a helmet † of the hope of salvation. 9 For God did not appoint us to wrath, but to obtain salvation through our Lord † Jesus Christ, † 10 who died for us, † so that whether we are awake or asleep, † we may live together with him. † 11 Therefore encourage one another and build each other up as you are already doing.

EXHORTATIONS AND BLESSINGS

12 Now we ask you, brothers and sisters, to give recognition † to those who labor among you and lead you † in the Lord and admonish you, 13 and to regard them very highly in love because of their work. Be at peace † among yourselves. 14 And we exhort you, brothers and sisters: † warn those who are idle, † comfort the discouraged, help the weak, be patient † with everyone. 15 See to it that no one repays evil for evil † to anyone, † but always pursue what is good for one another and for all. † 16 Rejoice † always, 17 pray constantly, 18 give thanks in everything; for this is God's will † for you in Christ Jesus. 19 Don't stifle the Spirit. 20 Don't despise prophecies, 21 but test all things. † Hold on to what is good. 22 Stay away † from every kind of evil.
23 Now may the God of peace † himself sanctify you completely. And may your whole spirit, † soul, and body be kept sound and blameless at the coming † of our Lord † Jesus Christ. † 24 He who calls † you † is faithful; he will do it. 25 Brothers and sisters, pray for us also. 26 Greet all the brothers and sisters with a holy kiss. 27 I charge you by the Lord that this letter be read to all the brothers and sisters. † 28 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you.

5:1 Times and the seasons is a phrase typically used to refer to events at the end times (Ac 1:7; 3:20-21).

5:2 The day of the Lord is a common OT expression referring to the time when God will break into world history in order to judge his enemies and rescue his people (Ob 15; Jl 2:31-32; Zch 14:1-21). This will come just like a thief in the night—an image originating in the teaching of Jesus (Mt 24:43; Lk 12:39). The day will come at an unpredicted time, and most people will be found unprepared for it (5:3).

5:5 The phrase children of light (used by Jesus in Lk 16:8) occurs frequently in the Dead Sea Scrolls to describe the members of their community, who are in conflict with the "children of darkness." Being children of light means that Christians will not be caught unprepared by the "thief in the night" (5:2,4), because we do not belong to the night.

5:6 To sleep here means to be spiritually dull—unaware of God's work, and indulgent of sin.

5:8 The imagery of armor is found in Isaiah 59:17, where God "put on righteousness as body armor, and a helmet of salvation." Easily relatable in the Roman world, the armor metaphor is expanded in Ephesians 6:10-17 to refer to the battle of Spiritual Warfare. Here it is used to convey the central Christian characteristics of faith, hope, and love (cp. 1:3).

5:9 God's people are not appointed for wrath, but for salvation through . . . Christ. There is hope for the day of judgment for those chosen by God (1:4; 2:12; 3:3).

5:14 Helping the weak goes against Roman practice, since they believed the weak were being punished by the gods. Believers in Jesus are to reflect God's compassion for the vulnerable and disadvantaged.

5:17 See "Prayer and Recovery from Illness," p. 1551.

5:19-21 Many of the Thessalonians would have been familiar with the prophecies and similar activities of the pagan mystery cults in which they once participated. But they are not to despise prophecies; instead, they should test them and accept what is good.

5:23 See "The Mind-Body Problem," p. 1175.

5:26 Greeting friends or family with a kiss was a common and longstanding practice in the ancient world (Gn 33:4; 45:15; Lk 15:20). It was not a casual greeting, but indicated deep friendship and often reconciliation.

2 THESSALONIANS

INTRODUCTION

Following up on his first letter to the Thessalonians, Paul wrote to give further clarification on how to live the Christian life in light of the coming return of Christ. The Thessalonians were called to stand firm and live useful lives, because the return of Christ might be in the distant future.

CIRCUMSTANCES OF WRITING

AUTHOR: Paul is stated to be the author of 2 Thessalonians (1:1). The greeting also mentions Silvanus and Timothy, but Paul was the primary author (3:17).

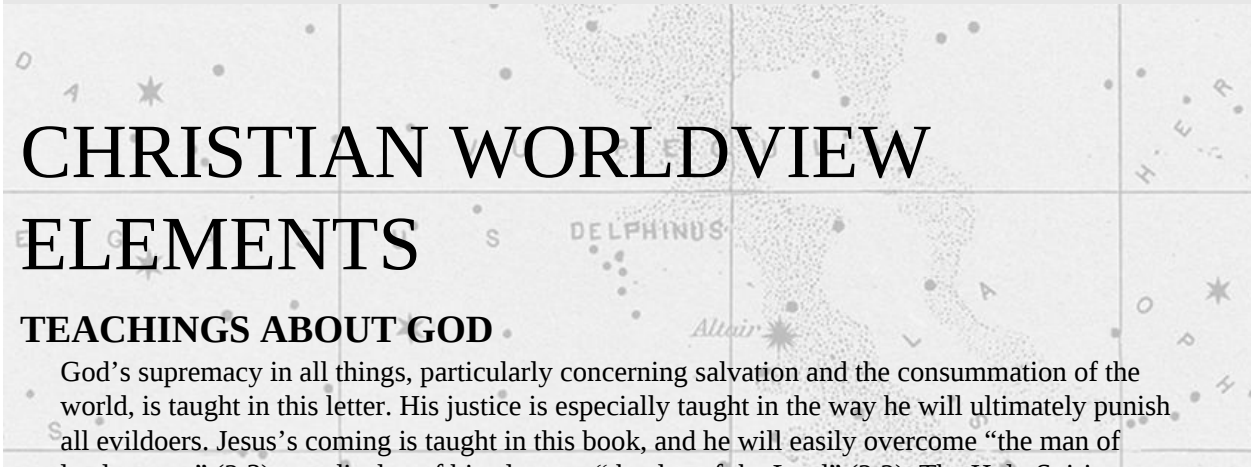
BACKGROUND: See discussion under introduction to 1 Thessalonians. While there are few indicators of the date and place of writing of 2 Thessalonians, it was probably written from Corinth around AD 50–51 shortly after 1 Thessalonians. The mention of Paul, Silvanus, and Timothy together in the salutation, as was the case with 1 Thessalonians (1Th 1:1), supports this conclusion. An additional support for this view is the mention of a previous letter, which was probably 1 Thessalonians (2Th 2:15).

CONTRIBUTION TO THE BIBLE

Second Thessalonians continues and further amplifies some of the same themes as 1 Thessalonians: persecution, sanctification, and end-time events associated with the second coming of Christ. One important difference is that 2 Thessalonians describes the “man of lawlessness” who will be revealed in the end times and what restrains him from being revealed (2:1-12). The book also contains a lengthy discourse on the need for believers to have a proper work ethic to provide for their own needs (3:6-15).

STRUCTURE

The tone of Paul’s second letter to the Thessalonians is markedly “cooler” than his first letter. In his first letter, Paul was enthusiastic about the Thessalonians’ progress in the gospel, and he offered calm advice about congregational life (1Th 5:12-22). In this second letter, though, Paul expressed grave concern about the spiritual state of the Thessalonian believers. He gave them a sharp rebuke about congregational life (2Th 3:6-15). His style is typical of his other letters—a doctrinal section followed by practical exhortation.



CHRISTIAN WORLDVIEW ELEMENTS

TEACHINGS ABOUT GOD

God’s supremacy in all things, particularly concerning salvation and the consummation of the world, is taught in this letter. His justice is especially taught in the way he will ultimately punish all evildoers. Jesus’s coming is taught in this book, and he will easily overcome “the man of lawlessness" (2:3) as a display of his glory on "the day of the Lord" (2:2). The Holy Spirit, mentioned only at 2:13, sanctifies (makes holy) those God has chosen to save.

TEACHINGS ABOUT HUMANITY

This letter shows two sharply opposed groups of humanity. On one hand are those who know God and have come to obey the gospel. On the other hand are all others, who will "pay the penalty of eternal destruction from the Lord's presence" (1:9).

TEACHINGS ABOUT SALVATION

In 2 Thessalonians, salvation is seen from the future perspective of deliverance from judgment and destruction on the day of the Lord. In the end those who perish do so "because they did not accept the love of the truth and so be saved" (2:10).

GREETING

1 Paul, Silvanus, † † and Timothy: †
To the church of the Thessalonians † in God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.
2 Grace to you and peace from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

GOD'S JUDGMENT AND GLORY

3 We ought to thank God always for you, brothers and sisters, and rightly so, since your faith is flourishing and the love † each one of you has for one another † is increasing. † 4 Therefore, we ourselves boast † about you among God's churches — about your perseverance and faith in all the persecutions and afflictions that you are enduring. 5 It is clear evidence of God's righteous † judgment † that you will be counted worthy of God's kingdom, for which you also are suffering, † 6 since it is just for God to repay with affliction those who afflict you 7 and to give relief to you who are afflicted, along with us. This will take place at the revelation of the Lord Jesus from heaven with his powerful angels, 8 when he takes vengeance with flaming fire † on those who don't know God † and on those who don't obey the gospel of our Lord Jesus. † 9 They will pay the penalty of eternal destruction † from the Lord's presence † and from his glorious strength † 10 on that day when he comes † to be glorified † by his saints † and to be marveled at by all those who have believed, because our testimony among you was believed. 11 In view of this, we always pray for you that our God will make you worthy of his calling, † and by his power fulfill your every desire to do good † and your work produced by faith, † 12 so that the name † of our Lord Jesus will be glorified † by you, and you by him, † according to the grace of our God and the Lord Jesus Christ.

1:4 The persecutions and afflictions suffered by the Thessalonians most likely involve social harassment rather than physical violence, since the latter developed in later decades (see the note on 1Th 1:6).

1:6 Throughout Scripture, God vindicates his people. Believers are to entrust all judgment to him.

1:7 The revelation of the Lord Jesus from heaven refers to his coming (see 1Th 4:13-18; 5:1-10). His coming marks the day of judgment (see 2Th 1:8-9). See “A Biblical View of Angels,” p. 1531.

1:8-9 The Bible is clear about the final judgment for those who don’t know God and who don’t obey the gospel of our Lord Jesus (Mt 13:40,49-50; 18:8; 2Pt 3:7; Jd 7; Rv 20:15).

1:9-10 The day of Christ’s coming will be one of terrible judgment, but also of glorification and wonder.

THE MAN OF LAWLESSNESS

2 Now concerning the coming † of our Lord † Jesus Christ and our being gathered to him: We ask you, brothers and sisters, 2 not to be easily upset or troubled, either by a prophecy † † or by a message or by a letter supposedly from us, alleging that the day of the Lord † † has come. † 3 Don’t let anyone deceive you in any way. For that day will not come unless the apostasy † comes first and the man of lawlessness † is revealed, the man doomed to destruction. 4 He opposes and exalts himself above every so-called god † or object of worship, † so that he sits † in God’s temple, proclaiming that he himself is God.
5 Don’t you remember that when I was still with you I used to tell you about this? 6 And you know what currently restrains him, so that he will be revealed in his time. † 7 For the mystery of lawlessness † is already at work, but the one now restraining will do so until he is out of the way, 8 and then the lawless one will be revealed. The Lord Jesus will destroy him with the breath of his mouth † and will bring him to nothing at the appearance of his coming. 9 The coming of the lawless one is based on Satan’s working, with all kinds of false miracles, signs, and wonders, † 10 and with every wicked deception among those who are perishing. They perish because they did not accept the love of the truth and so be saved. † 11 For this reason God sends them a strong delusion so that they will believe the lie, [12] so that all will be condemned † — those who did not believe † the truth but delighted in unrighteousness.

THE NEW AGE MOVEMENT

"I'm spiritual, but not religious."

"I believe in the power of positive thinking."

"I follow my heart."

Claims like these reflect the popular influence of New Age spirituality. New Age movement(s) (hereafter "NAM" or "NAMs") represent an eclectic blend of elements from ancient paganism, astrology, the occult, Eastern religions, and some Judeo-Christian themes aimed at self-actualization through personal healing practices like yoga, meditation, crystal therapy, and spirit channeling.

The NAM grew out of the countercultural shifts of the 1970s and the pop psychology of more recent self-help fads. Celebrity advocates include Deepak Chopra, Eckhart Tolle, and even Oprah Winfrey. The self-spirituality of NAMs holds a pluralistic view of religious authority and emphasizes what religions from various places and cultures seemingly share rather than their important distinctives. What is most valued, however, are ancient or secret truths. NAMs rely on the arcane, the esoteric, or hidden wisdom, a habit that closely resembles the Greco-Roman gnosticism that was fervently critiqued in the NT.

But those associated with NAMs are nothing if not hopeful and optimistic, embracing a profoundly utopian vision for the so-called Age of Aquarius, a time characterized by international peace, ecological sensitivity, and social enlightenment. Thus, NAMs anticipate that things will begin getting better as more people come together and seek mutual harmony with nature and each other. Unfortunately, these hopes are a thin parody of the biblical hope of Christ's eschatological kingdom—the "age to come" described in the NT Gospels.

BASIC TENETS OF THE NEW AGE MOVEMENT

Due to their pluralistic orientation, NAMs are inherently difficult to study as a coherent worldview. Nevertheless, they adhere to the basic tenets of pantheism. Pantheism comes from two Greek words, pan meaning "all" and theos meaning "god." Pantheism equates God with nature and everything in it. God is the universe and the universe is God.

Thus, NAMs differ from Christianity on several important points.

(1) Denying reality. NAMs seek to transcend this world and contact a separate level of existence beyond the visible world. This is either an age to come, another dimension of this universe, or a parallel universe.

(2) Escaping reality. NAMs seek to access a higher plane of existence by connecting with an eternal spirit or universal consciousness that transcends space and time, thereby escaping the illusion of physical death.

(3) New morality. Since the New Age is void of evil, all actions are good, and codes of morality are no longer relevant. This moral relativism erodes an objective account of truth, and individuals are invited to create their own truth.

(4) Cyclical history. Time becomes a gradual process of trial and error that repeats itself until humanity graduates to a higher form of consciousness.

CHRISTIANITY AND THE NEW AGE MOVEMENT

The Christian worldview rejects the NAM on each point: (1) Reality is God's creation, and therefore deserves our attention and care (Gn 1–2; Nm 35:33; Ps 24:1).

(2) Humanity has not been rejected by the world but instead has rejected God's order for this world. In choosing to rebel against the Creator's design, all humanity has fallen from the grace of God. Salvation from this fallen state depends on God's initiative in Jesus Christ to save the world (Rm 8:22-24; Eph 1:3-14; Gl 3:11).

(3) Truth is found in God's revelation of himself to humanity and is absolute and eternal (Ps 86:11; Jn 14:6; 17:17; 2Tm 3:16). Morality thus flows from this unchanging Word (Mt 5:17-19; Col 3:1-17; Jms 3:13; 1Jn 3:18).

(4) Finally, history is ultimately meaningful because of God's involvement in the world; namely, his act of creation, the act of initiating redemption by Christ's work on the cross, and the promise of a complete restoration for creation on Christ's return (1Jn 3:16; 2Pt 3:1-6; Rv 21:5).

Although contemporary Christians should be as suspicious of the NAM as the early church was about gnosticism, NAMs illustrate some important aspects of our postmodern age that can help Christians better understand the culture in which they live. In particular, NAMs seek to recover a spiritual element that is absent in a world dominated by scientific naturalism and disdain for the supernatural. NAMs also recognize that meeting spiritual needs belongs to basic human flourishing.

Further, NAMs maintain hope in a comprehensive or holistic peace between God, humans, and nature. Indeed, everything is spiritual by God's design, but how we experience it is a result of his gracious gifts and not human effort or manipulation.

NAMs fundamentally err in their account of human agency (i.e., what an individual can accomplish on his or her own) for the spiritual life. More often than not, spiritual power is sought to extend personal experience or knowledge and is not used in service to the one true God (as with Gn 3:5; Rm 1:21-23).

NAMs elevate humanity to a divine status, and individuals thus become masters of their own spiritual destinies. Nothing could be further from the biblical account of spiritual renewal offered by God the Father, accomplished by Christ the Son, and applied by the Holy Spirit.

The NAM denies God's sovereignty over our lives, inflates human participation beyond the parameters of Scripture, and ultimately substitutes an impersonal world spirit for the Holy Spirit. The Bible makes clear that God is sovereign over the human soul, and unless he acts in grace toward humanity, no change results (Is 46:10; Rm 9:19-24; Eph 3:14-21). In light of God's sovereignty, humans are responsible for responding to his grace, and human participation in the work of individual spiritual renewal is always in cooperation with God's grace (Rm 10:9-10; Php 2:12-13; 1Jn 2:3-6). For the NAM, divinity is subjectless and impersonal. According to Chuck Colson, it is more akin to electricity than deity. Scripture attests, however, to the supremacy and power of the Holy Spirit as the One who convicts the world of its sin, reveals the truth of the gospel, and leads us in following God's Word (Jn 14:15-27; 16:5-15; Rm 7:4-6; Eph 1:13-14).

While some adherents of the NAM may be well intentioned in their hopes, New Age spirituality cannot ultimately be reconciled to the Christian worldview or the life of a biblical disciple. In light of that inescapable truth, we should seize each opportunity to share the biblical gospel of Jesus Christ. He did not call us to escape this world but instead stepped into our shoes, paid the price for our sin, and is even now working through the church to bring about the redemption and restoration of the world. In his Miracles, C. S. Lewis warns that pantheism is Christianity's most formidable and most perennial threat. It is the worldview alternative that humans naturally want to believe; we foolishly hope that by our own efforts we might save ourselves. For this reason, NAMs must be consistently resisted and carefully refuted.

2:2 Paul warns of false prophecies or messages that claim that the day of the Lord has come. On "the day," see note on 1 Thessalonians 5:2. Though this day will come like a thief in the night, it will be marked by a shout and the trumpet of God (1Th 4:16).

2:3-4 Paul, alluding to the teaching of Jesus, who drew on the words of Daniel (Mt 24; Mk 13; Dn 7:25; 8:11; 9:26-27; 11:31,36), reminds them of a future turning away by professing believers (apostasy) accompanied with the rise of the man of lawlessness (cp. 2:9). Rather than a certain individual, this figure may refer to a type of person, like a number of pagan kings described in the OT. A RESPONSE TO EASTERN AND NEW AGE VIEWS OF HISTORY

According to the Bible and Christian tradition, history is linear and purposeful. History began at a particular moment sometime in the past. At some unknown point in the future, history as we presently understand it will come to an end. Historical events are not matters of chance, accident, or fate. The Lord who created the heavens and the earth is sovereign over history. He providentially guides it along from beginning to end, according to his own sovereign purposes. History has a point: to glorify the Lord.

The Christian view of history, when understood as an expansion of the Jewish approach, is the oldest philosophy of interpreting the past. The Judeo-Christian tradition of historical understanding, however, has many competitors. One of its oldest competitors is often referred to as the Eastern view of history, so-called because of its association with ancient India and China. It remains popular today in parts of East Asia. It has also influenced the so-called New Age movement in North America and parts of Europe.

EASTERN VIEWS OF HISTORY

The distinguishing feature of the Eastern view is that history is understood to be cyclical rather than linear. In the Eastern interpretation, history is a series of endlessly repeating cycles. The past is repeated in the present, and the present will be repeated in the future. History has no ultimate purpose or goal—it simply happens again and again. History had no starting point, and it will have no climax. Thus, each individual cycle of history is irrelevant except insofar as it represents a particular example of repeatable patterns that have always occurred and will continue to do so forever. Because history is not linear, it has no "meta-narrative," no comprehensive meaning that transcends all of history and brings together all the individual moments in time. A revolving wheel is often the image used to visually depict this philosophy of history.

Various versions of the Eastern philosophy of history have been popular in cultures that blur the lines between myths and reality. There are at least two related explanations for the origins of Eastern understandings of history. First, each cycle of history in some respects parallels the normal pattern of a human life. Individuals grow in understanding and physical maturity from childhood to adulthood, only to experience a gradual return to physical and frequently intellectual feebleness during their final years. In Eastern historical interpretation, the individual experience was projected onto the world's historical process and incorporated into a never-ending cycle.

The second explanation for the Eastern view is related to the agrarian milieu of many ancient civilizations. History was understood to be part of natural processes. In an agricultural context, people regularly observe the yearly cycle of seasons and how they affect sowing and reaping. Year in and year out, the seasons changed and agrarian families repeated the process of planting and harvesting, understanding that their very existence depended on their participation in this cycle. In the Eastern view of history, the rhythm of nature was projected onto the larger historical process; the latter, in fact, was understood to be the source of the former.

THREE TYPES OF EASTERN VIEWS

Historians point to at least three different versions of the Eastern view that have prevailed in various cultures. In ancient India, the focus was on the entire earth. All of creation participates in a birth-to-death cycle, which in turn gives way to a new cycle. This has always happened, and the pattern will continue forever. This view remains popular in Southeast Asia and is the version of the Eastern view to which this article has given most of its attention.

In ancient China, the tendency was to focus more on particular dynasties of rulers and the civilizations they governed. Each dynasty was seen as a particular expression of the wider cycle of growth-maturity-decay. This view is not widely held today.

In the third version, popular in ancient Greco-Roman and Middle Eastern cultures, the past was seen as a golden age that needed to be reclaimed. Cultures that traditionally affirmed this third option have often been quicker to embrace a Christian view of history or some other linear understanding of the historical process. For example, in the Greco-Roman world, the Christian view became popular after the legalization of Christianity in the fourth century AD. In the Middle East and North Africa, an alternative linear approach (that borrows from the Judeo-Christian tradition) became dominant after the advent of Islam in the seventh century.

THE IMPACT OF EASTERN VIEWS OF HISTORY

It is difficult to find any real personal significance in the Eastern view of history, since this approach attributes little wider meaning to history itself. For this reason, belief in reincarnation is popular among adherents to a cyclical interpretation of history, especially in the Far East. Because of the endless historical cycles, the best a person can hope for is to be reborn after death, hopefully with better prospects in the next life than those experienced in this current life. Reincarnation plays a prominent role in Hinduism, Buddhism, Sikhism, and Jainism.

In the past, many cultures that embraced the Eastern view also affirmed some form of fatalism. This was especially true in the Greco-Roman and Middle Eastern worlds. Fatalism holds that the future is irrevocably fixed by forces beyond human control. In Eastern fatalism, this historical inevitability is attributed to divine spiritual powers. Our actions do not matter in and of themselves; rather, we are acting out a predetermined plan in which we have no real freedom.

Many Buddhists affirm a form of fatalism, though Buddhist fatalism is tied to karma rather than to a god or gods. Taoism is also fatalistic. Fatalism was mostly eliminated in Europe with the rise of Christianity, though some understandings of God's providence may border on fatalism. A form of fatalism persists in Islam, even though Muslims affirm a linear view of history.

EASTERN VIEWS IN THE NEW AGE MOVEMENT

The Eastern view of history has long been rejected in Western culture, largely due to the influence of the Judeo-Christian tradition in Europe and North America. Nevertheless, elements of the worldview on which Eastern historical interpretation depends became popular in North America during the 1960s.

The so-called New Age movement embraces a hodgepodge of Eastern beliefs such as pantheism, karma, and reincarnation. But these views have been combined with an evolutionary approach to history that interprets the world as becoming increasingly advanced as humanity moves toward spiritual perfection as defined by New Age proponents. Many New Agers have also been influenced by a Marxist interpretation of history that overemphasizes social upheaval and class tensions to the exclusion of intellectual trends.

In part because of their philosophy of history, many New Age adherents are interested in retrieving marginal spiritual practices from other places besides the Far East. They believe these allegedly lost spiritual practices were suppressed by power-hungry mainstream religious traditions. Goddess worship, nature worship, gnosticism, and various forms of Native American mysticism are examples of lost spiritualities that have been recovered by New Age proponents. New Agers consider their suppressed spiritual traditions, some of which are heretical corruptions of Christianity, to be superior to traditional religions.

Many New Agers are also influenced by postmodern views of tolerance. They are in theory open to any spiritual tradition except those systems that claim to be the one true path to God. Conservative versions of Christianity, Judaism, and Islam are rejected because of their exclusive truth claims.

CHRISTIANITY AND EASTERN VIEWS OF HISTORY

Eastern and New Age understandings of history are incompatible with the Christian worldview. Believers must look to God's Word, which has been called "the true story of the whole world," to accurately understand history's scope and purpose.

History is the staging ground for the Lord of all creation to make himself known through his mighty acts in creation, promise, redemption, and consummation. The central figure in history is Jesus Christ, and the central acts of history are his incarnation, perfect obedience, sacrificial death, and victorious resurrection. History will climax with his return to the earth to complete his work of salvation and reverse the effects of sin in the created order "as far as the curse is found."

3:6 Keep away from refers to removing fellowship from professing believers who do not live according to apostolic teaching; it is a form of discipline. Laziness seems to be the particular sin in view here (3:8-15; cp. 1Th 4:11).

3:8-9 Hard work and providing for oneself is a basic aspect of the Christian life.

3:10 Laziness, not incapacity brought on by illness or disability, is strongly condemned. See “A Biblical View of Work,” p. 1478.

3:14-15 Temporary exclusion from fellowship is a means of discipline for the sake of restoration (Mt 18:15-17; 1Co 5:11). It is a warning for a brother, not an enemy.

1 TIMOTHY

INTRODUCTION

First Timothy, 2 Timothy, and Titus have been referred to as the "Pastoral Letters" since the eighteenth century. It is reasonable to consider these letters together since they have striking similarities in style, vocabulary, and setting. These letters stand apart from the other Pauline letters in that they were the only ones written to Paul's gospel coworkers. The Pastoral Letters deal with church structure issues and, unlike Paul's other letters, were addressed to men serving in pastoral roles rather than to churches. But we must also recognize that these are separate letters with their own distinctives. They were not written primarily to describe church structure or pastoral ministry (contrary to popular opinion), but to teach Christian living in response to the gospel.

CIRCUMSTANCES OF WRITING

AUTHOR: As stated in the opening of each letter, these letters were written by Paul (1Tm 1:1; 2Tm 1:1; Ti 1:1). However, many scholars today assume that Paul did not write them. This opinion is based on the differences from his other letters in vocabulary and style, alleged differences in theology, and uncertainties about where these letters fit chronologically in the life of the apostle. But the differences in style and vocabulary are not troublesome when one considers that authors often use different vocabulary when addressing different groups and situations. Rather than addressing churches in these letters, Paul was writing to coworkers who were in unique ministry settings. Hence we would expect different vocabulary. Also, the traditional view of the historical situation in which Paul wrote these letters is reasonable and defensible. Therefore, in spite of significant opposition by some scholars, there is a solid basis for accepting the Pastoral Epistles as Pauline.

BACKGROUND: Paul most likely wrote these letters after the time covered in the book of Acts. Acts closes with Paul in prison. Traditionally it has been believed that Paul was released from this imprisonment, then continued his work around the Mediterranean, perhaps even reaching Spain (Rm 15:22-29). During this time, he visited Crete and other places. First Timothy and Titus were written during this period of further mission work. Timothy had been left in Ephesus to handle some problems with false teaching there (1Tm 1:3-4). Titus had been left in Crete after the initial work to set up the church there (Ti 1:5). Eventually Paul was imprisoned again, and this led to his execution. During this final imprisonment, Paul wrote 2 Timothy to request another visit from Timothy and to give final exhortations as he anticipated his martyrdom.

CONTRIBUTION TO THE BIBLE

These letters are rich theologically and ethically. One of their key contributions is the clear way they show the connection between doctrine and ethics, belief and behavior.

While these letters were not intended to provide a detailed account of church government, they do provide some significant insights on this topic. The lists of characteristics for overseers (1Tm 3:1-7; Ti 1:5-9) and deacons (1Tm 3:8-13) are the only such lists in the NT.

STRUCTURE

All three letters follow the typical pattern of a Greek letter. While there are some lexical differences with many of Paul's other letters, keep in mind that these letters were written to specific individuals. One thing unique to the structure of these letters is the focus on church leadership.

CHRISTIAN WORLDVIEW ELEMENTS

TEACHINGS ABOUT GOD

This letter contains the classic biblical summary of God's attributes: "the King eternal, immortal, invisible, the only God" (1:17). He is also "the blessed and only Sovereign, the King of kings, and the Lord of lords" (6:15). Jesus is the only "mediator between God and humanity" (2:5). The Holy Spirit's person is clearly affirmed (3:16; 4:1).

TEACHINGS ABOUT HUMANITY

As one of the six NT letters first written to a single individual (1 and 2 Timothy, Titus, Philemon, 2 and 3 John), this book shows the importance of what one person can be and do. The individuals addressed in these books (Timothy, Titus, Philemon, "the elect lady" (2Jn 1), and Gaius) were all redeemed sinners working for the kingdom of God in one way or another. They all benefited from the advice and encouragement offered by the letter they received. These individuals stand as examples of living out one's life for the glory of God and in the hope of eternal life.

TEACHINGS ABOUT SALVATION

Salvation in this letter, as everywhere in Paul's writings, focuses on Jesus Christ. Paul summarized his understanding by reminding Timothy of "the mystery of godliness" (1Tm 4:16), evidently an early Christian hymn or poem: "He was manifested in the flesh, vindicated in the Spirit, seen by angels, preached among the nations, believed on in the world, taken up in glory" (3:16).

GREETING

1 Paul, † an apostle of Christ Jesus by the command † of God our Savior † and of Christ Jesus our hope: †
2 To Timothy, † my true son in the faith.
Grace, mercy, and peace from God the † Father and Christ Jesus our Lord.

FALSE DOCTRINE AND MISUSE OF THE LAW

3 As I urged you when I went to Macedonia, † remain in Ephesus † so that you may instruct certain people † not to teach false doctrine 4 or to pay attention to myths † and endless genealogies. These promote empty speculations rather than God's plan, † which operates by faith. 5 Now the goal of our instruction is love † that comes from a pure heart, † a good conscience, † and a sincere faith. † 6 Some have departed from these and turned aside to fruitless discussion. 7 They want to be teachers of the law, although they don't understand what they are saying or what they are insisting on. 8 But we know that the law is good, † provided one uses it legitimately. 9 We know that the law is not meant for a righteous person, but for the lawless and rebellious, † for the ungodly and sinful, for the unholy and irreverent, for those who kill their fathers and mothers, for murderers, [10] for the sexually immoral † and homosexuals, † for slave traders, liars, † perjurers, and for whatever else is contrary to the sound teaching † [11] that conforms to the gospel † concerning the glory of the blessed God, † which was entrusted to me. †

PAUL'S TESTIMONY

[12] I give thanks to Christ Jesus our Lord who has strengthened † me, because he considered me faithful, appointing me to the ministry — [13] even though I was formerly a blasphemer, † a persecutor, † and an arrogant man. † But I received mercy because I acted out of ignorance in unbelief, [14] and the grace of our Lord overflowed, along with the faith and love that are in Christ Jesus. [15] This saying is trustworthy † and deserving of full acceptance: "Christ Jesus came into the world † to save sinners" † — and I am the worst of them. † [16] But I received mercy † for this reason, so that in me, the worst of them, Christ Jesus might demonstrate his extraordinary patience † as an example to those who would believe in him for eternal life. † [17] Now to the King † eternal, † immortal, † invisible, the only † God, † be honor † and glory † forever and ever. Amen. †

ENGAGE IN BATTLE

[18] Timothy, my son, I am giving you this instruction in keeping with the prophecies † previously made about you, so that by recalling them you may fight the good fight, [19] having faith † and a good conscience. † Some † have rejected these and have shipwrecked their faith. [20] Among them are Hymenaeus † and Alexander, † whom I have delivered to Satan, † so that they may be taught not to blaspheme.

1:2 By calling Timothy his true son, Paul is saying that Timothy is his legitimate heir in the ministry. Timothy accurately represents his message in contrast to false teachers, who are mentioned later.

1:4 Myths refer to mythological stories concerning the history of the world. With the later reference to misuse of the law (1:7-10), genealogies seems to refer to speculative use of OT accounts of biblical characters or family trees. The historian Polybius (second-century BC) refers to storytellers who dealt with "matters concerning genealogies and myths." But such was not regarded as serious history.

1:9-10 This list of sins relates to the Ten Commandments (Ex 20:1-17). Paul's point is that the law convicts people of their sins (cp. Rm 7:13), so it is for the lawless and rebellious. See also "Engaging LGBT Advocates," p. 1392.

1:16 Paul's former way of life, as a blasphemer, persecutor, and arrogant man (1:13), demonstrates the extent of Christ's mercy. If even Paul, who persecuted Christ's people, can receive mercy, no one is beyond its reach.

1:18 God had spoken through others in prophecies to clearly set Timothy apart for the task of this ministry. This assurance of divine call is to strengthen Timothy for the work.

1:19 Faith being shipwrecked is an evocative image that no doubt recalls Paul's own experiences (2Co 11:25), most recently his shipwreck on Malta (Ac 27:39–28:6).

1:20 Delivering someone to Satan means to put them out of the church, thus making them vulnerable in a greater way to Satan's attacks. The ultimate purpose of this discipline is restoration (1Co 5:5).

INSTRUCTIONS ON PRAYER

2 First of all, then, I urge that petitions, prayers, intercessions, and thanksgivings be made for everyone, 2 for kings and all those who are in authority, † so that we may lead a tranquil and quiet life in all godliness † and dignity. † 3 This is good, and it pleases God our Savior, †

CHRISTIAN WORLDVIEW AND SAME-SEX MARRIAGE

Same-sex marriage presents a great cultural challenge to the Christian worldview. As it becomes increasingly normalized throughout Western culture, Christians will face a great temptation to grow indifferent toward biblical teaching on marriage, to fear culture's disapproval of Christian teaching about it, or to reluctantly accept same-sex marriage as a reality of civil life. But because the Bible's teaching on marriage is connected to the gospel and to God's vision for human flourishing, Christians committed to the authority of the Bible must reject these temptations and remain committed to the biblical teaching that defines marriage as a union of two opposite-sexed persons.

MARRIAGE AND GENDER IN THE BIBLE

Marriage is a gendered institution in the Bible. The early chapters of Genesis offer a blueprint for God's design for marriage. Being made male and female, Adam and Eve are sexually differentiated, but made for one another. Because God has knit their distinction down to the deepest levels of their being, a male husband and a female wife are designed for one another emotionally, physically, and even anatomically. The complementarity of Adam and Eve is what makes their marriage union achievable and procreation possible (Gn 1:27-28; 2:24). Genesis paints a picture of marriage that is complementary (that is, relating between the two sexes), exclusive between two opposite-sexed persons, and meant to be permanent for the duration of their lives.

The most basic element of marriage, however, is the physical difference that exists between men and women, which manifests itself in sexual union. Together man and woman possess a design oriented toward procreation, but each requires the other in order to realize or fulfill reproduction. Marriage is a comprehensive union, as authors Robert P. George, Ryan T. Anderson, and Sherif Girgis note in What is Marriage?: "Marriage is ordered to family life because the act by which spouses make love also makes new life; one and the same act both seals a marriage and brings forth children. That is why marriage alone is the loving union of mind and body fulfilled by the procreation—and rearing—of whole new humans."

This pattern set forth in Genesis is a pattern that Jesus Christ reaffirms as authoritative in the NT (Mt 19:4-6). The Bible always bundles these aspects of marriage together. Without complementarity and all that follows from it, it is difficult to explain why an institution like marriage would exist at all and why marriage ought to be both permanent and exclusive between only two persons. Marriage is what the Bible says it is, or else marriage does not exist. Christians have disagreed on many things throughout history, but they have always been united around basic truths that the Bible makes very clear, and the biblical definition of marriage as between one man and one woman is one matter on which Christians have spoken clearly and uniformly heretofore.

THE IMPOSSIBILITY OF SAME-SEX MARRIAGE

The biblical picture of marriage presented above is why same-sex marriage is not only a violation of God's moral law governing sexual relations between men and women (Rm 1:18-32; 1Co 6:9-11), but also why same-sex marriage cannot ever truly exist. Governments may create a legal entity that two persons of the same sex consider a marriage; but government does not have the authority to redefine God's moral law. According to the Bible, marriage can never exist between two persons of the same sex because marriage is designed, exclusively, for two persons of the opposite sex. This is an unpopular teaching in the eyes of the world, but faithfulness to Scripture demands our obedience on all matters—even those that are controversial.

THE IMPLICATIONS OF REVISIONIST DEFINITIONS OF MARRIAGE

Same-sex marriage is a bad path for society. It puts into principle very troubling patterns that can hinder human flourishing. First, children need moms and dads. Same-sex marriage denies this truth altogether by insisting that there is no difference between mothers and fathers. Our consciences know this is false. Each of us recognizes that a mother's love and a father's love are different and yet necessary and vital for children. In reality, there is no such thing as "parenting"; there is only mothering and fathering. Therefore, it is in the best interest of government and society to promote the ideal place for children to be raised: in a married household with a mom and dad.

Redefining marriage hands immense power to the state, essentially allowing it to redefine the family. By cutting off biological connection to the definition of marriage and family life, natural foundations and natural rights that follow from family life are called into question. This is a dangerous precedent.

Redefining marriage does not simply expand who can marry; it fundamentally alters what marriage is and what the foundation of a stable social order consists of. Marriage is not something that the state creates; rather, the state recognizes marriage as something that exists prior to the state and thus the state acknowledges it has no control over it.

Same-sex marriage is based on incoherent premises that lead to the further erosion of marriage. By denying the truth that marriage is based on the physical differences of men and women, same-sex marriage is based on the premise that what makes marriage achievable is the emotional union and physical attraction that exists between two persons, regardless of sexual difference. But this is not a solid foundation. Indeed, same-sex marriage is an historical anomaly not found anywhere through human history. Why is this? Because all societies have understood that the basis of society hinges on the union of man and woman joined together in marriage. Were it not for the procreative potential between men and women, the institution of marriage would have little reason to exist in the first place. Society has no need for an institution like marriage if marriage is simply about licensing physical attraction between two persons who exchange legal benefits.

A CHRISTIAN RESPONSE TO SAME-SEX MARRIAGE

So what is marriage? Marriage is the union of a man and a woman who come together as husband and wife to be father and mother to any children their union produces. Notice that the progression of roles in this definition relies centrally on the truth that men and women are distinct. Marriage is based on the anthropological truth that men and women are different, the biological fact that reproduction requires one man and one woman, and the sociological reality that children need moms and dads. Based on the definition above, same-sex marriage fundamentally rejects and thwarts these central truths about marriage.

The most consequential concern surrounding same-sex marriage is the message we who hold a Christian worldview send to our neighbors. The Bible condemns sexual relations between persons of the same sex. While some revisionists depict the Bible as condemning only certain forms of homosexual practice seen in ancient times, these flawed arguments overlook the Bible's broad and sweeping condemnation of homosexuality. Homosexuality violates the physical boundaries that God placed between men and women. In the NT, homosexuality is listed as an offense that provokes God's wrath and denies entry into the kingdom of God to those who choose indulging in it over submission to Christ (1Co 6:9-11). Therefore, if Christians are to love their neighbors, they can never support an institution based on sexual activities and disordered desires prohibited in Scripture. First Corinthians 13:6 declares, "Love finds no joy in unrighteousness but rejoices in the truth." We must tell the truth about marriage to our neighbors, work to uphold it in our laws, and seek to share it with all of society. Christians can never accommodate or accept same-sex marriage.

It is common to hear proponents of the issue saying something like this to those of us holding biblical convictions: "Same-sex marriage doesn't harm you, so why should you care?" This is demonstrably false. Same-sex marriage harms society by casting uncertainty onto marriage's role as the basic unit of society. It harms children by denying them their right to a mom and dad, and it evokes great challenges for religious liberty. Moreover, it harms individuals by putting them on a path that rejects God's design for marriage and sexual morality. While these truths are understandably challenging to uphold in a time like ours, God has given his people a wonderful opportunity to learn afresh his vision for marriage. It is meant not only to bring about flourishing to society. Marriage is, ultimately, a picture of the gospel itself (Eph 5:22-33; Rv 19:6-9).

LEADERSHIP AND BIBLICAL

LEADERSHIP AND BIBLICAL ETHICS

Leadership always has a moral component. Everyone knows leaders should get things done. They should be efficient and effective in their ability to accomplish tasks with and through other people. Leaders carry influence for good or ill, and effective leaders should ask good questions to set and implement their vision. This does not mean, however, that they always ask the rudimentary moral question, what ought we to do? The Christian vision for life, rooted in the gospel, infuses a life-giving ethical framework into the heart and mind of the leader.

A LEADER'S ETHICAL FOUNDATION: SCRIPTURE

How should we ground ethical judgments in an ever-changing realm of moral opinion? The Christian leader relies on the Bible as the Word of God and the only sufficient and authoritative rule of all saving knowledge, faith, and obedience. God alone determines and judges what is good or evil (Rm 2:1-5). Leaders will be tempted to judge God, the Creator of everything, by a standard of morality they conceive to fit their particular situations. Instead, Christian leaders should be reminded that God at Sinai gave the Israelites his gracious words in the Ten Commandments and placed them in the book of the covenant (Ex 19–24). God's leader Moses reported the words of the Lord, and he preserved two tablets of testimony inscribed by the finger of God (Ex 31:18). God's word, delivered to his people, led to life and flourishing. This set a pattern. God's full instruction revealed in the Scriptures is the unchanging ethical foundation for Christian leaders.

A LEADER'S ETHICAL TASK: LEADERSHIP

A Christian leader's task is to lead in the sphere of influence God has given him. Leadership is a gift granted to some believers according to the grace God has given different members of the body (Rm 12:8). Those called to lead ought to steward the gift they have received. When stewardship becomes the guiding perspective on leadership, the conversation is framed as delegated authority and not as earned authority. This buoys those in authority from the common abuses of coercive rule on the one hand and abdication on the other. Furthermore, it reinforces Paul's admonition in the preceding verses not to think too highly of oneself (Rm 12:3). The result is a servant's posture of outdoing one another in showing honor (Rm 12:10) that is fueled by a drive to lead because God has entrusted his people with the gifts to lead.

A LEADER'S ETHICAL FRAMEWORK: WORLDVIEW

It is simple to say that a leader should follow the Bible, but it is far from simple to implement a unified biblical approach to all of life's ultimate questions. The Bible provides a Christian worldview that helps us to construct a framework for distilling the specific ethical challenges that people and organizations face (Rm 12:2), but no good leader does this on his own. The Bible calls for wisdom to be formed amidst an abundance of counselors (Pr 11:14; Rm 12:4-9). Leaders should read widely from the Christian intellectual tradition as well as from current authors who address modern moral dilemmas. The Christian worldview is a community project, but the community has boundaries (Ti 1:10-16).

Christian leaders must do the hard work to identify the worldviews influencing their own assumptions. For example, power and might have determined what is ethically "right" in some cultures. Social hierarchy or tradition have also guided leaders to set direction and policy. In other cultures, the chief values tend to be aesthetic or creative considerations, and moral behaviors submit to so-called progressive ideas. Additionally, efficiency is a chief value in many capitalistic cultures, but it is not the only determinative question—and certainly not the fundamental question—for the Christian. Christian leaders are called to filter society's ethical norms through the grid of a Christian worldview in both the church and the marketplace. They should understand the stewardship to lead in accordance with divine revelation and help shape the moral fabric of society by affecting their realms of influence (Mt 5:13-16), whether in a small business, a large church, or an international corporation.

A LEADER'S ETHICAL DILEMMA: WISDOM

Christian leaders are rarely asked to make moral judgments on issues about which there is already a consensus. Instead, they get involved in decisions when those they lead get stuck in the decision-making process or when something has gone considerably wrong. Thus, leadership can be a burden demanding tough decisions. Furthermore, many amoral decisions or strategies—such as whether to have two or three sales divisions—have unintended moral consequences that also require ethical leadership. When complexities arise, Christians with the best intentions can make the mistake of applying their worldview analysis too hastily. Often, the best way to begin untying the Gordian knot is by admitting, "I don't know." As Proverbs 9:10 states, "The fear of the LORD is the beginning of wisdom." Wisdom does not find its genesis in the thoughts of any man. God gives Christian leaders wisdom and graciously invites them to pray. He invites them to pray for more wisdom because he has unlimited resources and is not stingy (Jms 1:5-8). No leader will get it right every time, but James is clear that humility is the way through dilemmas, for God gives grace to the humble but resists the proud (Jms 4:6).

A LEADER'S PERSONAL ETHIC: VIRTUE

A pattern of wise and humble decision making, rooted in a biblical worldview, produces virtuous leaders. The Bible is not interested in an ethic that only applies to decisions outside the leader; instead, it implicates the leader's whole life. The Christian worldview leaves no room for exceptions when it comes to a leader's personal integrity (Pr 10:9; 2Co 8:21; Php 4:8-9). Leaders don't get a pass or a moral exemption, even to accomplish a good outcome. Instead, the leaders of God's church are qualified primarily on the type of people they become (1Tm 3:1-13; Ti 1:6-9; 1Pt 5:1-8). Since leaders are often forced into instantaneous decision making and judgments, their reactions will stem from who they are when there is no time for deliberation or consultation. Leaders should daily seek to be transformed by putting off the old self and constantly being renewed to a true knowledge according to the image of Christ (Col 3:1-11). When the world, the flesh, and the devil attack, a Christian leader's true virtue is revealed. His ethic must operate from the virtues birthed from a new heart, mind, and new desires.

A LEADER'S ETHICAL LEADER: JESUS CHRIST

A Christian worldview of leadership ethics must be centered on Christ. There is no other name by which we are reconciled to God and no other name by which Christian leaders lead. Jesus, not a moralistic or therapeutic deity, is the unapologetic banner over, under, and around the Christian leader. Christian leaders must seek to become great by obeying Jesus's call to serve, by becoming first by being last. "Last" does not seem like the position of a leader, but a servant's basin and towel do not seem like the tools of a leader either (Jn 13:1-5); nevertheless, Christ used them effectively. Jesus gave us a way of leading that descends, not climbs, to greatness. When answering the question—How ought we to lead?—Jesus provides a picture of leaving the comfort of heaven instead of gaining the comforts of earth (Jn 6:38). He calls Christians to lose their lives to save them (Lk 9:24). He demonstrated his teaching by loving those he led enough to make himself nothing and to lay down his life (Php 2:5-11).

CONCLUSION

When surveying the confusing cultural milieu of the twenty-first century, we must remember that the Christ of the Christian worldview still demands a leader's soul, life, and all. Even the best Christian leaders will make blunders, but leaders still lead. They lead on the foundation of Scripture, through a worldview that aims to produce wise and virtuous people committed to the cruciform way of their leader, King Jesus.

2:2 Christians are to pray for governmental leaders (see Rm 13:1-7) and to seek to lead proper lives. Paul has been directly subjected to the authority of kings (e.g., King Agrippa; Ac 25:23–26:32), and is under arrest waiting to appear before Caesar at the time of this writing. Still, he urges prayer for all such leaders. See also “The Bible and Government Models,” p. 768; “Church and State,” p. 1374; “How Should Christians Relate to Government?” p. 1213.

2:4 God’s desire for everyone to be saved is sometimes understood to support universalism—the belief that in the end, all humanity will be saved, regardless of their relationship with God (see also 2:6). This statement, however, must be balanced by the clear indications that not all will be saved in the end (e.g., 2Th 1:7-9).

2:5 The affirmation that there is one God echoes Deuteronomy 6:4, known as the Shema, which served as a summary of the Jewish faith. As elsewhere in Paul's writings, the fact that there is only one God proves the need for all people—Jews and Gentiles—to hear the saving message of this God (e.g. Rm 3:29-30). The striking addition to this reference to the Shema is that there is also one mediator between God and humanity, the man Christ Jesus. This implies Christ's equal footing alongside God the Father (see "The Incarnation of Jesus Christ," p. 1271).

2:6 A ransom is a redemption price. The great redemption event of the OT is the exodus, by which God saved his people from the slavery of Egypt. Christ's ransom for all indicates that the price has been paid for all people to be freed from slavery to sin—if they are willing to accept it by faith (Rm 3:23-24).

2:7 A herald was one who publicly announced news or an important message. This was the most common way for news to be announced in the ancient world.

2:8 The typical posture for prayer in the OT included lifting up . . . hands (e.g., Neh 8:6; Pss 28:2; 141:2).

2:9 Modesty is a significant value in Christian living (see also 1Pt 3:3-4). It was common for women in Greek cities to dress elaborately for worship festivals, but Paul instructs women not to put confidence in their appearances. See also "Purpose and Parameters of Sexual Relations," p. 1397.

2:11-12 Going against some expectations in the ancient world, Paul affirms the propriety of women learning. He does, however, restrict teaching and exercising authority over the whole church to men. In the following section (3:1-7), pastors, whose office it is to teach and lead, are assumed to be male. Some have argued that here Paul is addressing a feminist problem in Ephesus (and thus his instruction is not to be understood universally), but this assumption lacks historical evidence.

2:13-14 Paul grounds his teaching in creation and the fall, demonstrating how important both of these events are for a Christian worldview. The link also makes it more difficult to dismiss the instructions of 2:12 as relating to a particular cultural situation.

2:14 That the woman was deceived is not meant to imply that women are more gullible than men. Rather, Paul's point appears to be that one of the problems of the fall (Gn 3) is that the created order between the man and woman was overturned. Adam, not Eve, remains responsible for human sin (Rm 5:12-21).

QUALIFICATIONS FOR OVERSEERS AND DEACONS

3 This saying is trustworthy: † "If anyone aspires to be an overseer, † † he desires a noble work." 2 An overseer, † therefore, must be above reproach, the husband of one wife, self-controlled, sensible, † respectable, hospitable, † able to teach, 3 not an excessive drinker, not a bully but gentle, not quarrelsome, not greedy. † 4 He must manage his own household competently and have his children under control with all dignity. 5 (If anyone does not know how to manage his own household, how will he take care of God's church?) 6 He must not be a new convert, or he might become conceited and incur the same condemnation as the devil. † 7 Furthermore, he must have a good reputation among outsiders, so that he does not fall into disgrace and the devil's † trap.

8 Deacons, † likewise, should be worthy of respect, not hypocritical, not drinking a lot of wine, not greedy for money, 9 holding the mystery of the faith † with a clear conscience. † 10 They must also be tested first; if they prove blameless, then they can serve as deacons. 11 Wives, † † too, must be worthy of respect, not slanderers, self-controlled, † faithful in everything. 12 Deacons are to be husbands of one wife, managing their children and their own households competently. 13 For those who have served well as deacons acquire a good standing for themselves and great boldness in the faith that is in Christ Jesus.

THE MYSTERY OF GODLINESS

14 I write these things to you, hoping to come † to you soon. 15 But if I should be delayed, I have written so that you will know how people ought to conduct themselves in God's household, † which is the church of the living God, † the pillar and foundation of the truth. † 16 And most certainly, the mystery of godliness † is great:

He † was manifested in the flesh, † preached among the nations, believed † on in the world, taken up in glory. †

3:1 The NT uses the words overseer, elder, and pastor interchangeably (see Ac 20:28; Ti 1:5,7; 1Pt 5:1-4).

3:1-13 Christian leadership must be grounded in character. These lists say little about duties. Instead they focus on character, demonstrating that those leading the church must have lives significantly shaped by the gospel. The prominence of family in these lists implies that the home is the proving ground of Christian character.

3:2 That an overseer must be the husband of one wife might mean that he should not be divorced and remarried. Or, it may mean that an overseer should not have any concubines or mistresses, in contrast to the practice of many Greek men of the ancient world. (See Ti 1:6 and note there also).

3:4-5 See "Career and Home Life," p. 774.

3:8-13 The qualifications for deacons is parallel to that of overseers, with the exception that the overseer is to be able to teach (3:2).

3:11 Wives (lit, "women") could refer to female deacons rather than the wives of deacons (cp. the absence of any mention of the overseer's wife; 3:1-7). The office of female deacon does not contradict Paul's instructions of 2:12, since deacons are not required to teach (see the note on 3:8-13).

3:15 A central concern of this letter is that Christians know how they should behave as God's children (how . . . to conduct themselves in God's household). The correlation between the church and God's household may also shed light on why Paul requires an overseer to be a man (2:12; 3:1-7), just as the husband is head of his home (cp. Eph 5:23).

BIBLICAL FORMATION

Scripture repeatedly emphasizes the spiritual status of the human heart. As the prophet Nathan observed, "Humans see what is visible, but the LORD sees the heart" (1Sm 16:7). Jesus likened the Pharisees to whitewashed tombs, "which appear beautiful on the outside, but inside are full of the bones of the dead and every kind of impurity" (Mt 23:27). He also rebuked the church at Ephesus because their love—or hearts—had grown cold (Rv 2:1-7).

Every authentic conversion to Christ entails a change of heart, leading to a change of life. The Holy Spirit convicts of sin, calls the individual to Christ, orchestrates the new birth, and indwells the new believer. From that point onward, the Holy Spirit empowers the believer, facilitating maturity in Christ.

Though conversion and sanctification result only by God's grace, humans are responsible to believe in Christ and pursue Christlikeness. Moreover, the Christian is absolutely responsible for his growth in Christ, yet entirely dependent on the power of the Holy Spirit to foster such growth. This duality, one of the great paradoxes of the Christian life, is captured in Paul's exhortation to "work out [our] own salvation with fear and trembling. For it is God who is working in [us] both to will and to work according to his good purpose" (Php 2:12-13).

Thankfully, Holy Scripture reveals the key component, humanly speaking, for Christian growth: "train yourself in godliness" (1Tm 4:7). This admonition is one of the most overlooked, yet profound, verses in the entire Bible. It encapsulates the key ingredient for a vibrant, joy-filled Christian life—practicing the spiritual disciplines.

The word discipline is commonly associated with punitive action or a laborious, unpleasant task, yet Paul commends it to be practiced. The term itself implies the Christian life is not a passive experience. Growth in Christ is an active endeavor—carried out on an active, dynamic footing. To this end, believers throughout the centuries have practiced the spiritual disciplines to facilitate godliness and engender Christian growth.

In Spiritual Disciplines for the Christian Life, Donald Whitney defines spiritual disciplines as "those personal and congregational exercises, habits or practices that promote spiritual growth. They are the habits of devotion and experiential Christianity that have been practiced by Christians since biblical times" (Spiritual Disciplines, 17). Such spiritual disciplines include Bible intake, prayer, worship, fasting, evangelism, giving, serving, and silence and solitude.

While all the spiritual disciplines are commended, Bible intake is the most foundational and most urgent. It is the indispensable discipline because it informs, fosters, and enables the other disciplines. For example, the Bible teaches one how to intercede, thus informing the discipline of prayer. The Bible presents the person and work of Christ, thus informing evangelism. The Bible is the Word of God, thus enabling worship through the reading and preaching of it. Likewise, the Bible similarly informs, fosters, and enables each of the spiritual disciplines, giving it a singular status.

The preeminence of Bible intake is rooted in the nature and status of Scripture itself. God chose to reveal himself to his people through his Word. God likens his Word to "a hammer that pulverizes rock" (Jr 23:29); it "will not return to [him] empty" (Is 55:11). Moreover, the Bible makes binding, theological claims of itself, declaring, "All Scripture is inspired by God and is profitable for teaching, for rebuking, for correcting, for training in righteousness" (2Tm 3:16).

Evangelical Christians embrace the verbal, plenary inspiration of Scripture. The word plenary emphasizes the totality of Scripture, and verbal underscores that the words themselves—not merely the authors' words or their thoughts—are inspired by God. Since all of Scripture is inspired of God, Scripture is true, trustworthy, and authoritative. As the Reformers reasoned, the voice of Scripture is the voice of God.

Bible intake, though singular in importance, is received through multiple conduits. Hearing the Bible is the most basic and common form of Scripture intake. It occurs when one sits under the ministry of the Word, whether preached or taught, received in person or through other mediums. Jesus pronounced blessing on those who hear the Word of God and obey it (Lk 11:28), and Paul assigned the "public reading" of Scripture as an indispensable part of public worship to ensure God's people heard God's Word (1Tm 4:13).

Reading the Bible, at the personal level, is perhaps the most essential form of Bible intake. For the Christian, nothing should displace daily Bible reading. This includes both the macro-level of reading through books of the Bible, and the micro-level of reading passages and verses repeatedly for greater familiarization, deeper reflection, and specific application.

Studying the Bible gives the Christian depth and strengthens his knowledge of God, thus enabling him to more ably teach and defend the faith. Every believer is called to be like the Bereans, searching the Scriptures and weighing teachers and doctrines by them (Ac 17:10-12). Such is expected of a disciple—or learner—of Christ, and the most faithful disciple will "be diligent to present [himself] to God as one approved, a worker who doesn't need to be ashamed, correctly teaching the word of truth" (2Tm 2:15).

Memorizing the Bible is another proven method of Scripture intake. In so doing, one hides God's Word in his heart, so as not to sin against him (Ps 119:11). Moreover, it follows the pattern of the Bible itself. Whether it is Jesus quoting the Scriptures to Satan, or Paul reasoning from the OT to his Jewish interlocutors, the Bible prioritizes treasuring God's Word in our hearts so that we may not sin against him.

Meditating on the Bible sounds like a mystic practice to some, but it is a biblical concept and a distinctly Christian activity. In fact, God links meditating on his Word with obedience and blessing (Jos 1:8; Ps 1:1-3). Meditating on God's Word is as simple as intentionally reflecting on a passage of Scripture, directly applying its truth to your life, and letting it settle in your heart. Time devoted to lingering over Scripture is time well spent, as it fosters the knowledge of God and enables the living and active Word of God to convict of sin and inform the conscience (Heb 4:12).

Praying through the Bible flows naturally from Scripture meditation. Giants of the faith, such as Martin Luther, Charles Spurgeon, and especially George Mueller, made a habit of praying through Scripture. The Psalms especially lend themselves to prayer. In the Psalter, one finds the full range of human emotion, gaining a panoramic view of God's work, and encountering the full pallet of biblical truth. Additionally, praying the Scriptures helps to assure that one's prayers are biblically sound and pleasing to God.

Though the Western world is largely Bible saturated, many professing Christians in the West live Bible-depleted lives. This is a tragic irony, though it is not perplexing. The answer to the problem is not hidden, neither is it difficult to understand. Christians are called to be people of the book—the Bible—and therefore must prioritize the spiritual discipline of Bible intake. Failing to do this leads to diminished spiritual maturity.

Not everyone can preach a sermon, lead a Bible study, or persuasively advocate for biblical truth, but every believer can engage in Bible intake. In fact, never in the history of Christendom has Bible intake been more accessible. Proliferating translations, electronic and print versions of the Bible, media ministries, podcasts, and the incalculable power of the Internet have all brought God's Word nearer.

Why practice the spiritual disciplines? They facilitate abiding in Christ, leading to joy and spiritual growth. They help guard the believer against pharisaical attitudes, the condition of patent hypocrisy that Jesus condemned. They engender fruit bearing, which glorifies God, strengthens one's assurance of salvation, and radiates the gospel of Christ. Therefore, practice the spiritual disciplines—especially Bible intake—and fulfill Paul's charge to "train yourself in godliness"(1Tm 4:7).

4:7 On myths, see the note at 1:4.

4:10 Similar to 2:4, the claim that God is the Savior of all people is sometimes understood to support universalism—the belief that in the end, all humanity will be saved, regardless of their relationship with God (see also 2:6). The Greek word translated especially, however, has the sense of “particularly.” The point is not that Jesus saves everybody and then saves believers even more. Rather, Jesus is the Savior for all who believe.

4:12 This is not a license for Timothy to flaunt his youthfulness. It is a call to maturity so that his youthfulness will not be a hindrance to anyone. If Timothy lives maturely, others will follow him despite his youth.

4:13 Public reading refers to the reading of Scripture, as was practiced widely in Jewish synagogues. Exhortation and teaching would follow on the basis of the text. Timothy is to give his attention to these tasks, indicating the priority of the Word of God in ministry.

4:14 Timothy is not to neglect the gift that is in him, which probably refers to his responsibility and ability to teach Scripture (4:12). He was charged with this task through the laying on of hands by the council of elders, indicating some form of ordination for his role.

4:16 Both Timothy’s teaching and the character of his life should reflect faithfulness. Both elements have consequences for Timothy and for his hearers.

THE SUPPORT OF WIDOWS

3 Support † widows † who are genuinely in need. 4 But if any widow has children or grandchildren, let them learn to practice godliness toward their own family first and to repay their parents, for this pleases God. 5 The widow who is truly in need and left all alone has put her hope in God † and continues night and day in her petitions and prayers; 6 however, she who is self-indulgent is dead even while she lives. † 7 Command this also, so that they will be above reproach. 8 But if anyone does not provide † for his own family, especially for his own household, he has denied the faith † and is worse than an unbeliever.
9 No widow is to be enrolled on the list for support unless she is at least sixty years old, has been the wife of one husband, 10 and is well known for good works † — that is, if she has brought up children, shown hospitality, † washed the saints’ feet, † helped the afflicted, † and devoted herself to every good work. † 11 But refuse to enroll younger widows, for when they are drawn away from Christ by desire, they want to marry † 12 and will therefore receive condemnation † because they have renounced their original pledge. 13 At the same time, they also learn to be idle, going from house to house; they are not only idle, but are also gossips † and busybodies, saying things they shouldn’t say. 14 Therefore, I want younger women to marry, † have children, manage their households, and give the adversary no opportunity to accuse us. † 15 For some have already turned away † to follow Satan. 16 If any † believing woman has widows in her family, let her help them. Let the church not be burdened, so that it can help widows in genuine need.

HONORING THE ELDERS

17 The elders who are good leaders are to be considered worthy of double honor, † especially those who work hard † at preaching and teaching. 18 For the Scripture says: Do not muzzle an ox while it is treading out the grain, † † and the worker is worthy of his wages. †

19 Don't accept an accusation against an elder unless it is supported by two or three witnesses. †

ISSUES IN MEDICAL ETHICS

Jesus said, "It is not those who are well who need a doctor, but those who are sick" (Mt 9:12). While Jesus's statement had to do with spiritual illness, it expresses a truism about the role of the medical profession. Though issues in the twenty-first century differ from those of the first, people who are ill still need a physician; treatments have a cost; and not all treatments are successful (Mk 5:25-26).

For centuries, physicians have been influenced by the Hippocratic oath that forbade them to take actions that would cause abortion or the death of their patients, while also calling them to other standard behaviors and virtues. In recent decades, however, the oath has been repeatedly rewritten, and the physician-patient relationship has undergone transformation from a primarily covenantal to an essentially contractual one (William F. May, The Physician's Covenant). This has resulted in less trust in and greater demands on the medical community.

CHRISTIANITY AND MEDICAL CARE

How should Christian physicians respond to people who are ill or suffering, in the face of treatments that are often costly but not always successful?

First and foremost, the physician must recognize the imago Dei, the image of God, that each patient bears. Only when the medical professional understands another person as a fellow human can he offer appropriate treatment. The realization that all people, including physicians, are beloved creations of God establishes a vertical relationship that grounds all other relationships. The physician's equality with the patient establishes the proper horizontal plane of relationship. It is in this context of vertical and horizontal relationships that right actions can be taken (Nigel M. de S. Cameron, The New Medicine).

Second, physicians must be competent in their care of patients. While mere technique cannot a physician make, lack of competence is battery to some, and a disservice to all.

Third, a physician must be compassionate—but this term needs explanation. Compassion is not simply feeling sorry for someone, or feeling what the sufferer is feeling. To exhibit compassion, one "suffers with" another. The compassionate physician, therefore, sees the suffering of the patient and identifies with it: to suffer is to experience at some level the finitude of this life—indeed, it is a common experience for all people (Daniel P. Sulmasy, The Healer's Calling: A Spirituality for Physicians and Other Health Care Professionals). Moreover, the Christian recognizes the reality of suffering that is shared with Christ, along with the comfort and redemption that comes from him (2Co 1:3-7; Heb 4:13-16).

QUESTIONS TO ASK REGARDING DIFFICULT ISSUES

How, then, does the competent, compassionate physician, who recognizes the imago Dei in his patients, face the issues of abortion, euthanasia, physician-assisted suicide, stem cell therapies, or a myriad of other controversial issues related to the medical field? When patients are suffering from various maladies that seemingly could benefit from the well-placed suction or curette (abortion), the use of medications to end their pain (euthanasia or physician-assisted suicide), or the use of other humans as therapies (embryonic or fetal stem cells or parts), how does the physician show compassion? Is compassion simply giving someone —who images God and who is one's equal—what he or she desires? Is it always compassionate to relieve suffering?

Several tests may be applied in answering these questions. The physician should ask the following: 1. AM I RECOGNIZING THE HUMANITY OF THE PERSON(S) INVOLVED?

Do I see the patient, or any individual involved in this situation, as fully human, and as my moral peer? Does my definition of human depend on qualities expressed, the location of the person, or merely legal terms? These queries particularly apply to persons unborn, as well as to those considered incompetent by law or "nondecisional" by health care professionals.

2. WILL MY ACTIONS ENSURE THAT ANOTHER HUMAN, OF WHATEVER AGE, UNBORN OR LIVING EX UTERO, DOES NOT COME TO HARM?

Embryos used for research, including embryonic stem cell research, are inevitably destroyed.

3. IF SOMEONE HAS ALREADY COME TO HARM IN ORDER TO PRODUCE THAT WHICH I WOULD NEED TO USE TO HELP SOMEONE ELSE, AM I COMPLICIT IN THAT HARM?

This question is an appropriate one for the development of vaccines, as well as for any other process that uses embryonic or fetal cells.

4. WILL TAKING AN ACTION MAINTAIN THE HORIZONTAL POSITION BETWEEN THE PATIENT AND MYSELF AS A PHYSICIAN, OR WOULD IT ELEVATE ME TO A VERTICAL (AND THEREFORE, INAPPROPRIATE) POSITION IN RELATIONSHIP TO THE PATIENT?

Examples would include physician-assisted suicide or euthanasia.

5. IS THE PATIENT SEEN AS SOMEONE MADE IN THE IMAGE OF GOD OR AS A COMMODITY TO BE BOUGHT OR SOLD IN THIS SITUATION?

This is applicable to the use of sperm, eggs, embryos, or organ donors, as well as to surrogacy.

6. AM I DEVALUING OR OVERVALUING THE LIFE OF ONE PERSON COMPARED TO ANOTHER?

Such inappropriate valuation of human life occurs in abortion, embryonic stem cell research, and the selling of organs or other body parts.

7. DO I PARTICIPATE IN PROTOCOLS OR ACTIVITIES THAT TAKE PRECEDENCE OVER RIGHTLY RESPECTING HUMAN LIFE?

Examples would be the use of embryonic stem cells in research or treatment; allowing patients to be evaluated as potential organ donors before being evaluated for treatment as patients themselves; failing to provide full disclosure for a proposed treatment; and financial affiliations with manufacturers or treatment facilities.

8. AM I TREATING OTHERS AS A PROJECT, OR A MEANS TO AN END, AS OPPOSED TO ENDS IN THEMSELVES?

AS OPPOSED TO ENDS IN THEMSELVES?

Viewing others as a means to an end can occur at various times: seeking eggs, sperm, or womb donors (usually at a cost); forming in vitro embryos for research or treatment; prematurely declaring “dead” people whose organs could be used for transplantation.

9. IS A PROPOSED ACTION CONSISTENT WITH A STANCE OF PROTECTING LIFE?

Abortion, the procurement of embryonic stem cells through the disruption and subsequent destruction of an embryo, physician-assisted suicide, and euthanasia all contravene the protection of living humans. Performing any of these actions is antithetical to a physician’s training as a healer.

CONCLUSION

There are untold numbers of ways in which we, who are called to love the Lord our God with all our hearts, souls, and minds, and our neighbors as ourselves (Mt 22:37-40), can fail to do both. It is prudent to examine ourselves, and to invite our Creator to examine our hearts, to see if there is any wicked way in us. He can lead us in the everlasting way (Ps 139:23-24).

5:1-2 Timothy is to treat the members of his congregation as he would members of his own family. Indeed, the church is the household of God (3:15).

5:3 Widows were often severely disadvantaged in Roman society, since they usually did not inherit their husband’s possessions. If a widow’s son(s) did not care for her, she could become destitute.

5:4 Godliness involves meeting the needs of one’s family. To fail to do so is tantamount to denying the faith (5:8). The family is the first line of care, followed by the church. See also “Elderly Care,” p. 100.

5:9-10 The care of widows is somewhat formalized, involving a list of support. But widows are to display the characteristics of genuine faith in order to be included on this list.

5:18 Paul cites Deuteronomy 25:4 and a saying of Jesus found in Luke 10:7 as Scripture. From the earliest days, Christians regarded Jesus’s teachings as Scripture on par with the OT.

5:19 Elders are to be protected from false accusation. Any charge of wrongdoing, therefore, must be brought by multiple witnesses. This is not intended to shield elders from the consequences of wrongdoing, as the following verses demonstrate (5:20-22). It protects the congregation from damaging its leadership without cause.

5:23 The Bible nowhere commands abstinence from alcohol. Drunkenness is forbidden, but enjoying wine is not. Some Christians choose abstinence to avoid the possibility of addiction or of causing a brother to stumble (Rm 14:21). Timothy is instructed to use a little wine for medicinal purposes.

5:24-25 Paul reflects the biblical expectation that the final judgment will reveal all. Secret sins will be uncovered, but so will secret good works (Lk 12:2-4; Rm 2:16; 1Co 4:5).

HONORING MASTERS

6 All who are under the yoke as slaves should regard their own masters † as worthy of all respect, so that God’s name † and his teaching will not be blasphemed. 2 Let those who have believing masters not be disrespectful to them because they are brothers, but serve them even better, since those who benefit from their service are believers and dearly loved. † †

FALSE DOCTRINE AND HUMAN GREED

Teach and encourage these things. 3 If anyone teaches false doctrine and does not agree with the sound teaching of our Lord † Jesus Christ and with the teaching that promotes godliness, † 4 he is conceited and understands nothing, but has an unhealthy interest in disputes and arguments over words. † From these come envy, † quarreling, † slander, † evil suspicions, 5 and constant disagreement among people whose minds are depraved and deprived of the truth, who imagine that godliness is a way to material gain. † † 6 But godliness with contentment is great gain. † 7 For we brought nothing into the world, and † we can take nothing out. † 8 If we have food and clothing, † we will be content with these. 9 But those who want to be rich fall into temptation, a trap, and many foolish and harmful desires, which plunge people into ruin and destruction.

10 For the love of money is a root † of all kinds of evil, and by craving it, some have wandered away from the faith † and pierced themselves with many griefs.

FIGHT THE GOOD FIGHT

11 But you, man of God, flee from these things, and pursue righteousness, godliness, faith, love, † endurance, † and gentleness. 12 Fight the good fight † of the faith. Take hold of eternal life † to which you were called and about which you have made a good confession in the presence of many witnesses. 13 In the presence of God, who gives life to all, † and of Christ Jesus, who gave a good confession before Pontius Pilate, † I charge you 14 to keep this command without fault or failure until the appearing † of our Lord † Jesus Christ. 15 God will bring this about in his own time. † He is the blessed and only † Sovereign, the King of kings, † and the Lord of lords, † 16 who alone is immortal and who lives in unapproachable light, † whom no one has seen or can see, † to him be honor and eternal power. † Amen. †

INSTRUCTIONS TO THE RICH

17 Instruct those who are rich in the present age not to be arrogant † or to set their hope on the uncertainty of wealth, but on God, † who richly provides us with all things † to enjoy. 18 Instruct them to do what is good, to be rich in good works, † to be generous and willing to share, † 19 storing up treasure for themselves as a good foundation for the coming age, † so that they may take hold of what is truly life.

GUARD THE HERITAGE

20 Timothy, guard what has been entrusted to you, † avoiding † irreverent and empty speech and contradictions from what is falsely called knowledge. † 21 By professing it, some † people have departed from the faith. †

Grace be with you all.

6:5-6 The attempt to use religion for material gain is not new. Paul counters that true faith and godliness leads to contentment, which is true gain.

6:17-19 Being rich is not sinful. But the heart of the rich person must not trust in wealth but in God. The wealthy man’s deeds ought to reflect his godly attitude.

6:20-21 False teaching claims to be knowledge, but that claim proves untrue. Some offer advanced insight, but teaching that runs counter to Scripture will only cause believers to deviate from the faith.

CHRISTIAN WORLDVIEW ELEMENTS

TEACHINGS ABOUT GOD

God is the powerful Father who has graciously gifted his servants for ministry. Scripture is itself "God-breathed" (Gk, theopneustos; "inspired by God," 3:16). Jesus is both God and human: "Remember Jesus Christ, risen from the dead and descended from David" (2:8). The Holy Spirit is the powerful presence of God indwelling believers and enabling them to continue their ministry (1:14).

TEACHINGS ABOUT HUMANITY

See Teachings about Humanity for 1 Timothy.

TEACHINGS ABOUT SALVATION

Salvation is both sovereignly determined by God and the divine gift to all who believe. Paul summarized the evangelistic aspect of his ministry with a statement combining both emphases: "I endure all things for the elect: so that they also may obtain salvation, which is in Christ Jesus, with eternal glory" (2:10).

GREETING

1 Paul, † an apostle of Christ Jesus by God's will, † for the sake of the promise of life † in Christ Jesus: 2 To Timothy, my dearly loved son.
Grace, mercy, and peace † from God the Father and Christ Jesus our Lord.

THANKSGIVING

3 I thank God, whom I serve with a clear conscience † as my ancestors did, when I constantly remember you in my prayers night and day. † 4 Remembering your tears, I long to see you so that I may be filled with joy. 5 I recall your sincere faith † that first lived in your grandmother Lois and in your mother Eunice † and now, I am convinced, is in you also.
6 Therefore, I remind you to rekindle the gift of God that is in you through the laying on of my hands. † 7 For God has not given us a spirit of fear, † but one of power, † † love, † and sound judgment.

NOT ASHAMED OF THE GOSPEL

8 So don't be ashamed † of the testimony about our Lord, † or of me his prisoner. † Instead, share in suffering for the gospel, relying on the power † of God. 9 He has saved us and called us with a holy calling, † not according to our works, † but according to his own purpose † and grace, which was given to us in Christ Jesus before time began. 10 This has now been made evident through the appearing † of our Savior Christ Jesus, who has abolished death † and has brought life † and immortality to light through the gospel. 11 For this gospel I was appointed † a herald, apostle, and teacher, † 12 and that is why I suffer † these things. But I am not ashamed, because I know whom I have believed and am persuaded that he is able to guard what has been entrusted to me † † until that day. †

BE LOYAL TO THE FAITH

13 Hold on to the pattern of sound teaching † that you have heard from me, † in the faith and love that are in Christ Jesus. 14 Guard the good deposit through the Holy Spirit who lives in us. 15 You know that all those in the province of Asia † have deserted me, † including Phygelus and Hermogenes. 16 May the Lord grant mercy † to the household of Onesiphorus, † because he often refreshed me † and was not ashamed of my chains. † 17 On the contrary, when he was in Rome, † he diligently searched for me and found me. 18 May the Lord grant that he obtain mercy † from him on that day. You know very well how much he ministered at Ephesus. †

1:3 Paul stands in a line of faith since his ancestors believed in and served the Lord as well. In this he is similar to Timothy (1:5).

1:5 Timothy's mother Eunice was a believing Jew, while his father was a Greek (Ac 16:1). See "A Biblical View of Child Rearing," p. 1451.

1:6 Most likely this gift of God in Timothy through the laying on of Paul's hands refers to his ordination for ministry in Ephesus (1Tm 4:14).

1:7 The word translated fear can also be translated "cowardice" and is used in military settings for men who desert their posts in battle. As Paul calls Timothy to stand resolutely despite suffering, he reminds him that boldness—not cowardice—is a mark of the Spirit (see Pr 28:1; Ac 4:31).

1:10 Christ . . . has abolished death and now offers life and immortality. But this offer is brought to light through the gospel. What has been accomplished by Christ is made known through the gospel message.

1:11 Paul's role is to proclaim this gospel that brings to light what Christ has accomplished. On herald, see 1 Timothy 2:7.

1:12 Paul is not ashamed of the gospel nor of his suffering for it, though both things appeared shameful in Roman culture. The message of cross is foolishness to the world (1Co 1:18), and suffering was seen as punishment from the gods for sinful behavior. But Paul is not ashamed, regardless of what others think, because he knows that God is faithful. God is able to guard what has been entrusted to him; that is, the gospel message.

1:13 See also "Worldview Thinking, the Christian Intellectual Tradition, and the Pattern of Christian Truth," p. 1593.

1:14 Just as Paul was entrusted with the gospel, so Timothy is to guard that same good deposit through the Holy Spirit.

1:15-18 Paul provides examples of those who turned away from him when suffering came. One did not.

BE STRONG IN GRACE

2 You, therefore, my son, be strong in the grace † that is in Christ Jesus.
2 What you have heard from me † in the presence of many witnesses, commit to faithful † men † who will be able to teach others also.
3 Share in suffering as a good soldier of Christ Jesus. † 4 No one serving as a soldier gets entangled in the concerns of civilian life; he seeks to please the commanding officer.

THE BIBLE AND INTELLECTUAL PURSUIT

Some presume Christianity is anti-intellectual. But does the Bible actually promote anti-intellectualism? On the contrary, the Bible promotes the life of the mind. Indeed, the Christian worldview values learning, and it grounds, fosters, and clarifies such intellectual pursuit.

Note, for example, how the nature of God does so. God's infinity clarifies that he alone possesses full knowledge—past, present, and future. God's graciousness initiates all learning as all knowledge of him and life flows from his generous self-revelation. God's truthfulness shows that his self-disclosure communicates truth and does so coherently. God's personal nature means that knowledge is also relational, pointing us to a covenant relationship with him.

God's self-revelation reflects God and is likewise instructive about intellectual pursuit.

1. God's self-revelation is gracious: God freely initiates it and blesses through it.
2. It is truthful, faithfully representing who God is, what God does, and how God relates to humans.
3. It is a unity: though coming in a variety of forms (see below), God's communication about himself, humanity, and life coheres.
4. It is personal, as it communicates who God is and his ways.
5. It is propositional, disclosing truth about God, humanity, life, history, and salvation.
6. Since humans are the recipients of God's self-revelation, it is analogical, as God uses human contexts, cultures, and languages to communicate.
7. It is partial, since the infinite God can only reveal limited information to finite humans.
8. It is historical, as God communicates with humans in space and time.
9. It is progressive within Scripture, since God relates to multiple generations of humans and gradually expands his self-disclosure over time.

As such, God's self-revelation clarifies the educational pursuit: it is only possible through divine initiative, rests on the content and unity of revealed truth, has objective and subjective components, requires insight into human culture, cannot be exhaustive, is linked to all of life, and is a perennial process.

Further, God's gracious self-disclosure has been given in a variety of ways and in a variety of contexts, yet with striking unity.

- God has revealed himself to all people at all times in all places through creation, which witnesses to him as its Creator and Lord (Ps 19:1-6; Rm 1:18-32). He has also done so through creating humans in his image (addressed below) who have a conscience, the moral law written on the heart (Rm 2:12-16).

- God has also revealed himself to particular people at particular times and places, gradually and more clearly communicating himself and his covenant relations. He has displayed himself through historical actions (e.g., the exodus), through divine speech (e.g., the Ten Commandments), and through his covenant people, whose holiness, love, and justice are to reflect God's own character (Ex 19:5-6; Lv 19:1-18).
- God has revealed himself most fully in Jesus and his incarnation, sinless life, teaching, proclamation of the kingdom, miracles, crucifixion, resurrection, ascension, reign, and return (Jn 1:1-18; Heb 1:1-4).
- God has also revealed himself through the inspired prophetic-apostolic Holy Scriptures, which accurately record and interpret God's self-revelation. Even more, the Scriptures are called God's Word and are themselves a significant form of God's self-revelation (Pss 19:7-14; 119; Mt 5:17-20; Jn 10:35; 2Tm 3:15–4:5; 1Pt 1:22-25; 2Pt 1:16-21; 3:15-16).

Because of this, proper human intellectual pursuit begins with the fear of the Lord (Pr 1:1-7) and requires the standpoint of creatures seeking to know the Creator and his world through dependence on his self-revelation.

CREATION AND THE INTELLECTUAL PURSUIT

Creation likewise grounds, fosters, and clarifies intellectual pursuit. The infinite, self-existent, sovereign, personal, holy, and good Lord powerfully speaks and creates a good cosmos, evidenced by the steady refrain, "God saw that [it] was good" (Gn 1:4,10,12,18,21,25). This goodness was accentuated on the sixth day: "It was very good indeed" (1:31).

God's generous provisions of light, land, vegetation, and animals are blessings given for humanity's benefit, as are the abilities to know God, work, marry, and procreate. In the first chapters of Genesis God blesses man with the Sabbath, places him in the delightful garden of Eden, gives him a helper, and establishes only one prohibition—given not to stifle him but to promote his welfare. Thus, the good God created a good world for the good of humanity. Truth, goodness, beauty, and peace abound. As a result, it is fitting that humans seek to understand all of creation, all of life, in light of God's revelation.

HUMANITY AND THE INTELLECTUAL PURSUIT

Humanity is also instructive with respect to intellectual pursuit. As creatures, humans naturally bear all of the marks of finitude. All human knowledge is therefore limited, reflective of the Creator-creature distinction.

Even more, humans are created in God's image to love God, reflect his character, and serve his mission. As such, knowledge is not merely a nice additive to pursue, but relates to God's original and fundamental purposes for humanity—to love and serve God, others, and the creation (Gn 1:26-28). Such love and service require knowledge of God, self, culture, and creation. Humans are therefore created to learn and rightly pursue truth, goodness, beauty, and peace as noble ends in themselves and as ways of glorifying God by knowing, reflecting, and serving him.

SIN AND THE INTELLECTUAL PURSUIT

Unfortunately, the reality of human sin distorts this intellectual pursuit. Humans rebelled against God, disrupting their relationship to him, themselves, others, and creation (Gn 3; Rm 5:12-21). Humans are now characterized both by the image of God and sin. They appropriately long for justice, peace, and beauty, but tend to distort it or seek it for self-interest rather than for the glory of God and the good of others. Indeed, sin affects and infects the mind, affections, attitudes, will, actions, and even inactions.

Scripture explains this corruption in various ways, using metaphors such as spiritual death, darkness, hardness, bondage, and blindness (Mk 7:20-23; Rm 1:18-32; 3:9-20; 2Co 4:3-4; Eph 2:1-3; 4:17-19). As such, the human intellectual pursuit is too often marked by finitude, bias, and cultural myopia and driven by selfishness, pride, prestige, greed, and thirst for power.

SALVATION AND THE INTELLECTUAL PURSUIT

Thankfully, Christ is greater than sin and sheds light on the intellectual pursuit. Jesus is the Word, the fullest and clearest revelation of God (Jn 1:1-18; Heb 1:1-4). Jesus is the Light and the Truth in a world darkened by sin (Mt 5:13-16; Jn 1:4-18; 8:12; 14:6). Jesus is the Lord, the preeminent authority who deserves and demands allegiance and submission in all of life, including thinking (Php 2:5-11). He is also a teacher who molds disciples and invests in them, teaching them about the kingdom of God and building a messianic community.

Further, Jesus proclaims that true worship is in spirit and in truth, urges people to search the Scriptures which testify of him, expects them to examine his miracles and teachings to gauge whether he is from God, links himself to the truth, corrects error, sends the Holy Spirit as One who will guide the disciples in the truth, relates eternal life to knowing God, and prays that God will make his people holy by the Word, which he characterizes as truth (Mt 5-7; Jn 1:15-18; 4:20-24; 5:19-47; 6:32-33; 7:18; 8:14-18; 14:6; 15:26; 16:13; 17:3,17).

THE CHURCH AND THE INTELLECTUAL PURSUIT

Indeed, through his life, death, and resurrection, the Lord of truth redeems a people for himself. The church is marked by truth as she is shaped by the apostles' teaching, shares life together as a community of the Word, refutes error, and through union with Christ even displays the goodness of God—particularly his oneness, holiness, love, and truth (Ac 2:41-47; Eph 2:4-10; 4:1-24).

The people of God worship him by yielding themselves to him as living, holy, and acceptable sacrifices, in part through being transformed by the renewing of their minds and the discernment of God's will (Rm 12:1-2; Eph 4:17-24). As such, the intellectual pursuit is not merely an individualistic endeavor but is integrated into the whole of life and pursued in community with the people of God under the authoritative Word of God. It requires humility, faith, dependence on grace, respect for others, patience, carefulness, and persistence.

ETERNITY AND THE INTELLECTUAL PURSUIT

God's ultimate purposes for history are also instructive for the life of the mind. Jesus's return, triumph, and judgment declare his lordship, vindicate his people, and permanently establish cosmic justice and peace (2Th 1:5-10; Rv 20:10-15). The new heavens and the new earth will be characterized by God's personal presence, glory, holiness, unity, love, goodness, and truth. All falsehood is overthrown, and all who practice falsehood are banished (Rv 21–22). History is eschatological, linear, purposeful, for our good, and preeminently for God's glory (Rm 8:18-39; Eph 1:3-14); and learning is a worthy process that seeks to understand goodness, love, justice, and peace. It allows humans to serve one another and to glorify God.

Christians rightly value learning, reading, knowing, and teaching. Such pursuits glorify God and naturally grow out of the Christian worldview. Indeed, the nature of God, his self-revelation, creation, humanity as his image-bearers, Jesus's saving work, the church, and eschatology call for and crystalize such education.

CHRISTOPHER W. MORGAN

5 Also, if anyone competes as an athlete, he is not crowned unless he competes according to the rules. 6 The hardworking farmer ought to be the first to get a share of the crops. † 7 Consider what I say, for the Lord will give you understanding in everything.

8 Remember Jesus Christ, risen from the dead † and descended from David, according to my gospel, 9 for which I suffer to the point of being bound like a criminal. But the word of God is not bound. [10] This is why I endure † all things for the elect: † so that they also may obtain salvation, which is in Christ Jesus, with eternal glory. † [11] This saying is trustworthy: †

For if we died with him, †
we will also live with him;
[12] if we endure, we will also reign † with him; if we deny him, he will also deny us; [13] if we are faithless, he remains faithful, for he cannot deny himself.

AN APPROVED WORKER

[14] Remind them of these things, and charge them before God † not to fight about words. † This is useless and leads to the ruin of those who listen. [15] Be diligent to present yourself to God as one approved, a worker who doesn't need to be ashamed, correctly teaching the word of truth. † [16] Avoid irreverent and empty speech, since those who engage in it will produce even more godlessness, † [17] and their teaching will spread like gangrene. Hymenaeus † and Philetus are among them. [18] They have departed from the truth, saying that the resurrection has already taken place, † and are ruining the faith of some. † [19] Nevertheless, God's solid foundation stands firm, bearing this inscription: † The Lord knows those who are his, † † and let everyone who calls on the name † of † the Lord turn away from wickedness. †

[20] Now in a large house there are not only gold and silver vessels, † but also those of wood and clay; some for honorable † use and some for dishonorable. † † [21] So if anyone purifies himself from anything dishonorable, † he will be a special † instrument, set apart, useful to the Master, prepared for every good work. †

[22] Flee † from youthful passions, and pursue righteousness, faith, love, and peace, † along with those who call on the Lord † from a pure heart. [23] But reject foolish and ignorant disputes, because you know that they breed quarrels. [24] The Lord's † servant must not quarrel, † but must be gentle to everyone, able to teach, † and patient, 25 instructing his opponents with gentleness. † Perhaps God will grant them repentance † leading them to the knowledge of the truth. 26 Then they may come to their senses and escape the trap of the devil, † who has taken them captive to do his will. †

2:1-2 Part of Timothy's responsibility as a leader in the church is the preservation of the gospel by faithfully handing it down to others who will pass it on to still others. Paul has four generations of leaders in view.

2:3 In the ancient world, suffering was expected of soldiers. A good soldier is one who, despite suffering, remains faithful (2:4).

2:4 Though a soldier may well engage in the normal activities of life, he does not get entangled in the concerns of civilian life. His priority is to please the commanding officer. So Timothy must remain focused on serving Christ through all circumstances.

2:5 Athletic games were popular in the Roman world. Nero even competed in some and had himself declared the winner despite not finishing them. People recognized the wrongfulness of this. They understood that the prize should only go to one who competes according to the rules.

2:6 While farmers today only constitute a minority of workers in the western world, the ancient world saw 85 to 90 percent of the population involved in farming. Often such laborers had to give their crops to absentee landlords, rather than sharing in the fruit of their labor.

2:14 Bickering about minor things is counter to harmonious Christian living. It is often associated with false teachers, as it is here (2:16-18).

2:15 See "Biblical Interpretation," p. XXIX.

2:18 Apparently a feature of the false teaching of Hymenaeus and Philetus (2:17) is an over-realized eschatology, claiming that the future resurrection of the dead has already occurred.

2:20 A large house would be a wealthy one, with fine plates and bowls as well as cheap ones. Bowls for dishonorable use would include chamber pots—receptacles for human waste.

2:21 Paul's point is that believers may purify themselves to be put to the noble use of the Master.

2:22 It is central to Christian understanding that rejection of evil must be combined with the pursuit of good, and this effort is not merely individual but must be done alongside other believers. While Paul does not define youthful passions, the context suggests immature quarrelling is in view (2:23-25).

2:25 Though a soldier of Christ (2:3), the Lord's servant (2:24) is to instruct his opponents with gentleness. The aim of engaging opposition is not their destruction, but their repentance and restoration, that they may "escape the trap of the devil" (2:26).

DIFFICULT TIMES AHEAD

3 But know this: Hard times will come in the last days. † 2 For people will be lovers of self, † lovers of money, † boastful, proud, † demeaning, disobedient to parents, ungrateful, unholy, † 3 unloving, irreconcilable, slanderers, † without self-control, brutal, without love for what is good, † 4 traitors, † reckless, † conceited, † lovers of pleasure † rather than lovers of God, 5 holding to the form of godliness but denying its power. † Avoid these people. †
6 For among them are those who worm their way into households and deceive gullible women overwhelmed by sins and led astray by a variety of passions, †
7 always learning and never able to come to a knowledge of the truth. † 8 Just as Jannes and Jambres † resisted Moses, † so these also resist the truth. They are men who are corrupt in mind † and worthless † in regard to the faith. 9 But they will not make further progress, for their foolishness will be clear to all, as was the foolishness of Jannes and Jambres.

STRUGGLES IN THE CHRISTIAN LIFE

10 But you have followed my teaching, conduct, purpose, † faith, patience, love, † and endurance, 11 along with the persecutions and sufferings † that came to me in Antioch, † Iconium, † and Lystra. † What persecutions I endured — and yet the Lord rescued me from them all. 12 In fact, all who want to live a godly life in Christ Jesus will be persecuted. † 13 Evil people and impostors will become worse, deceiving † and being deceived. 14 But as for you, continue in what you have learned and firmly believed. You know those who taught you, † 15 and you know that from infancy you have known the sacred Scriptures, † which are able to give you wisdom for salvation † through faith in Christ Jesus. 16 All Scripture is inspired by God † † and is profitable for teaching, for rebuking, for correcting, for training in righteousness, [17] so that the man of God may be complete, equipped for every good work. †

3:1 In NT terms the last days began after the ascension of Jesus. Paul sees what is described here as happening in Timothy's time. That is why Timothy is urged to avoid such people (3:5). See also "The Apocalyptic and the Environment," p. 1565.

3:2-5 Though this list could describe much of the unbelieving world in general, it actually refers to false teachers, as revealed by the phrase holding to the form of godliness but denying its power (3:6-9).

3:8 Jannes and Jambres are the names given in early Jewish writings to the Egyptian magicians who opposed Moses in Exodus 7:8-13. These men became symbols of opposition to God's truth. Though their names do not appear in the OT, they were familiar to Timothy and other Jews.

3:11 Antioch, Iconium, and Lystra are cities Paul visited on his first missionary journey (Ac 13:13–14:28). Lystra is also Timothy's hometown (Ac 16:1). Paul refers to sufferings of which Timothy had been aware from the beginning of their association.

3:12 Contrary to the belief that God will abundantly bless his people with wealth, health, and success in this life, the promise of persecution lies ahead for all who want to live a godly life in Christ Jesus.

3:14-15 See "A Biblical View of Child Rearing," p. 1451.

3:15-17 The Scriptures are central to the Christian faith, having the power to convert (give you wisdom for salvation), correct, train, and equip us for all the good work God has for us to do. (see "Biblical Formation," p. 1504; "Special Revelation in Scripture," p. 705; "Sources for Ethics," p. 1371; "Biblical Inspiration and Inerrancy," p. XXXI; "Biblical Authority," p. 709).

FULFILL YOUR MINISTRY

4 I solemnly charge you before God and Christ Jesus, who is going to judge † the living and the dead, † and because of his appearing and his kingdom: † [2] Preach the word; be ready in season and out of season; rebuke, correct, and encourage with great patience and teaching. [3] For the time will come when people will not tolerate sound doctrine, † but according to their own desires, will multiply teachers for themselves because they have an itch to hear what they want to hear. [4] They will turn away from hearing the truth and will turn aside to myths. † 5 But as for you, exercise self-control in everything, endure hardship, do the work of an evangelist, † fulfill your ministry.

6 For I am already being poured out as a drink offering, † and the time for my departure is close. 7 I have fought the good fight, I have finished the race, I have kept the faith. 8 There is reserved for me the crown † of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, † will give me on that day, and not only to me, but to all those who have loved his appearing. † †

FINAL INSTRUCTIONS

9 Make every effort to come to me soon, † 10 because Demas † has deserted me, † since he loved this present world, and has gone to Thessalonica. † Crescens has gone to Galatia, † Titus † to Dalmatia. 11 Only Luke † is with me. Bring Mark † with you, for he is useful to me in the ministry. 12 I have sent Tychicus † to Ephesus. 13 When you come, bring the cloak I left in Troas † with Carpus, as well as the scrolls, especially the parchments. 14 Alexander † the coppersmith did great harm to me. The Lord will repay him according to his works. 15 Watch out † for him yourself because he strongly opposed our words.

16 At my first defense, no one stood by me, but everyone deserted me. † May it not be counted against them. 17 But the Lord stood with me and strengthened me, so that I might fully preach the word and all the Gentiles might hear it. So I was rescued from the lion's mouth. 18 The Lord will rescue me from every evil work and will bring me safely into his heavenly kingdom. † To him be the glory forever and ever! Amen.

BENEDICTION

19 Greet Prisca and Aquila, † and the household of Onesiphorus. †

20 Erastus † has remained at Corinth; I left Trophimus † sick at Miletus. †

21 Make every effort to come before winter. Eubulus greets you, as do Pudens, Linus, Claudia, and all the brothers and sisters.

22 The Lord be with your spirit. Grace be with you all.

4:1 This solemn charge uses language of the court with God and Christ Jesus as witnesses and judge. There is hardly a more serious way for Paul to exhort Timothy to "preach the word" (4:2).

4:4 Regarding myths, see the note on 1 Timothy 1:4. In their effort to resist the gospel, some people will commit intellectual suicide, looking for any alternate explanation of life.

4:6 A drink offering was common in Greek and Roman religions, but the background here is found in the OT sacrificial system (Nm 4:7). As in Philippians 2:17, Paul envisions his life poured out as a sacrifice offered to God.

4:8 In the Greek world, a crown were commonly given as rewards for athletic and military success. Paul uses this idea to portray the Lord's reward for those who hold fast and love his appearing.

4:11 Though Paul says he has "finished the race" (4:7), it is clear he is still active in ministry. And he will remain so until the end.

4:13 See "Textual Criticism," p. 1221.

4:17 It is unclear what Paul means by being rescued from the lion's mouth. It is probably a metaphor, drawing on the Roman amphitheater where criminals (and later, Christians) were killed by lions. It is possibly a reference to being released from house arrest by Caesar.

CHRISTIAN WORLDVIEW ELEMENTS

TEACHINGS ABOUT GOD

"God our Savior" promised us the hope of eternal life, which he revealed through "Christ Jesus our Savior" (1:2-4). God regenerated and renewed us through the work of the Holy Spirit (3:5). He poured out the Holy Spirit on us abundantly, again through Jesus Christ our Savior (3:6).

TEACHINGS ABOUT HUMANITY

See Teachings about Humanity for 1 Timothy.

TEACHINGS ABOUT SALVATION

Salvation is sovereignly determined by God for the "elect" (1:1), by grace (2:11), through God's kindness and love (3:4). It is offered to "all people" (2:11). Those who believe God should respond in good works, which are "good and profitable for everyone" (3:8).

GREETING

1 Paul, † a servant of God † and an apostle of Jesus Christ, for † the faith of God's elect † and their knowledge of the truth † that leads † to godliness, † 2 in the hope of eternal life † that God, who cannot lie, † promised before time began. † 3 In his own time he has revealed † his word † in the preaching with which I was entrusted † by the command † of God our Savior: †

4 To Titus, † my true son † in our common faith.
Grace and peace from God the Father and Christ Jesus our Savior. †

TITUS'S MINISTRY IN CRETE

5 The reason I left you in Crete † was to set right what was left undone and, as I directed you, to appoint elders † in every town. 6 An elder † must be blameless: † the husband of one wife, with faithful † children who are not accused of wildness or rebellion. 7 As an overseer † of God's household, he must be blameless: not arrogant, not hot-tempered, not an excessive drinker, not a bully, not greedy for money, 8 but hospitable, loving what is good, sensible, righteous, holy, self-controlled, 9 holding to the faithful message as taught, † so that he will be able both to encourage with sound teaching † and to refute those who contradict it.
10 For there are many rebellious people, full of empty talk and deception, especially those from the circumcision party. 11 It is necessary to silence them; they are ruining entire households by teaching what they shouldn't in order to get money dishonestly. 12 One of their very own prophets said, "Cretans are always liars, evil beasts, lazy gluttons." 13 This testimony is true. † For this reason, rebuke them sharply, † so that they may be sound in the faith 14 and may not pay attention to Jewish myths † and the commands of people who reject the truth. †
15 To the pure, everything is pure, but to those who are defiled and unbelieving nothing is pure; in fact, both their mind and conscience † are defiled. 16 They claim to know God, † but they deny him by their works. † They are detestable, disobedient, and unfit for any good work. †

1:1 Knowledge of the truth necessarily leads to godliness—not perfection in this life, but a growing maturity of faith.

1:2 The fact that God . . . cannot lie stands in stark contrast to the conniving, deceptive character of Greek gods.

1:5 The terms elders and "overseers" (1:7) are used interchangeably. "Elder" was the term used for leaders in Jewish synagogues, and Christians borrowed the term from that setting. It does not refer to a specific age range, but to maturity.

1:6 That an elder must be the husband of one wife might mean that he should not be divorced and remarried. Or, it may mean that an elder should not have any concubines or mistresses, in contrast to the practice of many Greek men of the ancient world (see also 1Tm 3:2).

1:9 In ancient virtue lists, it was common to emphasize one point in the list by placing it first or last, and by giving it more description than the other items. The last item in this list concerns faithful teaching, and it is much more developed than the other items. This makes sense because false teaching was a serious problem in Crete (1:10-16).

1:10 The circumcision party refers to Jewish Christians who taught that Gentile believers must be circumcised in order to belong to God's covenant people. This idea was refuted strongly in Paul's letter to the Galatians.

1:12 The wickedness of the Cretans was legendary. Various ancient writers referred to Cretans as the worst of people, and Crete was a place where villainy was celebrated. The quotation here is attributed to Epimenides of Crete (seventh or sixth c. BC). Gospel proclamation does not avoid such places.

SOUND TEACHING AND CHRISTIAN LIVING

2 But you are to proclaim things consistent with sound teaching. † 2 Older men † are to be self-controlled, worthy of respect, sensible, and sound in faith, love, † and endurance. 3 In the same way, older women † are to be reverent in behavior, not slanderers, not slaves to excessive drinking. They are to teach what is good, 4 so that they may encourage the young women to love their husbands and to love their children, 5 to be self-controlled, pure, workers at home, kind, and in submission † to their husbands, so that God's word † will not be slandered.
6 In the same way, encourage the young men † to be self-controlled 7 in everything. Make yourself an example of good works with integrity and dignity † in your teaching. 8 Your message is to be sound beyond reproach, † so that any opponent will be ashamed, because he doesn't have anything bad to say about us.

9 Slaves are to submit to their masters † in everything, and to be well-pleasing, † not talking back 10 or stealing, but demonstrating utter faithfulness, so that they may adorn the teaching of God our Savior † in everything.
11 For the grace of God has appeared, bringing salvation † for all people, †

LEADERSHIP AND A CHRISTIAN WORLDVIEW

The leadership crisis in America is without precedent." These words, penned by Robert Greenleaf more than twenty-five years ago, speak to the challenges we face ethically, culturally, and communally. At the heart of our society lies a basic collapse of any guiding worldview.

As early as 1966, Thomas Kuhn identified and articulated the importance of a worldview. He spoke about the central importance and guiding power of "plausibility structures," which he defined as the structures of meaning that provide our life experiences with context and understanding. When these come up short or run into barriers or impediments, we realize the need to expand our plausibility structures to make sense of all our experiences in the world.

As much as worldviews guide our lives, they also guide our leadership. What we believe about life, our responsibilities, and our ultimate destiny fundamentally influences the way we lead, what we are motivated to achieve, and how we treat our people. How, then, do we understand the importance of constructing a redemptive worldview and the way in which it influences our leadership?

Of all the elements that comprise a worldview, six primary considerations are essential: 1. How we view human nature, 2. What we believe about the human condition, 3. What we believe about God, 4. What we believe about our need for redemption, 5. What keeps us from the life God intended (sin), and 6. What outcome results for our lives.

HOW WE VIEW HUMAN NATURE

As Christians, we believe that humans are made in the image of God, but are now fallen. The imago Dei, the image of God within each person, identifies our inherent dignity and capacity for greatness. Humanity's fall into sin (Gn 3) reveals our enormous vulnerabilities to wretchedness. Of all the philosophies of life, there is no better or more compelling understanding of human nature than this Christian concept of our greatness and wretchedness and the fact that we can't reconcile both realities without the redemptive work of Jesus Christ. This view of human nature helps us recognize the possibility of self-directed work and ethical outlooks while realizing the necessity of employee handbooks and policy manuals.

UNDERSTANDING THE HUMAN CONDITION

Apart from God, humans are given to boredom, anxiety, and endless activity. We are all born with a God-shaped vacuum, and when we fail to fill it with God, we end up substituting every alternative to him. The result is an endless array of compulsive activity. Evagrius of Pontus (AD 345–399) once identified eight deadly thoughts (gluttony, anger, greed, envy, pride, lust, indifference, and melancholy) that Gregory the Great (AD 540–604) eventually codified as the seven deadly sins. Whatever list you choose, the end result is a catalog of vices reflecting a life lived apart from God.

The parable of the Prodigal Son (Lk 15) is a stunning portrayal of this perspective. As long as the wayward son can sustain his life apart from God, he avoids confronting the true nature of his condition. But when his resources run out, the reality of who he is and the groundlessness of his existence crash in on him.

THE NATURE OF ULTIMATE REALITY

Every philosophy of life takes a position on ultimate reality. Even philosophies of life like Marxism and Fascism define the ultimate reality (the classless society; the appetites and desires of the dictator and state) that guides them. As Christians, we believe that ultimate reality is not a matter of blind natural law, but God. As Christians and as leaders, our belief about God as the ultimate reality determines how we work, our optimism in the face of crisis, our hope in the future, and our trust in the goodness and ultimate destiny of lives invested in purposes that will outlive us.

OUR NEED FOR REDEMPTION

In the Christian worldview, emphasis is placed on humanity's need for redemption. But for redemption to occur, we must repent and believe. Repentance means to turn back after going in the wrong direction. Redemption occurs when we, instead of continuing in a trajectory away from God, turn back to him through placing faith in Christ.

WHAT KEEPS US FROM THE LIFE GOD INTENDED?

Sin, the fifth category or element that determines our worldview, is directly related to the fourth. Sin (Gk hamartia) is what leads us away from the path God intended. Hamartia is a term derived from archery, which means "to miss the mark." Sin is to miss the mark God intended for our lives.

The direct correlation to leadership involves the fate of leaders who end up imploding or sabotaging themselves. The rate at which leaders have collapsed in recent times illustrates the vulnerability and visibility that come with increasing levels of responsibility. Classic problems, such as hubris, believing oneself above the law, and refusing to limit one's self to the principles of ethical leadership are destructive tendencies that bring about a leader's demise.

WHAT KIND OF OUTCOME RESULTS FROM OUR WORLDVIEW?

The Christian worldview produces a capacity for self-awareness that is accurate and authentic. It also offers the capacity for self-discipline, self-regulation, and self-correction. Recent scholarship has demonstrated the importance of prayer and self-reflection for rechanneling the brain, carving new neuro-channels, and providing the growth and discipline for executive function that is critical for effective leadership.

SUMMARY

These six core facets of a Christian worldview help us to understand human nature, to craft strategies that can shape an organization, and to develop a culture of integrity, care, and respect that can sustain the human spirit while individuals seek to maximize their God-given abilities. A Christian worldview recognizes the inherently human need for influence, affiliation, and accomplishment. These qualities motivate us to contribute to purposes that will outlive us.

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM

Religious freedom" is a political principle that affirms the right for individuals and communities of faith to believe, worship, and live out their religion as they see fit.

The origins of religious freedom can be traced to the fourth century AD when the Roman emperor Constantine abolished those laws that proscribed Christian faith and practice, giving Christians the "freedom" to worship without fear of imprisonment or persecution. Religious freedom as a formal concept, however, only comes to fruition in the early modern period after the Protestant Reformation of the sixteenth century. John Locke's "Letter Concerning Toleration" (1689) is often recognized as a foundational document for the notion of religious freedom.

Religious freedom is affirmed in the Bill of Rights to the United States Constitution (1791), and the United Nations Universal Declaration of Human Rights (1948) asserts that religious freedom in all nations is necessary for justice. The most important Christian reflection on religious freedom is found in Dignitatis Humanae, the Second Vatican Council's Declaration on Religious Freedom (1965).

Despite this long substantial heritage, in today's religiously pluralistic world it is not uncommon to find religious believers of many faiths who face discrimination, persecution, or even death because of their belief and practice. Against such injustice, religious freedom allows one to practice one's religion without fear of coercion from political, cultural, or religious authorities.

While religious freedom is an important concept for modern political thought, it must be noted that there is no explicit defense or robust account of religious freedom in either the OT or the NT. Moreover, religious freedom is not a doctrine of Christian theology that can be inferred explicitly from the teachings of Scripture, the tradition of the church, or the vast majority of its most prominent theologians and teachers.

The Bible does not set forth specific political principles for perpetuating religious pluralism. Quite to the contrary, in the OT the defeated Canaanites—adults, children, and livestock—are to be killed at God's command (Dt 20:16-18). Similarly, the people of Nineveh face utter destruction if they do not repent (Jnh 3). Nowhere in the Bible is true religious belief optional. The people of God and nonbelievers alike are called to repentance, faithfulness, and sanctification.

The Bible does consistently affirm the legitimacy (but not the infallibility) of conscience, and religious freedom can be understood as following from the principle of conscience. An acknowledgment of conscience is integral to a respect for human dignity, and at its best, religious freedom is the political principle that attempts to insure that the nation state does not infringe on the exercise of conscience. Even so, religious freedom embraced as a political principle can be used for good or ill; it thus requires careful consideration by Christians.

In the modern religiously pluralistic world, for instance, religious believers face a variety of challenges. In recent non-Western history, certain atheist nation states have sought to abolish religious belief entirely, while others, particularly those practicing Islamic Sharia law, have outlawed rival religious traditions altogether. In Western countries as well, geographical regions with a dominant Christian tradition have sometimes made the practice of minority Christian traditions difficult (e.g., Protestantism in the American South or Catholicism in certain urban, immigrant neighborhoods of the American North). In all of these contexts, there is a need for the permissive sense of religious freedom that insures that minority religious traditions are free to practice their various faiths.

If religious freedom in the permissive sense seeks to protect religious practice from the authority of the dominant culture or nation state, religious freedom in the restrictive sense seeks to protect the nation state from the demands of religious belief and practice. Implicitly this occurs when these are domesticated, trivialized, and relegated to the margins of "respectable" society, so that religion becomes inward and private rather than communal and public.

The restrictive sense occurs explicitly when litigation and public policy disallow individuals and communities from exercising their beliefs in the many and diverse areas of their public and private lives. From the outlawing of polygamy in the American West to the prosecution of businesses that refuse to recognize sexual orientation as a civil right, the reach of the restrictive sense of religious freedom is broad, deep, and complex. The dilemmas presented by the double-edged sword of religious freedom cannot ultimately be resolved by case law.

Some might suggest that the restrictive sense is not an authentic manifestation of religious freedom. On the contrary, the permissive and the restrictive sense necessarily require each other for political coherence. What one community sees as permissive another may find to be restrictive. Moreover, it is always the case that when religious believers follow the dictates of conscience rather than those ordained by the state, they place themselves in potential conflict with the state. Unfortunately, to appeal to the nation state to protect religious freedom means that this freedom itself is beholden to the very entity from which it seeks protection. The state will only protect religious freedom so long as the state does not deem the religious practice as a challenge to its own hegemony.

Religious freedom cannot be entrusted to the modern nation state. While the biblical record does not address the question of religious freedom directly, it is abundantly clear on the question of to whom the Christian must pledge allegiance: we must "give . . . to Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and to God the things that are God's" (Mt 22:21) and "we must obey God rather than people" (Ac 5:29).

PHILEMON

INTRODUCTION

Philemon is Paul's only letter of a private nature. It concerns a runaway slave, Onesimus, who had robbed his master, Philemon, and escaped from Colossae to Rome. There Onesimus met the imprisoned apostle Paul. Paul wrote to Philemon concerning Onesimus. Paul sent both the letter and Onesimus back to Colossae. By comparison to Paul's other letters, Philemon is little more than a postcard, but it comes from the tender heart of a friend writing as a friend rather than as an apostle exercising his authority.

CIRCUMSTANCES OF WRITING

AUTHOR: During Paul's two-year imprisonment in Rome (Ac 28:30), probably during AD 60–61, he wrote four "prison letters," one of which was Philemon (the others were Colossians, Ephesians, and Philippians).

BACKGROUND: References to Paul's being in prison at the time of writing are found in verses 1,9-10,13, and perhaps 23. Paul was kept under house arrest—what the Romans called "free custody"—in his own rented house as he awaited trial (Ac 28:30).

Although Paul addresses the letter to Apphia, Archippus, and the church that meets in Philemon's house (v v. 1-2), the main addressee is Philemon himself, for "you" or "your" (v v. 2,4-21,23) is singular and refers to Philemon. Apparently he was a prosperous businessman living in Colossae (implied in Col 4:9) whose household included several slaves and whose house was large enough to accommodate meetings of the young church. He had been converted through Paul's ministry, perhaps by Paul himself (v v. 10,19), and had become Paul's "dear friend and coworker" (v. 1) and "partner" (v. 17) in the gospel service. Although the letter is basically Paul's personal appeal to Philemon, the plural "you" (v v. 3,22) and "your" (v v. 22,25) indicate that the whole church would have listened to its reading and thus been witnesses of Philemon's response to Paul's requests.

Onesimus had apparently run away and taken with him some of his master's money or possessions (v v. 15,18). Perhaps attracted by the anonymity of a large, distant city, he traveled to Rome seeking a life of freedom. His path crossed Paul's, and he became a Christian (v v. 10,16) and a useful helper to Paul (v. 11).

An alternative view denies that Onesimus was a runaway looking for freedom. It instead suggests that he left Philemon and looked for Paul so that Paul could become his advocate regarding some serious loss Philemon had experienced. All along Onesimus had intended to return to his master's household. Paul was therefore not guilty of harboring a fugitive slave. But on this view we would expect Paul to reassure Philemon that Onesimus had always intended to return.

CONTRIBUTION TO THE BIBLE

Although it is the shortest and most personal of Paul's letters, Philemon was included in the New Testament canon for several reasons.

First, it illustrates the breaking down of social and cultural barriers that occurred between Christians (see Gl 3:28). Paul, a highly educated Roman citizen, takes up the cause of a poor runaway slave whose life was in danger because of his theft and flight (Phm 18). Social and cultural barriers are eliminated in Christian fellowship.

Second, it reflects early Christian attitudes towards slavery. Although Paul accepts (but does not endorse) slavery as an existing social condition and as a legal fact (see v. 12), he emphasizes Onesimus's higher identity as a Christian brother and sets the master-slave relationship on a new footing (v. 16) and so ultimately undermines the institution of slavery. This contrasts with dominant views of the ancient world. For instance, Aristotle defined a slave as "a living tool, just as a tool is an inanimate slave" (Nicomachean Ethics viii. 11. 6).

Third, it shows a skillful pastor at work: Paul gives up his apostolic right to issue commands (v v. 8-9) and prefers to appeal to Philemon's free choice (v v. 10,14) to follow his Christian conscience in deciding how his love should be expressed (v v. 5,7); he identifies with Onesimus, his spiritual son (v. 10), calling him "my very own heart" (v. 12) and guaranteeing to repay his debts (v v. 18-19); and he gives his requests to Philemon in the hearing of the whole local church (v v. 1-3,22-25).

Fourth, it pictures the heart of the gospel (v v. 16-19). When we come to God in repentance and faith, he gives us a new status and welcomes us as if we were Christ. What we owe God, he has debited to Christ's account. Christ assumed personal responsibility for the full repayment of our debt to God.

STRUCTURE

Paul's letter to Philemon follows the form of a standard first-century Greek letter: address and greeting (vv. 1-3), body (vv. 8-20), and closing/farewell (vv. 21-25). Moreover, Paul includes a section of thanksgiving after the greeting (vv. 4-7), a typical feature found in his letters.

CHRISTIAN WORLDVIEW ELEMENTS

TEACHINGS ABOUT GOD

In this letters God the Father is the source of grace and peace and the one to whom Christians pray (vv. 3-4). Jesus is the center of faith, on whose account Paul was in prison (vv. 5,9). The Holy Spirit is not specifically mentioned.

TEACHINGS ABOUT HUMANITY

Philemon addresses slavery, a widely accepted social arrangement in the ancient world. Paul does not attack the institution of slavery head-on. Such a challenge could not have gained a hearing in the first century. Instead, Paul's teaching that in Christ both master and slave are to consider each other as brothers and equals undermines the concept of slavery and lays the foundation for eliminating slavery as an institution. The fact that in the twenty-first century slavery still exists in parts of the world is evidence of the power of sin in human lives and societies.

TEACHINGS ABOUT SALVATION

Salvation is seen through the perspective of two individuals, the master (Philemon) and the slave (Onesimus). Philemon was indebted to the apostle because Paul had brought the message of salvation to him (v. 19). Onesimus is a classic example of transformation because of the message of salvation: "Once he was useless to you, but now he is useful both to you and to me" (v. 11).

GREETING

1 Paul, † a prisoner † of Christ Jesus, † and Timothy † our brother: To Philemon our dear friend and coworker, 2 to Apphia our sister, † to Archippus † our fellow soldier, † and to the church that meets in your home. †
3 Grace to you and peace from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

PHILEMON'S LOVE AND FAITH

4 I always thank my God when I mention you in my prayers, 5 because I hear of your love † for all the saints and the faith that you have in the Lord Jesus. 6 I pray that your participation in the faith may become effective † through knowing every good thing † that is in us † for the glory of Christ. 7 For I have great joy and encouragement from your love, because the hearts of the saints have been refreshed † through you, brother.

AN APPEAL FOR ONESIMUS

8 For this reason, although I have great boldness in Christ to command you to do what is right, 9 I appeal to you, instead, on the basis of love. I, Paul, as an elderly man † and now also as a prisoner † of Christ Jesus, 10 appeal to you for my son, † Onesimus. † † I became his father † while I was in chains. 11 Once he was useless to you, but now he is useful both to you and to me. 12 I am sending him back to you — I am sending my very own heart. † † 13 I wanted to keep him with me, so that in my imprisonment for the gospel he might serve me in your place. 14 But I didn't want to do anything without your consent, so that your good deed might not be out of obligation, but of your own free will. 15 For perhaps this is why he was separated from you for a brief time, so that you might get him back permanently, 16 no longer as a slave, but more than a slave — as a dearly loved brother. He is especially so to me, but how much more to you, both in the flesh † and in the Lord. †

17 So if you consider me a partner, welcome † him as you would me. 18 And if he has wronged you in any way, or owes you anything, charge that to my account. † 19 I, Paul, write this with my own hand: † I will repay it — not to mention to you that you owe me even your very self. 20 Yes, brother, may I benefit from you in the Lord; refresh my heart in Christ. 21 Since I am confident of your obedience, I am writing to you, knowing that you will do even more than I say. 22 Meanwhile, also prepare a guest room for me, since I hope that through your prayers I will be restored to you.

FINAL GREETINGS

23 Epaphras, † my fellow prisoner in Christ Jesus, sends you greetings, and so do 24 Mark, † Aristarchus, † Demas, and Luke, † my coworkers.

THE BIBLE AND SLAVERY

As one reads the OT and the NT, it is clear that slavery is part and parcel of the whole ancient economic system. Throughout the ancient Near East (and everywhere else for that matter), slavery was a common solution to many problems. Bible readers are often confused with how we can reconcile such an evil as slavery with the Christian worldview. To do so, there are a number of things that we have to take into account.

The first thing that we as Bible believers must recognize is that we live in a fallen, sin-sick world. With the fall of man, many things came into existence that should not be. Murder, rape, warfare, and crime are just a few of many things that are distortions of the social order God desires. Slavery must first be understood as a corruption or distortion of the social order that results from the fall. The Bible does not endorse slavery; it merely realizes it as a state of affairs with which believers must contend.

Throughout the OT, we find that the term ebed, meaning "slave" or "servant," is used over eight hundred times. In more than a fifth of those instances it designates a household servant. Unfortunately, we also find that the number of slaves is often listed with animals to demonstrate the wealth of a patriarch. Throughout the ancient world, slaves were considered as part of a household, and as such, those people lost their own individual identities. They could be beaten, bought, sold, and inherited—even within ancient Israel.

Though the OT record makes it clear that slavery was practiced within ancient Israel, it should be noted that the Hebrews practiced slavery in a way that differed from the practices of surrounding cultures. While other nations viewed slaves as nothing more than tools to be used, the Hebrews never lost sight of the fact that slaves are humans made in the image of God. As such, men retain a certain dignity that was not to be violated. Consequently, we find all kinds of laws in the Pentateuch (Genesis through Deuteronomy) regarding how slaves can and cannot be treated. In fact, in ancient Israel, slaves even had the rights of citizens. All of this is because the Hebrews were constantly reminded that God brought them out of the land of slavery (Ex 20:2). One way that the Hebrews differed in their approach to slavery was the Sabbath release after six years. Slavery was not intended to be a perpetual state of affairs for the enslaved, unless they chose to stay.

In the NT, the most common word for slave is doulos (Gk), which is used 124 times. Aristotle argued that all things seek to achieve autonomy and self-sufficiency. Hence, slavery is the worst of all situations for the Greek citizen. The doulos may have some degree of autonomy, but not self-sufficiency. In the ancient Greek world, it was sometimes better to be a slave and part of a household than to be free and separate from a household. At the time of the NT, 50 percent or more of humans served in some type of slavery. Slavery was often cruel and there was little regard for human life. The Patri Protempis (Law of the Father) gave the paterfamilias (father, head of the household) power over punishments and rewards, as well as the life and death of slaves.

In the NT, slavery was neither condemned nor was it affirmed. In 1 Corinthians 7:20-23 the apostle Paul tells his readers that if they are slaves, they should not seek to be free. He emphasizes in Galatians that we are all equal in Jesus Christ. In Ephesians 6:5-10 and Colossians 3:22-25 he reminds masters not to be oppressive. In these sections of Scripture, Paul also reminds slaves to be obedient, aiming to please Christ rather than men.

The concept of slavery in the American context often complicates the issue because of the way that the Bible was used to justify slavery and its abuses in times past. Slavery in the United States was as cruel as it was in the ancient world. While some slave owners recognized the need of salvation for their slaves, others did not. The major difference between slavery in the United States and slavery in the ancient world is that in America people were enslaved solely based on of their ethnicity. This made for a more sinful institution.

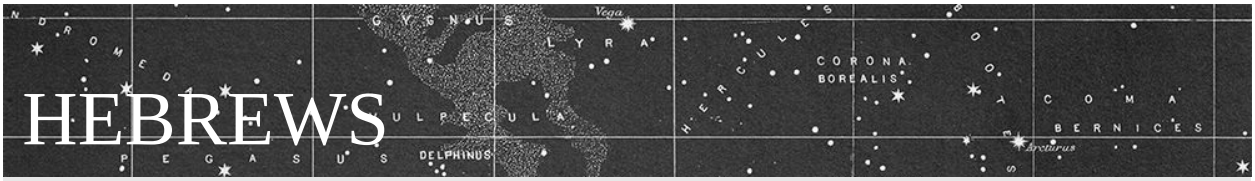
1:8 The Bible affirms the proper use of authority. Yet those in authority need not always wield the full extent of the power given them. Here an appeal is made when a command would also be appropriate.

1:10 By saying he became the father of Onesimus, Paul means he led him to Christ, bringing Onesimus to spiritual birth. Onesimus is called “a faithful and dearly loved brother, who is one of you” in Paul’s letter to the Colossians (4:9). We thus conclude that Onesimus and Philemon lived in Colossae. Onesimus was a slave belonging to Philemon. He had apparently run away before he met Paul (vv. 15-16).

1:16 The NT writers accept the reality of slavery in the world of their day. Nevertheless, the gospel radically impacts how Christians can think of this issue since fellow believers are brothers and sisters in Christ.



HEBREWS

INTRODUCTION

The epistle to the Hebrews is a tribute to the incomparable Son of God and an encouragement to the author's persecuted fellow believers. The author feared that his Christian readers were wavering in their endurance. The writer had a twofold approach: (1) He exalted Jesus Christ, who is addressed as both "God" and "the Son of Man," and is thus the only one who can serve as mediator between God and man; and (2) he exhorted his fellow Christians "go on to maturity" and live "by faith."

CIRCUMSTANCES OF WRITING

AUTHOR: The text of Hebrews does not identify its author. What we do know is that the author was a second-generation Christian, for he said he received the confirmed message of Christ from "those who heard" Jesus himself (2:3). Because Paul claimed his gospel was revealed directly by the Lord (1Co 15:8; Gl 1:12), it is doubtful that he was the author of Hebrews. The author was familiar with Timothy, but he referred to him as "our brother" (13:23), rather than as "my true son in the faith," as Paul did (1Tm 1:2).

Scholars have also proposed the following persons as authors: Luke, Clement of Rome, Barnabas, Apollos, Timothy, Philip, Peter, Silas, Jude, and Aristion. Ultimately it does not matter that the identity of the author is now lost. We should be satisfied with the fact that early Christians received the letter as inspired and authoritative Scripture and that its value for Christian discipleship is unquestioned.

BACKGROUND: The author of Hebrews knew his recipients well since he called them "brothers and sisters" (3:12; 7:5; 10:19; 13:22) and "dearly loved friends" (6:9). Like the writer, they were converts who had heard the gospel through the earliest followers of Christ (2:3). Scholars have speculated that those to whom the book was written were a breakaway group such as a house church that had separated from the main church. Another theory holds that the recipients were former Jewish priests who had converted to Christianity, and that they were considering a return to Judaism (at least in conformity to certain practices) in order to avoid persecution from fellow Jews. Another theory holds that the group was not necessarily Jewish since Gentile Christians also revered the OT as Scripture.

Regarding when the book was written, it is clear that the fall of Jerusalem (AD 70) had not yet occurred. The destruction of the temple would have been mentioned if it had already occurred, for it would have strengthened the letter's argument about Christ's sacrifice spelling the end of the temple sacrificial system. The public persecution mentioned in 10:32-34 implies one of two possibilities for dating the book. We know that the Roman emperors Nero and Domitian in (AD 64–68 and 81–82 respectively) persecuted Christians. Most likely Hebrews was written during the persecution under Nero, perhaps just before the destruction of the temple.

CONTRIBUTION TO THE BIBLE

No other book in the NT ties together OT history and practices with the life of Jesus Christ as thoroughly as the book of Hebrews. Just as Jesus Christ taught that the OT was fulfilled in himself (Mt 5:17-18; Lk 24:27), so the author of Hebrews taught that the old covenant was brought to completion in the new covenant (7:20–8:13). Hebrews also shows that because the old covenant has been fulfilled in the new covenant, the new covenant is actually "better" (7:22). The new covenant was made superior by the ministry of Jesus Christ.

STRUCTURE

In concluding the book of Hebrews, the author wrote, “I urge you to receive this message of exhortation, for I have written to you briefly” (13:22). If the literary style of Hebrews indicates anything, it is that it is a written theological sermon. It is not so much a letter—although it certainly ends like one—because it has no opening subscription, as was the norm with ancient letters. Hebrews instead begins with an introductory essay about the superiority of Jesus Christ (1:1-4). However, its capacity to encounter the reader’s soul indicates it is more than just a literary essay. Indeed, it has a definite sermonic character since it expounds the Scriptures at length in order to challenge the reader to faith and faithfulness. The sustained development of a complex, holistic theology of covenant indicates that Hebrews is a written theological sermon that discloses the broad sweep of God’s grand redemptive plan for humanity.

CHRISTIAN WORLDVIEW ELEMENTS

TEACHINGS ABOUT GOD

God is the Father of Jesus Christ. He is wholly other and is to be approached with reverence and fear, “for our God is a consuming fire” (12:29). The superiority of Jesus to all possible rivals is the theme of the entire book. The full deity and complete humanity of Jesus is explicitly taught. The Holy Spirit in Hebrews is both the One who speaks in Scripture (3:7; 10:15) and the One alive among believers in the present age (6:4; 10:29).

TEACHINGS ABOUT HUMANITY

A number of prominent OT people are mentioned in Hebrews, and the “roll call of faith” in chapter 11 is an impressive reminder of what believing humans can do. The emphasis in Hebrews, however, is that Jesus has the glory and honor of being humanity at its best. In Psalm 8 God declared “man” as the crown of creation; Hebrews 2 declares that this man is none other than Jesus Christ.

TEACHINGS ABOUT SALVATION

Jesus is a better high priest than the high priests of the old covenant. Further, Jesus’s death was a superior sacrifice to any that had been made before, “For it is impossible for the blood of bulls and goats to take away sins” (10:4). At the same time, however, Hebrews affirms that the human response to God’s redemptive actions, faith, has always and forever been the single way that pleases God. This Bible book, more clearly than any other, shows the permanence of the new covenant state of affairs and the impermanence of the old covenant.

THE NATURE OF THE SON

1 Long ago God spoke † to the fathers by the prophets † at different times and in different ways. † 2 In these last days, † he has spoken to us by his Son. God has appointed him heir of all things † and made the universe † † through him. 3 The Son is the radiance † of God's glory and the exact expression † of his nature, † sustaining all things by his powerful word. † After making purification for sins, † he sat down at the right hand of the Majesty on high. † † 4 So he became superior to the angels, just as the name he inherited is more excellent than theirs. †

THE SON SUPERIOR TO ANGELS

5 For to which of the angels did he ever say,
You are my Son;

today I have become your Father, † †
or again,
I will be his Father, and he will be my Son? † †
6 Again, when he † brings his firstborn into the world, † he says,
And let all God's angels worship him. † †
7 And about the angels he says:
He makes his angels winds, † and his servants † a fiery flame, † † 8 but to † the Son:
Your throne, O God,
is forever and ever,
and the scepter of your kingdom is a scepter of justice. † 9 You have loved righteousness and hated lawlessness; this is why God, your God, has anointed you with the oil of joy † beyond your companions. † †
10 And:
In the beginning, Lord, you established the earth, and the heavens are the works of your hands; † 11 they will perish, but you remain.
They will all wear out like clothing; † 12 you will roll them up like a cloak, † and they will be changed like clothing.
But you are the same, and your years will never end. † † 13 Now to which of the angels has he ever said:
Sit at my right hand
until I make your enemies your footstool? † †
14 Are they not all ministering spirits sent out to serve those who are going to inherit salvation? †

1:4 Jesus's superiority to the angels is the subject of the following section (1:5-14). The name was a way to refer to God among pious Jews. Thus, Jesus's inherited name is a title that once referred to God alone.

1:5-13 The authority and reliability of Scripture is foundational to a Christian worldview. This paragraph is the first of several in Hebrews in which the author fully depends on OT revelations. His argument assumes the trustworthiness of Scripture.

1:5 God's Son here refers to the expected Messiah (Ps 2:7; 2Sm 7:14).

1:6 In the OT, the firstborn shared the authority of the father, and he inherited the larger share of his property. Of Christ, the title expresses his preeminence in the church and over all creation (Col 1:15,18).

1:9 Anointing with oil was used for the installation of Israelite kings, priests, and prophets (Ps 45:6-7). In this context it refers to the Son's installation as God's King over all creation.

WARNING AGAINST NEGLECT

2 For this reason, we must pay attention all the more to what we have heard, so that we will not drift away. † 2 For if the message spoken through angels was legally binding † † and every transgression and disobedience received a just punishment, † 3 how will we escape if we neglect such a great salvation? † This salvation had its beginning when it was spoken of by the Lord, and it was confirmed to us by those who heard him. †

A BIBLICAL VIEW OF ANGELS

Angels are created spirit beings. Some of them are holy and some are evil. The OT term for angel is mal'ak, and the NT term is angelos; both terms refer to one sent with a message or one acting as a messenger. The biblical terms for "angel" are used of human messengers in some instances (e.g., 1Sm 23:27; 1Kg 19:2; Lk 7:24; 9:52) and often in the OT apply particularly to the angel of the Lord (e.g., Gn 16:7-14; Jdg 6:11-14; 2Sm 24:16; Zch 1:12-13). Most often, however, mal'ak and angelos are used for these created spiritual beings called angels or messengers (e.g., Ex 23:20; Mt 1:20; 4:11; 25:31,41).

THE ORIGIN OF ANGELS

Because all that God creates and does is wholly good (Gn 1:31; Jms 1:17), we must understand angels, in their entire class, as created by God as good. Psalm 148:1-6 expresses praise to God for his creation of all things, and among those things specified are "all his angels" and "all his heavenly armies" (Ps 148:2). Furthermore, Colossians 1:16 makes clear that by Christ all things were created, including things "in heaven and on earth, the visible and the invisible" (cp. Rm 8:38-39). Also relevant is God's statement to Job (Jb 38:4-7) indicating that angels ("sons of God") were present and shouted for joy at the creation of the heavens and earth. Angels, then, derive their existence from God, and their creation evidently precedes the subsequent creation of the universe.

A difficult question concerns how some of the good angels God created have become evil. First, we must understand all fallen angels, in their originally-created form, to have been wholly good. This was a goodness they forfeited, presumably, because of their rebellion against God. Two passages in particular lead us to think this is the case. Jude 6, and particularly 2 Peter 2:4, both speak of angels who departed from God's purposes and hence received God's judgment and condemnation. The text in 2 Peter is clear that the reason for this judgment was their sin against God. And when one adds to this the clear implication from Matthew 25:41 and Revelation 12:9 that demons are the followers of Satan, it seems obvious that these evil spirits, though created good, became evil as they followed their leader's enticement to sin against their Creator.

THE CHARACTER OF HOLY ANGELS

Less is said in the Bible about the character of unfallen angels than about their activities, but some aspects of their character are evident.

1. They are personal beings, with intelligence, emotions, and volition. We receive insights about their intelligence in 1 Peter 1:12, where they long to know more of God's salvation plan; in Revelation 17:1-18, where they know and communicate God's plans; and in Matthew 24:36, where they know much, but not everything (e.g., not the timing of the second coming). Witness to their emotions is seen in Job 38:7, where they rejoice over God's creation; in Isaiah 6:1-4, where with awe and wonder they cry out "Holy, holy, holy" before God; in Luke 15:10, where they rejoice when sinners repent; and in Revelation 5:11-14, where they marvel at the Lamb who was slain and worship him. The idea that they have their own will is tied to passages such as Hebrews 1:6, where God appeals to their will to worship the Son and 2 Peter 2:4, with its implication of some angels sinning in their choice to rebel against God.

2. They are spirit beings. Hebrews 1:14 calls angels "ministering spirits." In Luke 8:2 and 11:24 we see that demons are sometimes referred to as "evil spirits" or "unclean spirits," so presumably they are spirits by virtue of their being angels. But they can, for specific purposes, take on human form. We see this in Genesis 19:1, when the angels visit Sodom and in Hebrews 13:2, which notes that one might unknowingly entertain angels.

3. They apparently are not sexual in that they do not marry and hence do not procreate. According to Matthew 22:30, in heaven people, like angels, will not marry or be given in marriage.

4. They exist forever. Luke 20:36 states that angels cannot die.

5. They have great power. In 2 Thessalonians 1:7, angels are referred to as being "powerful." In 2 Kings 19:35 one angel sent by God destroyed one hundred eighty-five thousand Assyrian soldiers. In Daniel 6:22 an angel "shut the lions' mouths."

6. They are holy. In Job 5:1 and Psalm 89:7 angels are called “holy ones.” Mark 8:38 refers to them as “holy angels.”

7. They are elected by God. In 1 Timothy 5:21 they are referred to as his “elect angels,” which may refer to God’s choice of them not to rebel against him when Satan and the other, non-elect angels who followed Satan rebelled and were cast from God’s presence.

8. Although wondrous beings, they are not to be worshiped. In Colossians 2:18 the “worship of angels” is rejected. In Revelation 19:10 and 22:8-9, John fell down to worship the angel, but the angel said to worship God.

THE FUNCTIONS AND MINISTRY OF UNFALLEN ANGELS

Angels are servants of God who surround his presence (Dn 7:9-10; Rv 5:11-14) and carry out his will in various ways on earth (e.g., Gn 32:1; 2Sm 24:16-17). Hebrews 1:14 calls them “ministering spirits.” Beyond this general description, specific functions of angels are spoken of throughout the Scriptures.

1. They worship God, as seen in Isaiah 6:1-3; Luke 2:13-14; and Revelation 5:11-14.

2. They ministered with regard to Jesus during his earthly life. This is seen in Luke 1:11-20, where an angel appeared to Zacharias predicting John’s birth; in Luke 2:26-38, where Gabriel appeared to Mary; in Matthew 1:20, where an angel appeared to Joseph saying to take Mary as his wife; in Luke 2:8-15, where an angel appeared to the shepherds; in Matthew 2:13,19, where an angel told Joseph to go to Egypt and then back to Israel; in Matthew 4:11, when angels ministered to Jesus at his temptation; in Luke 22:43, when an angel strengthened Jesus in the garden of Gethsemane; in Matthew 28:2-8, when an angel rolled away the stone and told the women of Jesus’s resurrection; and in Acts 1:10-11, when two angels told the disciples of Jesus’s return.

3. They proclaim God’s word and ordain the law. Evidence of their proclamation is in Luke 1:26-38 and Acts 27:23-24. Their work of ordaining appears in Acts 7:53; Galatians 3:19; and Hebrews 2:2.

4. They protect and deliver God’s people as he directs. In Exodus 23:20-23 an angel was sent to protect Israel on entering the land. In 2 Kings 19:35 an angel struck one hundred eighty-five thousand Assyrians dead. In Daniel 3:28 an angel delivers three Hebrew men in the furnace. In Daniel 6:22 an angel closed the lions’ mouths. In Psalm 34:7 the angel of the Lord is said to encamp around those who fear him. In Acts 5:19 and 12:7 an angel delivered the apostles from prison.

5. They bear witness to and long to know more of God’s salvific purposes. This is apparent in 1 Corinthians 4:9; Ephesians 3:10; 1 Peter 1:12; and possibly also in 1 Corinthians 11:10.

6. They will bear witness to Christ’s confession of those who are and are not his, according to Luke 12:8-9, when Christ will confess or deny people “before the angels of God.”

7. They play a role in God’s reward of the righteous and punishment of the wicked before the final judgment. In Luke 16:22 angels take the poor man to Abraham’s bosom. In Acts 12:23 an angel struck Herod dead for not giving glory to God.

8. They come with Christ in his return. According to Matthew 16:27, the Son of Man comes in glory with his angels. Matthew 24:30-31 states that the Son of Man will appear with his angels who carry out his will. Matthew 25:31 notes that the Son of Man will appear with all the angels with him. And in 2 Thessalonians 1:7, it’s said that Jesus will be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels.

9. They gather the elect when Christ returns—as is evidenced by Matthew 24:30-31.

10. They dispense God’s judgment on the wicked when Christ returns—as seen in Matthew 13:39-42,49-50. Angels will take the wicked from among the righteous and cast them into hell.

11. They are used by God to defeat evil powers and nations. This is evidenced in Daniel 10 (the message to Daniel of Michael’s intervention to defeat ungodly forces). It also appears in Daniel 12:1 (Michael will rescue God’s people from great distress), and in Revelation 12:7-9 (Michael and his angels defeat the dragon and his angels).

12. An angel binds Satan during the millennium, according to Revelation 20:1-3.

13. They are stationed at the twelve gates of the New Jerusalem, according to Revelation 21:12.

THE DESTINY OF UNFALLEN ANGELS

In light of their continuous biblical role of ascribing praise to God, it stands to reason that angels will be among the great heavenly choir singing praises to God forevermore. They are present in the New Jerusalem, still ministering on God's behalf (Rv 21:12).

4 At the same time, God also testified by signs and wonders, various miracles, and distributions of gifts from the Holy Spirit according to his will. †

JESUS AND HUMANITY

5 For he has not subjected to angels the world to come that we are talking about.
6 But someone somewhere has testified:
What is man that you remember him, or the son of man that you care for him?
7 You made him lower than the angels for a short time;
you crowned him with glory and honor †
8 and subjected everything under his feet. †
For in subjecting everything to him, he left nothing that is not subject to him. As it is, we do not yet see everything subjected to him. † 9 But we do see Jesus — made lower than the angels for a short time so that by God's grace he might taste death † for everyone — crowned with glory and honor † because he suffered death. †
10 For in bringing many sons and daughters to glory, it was entirely appropriate that God — for whom and through whom all things exist — should make the source † of their salvation perfect through sufferings. † 11 For the one who sanctifies and those who are sanctified all have one Father. † That is why Jesus is not ashamed to call them brothers and sisters, † 12 saying:
I will proclaim your name to my brothers and sisters; I will sing hymns to you in the congregation. † †
13 Again, I will trust in him. † And again, Here I am with the children God gave me. † †
14 Now since the children have flesh and blood in common, Jesus also shared in these, so that through his death he might destroy the one holding the power of death — that is, the devil † — 15 and free those who were held in slavery all their lives by the fear of death. † 16 For it is clear that he does not reach out to help angels, but to help Abraham's offspring. † 17 Therefore, he had to be like his brothers and sisters in every way, so that he could become a merciful and faithful high priest in matters † pertaining to God, to make atonement † † for the sins of the people. † 18 For since he himself has suffered when he was tempted, he is able to help those who are tempted.

2:2 Many first-century Jews believed that angels participated in the giving of the law at Sinai, though this is not explicitly mentioned in the OT.

2:4 The testimony of signs and wonders accompanies highly significant moments within salvation history, such as God's deliverance of Israel from slavery in Egypt (Dt 4:34). Here such testimony accompanied the ministry of Jesus and the apostles.

2:5 Some Jews, based on their interpretation of the Greek version of Deuteronomy 32:8, believed that angels had authority over the nations. But the NT affirms that authority over all rulers has been given to Christ (Eph 1:20-23).

2:6-9 The author expounds Psalm 8:5-7 in order to demonstrate the superiority of Jesus over the angels (2:5).

2:8 The author affirms that while everything has already been subjected to Jesus, we do not yet see everything subjected to him, indicating that this reality is currently hidden from view.

2:12 The use of Psalm 22:22 here portrays Jesus as a worship leader, who joins his brothers and sisters (2:11) in the singing of hymns. See "A Biblical View of Music," p. 727.

2:14-18 Jesus . . . shared in the full extent of our humanity (without sin) in order to redeem us.

2:14 The author makes it clear that Jesus's death is not limited to dealing with human sin (cp. 2:17). It also destroys the devil, the one holding the power of death over people.

2:15 Abraham's offspring refers to all those with faith, not simply his biological descendants (cp. Gl 3:29–4:7).

2:17 Jesus's death made atonement for the sins of the people. The word translated "atonement" refers to the redirection of God's righteousness anger away from people (propitiation; Rm 3:25; 1Jn 2:2).

OUR APOSTLE AND HIGH PRIEST

3 Therefore, holy brothers and sisters, who share in a heavenly calling, consider Jesus, the apostle and high priest of our confession. † 2 He was faithful to the one who appointed him, just as Moses was in all God's household. 3 For Jesus is considered worthy of more glory than Moses, just as the builder has more honor than the house. 4 Now every house is built by someone, but the one who built everything is God. † 5 Moses was faithful as a servant † in all God's household, as a testimony to what would be said in the future. 6 But Christ was faithful as a Son over his household. And we are that household if we hold on to our confidence and the hope in which we boast. † †

WARNING AGAINST UNBELIEF

7 Therefore, as the Holy Spirit says:

Today, if you hear his voice, 8 do not harden your hearts as in the rebellion, on the day of testing in the wilderness, 9 where your fathers tested me, tried me, and saw my works 10 for forty years.
Therefore I was provoked to anger with that generation and said, "They always go astray in their hearts, and they have not known my ways."
11 So I swore in my anger, "They will not enter my rest." † †

12 Watch out, brothers and sisters, so that there won't be in any of you an evil, unbelieving heart that turns away † from the living God. 13 But encourage each other daily, † while it is still called today, so that none of you is hardened † by sin's deception. † 14 For we have become participants in Christ if we hold firmly until the end the reality † that we had at the start. † 15 As it is said:

Today, if you hear his voice, do not harden your hearts
as in the rebellion. † †

16 For who heard and rebelled? Wasn't it all who came out of Egypt under Moses? † 17 With whom was God angry for forty years? Wasn't it with those who sinned, whose bodies fell in the wilderness? † 18 And to whom did he swear that they would not enter his rest, if not to those who disobeyed? 19 So we see that they were unable to enter because of unbelief.

3:1 An apostle was a commissioned messenger, and Jesus is the ultimate messenger from the Father. He is also the ultimate high priest—the One to whom the old covenant high priesthood pointed. This is a role higher than Moses's (3:3).

3:5-6 The contrast between Moses the servant and Christ the Son is one of ownership. A servant does not own the house, but the Son inherits all from his Father.

3:6 The author describes the church as the household of God, in keeping with similar statements made by Paul (1Co 3:16-17; Eph 2:19).

3:12-13 Christians share a responsibility to watch out for one another. The command is addressed to all believers (brothers and sisters), not just to pastors or leaders of the congregation.

3:15–4:11 Drawing on Psalm 95:7-11 (cited in 3:7-11), the author points to the rebellion of Israel after the exodus as a warning for Christians. The major point is that people who were part of the community, but did not continue in faith, were ultimately judged. So also today, some who identify with the people of God will show themselves to be unbelievers by not continuing in faith. Thus, we need to watch over and "encourage each other" (3:13) to continue in the faith.

THE PROMISED REST

4 Therefore, since the promise to enter his rest remains, let us beware † that none of you be found to have fallen short. † 2 For we also have received the good news just as they did. But the message they heard did not benefit them, since they were not united with those who heard it in faith. † † 3 For we who have believed enter the rest, in keeping with what † he has said,

So I swore in my anger, "They will not enter my rest," † †

even though his works have been finished since the foundation of the world. 4 For somewhere he has spoken about the seventh day in this way: And on the seventh day God rested from all his works. † † 5 Again, in that passage he says, They will never enter my rest. † 6 Therefore, since it remains for some to enter it, and those who formerly received the good news did not enter because of disobedience, † 7 he again specifies a certain day — today. He specified this speaking through David after such a long time:

Today, if you hear his voice, do not harden your hearts. † †

8 For if Joshua † had given them rest, God would not have spoken later about another day. 9 Therefore, a Sabbath rest remains for God's people. 10 For the person who has entered his rest has rested from his own works, just as God did from his. † 11 Let us then make every effort to enter that rest, so that no one will fall into the same pattern of disobedience.

12 For the word of God is living and effective † and sharper than any double-edged sword, † penetrating as far as the separation of soul and spirit, joints and marrow. It is able to judge the thoughts and intentions of the heart. † 13 No creature is hidden from him, but all things are naked and exposed to the eyes of him to whom † we must give an account.

OUR GREAT HIGH PRIEST

14 Therefore, since we have a great high priest who has passed through the heavens — Jesus the Son of God — let us hold fast to our confession. † 15 For we do not have a high priest who is unable to sympathize with our weaknesses, but one who has been tempted in every way as we are, † yet without sin. †
16 Therefore, let us approach the throne of grace with boldness, so that we may receive mercy and find grace to help us in time of need.

4:11 While the rest mentioned in Psalm 95:11 refers to the promised land of Canaan, the author refers to eternal rest with God at the end of life. Jewish literature, such as the Testament of Daniel, speaks of the rest found in the New Jerusalem (5.12; see also 4 Ezra 8:52).

4:12 The convicting power of the Scripture is a central aid for our perseverance. One way that we persevere is by continuing to submit ourselves to the Scriptures so that we do not harbor sin (see "Biblical Formation," p. 1504).

4:14-16 Jesus's role as high priest is another help for perseverance. Because he intercedes for us, we can approach the Father with boldness in order to receive the help we need.

4:14 Passed through the heavens means that Jesus has entered God's presence.

CHRIST, A HIGH PRIEST

5 For every high priest taken from among men is appointed in matters pertaining to God for the people, to offer both gifts and sacrifices for sins. 2 He is able to deal gently with those who are ignorant and are going astray, since he is also clothed with weakness. † 3 Because of this, he must make an offering for his own sins as well as for the people. † 4 No one takes this honor on himself; instead, a person is called by God, just as Aaron was. † 5 In the same way, Christ did not exalt himself to become a high priest, but God who said to him,

You are my Son;

today I have become your Father, † † †

6 also says in another place,

You are a priest forever according to the order of Melchizedek. † †

7 During his earthly life, † he offered prayers and appeals † with loud cries and tears † to the one who was able to save him from death, and he was heard because of his reverence. 8 Although he was the Son, he learned obedience from what he suffered. † 9 After he was perfected, he became the source of eternal salvation for all who obey him, 10 and he was declared by God a high priest according to the order of Melchizedek.

THE PROBLEM OF IMMATURITY

11 We have a great deal to say about this, and it is difficult to explain, since you have become too lazy to understand. 12 Although by this time you ought to be teachers, you need someone to teach you the basic principles of God's revelation again. You need milk, not solid food. † 13 Now everyone who lives on milk is inexperienced with the message about righteousness, because he is an infant. 14 But solid food is for the mature — for those whose senses have been trained to distinguish between good and evil. †

5:5 Lit I have begotten you 5:7 Lit In the days of his flesh

5:6 This quote from Psalm 110:4 refers back to Genesis 14:17-20, in which Abram met Melchizedek, a king and priest (see also 5:10). Psalm 110 shows that the messianic king would be a priest, but not from the Levitical line. This is important since Jesus, like David, is from the tribe of Judah, not Levi.

5:8 That the Son . . . learned obedience does not imply he was previously disobedient. Rather, it means that he obediently followed the path laid out for him, through suffering and the cross.

5:10 See the note on 5:6.

5:11-14 This is a strong rebuke for all who fail to give serious thought to the Word of God in order to learn and grow (see 2Tm 2:15).

5:12 In the ancient world, milk and solid food was a common metaphor for the difference between basic and advanced teachings.

WARNING AGAINST FALLING AWAY

6 Therefore, let us leave the elementary teaching about Christ and go on to maturity, not laying again a foundation of repentance from dead works, faith in God, † 2 teaching about ritual washings, † laying on of hands, the resurrection of the dead, and eternal judgment. † 3 And we will do this if God permits.

4 For it is impossible to renew to repentance those who were once enlightened, who tasted the heavenly gift, who shared in the Holy Spirit, † 5 who tasted God's good word and the powers of the coming age, 6 and who have fallen away. This is because, † to their own harm, they are recrucifying the Son of God and holding him up to contempt. † 7 For the ground that drinks the rain that often falls on it and that produces vegetation useful to those for whom it is cultivated receives a blessing from God. 8 But if it produces thorns and thistles, it is worthless and about to be cursed, and at the end will be burned. †

9 Even though we are speaking this way, dearly loved friends, in your case we are confident of things that are better and that pertain to salvation. 10 For God is not unjust; he will not forget your work and the love † you demonstrated for his name by serving the saints — and by continuing to serve them. † 11 Now we desire each of you to demonstrate the same diligence for the full assurance of your hope until the end, 12 so that you won't become lazy but will be imitators of those who inherit the promises through faith and perseverance. †

INHERITING THE PROMISE

13 For when God made a promise to Abraham, since he had no one greater to swear by, he swore by himself: 14 I will indeed bless you, and I will greatly multiply you. † † 15 And so, after waiting patiently, Abraham obtained the promise. 16 For people swear by something greater than themselves, and for them a confirming oath ends every dispute. 17 Because God wanted to show his unchangeable purpose even more clearly to the heirs of the promise, he guaranteed it with an oath, † 18 so that through two unchangeable things, in which it is impossible for God to lie, we who have fled for refuge might have strong encouragement to seize the hope set before us. † 19 We have this hope as an anchor for the soul, firm and secure. It enters the inner sanctuary behind the curtain. † 20 Jesus has entered there on our behalf as a forerunner, † because he has become a high priest forever according to the order of Melchizedek. †

6:2 Or about baptisms 6:6 Or while 6:10 Other mss read labor of love

6:1 By exhorting his readers to leave the elementary teaching about Christ, he does not mean abandoning such teaching (cp. Col 2:19). Rather, the point is that these believers should be building on this foundation instead of remaining stagnant in their understanding.

6:2 Ritual washings refers to baptisms. Laying on of hands is associated with blessing (e.g., Mt 19:13,15), healing the sick (e.g., Mk 5:22-23), and ordination for ministry (1Tm 4:14).

6:4-6 Here in some of the most controversial verses in the book, the author warns of falling away. Controversy swirls around whether he describes genuine believers (who tasted the heavenly gift, who shared in the Holy Spirit) who fall away, or only people who once appeared to believe. The problem is that reception of the Holy Spirit is regarded as a sign of conversion in the NT. Possibly the author means that some have experienced God's graces (including the influence of the Spirit) through participation in the congregation, but have then fallen away.

6:6 The notion of recrucifying the Son of God most likely refers to bringing shame on him through public rejection. That is why it is regarded as holding him up to contempt.

6:13,16 In a legal situation, an oath is made by appeal to a superior. But since there is no one greater than God, he swore by himself.

6:18 The two unchangeable things are probably the two elements of Psalm 110:4: "You are a priest forever according to the pattern of Melchizedek."

6:19 The anchor imagery underscores spiritual security. The inner sanctuary behind the curtain refers to the most holy place of the Jewish temple, which was concealed behind a huge curtain (9:3). Only the high priest could enter the inner sanctuary (Lv 16), as it represented the holiest presence of God.

6:20 As high priest, Jesus has entered the inner sanctuary on our behalf, thus providing us permanent access to God's presence.

THE GREATNESS OF MELCHIZEDEK

7 For this Melchizedek, king of Salem, priest of God Most High, met Abraham and blessed him as he returned from defeating the kings, 2 and Abraham gave him a tenth of everything. First, his name means king of righteousness, then also, king of Salem, meaning king of peace. 3 Without father, mother, or genealogy, having neither beginning of days nor end of life, but resembling the Son of God, † he remains a priest forever.

4 Now consider how great this man was: even Abraham the patriarch † gave a tenth of the plunder to him. 5 The sons of Levi who receive the priestly office have a command according to the law to collect a tenth from the people † — that is, from their brothers and sisters — though they have also descended from Abraham. 6 But one without this † lineage collected a tenth from Abraham and blessed the one who had the promises. † 7 Without a doubt, the inferior is blessed by the superior. 8 In the one case, men who will die receive a tenth, but in the other case, Scripture testifies that he lives. † 9 And in a sense Levi himself, who receives a tenth, has paid a tenth through Abraham, 10 for he was still within his ancestor † when Melchizedek met him.

A SUPERIOR PRIESTHOOD

11 Now if perfection came through the Levitical priesthood (for on the basis of it the people received the law †), what further need was there for another priest to appear, said to be according to the order of Melchizedek and not according to the order of Aaron? † 12 For when there is a change of the priesthood, there must be a change of law as well. 13 For the one these things are spoken about belonged to a different tribe. No one from it has served at the altar. 14 Now it is evident that our Lord came from Judah, † and Moses said nothing about that tribe concerning priests.
15 And this becomes clearer if another priest like Melchizedek appears, 16 who did not become a priest based on a legal regulation about physical † descent but based on the power of an indestructible life. 17 For it has been testified:
You are a priest forever according to the order of Melchizedek. † †
18 So the previous command is annulled because it was weak and unprofitable † 19 (for the law perfected † nothing), but a better hope is introduced, through which we draw near to God. † 20 None of this happened without an oath. For others became priests without an oath, 21 but he became a priest with an oath made by the one who said to him:
The Lord has sworn and will not change his mind, “You are a priest forever.” † †

22 Because of this oath, Jesus has also become the guarantee of a better covenant. †
23 Now many have become Levitical priests, since they are prevented by death from remaining in office. 24 But because he remains forever, he holds his priesthood permanently. 25 Therefore, he is able to save completely those who come to God through him, since he always lives to intercede † for them.
26 For this is the kind of high priest we need: holy, innocent, undefiled, separated from sinners, and exalted above the heavens. † 27 He doesn't need to offer sacrifices every day, as high priests do — first for their own sins, then for those of the people. He did this once for all time when he offered himself. †
28 For the law appoints as high priests men who are weak, but the promise of the oath, which came after the law, appoints a Son, † who has been perfected † forever.

7:1-28 This chapter offers further discussion of the priesthood of Melchizedek (see also 5:6; 7:20; Gn 14:17-20). The main point is that he was superior to Levi (7:4-10); thus, Jesus is a priest superior to those of the old covenant.

7:3 That Melchizedek was without father or mother means his genealogy is not given in Genesis 14.

7:6-10 In the ancient world, a tithe—here a tenth—was offered to a superior, or the gods, especially after victory in war. The point here is that Levi, a descendent of Abraham, paid a tithe through Abraham to Melchizedek. Again the author asserts the superiority of Melchizedek over the Levitical priesthood.

7:16 Melchizedek was not a priest through membership in the tribe of Levi; that is, not through the legal regulation about physical descent.

7:20-21 Regarding an oath, the author cites Psalm 110:4: "The LORD has sworn an oath and will not take it back."

A HEAVENLY PRIESTHOOD

8 Now the main point of what is being said is this: We have this kind of high priest, who sat down at the right hand of the throne of the Majesty in the heavens, † 2 a minister of the sanctuary and the true tabernacle that was set up by the Lord and not man. † 3 For every high priest is appointed to offer gifts † and sacrifices; therefore, it was necessary for this priest also to have something to offer. 4 Now if he were on earth, he wouldn't be a priest, since there are those † offering the gifts prescribed by the law. 5 These serve as a copy and shadow † of the heavenly things, as Moses was warned when he was about to complete the tabernacle. For God said, Be careful that you make everything according to the pattern that was shown to you on the mountain. † † 6 But Jesus has now obtained a superior ministry, and to that degree he is the mediator † of a better covenant, † which has been established on better promises. †

A SUPERIOR COVENANT

7 For if that first covenant had been faultless, there would have been no occasion for a second one. 8 But finding fault with his people, † he says: †

See, the days are coming, says the Lord, when I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah — 9 not like the covenant that I made with their ancestors on the day I took them by the hand to lead them out of the land of Egypt.
I showed no concern for them, says the Lord, because they did not continue in my covenant.
10 For this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, says the Lord: I will put my laws into their minds and write them on their hearts.
I will be their God,
and they will be my people. †
11 And each person will not teach his fellow citizen, † and each his brother or sister, saying, "Know the Lord," because they will all know me, from the least to the greatest of them. †
12 For I will forgive their wrongdoing, and I will never again remember their sins. † † †
13 By saying a new covenant, he has declared that the first is obsolete. And what is obsolete and growing old is about to pass away. †

8:1 Alluding to Psalm 110:1, a messianic psalm, the author again connects Jesus's kingship to his high priestly activity, in the pattern of Melchizedek (see on 5:6).

8:2 The tabernacle was the portable center of old covenant worship where God chose to dwell with his people. It preceded Solomon's temple, a more permanent structure. The true tabernacle refers to the heavenly dwelling place of God (8:1,5).

8:5 The tabernacle was a type pointing to the heavenly reality it represents. It therefore helps us to understand the nature of God's heavenly dwelling place, while also underscoring the superiority of the heavenly things—including the heavenly ministry of Jesus (8:6).

8:8-12 The citation of Jeremiah 31:31-34 demonstrates that the new covenant has long been a part of the plan of God. It was promised within the old covenant itself.

OLD COVENANT MINISTRY

9 Now the first covenant also had regulations for ministry and an earthly sanctuary. 2 For a tabernacle was set up, and in the first room, which is called the holy place, were the lampstand, the table, and the presentation loaves. † 3 Behind the second curtain was a tent called the most holy place. † 4 It had the gold altar of incense and the ark of the covenant, covered with gold on all sides, in which was a gold jar containing the manna, Aaron's staff that budded, and the tablets of the covenant. † 5 The cherubim of glory were above the ark overshadowing the mercy seat. It is not possible to speak about these things in detail right now. † 6 With these things prepared like this, the priests enter the first room repeatedly, performing their ministry. † 7 But the high priest alone enters the second room, and he does that only once a year, and never without blood, which he offers for himself and for the sins the people had committed in ignorance. † 8 The Holy Spirit was making it clear that the way into the most holy place had not yet been disclosed while the first tabernacle was still standing. † 9 This is a symbol for the present time, during which gifts and sacrifices are offered that cannot perfect the worshiper's conscience. † 10 They are physical regulations and only deal with food, drink, and various washings imposed until the time of the new order. †

NEW COVENANT MINISTRY

11 But Christ has appeared as a high priest of the good things that have come. † In the greater and more perfect tabernacle not made with hands (that is, not of this creation †), 12 he entered the most holy place once for all time, not by the blood of goats and calves, but by his own blood, having obtained eternal redemption. † 13 For if the blood of goats and bulls and the ashes of a young cow, sprinkling those who are defiled, sanctify for the purification of the flesh, † 14 how much more will the blood of Christ, who through the eternal Spirit † offered himself without blemish to God, cleanse our † consciences from dead works so that we can serve the living God? † 15 Therefore, he is the mediator † of a new covenant, † † so that those who are called might receive the promise † of the eternal inheritance, because a death has taken place for redemption from the transgressions committed under the first covenant. † 16 Where a will exists, the death of the one who made it must be established. 17 For a will is valid only when people die, since it is never in effect while the one who made it is living. 18 That is why even the first covenant was inaugurated with blood. 19 For when every command had been proclaimed by Moses to all the people according to the law, he took the blood of calves and goats, † along with water, scarlet wool, and hyssop, and sprinkled the scroll itself and all the people, † 20 saying, This is the blood of the covenant that God has ordained for you. † † 21 In the same way, he sprinkled the tabernacle and all the articles of worship with blood. † 22 According to the law almost everything is purified with blood, and without the shedding of blood there is no forgiveness. †
23 Therefore, it was necessary for the copies of the things in the heavens to be purified with these sacrifices, but the heavenly things themselves to be purified with better sacrifices than these. † 24 For Christ did not enter a sanctuary made with hands (only a model † of the true one) but into heaven itself, so that he might now appear in the presence of God for us. † 25 He did not do this to offer himself many times, as the high priest enters the sanctuary yearly with the blood of another. † 26 Otherwise, he would have had to suffer many times since the foundation of the world. But now he has appeared one time, at the end of the ages, † for the removal of sin by the sacrifice of himself. † 27 And just as it is appointed for people to die once — and after this, judgment † — 28 so also Christ, having been offered once to bear the sins of many, † will appear a second time, † not to bear sin, but † to bring salvation to those who are waiting for him. †

9:3-4 The ark of the covenant was the most important item in the tabernacle, representing the presence of God. It was a wooden chest, overlaid with gold inside and out, and contained the two tablets of the covenant inscribed with the Ten Commandments.

9:7 This description summarizes the instructions of Leviticus 16 concerning the Day of Atonement.

9:10 The old covenant regulations were never intended to be permanent, but served until the time of the new order—the time of the new covenant enacted by Jesus, as the following verses explain (9:11-28).

9:12-14 Just as the author has asserted the superiority of Jesus over the angels, the Levitical priesthood, and old covenant ministry, so his . . . blood is superior to that of goats and calves.

9:25-28 Christ's sacrificial death was a onetime event that need not and cannot be repeated, unlike the ministry of Israel's high priests and the sacrifices they offered for sin.

THE PERFECT SACRIFICE

10 Since the law has only a shadow of the good things † to come, and not the reality itself of those things, it can never perfect the worshipers by the same sacrifices they continually offer year after year. 2 Otherwise, wouldn't they have stopped being offered, since the worshipers, purified once and for all, would no longer have any consciousness of sins? 3 But in the sacrifices there is a reminder of sins year after year. 4 For it is impossible for the blood of bulls and goats to take away sins.

5 Therefore, as he was coming into the world, he said:

You did not desire sacrifice and offering, but you prepared a body for me.

6 You did not delight in whole burnt offerings and sin offerings.
7 Then I said, "See — it is written about me in the scroll — I have come to do your will, O God." † †
8 After he says above, You did not desire or delight in sacrifices and offerings, whole burnt offerings and sin offerings (which are offered according to the law †), 9 he then says, See, I have come to do your will. † He takes away the first to establish the second. 10 By this will, we have been sanctified through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all time. †
11 Every priest stands day after day ministering and offering the same sacrifices time after time, which can never take away sins. † 12 But this man, after offering one sacrifice for sins forever, sat down at the right hand of God. † †
13 He is now waiting until his enemies are made his footstool. † 14 For by one offering he has perfected forever those who are sanctified. 15 The Holy Spirit also testifies to us about this. For after he says:
16 This is the covenant I will make with them after those days,
the Lord says,
I will put my laws on their hearts and write them on their minds, 17 and I will never again remember their sins and their lawless acts. † † 18 Now where there is forgiveness of these, there is no longer an offering for sin.

EXHORTATIONS TO GODLINESS

19 Therefore, brothers and sisters, since we have boldness to enter the sanctuary through the blood of Jesus † — 20 he has inaugurated † for us a new and living way through the curtain (that is, through his flesh †) — 21 and since we have a great high priest over the house of God, † 22 let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith, with our hearts sprinkled clean from an evil conscience and our bodies washed in pure water. † 23 Let us hold on to the confession of our hope without wavering, since he who promised is faithful. † 24 And let us watch out for one another to provoke love and good works, 25 not neglecting to gather together, as some are in the habit of doing, but encouraging each other, † and all the more as you see the day approaching.

WARNING AGAINST DELIBERATE SIN

26 For if we deliberately go on sinning after receiving the knowledge of the truth, there no longer remains a sacrifice for sins, † 27 but a terrifying expectation of judgment and the fury of a fire about to consume the adversaries. † 28 Anyone who disregarded the law of Moses died without mercy, based on the testimony of two or three witnesses. † 29 How much worse punishment do you think one will deserve who has trampled on the Son of God, who has regarded as profane † the blood of the covenant by which he was sanctified, and who has insulted the Spirit of grace? † 30 For we know the one who has said, Vengeance belongs to me; I will repay, † † and again,

The Lord will judge his people. † †

31 It is a terrifying thing to fall into the hands of the living God. †

32 Remember the earlier days when, after you had been enlightened, you endured a hard struggle with sufferings. † 33 Sometimes you were publicly exposed to taunts and afflictions, and at other times you were companions of those who were treated that way. † 34 For you sympathized with the prisoners † and accepted with joy the confiscation of your possessions, because you know that you yourselves have a better and enduring possession. † † 35 So don't throw away your confidence, which has a great reward. † 36 For you need endurance, so that after you have done God's will, you may receive what was promised. †

37 For yet in a very little while, the Coming One will come and not delay.

38 But my righteous one † will live by faith; and if he draws back, I have no pleasure † in him. † †

39 But we are not those who draw back and are destroyed, but those who have faith and are saved.

10:12 Psalm 110:1-4 is the background here, since Jesus offered one sacrifice for sins as high priest and then sat down at the right hand of God—a messianic reference. Thus, the priesthood of Melchizedek is again invoked, since Jesus is both priest and king (see the notes on 5:6).

10:19 The sanctuary is the most holy place, the abode of God's presence. The OT tabernacle was but a shadow of a reality in heaven (9:24; 10:1). The point is that Jesus's blood provides access to God's holy presence.

10:20 As the high priest passed through a curtain into the most holy place once a year (Lv 16), so now believers enter God's presence through the flesh of Jesus (see also 6:19).

10:22 Sprinkling and washing refer to old covenant purification rituals. In 9:13-14,19-23, the author has already indicated that Christ cleanses our consciences through his blood.

10:24 The term translated to provoke can be used positively or negatively. Believers are to stir each other up, to prod one another on to love and good works.

10:25 The regular, faithful gathering of believers is foundational to Christian living. In this paragraph it is both a proper response to the great blessings of the gospel (10:19-21) and an antidote to being lured by the world (10:26-31).

10:26-31 The author reminds his readers that there is no salvation to be found in the old covenant system now that the Son of God has come. To turn away from Christ is to turn away from salvation.

10:26 Deliberately . . . sinning most likely refers to a settled state of apostasy, in which a person publicly denounces Christ (probably in a context of persecution; 10:32-34). Having rejected Christ, no other sacrifice for sins may be found.

10:28 According to Deuteronomy 17:2-7, any who worships other gods must be put to death. Shunning the law of Moses is tantamount to rejecting the God of the covenant.

10:29 In Greek and Jewish literature, trampling was an image used to convey utter contempt.

10:32-34 These verses indicate the context for the author's exhortation to persevere: his readers had been exposed to taunts and afflictions, suffering persecution for Christ.

LIVING BY FAITH

11 Now faith is the reality † of what is hoped for, the proof † of what is not seen. † 2 For by it our ancestors won God's approval.
3 By faith we understand that the universe was † created by the word of God, †
so that what is seen was made from things that are not visible. † 4 By faith Abel offered to God a better sacrifice than Cain did. By faith he was approved as a righteous man, because God approved his gifts, and even though he is dead, he still speaks through his faith. †

5 By faith Enoch was taken away, and so he did not experience death. He was not to be found because God took him away. † For before he was taken away, he was approved as one who pleased God. † 6 Now without faith it is impossible to please God, since the one who draws near to him must believe that he exists and that he rewards those who seek him.
7 By faith Noah, after he was warned about what was not yet seen and motivated by godly fear, built an ark to deliver his family. By faith he condemned the world and became an heir of the righteousness that comes by faith. †
8 By faith Abraham, when he was called, obeyed and set out for a place that he was going to receive as an inheritance. He went out, even though he did not know where he was going. † 9 By faith he stayed as a foreigner in the land of promise, living in tents as did Isaac and Jacob, coheirs of the same promise. †
10 For he was looking forward to the city that has foundations, whose architect and builder is God. †
11 By faith even Sarah herself, when she was unable to have children, received power to conceive offspring, even though she was past the age, since she † considered that the one who had promised was faithful. † 12 Therefore, from one man — in fact, from one as good as dead — came offspring as numerous as the stars of the sky and as innumerable as the grains of sand along the seashore. †
13 These all died in faith, although they had not received the things that were promised. But they saw them from a distance, † greeted them, and confessed that they were foreigners and temporary residents on the earth. † 14 Now those who say such things make it clear that they are seeking a homeland. 15 If they were thinking about where they came from, they would have had an opportunity to return. 16 But they now desire a better place — a heavenly one. Therefore, God is not ashamed to be called their God, for he has prepared a city for them. †
17 By faith Abraham, when he was tested, offered up Isaac. † He received the promises and yet he was offering his one and only son, 18 the one to whom it had been said, Your offspring † will be traced through Isaac. † † 19 He considered God to be able even to raise someone from the dead; † therefore, he received him back, figuratively speaking. †

20 By faith Isaac blessed Jacob and Esau † concerning things to come. 21 By faith Jacob, when he was dying, blessed each of the sons of Joseph, and he worshiped, leaning on the top of his staff. † † 22 By faith Joseph, as he was nearing the end of his life, mentioned † the exodus of the Israelites and gave instructions concerning his bones. †
23 By faith Moses, after he was born, was hidden by his parents for three months, because they saw that the child was beautiful, and they didn't fear the king's edict. † 24 By faith Moses, when he had grown up, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter 25 and chose to suffer with the people of God rather than to enjoy the fleeting pleasure of sin. † 26 For he considered reproach for the sake of Christ to be greater wealth than the treasures of Egypt, since he was looking ahead to the reward. †
27 By faith he left Egypt behind, not being afraid of the king's anger, for Moses persevered as one who sees him who is invisible. † 28 By faith he instituted the Passover and the sprinkling of the blood, so that the destroyer of the firstborn might not touch the Israelites. 29 By faith they crossed the Red Sea as though they were on dry land. When the Egyptians attempted to do this, they were drowned. †
30 By faith the walls of Jericho fell down after being marched around by the Israelites for seven days. 31 By faith Rahab the prostitute welcomed the spies in peace and didn't perish with those who disobeyed. †
32 And what more can I say? Time is too short for me to tell about Gideon, Barak, Samson, Jephthah, † David, Samuel, and the prophets, † 33 who by faith conquered kingdoms, † administered justice, obtained promises, shut the mouths of lions, † 34 quenched the raging of fire, escaped the edge of the sword, gained strength in weakness, became mighty in battle, and put foreign armies to flight. † 35 Women received their dead, raised to life again. Other people were tortured, not accepting release, so that they might gain a better resurrection. 36 Others experienced mockings and scourgings, as well as bonds and imprisonment. † 37 They were stoned, † † they were sawed in two, they died by the sword, they wandered about in sheepskins, in goatskins, † destitute, afflicted, and mistreated. 38 The world was not worthy of them. They wandered in deserts and on mountains, hiding in caves and holes in the ground.

39 All these were approved through their faith, but they did not receive what was promised, 40 since God had provided something better for us, so that they would not be made perfect without us. †

11:3 This verse is significant for contemporary discussions of creation. It is by faith that we understand that God created all things. See also "Faith and Reason," p. 1387; "A Biblical Basis for Science," p. 601; "Methodological Naturalism and the Christian Worldview," p. 1247.

11:4 Adam and Eve's son, Abel, was murdered by his brother Cain (Gn 4:4-12).

11:5 Enoch was transposed from this life without experiencing death (Gn 5:24).

11:6 Faith includes belief that God exists but also that he rewards those who seek him. Faith grasps that serving God is worthwhile. See also "The New Atheism," p. 656.

11:7 Noah acted to prepare for the flood (Gn 6:1–9:17), though it was not yet seen (11:1).

11:8 Abraham left his country by faith, pursuing God's call to the promised land of Canaan (Gn 12:1-9).

11:13 Being foreigners and temporary residents on the earth is a concept found in passages such as Genesis 23:4; 1 Chronicles 29:15; and Psalm 39:12. Since believers live in expectation of their heavenly home, they regard themselves as merely passing through this world.

11:17-19 In faith, Abraham obediently offered up his one and only son Isaac (Gn 22:1-8). God had promised Abraham many descendants, so his willingness to sacrifice Isaac required trust that God could raise him from the dead.

11:23-29 Moses was especially loved by first-century Jews, many of whom thought him the greatest figure of history. These verses summarize his activities in the narrative of Exodus 2:1–15:27.

11:33-35 Shutting the mouths of lions is a reference to the miraculous preservation of Daniel in the lions' den (Dn 6). Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego are probably meant as those who quenched the raging of fire (Dn 3:16-30). Prophets such as Elijah, Elisha, and Jeremiah escaped the edge of the sword. Women like the widow of Zarephath and the woman of Shunem had sons raised to life again.

11:37 Tradition states that the prophet Jeremiah was stoned and Isaiah was sawed in two.

THE CALL TO ENDURANCE

12 Therefore, since we also have such a large cloud of witnesses † surrounding us, let us lay aside every hindrance and the sin that so easily ensnares us. Let us run with endurance † the race that lies before us,
2 keeping our eyes on Jesus, † the source and perfecter † of our faith. For the joy that lay before him, † he endured the cross, despising the shame, † and sat down at the right hand of the throne of God.

FATHERLY DISCIPLINE

3 For consider him who endured such hostility from sinners against himself, so that you won't grow weary and give up. † 4 In struggling against sin, you have not yet resisted to the point of shedding your blood. 5 And you have forgotten the exhortation that addresses you as sons:

My son, do not take the Lord's discipline lightly or lose heart when you are reproved by him, 6 for the Lord disciplines the one he loves and punishes every son he receives. † †

7 Endure suffering as discipline: God is dealing with you as sons. For what son is there that a father does not discipline? 8 But if you are without discipline — which all receive † — then you are illegitimate children and not sons. †
9 Furthermore, we had human fathers discipline us, and we respected them. Shouldn't we submit even more to the Father of spirits and live? † 10 For they disciplined us for a short time based on what seemed good to them, but he does it for our benefit, so that we can share his holiness. † 11 No discipline seems enjoyable at the time, but painful. Later on, however, it yields the peaceful fruit † of righteousness to those who have been trained by it. †

12 Therefore, strengthen your tired hands and weakened knees, † 13 and make straight paths for your feet, so that what is lame may not be dislocated † but healed instead. †

WARNING AGAINST REJECTING GOD'S GRACE

14 Pursue peace with everyone, and holiness † — without it no one will see the Lord. † 15 Make sure that no one falls short of the grace of God and that no root of bitterness springs up, causing trouble and defiling many. † 16 And make sure that there isn't any immoral † or irreverent † person like Esau, who sold his birthright in exchange for a single meal. † 17 For you know that later, when he wanted to inherit the blessing, he was rejected, even though he sought it with tears, because he didn't find any opportunity for repentance. † 18 For you have not come to what could be touched, to a blazing fire, to darkness, gloom, and storm, 19 to the blast of a trumpet, and the sound of words.
Those who heard it begged that not another word be spoken to them, 20 for they could not bear what was commanded: If even an animal touches the mountain, it must be stoned. † † 21 The appearance was so terrifying that Moses said, I am trembling with fear. † † 22 Instead, you have come to Mount Zion, to the city of the living God (the heavenly Jerusalem), to myriads of angels, a festive gathering, † 23 to the assembly of the firstborn whose names have been written † in heaven, to a Judge, who is God of all, to the spirits of righteous people made perfect, † 24 and to Jesus, the mediator † of a new covenant, † and to the sprinkled blood, which says better things than the blood of Abel. † 25 See to it that you do not reject the one who speaks. For if they did not escape when they rejected him who warned them on earth, even less will we if we turn away from him who warns us from heaven. † 26 His voice shook the earth at that time, but now he has promised, Yet once more I will shake not only the earth but also the heavens. † † 27 This expression, "Yet once more," indicates the removal of what can be shaken † — that is, created things — so that what is not shaken might remain. 28 Therefore, since we are receiving a kingdom that cannot be shaken, let us be thankful. By it, we may serve God acceptably, with reverence and awe, † 29 for our God is a consuming fire. †

12:1 The cloud of witnesses is the list of OT saints just mentioned. Cloud imagery is used in classical literature to refer to a large group of people. In light of their faithfulness when they had seen only the shadows, how can we, who have seen the fulfillment, not press on in faith as well?

12:2 Crucifixion, with its mix of humiliation, mockery, and torture, was a shameful form of capital punishment in the Roman world. Despising the shame means that Jesus thought little of the shame he suffered on the cross, looking beyond it to the joy that lay before him.

12:7 The perspective on suffering seen here (and throughout 12:1-11) runs entirely counter to the so-called prosperity gospel. Believers are told to expect suffering and to trust that God will use it for our good (cp. Rm 8:28). See "Christians and Suffering," p. 580.

12:9-10 The use of fatherly discipline as an analogy for divine discipline offers insight into our relationship with the Father of spirits, God. While human discipline can fail or be misguided, done well it lays a foundation for understanding God as Father.

12:14-17 As in chapters 3–4, this is an exhortation to believers to help one another to persevere. Faithfulness is a community project, and believers are not expected to be able to make it alone.

12:18-21 Though not mentioned by name, Mount Sinai is clearly in view. Its description comes from Exodus 19–20 and Deuteronomy 4–5. Mount Sinai symbolizes the old covenant, contrasted with the new covenant, which is symbolized by Mount Zion (12:22).

12:22 Mount Zion and the city of Jerusalem are closely associated in the OT.

12:24 After he was killed by Cain, Abel's blood "cried out" to God from the ground for justice (Gn 4:10). While Abel's blood sought justice, the blood of Jesus declares that sin has been justly dealt with.

FINAL EXHORTATIONS

13 Let brotherly love † continue. 2 Don't neglect to show hospitality, for by doing this some have welcomed angels as guests without knowing it. † 3 Remember those in prison, as though you were in prison with them, and the mistreated, † as though you yourselves were suffering bodily. † 4 Marriage is to be honored by all and the marriage bed kept undefiled, because God will judge the sexually immoral and adulterers. † 5 Keep your life free from the love of money. Be satisfied with what you have, for he himself has said, I will never leave you or abandon you. † † 6 Therefore, we may boldly say,
The Lord is my helper; I will not be afraid.
What can man do to me? † †

7 Remember your leaders who have spoken God’s word to you. As you carefully observe the outcome of their lives, imitate their faith. † 8 Jesus Christ is the same yesterday, today, and forever. † 9 Don’t be led astray by various kinds of strange teachings; for it is good for the heart to be established by grace and not by food regulations, since those who observe them have not benefited. † 10 We have an altar from which those who worship at the tabernacle do not have a right to eat. † 11 For the bodies of those animals whose blood is brought into the most holy place by the high priest † as a sin offering are burned outside the camp. † 12 Therefore, Jesus also suffered outside the gate, † so that he might sanctify † the people by his own blood. 13 Let us then go to him outside the camp, bearing his disgrace. † 14 For we do not have an enduring city here; instead, we seek the one to come. † 15 Therefore, through him let us continually offer up to God a sacrifice of praise, that is, the fruit of lips that confess his name. † 16 Don’t neglect to do what is good and to share, for God is pleased with such sacrifices. † 17 Obey your leaders † and submit to them, since they keep watch † over your souls as those who will give an account, so that they can do this with joy and not with grief, for that would be unprofitable for you. 18 Pray for us, for we are convinced that we have a clear conscience, wanting to conduct ourselves honorably in everything. † 19 And I urge you all the more to pray † that I may be restored to you very soon.

BENEDICTION AND FAREWELL

20 Now may the God of peace, who brought up from the dead our Lord Jesus — the great Shepherd of the sheep † — through the blood of the everlasting covenant, † 21 equip † you with everything good to do his will, working in us what is pleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ, to whom be glory forever and ever. † † Amen.

22 Brothers and sisters, I urge you to receive this message of exhortation, for I have written to you briefly. 23 Be aware that our brother Timothy has been released. If he comes soon enough, he will be with me when I see you. 24 Greet all your leaders and all the saints. Those who are from Italy send you greetings. 25 Grace be with you all. †

13:2 In the ancient world, hospitality typically involved inviting strangers into one's home, caring for them, and meeting their needs. Ancient inns, full of prostitutes and thieves, were often unsuitable lodging for believers. In Christian contexts, hospitality often meant caring for traveling preachers (see 3Jn 5–8). Hospitality was highly valued by Jewish and Greco-Roman society. See also "A Biblical View of Angels," p. 1531.

13:4 The Greek term translated the sexually immoral refers to anyone engaging in sexual activity outside of marriage. In the pagan world, men were expected to take mistresses, and faithfulness to one's spouse was regarded as unreasonable. See also "Purpose and Parameters of Sexual Relations," p. 1397.

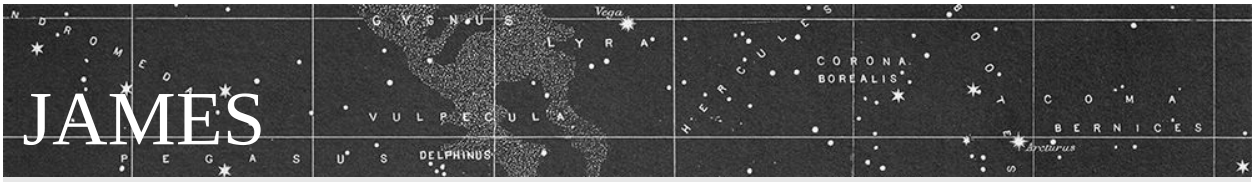
13:5 The danger of the love of money is a prevalent biblical theme (see, e.g., 1Tm 6:10). The antidote is contentment in Christ.

13:7 The consistent NT pattern is that leadership in the church involves both the teaching of Scripture and the practical modeling of faithfulness.

13:9-16 Here we see another warning not to be drawn back into the observance of ceremonies linked to old covenant Judaism. All things are now seen through the lens of Christ, who is the substance to which all the former things pointed.

13:17 The task of leaders is to watch over the souls of their people—guarding and caring for them. For this task they will be held accountable before God.



JAMES

INTRODUCTION

The book of James is a wonderful companion piece to the teachings of Jesus as recorded in the four Gospels. James has a strong ethical emphasis that is consistent with the moral teachings Jesus gave to his disciples. James also mirrors the sometimes harsh denunciations that Jesus spoke against religious hypocrisy. Like Jesus's teachings, the book of James is both a source of exhortation and comfort, reproof and encouragement. Finally, James is known for being extremely practical, yet it contains some of the most profound theological truths of the New Testament.

CIRCUMSTANCES OF WRITING

AUTHOR: James is named as the author in 1:1. A number of NT personalities were named James, but only three are candidates for the authorship of this book. James the son of Zebedee died in AD 44, too early to have been the author. No tradition names James the son of Alphaeus (Mk 3:18) as the author. This leaves James the brother of Jesus, also called James the Just (Mk 6:3; Ac 1:14; 12:17; 15:13; 21:18; 1Co 15:7; Gl 2:9,12), as the most likely candidate.

This James is identified as the brother of Jesus in Matthew 13:55; Mark 6:3; and Galatians 1:19. Though he was not a follower of Christ during his earthly ministry (Jn 7:3-5), a post-resurrection appearance convinced James that Jesus is indeed the Christ (Ac 1:14; 1Co 15:7). James later led the Jerusalem church (Gl 2:9,12), exercising great influence there (Ac 1:14; 12:17; 15:13; 21:18; 1Co 15:7; Gl 2:9,12).

BACKGROUND: James was probably written between AD 48 and 52, though nothing in the epistle suggests a more precise date. James's death in AD 62 or 66 means the epistle was written before this time. Similarities to Gospel traditions and Pauline themes are suggestive. If Mark was written around AD 65 and time is allowed for the events of Acts 15 and 21 to have occurred between Paul's first and second missionary journeys, a date between AD 48 and 52 seems most likely.

James led the Jerusalem church. The reference to "the twelve tribes dispersed abroad" (1:1) suggests the letter was written to Jewish Christians living outside of Israel. The reference to a synagogue in 2:2 also suggests that his audience were Jewish Christians. References to their circumstances (e.g., oppression by wealthy landowners; 5:1-6) could refer to congregations anywhere in the Roman Empire. However, Semitic word order, quotations from the Septuagint, and the overall dependence of the letter on the Jewish wisdom tradition suggest a specifically Jewish Christian audience.

CONTRIBUTION TO THE BIBLE

James continually called for obedience to the law of God. He never referred to the ceremonial law, but to the moral law. While some people think James is at odds with Paul about the Christian's relationship to the law, both authors actually combine to give us a solid understanding of the OT law. Paul showed believers that Christ met the demands of the law and, thus, brings us to salvation. James showed believers that their obedience to God's moral standards is an indication of a living faith, which is a life lived in step with the one who met the demands of the law. Some choose to oversimplify the distinctions between the OT and the NT and say the OT is grounded in works and the NT is grounded in faith, but James brings both testaments together to show that faith and works are integrally related in both the old and new covenants.

STRUCTURE

The book of James is a letter (an epistle), though only the greeting conforms to the ancient Greek form exemplified in Paul's letters, especially Galatians. The greeting identifies the author as James, includes a title demonstrating the source of his authority ("a servant of God and of the Lord Jesus Christ"), names the recipients ("the twelve tribes dispersed abroad"), and conveys "Greetings" (1:1). Letters were often used as a means of spurring the recipients to a change in behavior or belief based on the authoritative word and guidance of the sender.

The book of James has been compared to OT Wisdom literature. While there are wisdom elements in James, such as comparing the wisdom of the world with the wisdom that comes from God, it also contains exhortations and prophetic elements not common to Wisdom literature.

CHRISTIAN WORLDVIEW ELEMENTS

TEACHINGS ABOUT GOD

God is good and the Father of his redeemed children. James often calls him "the Lord," evidently parallel to the OT usage of "the Lord" (Yahweh), in particular calling him "the Lord of Hosts" (5:4). Jesus is mentioned only twice (1:1; 2:1), which contributes to the distinctive OT feel to this book. The indwelling Spirit is described as yearning jealously (4:5).

TEACHINGS ABOUT HUMANITY

James had a realistic—some would say pessimistic—view of the effects of sin in human life. The rich oppress the poor; temptation is a constant danger; all persons are possessed by an evil tongue. Even believers can be called "adulterous" (4:4) for being too friendly with the evil world, like the people of Israel who "prostituted themselves with other gods" (Jdg 2:17). The advice James offered was to submit to God's sovereign goodness, to seek to live a life of true religion, and to do good deeds.

TEACHINGS ABOUT SALVATION

God saves through the action of "the implanted word" (1:21), bringing the response of faith. While Paul emphasized that faith alone saves, James emphasized that saving faith is never alone. For Paul, justification is a legal declaration of righteousness before God. James, however, used justification in the sense of being righteous before people. Thus he can say, "You see that a person is justified by works and not by faith alone" (2:24). Good works are open to observation by others, faith is not; therefore, good works make faith visible. Good works are never the root cause of salvation, but they are always the fruit (result) of salvation.

GREETING

1 James, † a servant of God † and of the Lord Jesus Christ: To the twelve tribes † dispersed abroad. † † Greetings. †

TRIALS AND MATURITY

2 Consider it a great joy, my brothers and sisters, whenever you experience various trials, † 3 because you know that the testing of your faith produces endurance. 4 And let endurance have its full effect, so that you may be mature and complete, lacking nothing.

5 Now if any of you lacks wisdom, he should ask God — who gives to all generously and ungrudgingly — and it will be given to him. † 6 But let him ask in faith without doubting. † For the doubter is like the surging sea, driven and tossed by the wind. [7] That person should not expect to receive anything from the Lord, [8] being double-minded and unstable in all his ways. † †

[9] Let the brother of humble circumstances boast in his exaltation, [10] but let the rich boast in his humiliation because he will pass away like a flower of the field. † [11] For the sun rises and, together with the scorching wind, dries up the grass; its flower falls off, and its beautiful appearance perishes. In the same way, the rich person will wither away while pursuing his activities. †

[12] Blessed is the one who endures trials, because when he has stood the test he will receive the crown † of life that God † has promised to those who love him. †

[13] No one undergoing a trial should say, "I am being tempted by God," since God is not tempted by evil, and he himself doesn't tempt anyone. [14] But each person is tempted when he is drawn away and enticed by his own evil desire. †

[15] Then after desire has conceived, it gives birth to sin, and when sin is fully grown, it gives birth to death. †

[16] Don't be deceived, my dear brothers and sisters. † [17] Every good and perfect gift is from above, coming down from the Father of lights, who does not change like shifting shadows. † [18] By his own choice, he gave us birth by the word of truth so that we would be a kind of firstfruits of his creatures. †

HEARING AND DOING THE WORD

[19] My dear brothers and sisters, understand this: Everyone should be quick to listen, slow to speak, and slow to anger, † [20] for human anger does not accomplish God's righteousness. [21] Therefore, ridding yourselves of all moral filth and the evil that is so prevalent, † humbly receive the implanted word, which is able to save your souls. †

[22] But † be doers of the word and not hearers only, deceiving yourselves. [23] Because if anyone is a hearer of the word and not a doer, he is like someone looking at his own face † in a mirror. [24] For he looks at himself, goes away, and immediately forgets what kind of person he was. [25] But the one who looks intently into the perfect law of freedom and perseveres in it, and is not a forgetful hearer but a doer who works — this person will be blessed in what he does. † 26 If anyone † thinks he is religious without controlling his tongue, † his religion is useless and he deceives himself.

THE GOSPEL AND SOCIAL MINISTRY

Social ministry is generally defined by its aim to provide assistance to those with physical or social needs, whether in the form of food, shelter, emotional or mental health care, family life support, and advocacy for social justice. The Scriptures and church tradition point to the centrality of social ministry as evidence of the power of the gospel at work in human lives. While the church throughout its history has debated about and vacillated between an emphasis on social ministry or an emphasis on preaching and evangelism, Jesus's teaching and his works of service suggest that both preaching and social ministries are central to the gospel. What Jesus taught, what Jesus did, and the tradition of the church attest to what has become known as the integral mission of the church.

JESUS AND SOCIAL MINISTRY

The bookends of Jesus's teaching frame the importance and centrality of social ministry in the gospel. Jesus announced his mission at the inauguration of his public ministry in the synagogue through a reading from the prophet Isaiah: "The Spirit of the Lord is on me, because he has anointed me to preach good news to the poor. He has sent me to proclaim release to the captives and recovery of sight to the blind, to set free the oppressed, to proclaim the year of the Lord's favor" (Lk 4:18-19).

By using this text, Jesus asserted that God's purpose through Christ is wholeness and healing in body, soul, and spirit through the coming kingdom of God. Jesus announced that because of his coming the poor will be blessed, the blind will see, the lame will walk, and relationships will be restored. The worldwide impact of Jesus's coming was not only the promise of a future spiritual kingdom but an effect on the present realities of the broken human condition. Jesus said that if his followers would believe in him, even greater things would be done (Jn 14:12).

At the conclusion of Jesus's earthly ministry and just prior to ascending into heaven, Jesus instructed the disciples about what their mission, and the mission of all future disciples, was to be: "Go, therefore, and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit, teaching them to observe everything I have commanded you" (Mt 28:19-20).

Being a follower of Christ means that we should do what Jesus did, commit to his purpose, and invite others to join us in observing what he taught. Following Jesus is costly and strenuous. His teaching was unambiguous as he drew a distinction between true discipleship and simple assent to a religious teaching. The gospel that Jesus proclaimed from beginning to end addressed the concrete realities of the present world as well as the spiritual hope for all eternity.

Jesus teaches us to pay careful attention to all aspects of our social relationships. The Sermon on the Mount speaks to a wide range of social issues: forgiveness, anger, broken relationships, divorce, truthfulness, responses to evil, love for friends and enemies, almsgiving, use of wealth, anxiety, and social justice. All of these issues can be addressed through social ministries offered through the church or other faith-based organizations.

Much of Jesus's teaching came in the form of stories or parables that direct our attention to the fact that God cares about the everyday matters of human existence. They speak to spiritual wholeness and faithfulness, but they also concern themselves with various challenges of human relationships in the present world. Jesus describes his kingdom as a place where justice and righteousness prevail: good seed bears fruit; lost sheep, coins, and sons are restored; faithful stewardship is compensated; issues of wealth and poverty are explored; labor practices are examined; and helping the downtrodden is rewarded. The examples that Jesus gave of what the kingdom would be like are not mere abstractions but concrete ways he is calling us to live. Social ministries help the church to address the concerns of human relationships in practical and tangible ways.

The example of Jesus's life and ministry reinforces the teachings of Jesus and demonstrates the significance of social ministry as a central aspect of the gospel. What Jesus did with his time and energy emphasized engagement with people, especially those who lived on the margins of society. Jesus experienced the hardships of homelessness, alienation, hunger, betrayal, and physical pain. This allowed him to be a sympathetic Savior (Heb 4:15).

The first-century world was amazed by what Jesus did. His public ministry focused on healing the sick, feeding the hungry, reconciling outcasts to the community, loving the poor, challenging the wealthy, touching the leprous, condemning religious hypocrites, eating with prostitutes and tax collectors, confronting the powerful, and restoring mental health. He defied societal and cultural structures and belief systems that created oppressive conditions. Simple conversations with people, such as the Samaritan woman, tax collectors, those with leprosy, and children violated cultural norms and aroused the antipathy of those who would keep oppressive systems in place.

Clearly, Jesus's expectations for his followers included acts of kindness, advocacy for social justice, and demolition of social barriers that marginalized groups of people. His invitation to the disciples was to do what he did, to follow him, in demonstrating the love and mercy of God—especially to people who might not otherwise experience a compassionate and hospitable world. His miraculous works served to show the consistency with his character and message confirming his teachings by meeting concrete human needs as well as bearing witness to his deity. Jesus taught that those who will be invited to inherit the kingdom are those who have demonstrated the same character and message by engaging in social ministries like feeding the hungry, visiting the prisoners, and offering hospitality to strangers (Mt 25:31-46).

THE EARLY CHURCH AND SOCIAL MINISTRY

The church was notable from its inception for the radical nature of her social relationships and ministry. In Acts 2 and 4, Luke, with a sense of awe, highlights the nature of the church as a place of continual fellowship, teaching, and prayer. Participants were inspired to sell property and possessions and share with all so no one had need of anything. The resurrection of Jesus and the coming of the Holy Spirit on the church allowed the work and ministry of Jesus to continue through the lives of those who believed. The social ministry of the church in the early centuries drew attention to the transformative power of the gospel to shape relationships among people. Rather than an entirely spiritualized, other-worldly religion, the Christian faith promised eternal life that changed how people lived in the present.

The church in its earliest history became known for its array of social ministries to care for the poor, the ill, and outcasts. The Cappadocian Fathers established the first institutions of social ministry. Hospitals and other refuges provided care for those who suffered while simultaneously offering the presence and power of God for all eternity through their teaching and preaching. In the centuries following, Christians have been noted for establishing orphanages, schools, hospitals, and refuges as well as advocating for social justice for those who are oppressed.

In the twentieth century, Dietrich Bonhoeffer asserted that one cannot understand and preach the gospel concretely enough. He gave his life in the battle against the oppression of the Nazi regime much like other Christians in other times and places have done to advance the cause of the gospel in the face of social injustice. Present-day followers of Christ continue to provide leadership in all kinds of social ministry as churches and faith-based organizations around the world fight poverty and injustice in myriad ways as part of the compelling mission and message of the gospel.

CONCLUSION

Social ministry is not an addendum to the traditional evangelistic mission of the church. It reflects the character and purpose of God to establish justice and righteousness. Jesus considered the concrete, physical realities of this world so important that he entered into it and spent his time healing the suffering. Physical conditions did matter to Jesus—the purpose of the gospel was to break the power of suffering and to bring healing and reconciliation to all aspects of human brokenness. Jesus came for those who need help. Social ministry affords an opportunity to embrace the whole gospel and the mission of Jesus himself as announced in Luke 4.

1:2-4 These verses directly contradict the assumptions of popular teachers today who claim that nothing bad will happen when we obey God. See "Christians and Suffering," p. 580; "Illness and a Christian Worldview," p 646.

1:5 Wisdom is the ability to understand life according to the fear of God (Pr 1:7). King Solomon famously asked God for wisdom, and it was granted to him (2Ch 1:7-12).

1:6 Believers can ask for wisdom in faith without doubting because the Scriptures tell us God will give us wisdom. We cannot ask with such certainty for things that God has not promised. We must trust God's love and wisdom to do what is best. Doubt refers to a conflict of loyalties.

1:12 The crown of life draws on the image of a crown awarded to victorious athletes (1Co 9:25). James points to the reward of everlasting life promised to those who love God.

1:13 While God does put people under trial, or a period of testing (Gn 22:1), he never tempts anyone to sin.

1:14 James affirms personal responsibility for sin rather than blaming others, even God, for it.

1:17 God is the Father of lights, meaning the Creator of the heavens, including the sun, moon, planets, and stars (Gn 1:16; Ps 136:7-9; Jr 31:35).

1:18 Birth refers to spiritual conversion, and it was an essential element of Jesus's teaching (Jn 3:3). Peter, as James does here, connects spiritual birth to the word of God (1Pt 1:23).

1:21-22 If the word is indeed received and planted in us, it will result in action: obedience. If such action does not result, then we are deceiving ourselves, assuming we have received the word though we have not.

1:23-24 The analogy of a mirror implies that the word reflects back to us what kind of people we are. That is, the word reveals our true selves as we encounter its truth.

1:26 Today the adjective religious is often regarded negatively. Here it refers to the visible lifestyle of one who knows God.

1:27 Orphans and widows were particularly vulnerable in the ancient world since they lacked family support and there was no social safety net to help them. Caring for those in particular need is a consistent biblical ethic. An ancient Jewish writing, Sirach, stated, "Be a father to orphans, and be like a husband to their mother; you will then be like a son of the Most High" (4:10). See also "Christian Worldview, the Great Commandment, and the Christian Life," p. 1181.

THE SIN OF FAVORITISM

2 My brothers and sisters, do not show favoritism as you hold on to the faith in our glorious Lord Jesus Christ. † 2 For if someone comes into your meeting wearing a gold ring and dressed in fine clothes, and a poor person dressed in filthy clothes also comes in, 3 if you look with favor on the one wearing the fine clothes and say, "Sit here in a good place," and yet you say to the poor person, "Stand over there," or "Sit here on the floor by my footstool," 4 haven't you made distinctions among yourselves and become judges with evil thoughts?

5 Listen, my dear brothers and sisters: Didn't God choose the poor in this world † to be rich in faith † and heirs † of the kingdom that he has promised to those who love him? 6 Yet you have dishonored the poor. † Don't the rich oppress you and drag † you into court? 7 Don't they blaspheme the good name that was invoked over you? †

8 Indeed, if you fulfill the royal law prescribed in the Scripture, Love your neighbor as yourself, † † you are doing well. 9 If, however, you show favoritism, † you commit sin and are convicted by the law as transgressors. 10 For whoever keeps the entire law, and yet stumbles at one point, is guilty of breaking it all. † 11 For he who said, Do not commit adultery, † also said, Do not murder. † † So if you do not commit adultery, but you murder, you are a lawbreaker.

12 Speak and act as those who are to be judged by the law of freedom. † 13 For judgment is without mercy to the one who has not shown mercy. † Mercy triumphs over judgment.

FAITH AND WORKS

14 What good is it, my brothers and sisters, if someone claims to have faith but does not have works? Can such faith save him?

15 If a brother or sister is without clothes and lacks daily food 16 and one of you says to them, "Go in peace, stay warm, and be well fed," but you don't give them what the body needs, what good is it? † 17 In the same way faith, if it doesn't have works, is dead by itself.

18 But someone will say, "You have faith, and I have works." † Show me your faith without works, and I will show you faith by my works. † 19 You believe that God is one. Good! Even the demons believe — and they shudder. †

20 Senseless person! Are you willing to learn that faith without works is useless? 21 Wasn't Abraham our father justified by works in offering Isaac his son on the altar? 22 You see that faith was active together with his works, and by works, faith was made complete, † 23 and the Scripture was fulfilled that says, Abraham believed God, and it was credited to him as righteousness, † † and he was called God's friend. † 24 You see that a person is justified by works and not by faith alone. 25 In the same way, wasn't Rahab the prostitute also justified by works in receiving the messengers and sending them out by a different route? † 26 For just as the body without the spirit is dead, so also faith without works is dead.

2:5 The OT clearly reveals God's heart for the poor. Those without material wealth often show great faith, since they cannot rely on their own resources but must trust God. Conversely, the rich are tempted to trust in their own security.

2:6 In the first century the wealthy took advantage of the poor by suppressing wages and other unjust tactics.

2:8-9 As elsewhere in the NT, the fundamental Christian ethic is love. James shows that love forbids favoritism. The passage does not denigrate wealth, but criticizes any show of favoritism to the wealthy.

2:14-19 James argues that real faith produces works. Thus, if works are absent, true faith is absent and genuine conversion has not occurred.

2:20-26 Paul uses the same OT text (Gn 15:6) to argue that we are saved by faith, not works (Rm 4:1-5). Paul and James are arguing different points. Paul insists we cannot earn our salvation by good works. James is arguing that salvation will always impact how we live, with true faith generating good works. Without works, faith is proved ungenuine.

CONTROLLING THE TONGUE

3 Not many should become teachers, my brothers, † because you know that we will receive a stricter judgment. † 2 For we all stumble in many ways. † If anyone does not stumble in what he says, he is mature, able also to control the whole body. † 3 Now if we put bits into the mouths of horses so that they obey us, † we direct their whole bodies. 4 And consider ships:
Though very large and driven by fierce winds, they are guided by a very small rudder wherever the will of the pilot directs. 5 So too, though the tongue is a small part of the body, it boasts great things. † Consider how a small fire sets ablaze a large forest. 6 And the tongue is a fire. The tongue, a world of unrighteousness, is placed † among our members. It stains the whole body, † sets the course of life on fire, and is itself set on fire by hell. 7 Every kind of animal, bird, reptile, and fish is tamed and has been tamed by humankind, 8 but no one can tame the tongue. It is a restless evil, full of deadly poison. † 9 With the tongue we bless our Lord and Father, and with it we curse people who are made in God's likeness. † 10 Blessing and cursing come out of the same mouth.
My brothers and sisters, these things should not be this way. 11 Does a spring pour out sweet and bitter water from the same opening? 12 Can a fig tree produce olives, my brothers and sisters, or a grapevine produce figs? Neither can a saltwater spring yield fresh water.

THE WISDOM FROM ABOVE

13 Who among you is wise and understanding? By his good conduct he should show that his works are done in the gentleness that comes from wisdom. † 14 But if you have bitter envy and selfish ambition in your heart, don't boast and deny the truth. † 15 Such wisdom does not come down from above but is earthly, unspiritual, demonic. † 16 For where there is envy and selfish ambition, there is disorder and every evil practice. 17 But the wisdom from above is first pure, then peace-loving, gentle, compliant, full of mercy and good fruits, unwavering, without pretense. † 18 And the fruit of righteousness † is sown in peace by those who cultivate peace.

3:1 An occupational hazard for teachers is that they must talk often, and humans struggle to be consistently careful and appropriate with their words (Pr 10:19).

3:2 Avoiding sins of speech is a difficulty acknowledged by Jewish authors such as Sirach and Philo: "Who has never sinned with his tongue?" (Sir 19:16). James, under inspiration, may have been responding to and enhancing their insights.

3:9 See "Imago Dei and the Distinctiveness of Humans," p. 27.

3:13 Wisdom is shown by our actions, as is faith (2:14-26).

PROUD OR HUMBLE

4 What is the source of wars and fights among you? Don't they come from your passions † that wage war within you? † 2 You desire and do not have. You murder and covet and cannot obtain. You fight and wage war. † You do not have because you do not ask. 3 You ask and don't receive because you ask with wrong motives, so that you may spend it on your pleasures. †

4 You adulterous people! † Don't you know that friendship with the world is hostility toward God? So whoever wants to be the friend of the world becomes the enemy of God. † 5 Or do you think it's without reason that the Scripture says: The spirit he made to dwell in us envies intensely? † †

6 But he gives greater grace. Therefore he says:

God resists the proud, but gives grace to the humble. † †

7 Therefore, submit to God. Resist the devil, and he will flee from you. †
8 Draw near to God, and he will draw near to you. Cleanse your hands, sinners, and purify your hearts, you double-minded. † 9 Be miserable and mourn and weep. Let your laughter be turned to mourning and your joy to gloom. †
10 Humble yourselves before the Lord, and he will exalt you.
11 Don't criticize one another, brothers and sisters. Anyone who defames or judges a fellow believer † defames and judges the law. If you judge the law, you are not a doer of the law but a judge. † 12 There is one lawgiver and judge † who is able to save and to destroy. But who are you to judge your neighbor? †

OUR WILL AND GOD'S WILL

13 Come now, you who say, "Today or tomorrow we will travel to such and such a city and spend a year there and do business and make a profit." † 14 Yet you do not know what tomorrow will bring — what your life will be! For you are like vapor that appears for a little while, then vanishes. †
15 Instead, you should say, "If the Lord wills, we will live and do this or that."
16 But as it is, you boast in your arrogance. All such boasting is evil. † 17 So it is sin to know the good and yet not do it. †

4:1-3 The book of James is known for its emphasis on practical behavior. But this paragraph shows that James is also concerned about the heart. Behavior arises from the condition of the heart, as Jesus taught (Mt 5:21-30).

4:4 The OT often depicts God's relationship with his people as a marriage (e.g., Is 54:4-6), so their worship of other gods is seen as spiritual adultery (Jr 3:20). For James, friendship with the world is a similar type of idolatry.

4:6 See "Leadership and Biblical Ethics," p. 1501.

4:7 To resist the devil does not involve an elaborate activity or special ceremony. It simply means to refuse his temptations. See also "Spiritual Warfare," p. 1454.

4:8 Cleansing hands and purifying hearts looks to OT purity requirements for worship. The point is that worship—drawing near to God—requires putting away sin.

4:9 Mourning and weeping are images used by the OT prophets to depict radical and genuine repentance from sin (e.g., Jl 2:12).

4:13-17 James warns against presumption. We cannot control our lives, and we cannot even be sure we will have a tomorrow. We need to remember how much we depend on God.

4:15 The OT and other Jewish literature often refer to the fleeting nature of human life. Life is but a "breath" (Jb 7:7,9; Ps 39:5-6).

WARNING TO THE RICH

5 Come now, you rich † people, weep and wail over the miseries that are coming on you.

PRAYER AND RECOVERY FROM ILLNESS

Is anyone among you sick? He should call for the elders of the church, and they are to pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord. The prayer of faith will save the sick person, and the Lord will raise him up; if he has committed sins, he will be forgiven. Therefore, confess your sins to one another and pray for one another, so that you may be healed. The prayer of a righteous person is very powerful in its effect" (Jms 5:14-16).

Throughout God's Word, we find the words "pray" or "prayer" many times; in fact, there are over six hundred prayers recorded in the Bible. God's Word tells us to "pray constantly" (1Th 5:17). Jesus told his disciples they should always pray "and not give up" (Lk 18:1). We often define prayer as the way we communicate with God, but when we take a closer look at the Scriptures, we find that the word has a much deeper meaning.

The Greek word most often used for prayer is proseuche, and it denotes an encounter with God through intimate relationship. It implies a person coming to God in an act of sacrificial surrender. Prayer, then, is not just asking God to give you what you desire. Prayer is one way we have communion with God. It draws us closer to God and brings us strength.

In Ephesians 6:18 we are told, "Pray at all times in the Spirit with every prayer and request, and stay alert with all perseverance and intercession for all the saints."

Traditionally, Christian prayer has been seen primarily as petitionary. When we pray, we come to God with a request. As followers of Christ, we believe there is value in petitioning God to intervene in our circumstances. We know from Scripture that nothing is impossible with God (Lk 1:37). We believe God listens to our prayers, and he is faithful to give us what we need (Mt 7:7; Lk 11:9). The Psalms are rich with prayers and praise affirming that the ears of our mighty God are attentive to our cries for help (Pss 34:15,17; 116:1). We read countless stories in God's Word about healing and the power of prayer.

In the life of an effective Christian, then, prayer is essential. But why do our prayers sometimes fail to work? Why does God choose to heal one person, while another person for whom we pray dies? Was there something wrong with our prayers? Did we not pray the right way? People have pondered questions such as these for millennia.

As we lift up intercessory prayers for people who need healing, these questions arise: Does prayer make a difference in patient recovery? Is there concrete, scientific evidence that prayer is effective? If I pray for a friend and my friend gets well, did the healing happen because I prayed? Would her health have improved even if I had abstained from praying? Can we accurately answer these questions using scientific tools?

The effectiveness of prayer in patient recovery is gaining interest in the research community. In the last ten years, in fact, research focused on the effectiveness of prayer in recovery has nearly doubled. Most experts agree that prayer offers comfort and spiritual support to patients, but many are skeptical of the role of prayer in patient care. While some research has shown a positive association between improved health and prayer, other studies have shown a negative association. When we examine the scientific research, there is no reliable evidence to support the notion that people who receive intercessory prayer recover more than those who do not.

Researchers have conducted a variety of clinical trials seeking to prove or disprove the effectiveness of prayer. Attempting to accurately conduct a clinical trial involving the effects of prayer invites questions that are difficult to measure. Do the outcomes of prayer depend on the spiritual state of the person who is praying? Will prayer be more effective if a large number of people pray instead of an individual? It is impossible to measure all of the variables that are important in such research, including how to measure a person's faith or level of spirituality. Moreover, such research is clouded with contradictions, challenges, and assumptions that make researching prayer and recovery a "scientific and religious minefield" (Andrade and Radhakrishnan).

There is no scientific formula to prayer. Prayer exists around a personal relationship with Jesus Christ. Prayer is intimate. Prayer is supernatural. Scientific methods cannot measure the supernatural. There is no consistent scientific proof that prayer affects patient recovery, but that does not mean that prayer is ineffective.

As Christians, we must be careful not to equate prayer with magic. God is not a magic genie who appears out of a golden lamp ready to grant our wishes. God's decision to grant some requests while refusing others does not prove nor disprove his existence. It demonstrates that he is sovereign. His thoughts are not our thoughts, neither are his ways our ways. His thoughts and ways are higher than ours (Is 55:8-9). He bends his listening ear to his people, but his will is far better than ours and his ways are perfect. Sometimes he chooses to grant our requests; sometimes he does not. We do not always know the will of God, but we know that God desires to do more in our lives than simply bring healing to our bodies when we are sick. He often uses our physical sufferings for a higher purpose. We can be certain that as we pray, God hears our prayers and he answers in accordance to his perfect will.

Our Savior, Jesus, was fully God and fully man. His purpose for entering this world was to save us. His death was a requirement in order for us to have salvation. The night before his crucifixion, Jesus prayed in the garden of Gethsemane: "My Father, if it is possible, let this cup pass from me. Yet not as I will, but as you will" (Mt 26:39). Jesus knew the sins of the world would be on him. This cup was much to bear. Jesus prayed that this cup might pass from him. It did not. God's perfect will was accomplished.

JOY GREENE

2 Your wealth has rotted and your clothes are moth-eaten. † 3 Your gold and silver are corroded, and their corrosion will be a witness against you and will eat your flesh like fire. You have stored up treasure in the last days. † 4 Look! The pay that you withheld from the workers † who mowed your fields cries out, and the outcry of the harvesters has reached the ears of the Lord of Hosts. † † 5 You have lived luxuriously on the earth and have indulged yourselves. You have fattened your hearts † in a day of slaughter. † 6 You have condemned, you have murdered the righteous, who does not resist you. †

WAITING FOR THE LORD

7 Therefore, brothers and sisters, be patient until the Lord's coming. See how the farmer waits for the precious fruit of the earth and is patient with it until it receives the early and the late rains. † 8 You also must be patient. Strengthen your hearts, because the Lord's coming is near. †
9 Brothers and sisters, do not complain about one another, so that you will not be judged. Look, the judge stands at the door! †
10 Brothers and sisters, take the prophets who spoke in the Lord's name as an example of suffering and patience. 11 See, we count as blessed those who have endured. † You have heard of Job's endurance † and have seen the outcome that the Lord brought about — the Lord is compassionate and merciful. †

TRUTHFUL SPEECH

12 Above all, my brothers and sisters, do not swear, either by heaven or by earth or with any other oath. † But let your "yes" mean "yes," and your "no" mean "no," so that you won't fall under judgment. †

EFFECTIVE PRAYER

13 Is anyone among you suffering? He should pray. Is anyone cheerful? He should sing praises. † 14 Is anyone among you sick? He should call for the elders of the church, and they are to pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord. † 15 The prayer of faith will save the sick person, and the Lord will raise him up; if he has committed sins, he will be forgiven. † 16 Therefore, confess your sins to one another and pray for one another, so that you may be healed. The prayer of a righteous person is very powerful in its effect. † 17 Elijah was a human being as we are, and he prayed earnestly that it would not rain, and for three years and six months it did not rain on the land. † 18 Then he prayed again, and the sky gave rain and the land produced its fruit. †

19 My brothers and sisters, if any among you strays from the truth, † and someone turns him back, † 20 let that person know that whoever turns a sinner from the error of his way will save his soul from death and cover a multitude of sins. †

5:1-6 The rich addressed here are wicked people who have cheated others. Biblical and Jewish tradition regularly associated the rich with the wicked (e.g., Pr 10:15-16).

5:12 The people of God should be marked by truthfulness in speech. They need not rely on oaths to assert their faithfulness (cp. Mt 5:34-37).

5:13 See “A Biblical View of Music,” p. 727.

5:14-16 God is pleased to work through prayer to bring healing and forgiveness. In the OT, anointing . . . with oil symbolized the setting apart of someone for God’s special attention. That is probably the idea here.

5:14 Elders of the early church were modeled on the elders of the synagogue. They were the spiritual leaders of the congregation, characterized by their maturity (not necessarily their age).

5:15-16 Saving the sick person does not necessarily mean that the ailing will be physically cured of illness. The mention of sins and forgiveness implies that the sick person’s spiritual salvation is in view. If the illness leads to death, the Lord will raise him up in the life to come.

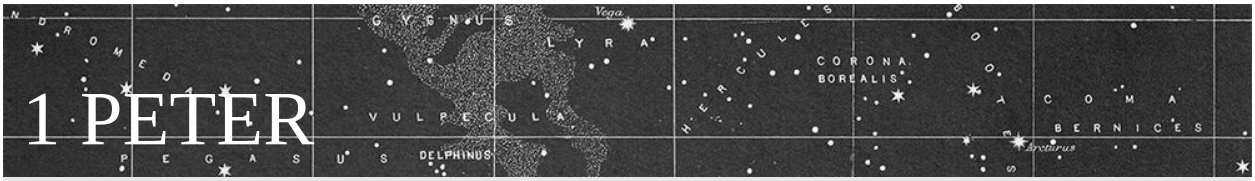
5:17-18 Elijah is offered as an example of the effectiveness of the prayer of a righteousness person (5:16; 1Kg 17–18).

5:19-20 In a message similar to Hebrews 3–4, believers have a responsibility to watch over one another, to keep each other from sin, and to help one another to persevere.



1 PETER

INTRODUCTION

First Peter is considered one of the General Letters. This letter provided encouragement to suffering believers living in northern Asia Minor who faced intense persecution. The letter encourages faithfulness while under oppression. Specifically, God's holy people should lead distinctive lifestyles as temporary residents in a foreign land. Although they will suffer for Christ while in this non-Christian world, they should remember that heaven is their future homeland.

CIRCUMSTANCES OF WRITING

AUTHOR: The author of 1 Peter identified himself as "Peter, an apostle of Jesus Christ" (1:1). He viewed himself as a divinely ordained, directly commissioned, authoritative representative of the Lord Jesus himself. Several statements in the letter indicate that the Peter who plays a prominent role in the Gospels is the author. For example, he called himself an "elder and witness" to Christ's sufferings (5:1). Further, he described Christ's crucifixion with an intimate knowledge that only a disciple would have of that event (2:21-24).

Several expressions in 1 Peter reflect Peter's experiences with Jesus. For example, the exhortation for elders to "shepherd God's flock" (5:2) evokes the charge that Jesus gave Peter in John 21:15-17. Moreover, the command to "clothe yourselves with humility" (5:5) may recall the episode in John 13:2-17 where Jesus washed the disciples' feet.

Several themes in 1 Peter can also be found in Peter's sermons in the book of Acts. For example, God is "the Father who judges impartially" (1:17; cp. Ac 10:34) and who raised Christ from the dead and gave him glory (1:21; cp. Ac 2:32-36). Christ is "the stone that the builders rejected" (2:7-8; cp. Ac 4:10-11).

Objections to the letter's authorship by Peter are inconclusive and cannot be proven. The claim that someone wrote this letter using the apostle's name as a pseudonym cannot be sustained. A number of early church leaders— e.g., Irenaeus, Tertullian, and Clement of Alexandria—accepted the letter as authentic. Further, the early church soundly rejected the practice of writing under an apostolic pseudonym as forgery. In light of the above, the epistle should be accepted as genuinely written by the apostle Peter. Silvanus may have in some fashion helped Peter write the letter while serving as his secretary (Gk amanuensis), but more likely he was merely the letter carrier (5:12).

BACKGROUND: The recipients of 1 Peter are identified in 1:1. Peter wrote to the "exiles dispersed abroad in Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia." These were Roman provinces located in the northern part of what is now modern Turkey, unless Galatia includes the Galatia in the southern region of Asia Minor. These people were likely persecuted Gentile Christians. They had earlier been involved in idolatry (4:3), were ignorant (1:14) and "empty" (1:18) before they came to Christ, and formerly were "not a people" but now were "God's people" (2:9-10).

The reference in 1 Peter 5:13—"She who is in Babylon, chosen together with you, sends you greetings"—suggests Rome as the place of the letter's origin. "Babylon" was used cryptically to refer to a place of exile, but specifically for Rome. Other possibilities for Babylon include the cities of Babylon in Mesopotamia and Egypt, but these places are highly unlikely because we have no record of Peter ever being in those places.

First Peter was probably written sometime between AD 62–64. While Paul was under house arrest from AD 60–62, he did not refer to Peter in Rome. Peter likewise did not mention Paul as being in Rome; only Silvanus and Mark were his companions (5:12-13). These facts suggest that Peter wrote 1 Peter some time after AD 62 and before the writing of 2 Peter.

The theme of suffering appears throughout 1 Peter. The recipients of the letter are the sufferers in four of its five chapters. Given a composition date of about AD 62–64, 1 Peter was written during the persecution of Christians under Nero's reign. The persecution arose in Rome and was spreading into Asia Minor.

CONTRIBUTION TO THE BIBLE

Peter's intent in writing was to strengthen believers in the midst of the suffering and persecution they were facing. His message to them continues to speak to modern believers, reminding us of our heavenly hope and eternal inheritance in the midst of our sufferings. We are called to holiness and a life of love. We are also called to glorify God in our daily lives and to imitate Christ.

STRUCTURE

The structure of 1 Peter has been the subject of discussion from the earliest history of the church. The diversity of outlines illustrates that the task of exegesis is not merely a science but also an art. Peter wrote this letter with a typical opening for a letter (1:1-2) and then began the next major section (1:3–2:10) with a blessing (1:3). The two succeeding sections are marked by "dear friends" (2:11; 4:12), and as noted earlier the segment from 2:11–4:11 concludes with a doxology and "amen." The fourth section of the letter also ends with a doxology and "amen" (5:11) before the closing.

CHRISTIAN WORLDVIEW ELEMENTS

TEACHINGS ABOUT GOD

This book notes many attributes of God, from his foreknowledge (1:2) to his grace (5:12). The glory of God is the goal of all things (4:11). Jesus's suffering and death for sinners is strongly emphasized, as is his resurrection and return in glory. The Holy Spirit, who inspired the prophets of old, has now been sent to God's people (1:11; 4:14). First Peter 1:2 is an important text for understanding the Trinity.

TEACHINGS ABOUT HUMANITY

First Peter dignifies all classes of human life by showing that living by the gospel makes a great difference in relationships. Christians submit both to government and to masters to the glory of God. In the Christian family, husbands and wives have a mutual responsibility to respect each other. In the congregation, spiritual leaders ("elders," 5:1) lead their flocks by being humble servants, creating a context of mutual submission.

TEACHINGS ABOUT SALVATION

Salvation in this book is past, present, and future. The past aspect involves God's sovereign election as well as Jesus's suffering and death to purchase salvation (2:9; 3:18). The present aspect involves the regeneration and the ongoing faith of God's people (1:3,21; 5:9). At Christ's return those who "are being guarded by God's power through faith" will receive the "salvation that is ready to be revealed in the last time" (1:5).

GREETING

1 Peter, † an apostle of Jesus Christ: To those chosen, living as exiles † dispersed † abroad † in Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia, † 2 chosen † according to the foreknowledge † of God the Father, through the sanctifying work of the Spirit, † to be obedient † and to be sprinkled with the blood † of Jesus Christ.
May grace and peace be multiplied to you.

A LIVING HOPE

3 Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. † Because of his great mercy † he has given us new birth † into a living hope † through the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead † 4 and into an inheritance that is imperishable, † undefiled, and unfading, kept in heaven † for you. 5 You are being guarded by God's power † through faith for a salvation that is ready to be revealed in the last time. † 6 You rejoice in this, † even though now for a short time, if necessary, you suffer grief in various trials † 7 so that the proven character of your faith † — more valuable than gold which, though perishable, is refined by fire † — may result † in praise, glory, and honor † at the revelation of Jesus Christ. † 8 Though you have not seen † him, you love him; † though not seeing him now, you believe in him, and you rejoice † with inexpressible and glorious joy, 9 because you are receiving the goal of your faith, the salvation of your souls.

10 Concerning this salvation, the prophets, † who prophesied about the grace that would come to you, searched and carefully investigated. 11 They inquired into what time or what circumstances the Spirit of Christ † within them was indicating when he testified in advance † to the sufferings of Christ † and the glories † that would follow. † 12 It was revealed to them that they were not serving themselves but you. These things have now been announced to you through those who preached the gospel to you † by the Holy Spirit sent from heaven † — angels long to catch a glimpse of these things.

A CALL TO HOLY LIVING

13 Therefore, with your minds ready for action, † be sober-minded † and set your hope † completely on the grace to be brought to you at the revelation † of Jesus Christ. 14 As obedient children, † do not be conformed to the desires of your former ignorance. 15 But as the one who called you † is holy, † you also are to be holy in all your conduct; 16 for it is written, Be holy, because I am holy. † † 17 If you appeal to the Father who judges impartially † according to each one's work, † you are to conduct yourselves in reverence † during your time living as strangers. [18] For you know that you were redeemed from your empty way of life † inherited from your fathers, not with perishable things like silver or gold, † [19] but with the precious blood of Christ, † like that of an unblemished and spotless lamb. † [20] He was foreknown † before the foundation of the world but was revealed in these last times † for you. [21] Through him you believe in God, † who raised him from the dead † and gave him glory, † so that your faith and hope are in God.

[22] Since you have purified yourselves by your obedience to the truth, † so that you show sincere brotherly love for each other, † from a pure † heart love one another constantly, † † [23] because you have been born again † — not of perishable seed † but of imperishable — through the living and enduring word of God. † [24] For

All flesh is like grass, and all its glory † like a flower of the grass.
The grass withers, and the flower falls, [25] but the word of the Lord endures forever. † †

And this word is the gospel that was proclaimed to you.

1:1-2 Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia are all in Asia Minor, modern Turkey. Peter refers to the believers there as exiles, or temporary residents, because they are alienated from their societies due to their allegiance to Christ. Although the culture may shun them, they are chosen by God—a status of extraordinary privilege. The sanctifying work of the Spirit refers to the Spirit's role in setting apart believers from the world in order that they may belong to God.

1:3 New birth recalls Jesus's teaching to Nicodemus, that one must be born again (Jn 3:3). It is a dramatic image of renewal, such that the former way of life has given way to a new life with God. This new birth is accomplished through the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead. Christ's new resurrection life makes spiritual resurrection possible for believers.

1:4 New birth implies membership in God's family (1:14), and therefore a share into an inheritance. In the OT, the inheritance of God's people was the promised land of Canaan (Gn 12:7). But unlike an inheritance that could be spoiled through sin, this heavenly inheritance is imperishable, undefiled, and unfading.

1:5 While the inheritance is kept in heaven for believers (1:4), so believers are kept for it, being guarded by God's power for the salvation to come.

1:6-7 In spite of those who claim that faithful Christians will never suffer, Peter expects suffering and anticipates that God will use it for our good. Gold was refined by fire, meaning that impurities were burned away by a hot flame. In the same way, faith is refined through suffering. The revelation of Jesus Christ here refers to his return (1:13). See "Christians and Suffering," p. 580.

1:8-9 Christianity is not simply an idea or philosophy, but is rooted in a love for Jesus Christ.

1:10-12 The OT prophets spoke of the sufferings and glories of Christ. Peter asserts that their words were ultimately intended for us, not for themselves. See "Biblical Inspiration and Inerrancy," p. XXXI.

1:12 Angels were important in Jewish writings such as 1 Enoch. See "A Biblical View of Angels," p. 1531.

1:15-16 The call to holiness is not rooted in shifting cultural ideas or values, but in the character of God (Lv 19:2). Since believers are his obedient children (1:14), they are to imitate their heavenly Father.

1:18 The empty way of life inherited from your fathers refers to the readers' Gentile background. While the audience of 1 Peter is debated, this verse indicates a Gentile audience, since it is difficult to imagine Peter would say this of Jewish readers.

1:19 Being redeemed with the precious blood of Christ points to Christ's fulfillment of the OT sacrificial system. Like that of the spotless lamb required for the Passover sacrifice (Ex 12), Christ's blood is the means by which redemption from sin is accomplished.

1:23-25 Peter returns to the concept of being born again (1:3), but this time it occurs through the word of God. Since this word is the gospel, Peter means that through the gospel that was proclaimed, believers came to faith in Christ, who brought about their new birth through his resurrection from the dead (1:3).

THE LIVING STONE AND A HOLY PEOPLE

2 Therefore, rid yourselves of † all malice, all deceit, hypocrisy, envy, and all slander. † 2 Like newborn infants, desire the pure milk of the word, † † so that you may grow up into your salvation, † 3 if you have tasted † that the Lord is good. † † 4 As you come to him, a living stone — rejected by people but chosen and honored by † God — 5 you yourselves, as living stones, a spiritual house, are being built to be a holy priesthood † to offer spiritual sacrifices acceptable to God † through Jesus Christ. 6 For it stands in Scripture:

See, I lay a stone in Zion, † a chosen and honored † cornerstone, † and the one who believes in him will never be put to shame. † †

7 So honor will come to you who believe; but for the unbelieving,

The stone that the builders rejected — this one has become the cornerstone, † †

8 and

A stone to stumble over, and a rock to trip over. † †

They stumble because they disobey the word; they were destined † for this.

9 But you are a chosen race, † † † a royal priesthood, † † a holy nation, † † a people for his possession, † † so that you may proclaim the praises † † † of the one who called you out of darkness into his marvelous light. † 10 Once you were not a people, but now you are God's people; you had not received mercy, † but now you have received mercy.

A CALL TO GOOD WORKS

11 Dear friends, I urge you as strangers and exiles † to abstain † from sinful † desires that wage war against the soul. † 12 Conduct † yourselves honorably among the Gentiles, † so that when they slander you as evildoers, they will observe your good works and will glorify God on the day he visits. †

13 Submit † to every human authority because of the Lord, whether to the emperor † as the supreme authority † 14 or to governors as those sent out by him to punish those who do what is evil and to praise those who do what is good. 15 For it is God's will † that you silence the ignorance † of foolish people by doing good. 16 Submit as free people, not using your freedom as a cover-up for evil, † but as God's slaves. † 17 Honor everyone. Love † the brothers and sisters. † Fear God. † Honor the emperor.

SUBMISSION OF SLAVES TO MASTERS

18 Household slaves, submit to your masters † with all reverence † not only to the good and gentle ones but also to the cruel. † 19 For it brings favor if, because of a consciousness of God, someone endures grief from suffering unjustly. 20 For what credit is there if when you do wrong and are beaten, you endure it? But when you do what is good and suffer, † if you endure it, this brings favor with God.
21 For you were called to this, because Christ also suffered † for you, leaving you an example, † that you should follow † in his steps. 22 He did not commit sin, † and no deceit † was found in his mouth; † † 23 when he was insulted, he did not insult in return; when he suffered, he did not threaten but entrusted himself to the one who judges † justly. 24 He himself bore our sins † in his body † on the tree; † so that, having died to sins, † we might live for righteousness. † By his wounds † † you have been healed. 25 For you were like sheep going astray, † † but you have now returned to the Shepherd † and Overseer † of your souls.

2:2 Newborn infants connects with the image of new birth (1:3,23). The pure milk of the word is obviously a positive description here, though milk is used negatively elsewhere (1Co 3:2; Heb 5:12-13). Here it is the appropriate food of infants and provides nourishing benefits.

2:4-8 This section is dominated by the image of the temple. Christ is the living stone, while believers are also stones forming a spiritual house together with Christ. Believers also occupy the temple practices of priesthood and the offering of spiritual sacrifices. Peter relies on Isaiah 28:16 and Psalm 118:22 to contrast positive and negative responses to Christ. Some believe in him, while others reject him.

2:9 Peter's readers are described as a chosen race, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a people for his possession—all once used to describe the privileges enjoyed by Israel. If Peter's readers are Gentiles (see on 1:18; 2:10), it is striking that they now share in Israel's privileges too.

2:11 Believers are strangers and exiles in this world; their real home is heaven. In the ancient world, foreigners held a low status, just above that of slaves.

2:12 Since believing Gentiles are now included in the privileges of Israel (2:9), unbelievers are called Gentiles. Believers are to live honorably in the context of persecution (they slander you as evildoers), which will glorify God. The day he visits refers to judgment day, when he brings judgment and salvation (Jr 15:15).

2:13-14 This text emphasizes the importance of obedience to the proper human authorities (cp. Rm 13:1-7). Submission to these authorities is because of the Lord; allegiance to Christ does not undermine obedience to human authorities. See also "The Bible and Government Models," p.768; "Church and State," p. 1374.

2:18 Submission to an unjust master is jarring by today's standards, but the point is that believers are to submit to whatever authority they are under (2:13), regardless of how they are treated. Such an attitude embodies that of Christ (2:21-25).

2:21-25 As elsewhere in the NT, the example of Christ, particularly at the cross, serves as a model for Christian behavior. Peter offers a sustained reflection on the Suffering Servant of Isaiah 53 in describing the sufferings of Christ. Christ bore our sins in his body on the tree, indicating the penal and substitutionary nature of Christ's death on our behalf.

WIVES AND HUSBANDS

3 In the same way, wives, † submit yourselves to your own husbands so that, even if some disobey the word, † they may be won over † without a word by the way their wives live † 2 when they observe your pure, reverent lives. † 3 Don't let your beauty consist of outward things like elaborate hairstyles and wearing gold jewelry or fine clothes, † 4 but rather what is inside the heart † † — the imperishable quality of a gentle † and quiet † spirit, which is of great worth in God's sight. 5 For in the past, the holy † women who put their hope † in God also adorned themselves in this way, submitting to their own husbands, 6 just as Sarah † obeyed Abraham, calling him lord. You have become her children when you do what is good and do not fear any intimidation. †

7 Husbands, † in the same way, live with your wives in an understanding way, as with a weaker partner, † showing them honor as coheirs of the grace of life, so that your prayers will not be hindered.

DO NO EVIL

8 Finally, all of you be like-minded and sympathetic, love one another, † and be compassionate † and humble, † 9 not paying back evil for evil † or insult for insult but, on the contrary, giving a blessing, † since you were called for this, so that you may inherit a blessing.

10 For the † one who wants to love life and to see good days, let him keep his tongue from evil † and his lips from speaking deceit, †

11 and let him turn away † from evil and do what is good.

Let him seek peace † and pursue it, 12 because the eyes of the Lord are on the righteous and his ears are open to their prayer.

But the face of the Lord is against those who do what is evil. †

UNDESERVED SUFFERING

13 Who then will harm you if you are devoted to what is good? 14 But even if you should suffer for righteousness, † you are blessed. Do not fear what they fear † † or be intimidated, † † 15 but in your hearts regard † Christ † the Lord as holy, ready at any time to give a defense to anyone who asks you for a reason for the hope that is in you. † 16 Yet do this with gentleness and respect, keeping a clear conscience, † so that when you are accused, † those who disparage your good conduct in Christ will be put to shame. 17 For it is better to suffer † for doing good, if that should be God's will, than for doing evil.

18 For Christ also suffered † for sins once for all, † the righteous for the unrighteous, that he might bring you to God. † He was put to death in the flesh † † but made alive by the Spirit, † 19 in which † he also went and made proclamation to the spirits † in prison 20 who in the past were disobedient, when God patiently waited in the days of Noah † while the ark was being prepared. In it a few — that is, eight people † † — were saved through water. 21 Baptism, which corresponds to this, now saves you (not as the removal of dirt from the body, † but the pledge † of a good conscience toward God) through the resurrection of Jesus Christ, † 22 who has gone into heaven † and is at the right hand of God † with angels, authorities, and powers subject to him. †

3:1-2 Continuing the theme of submission (1:13,18), a wife's submission to her husband (see also Eph 5:22-24) along with a pure life, can win over an unbelieving husband. In the Roman Empire, wives were expected to adopt the religions of their husbands. Christianity was therefore viewed as subversive in encouraging women to follow Christ even if their husbands did not.

3:3-5 This text counters a culture that objectifies women and is consumed with physical appearance. Believers should aspire to and value what is of great worth in God's sight (cp. 1Tm 2:9).

3:7 The instruction for wives to submit to their husbands (3:1) does not allow for husbands to abuse their authority. Men are to live with their wives in an understanding way, probably referring to women's typically weaker physical strength. Unlike in pagan expectations, a Christian man's wife is a partner and coheir. Believing husband and wife are equal in Christ. See also "Career and Home Life," p. 774.

3:9 Blessing in face of insult recalls Matthew 5:10: "Blessed are those who are persecuted because of righteousness."

3:14-16 Fear of people will keep believers from standing against cultural pressure. The fear of God, however, allows believers to stand fast and give an answer for the hope that is in them.

3:18 The example of Christ having suffered for others again undergirds Peter's exhortation to endure suffering (cp. 2:21-25).

3:19-20 Peter alludes to Genesis 6:1-2 and to Jewish tradition surrounding that text, such as is found in 1 Enoch. The spirits are angelic beings who rebelled against God and are thus imprisoned. Jesus, after his resurrection (3:18), proclaimed to these beings his triumph over them. These spirits had conspired against God's people in the past (in the days of Noah), just as the forces of evil conspired against Peter's readers. Jesus's triumph over these beings reminds Peter's readers that Jesus will lead them to victory as well. They may suffer, and even die, as Jesus did. But in the resurrection, they will share in the victory of Christ, who is at the right hand of God with powers subjected to him (3:22).

3:21 Peter compares Noah's ark to baptism. As Noah and his family were rescued from God's wrath through the water (3:20), so baptism uses water to symbolize that believers have been rescued from God's wrath. The verse carefully states that the physical act does not accomplish salvation.

FOLLOWING CHRIST

4 Therefore, since Christ suffered † in the flesh, arm yourselves also with the same understanding † — because the one who suffers in the flesh is finished † with sin † — 2 in order to live the remaining time in the flesh no longer for human desires, but for God's will. † 3 For there has already been enough time spent in doing what the Gentiles choose to do: carrying on in unrestrained behavior, evil desires, † drunkenness, orgies, † carousing, and lawless idolatry. 4 They are surprised that you don't join them in the same flood of wild living — and they slander † you. 5 They will give an account to the one who stands ready to judge the living and the dead. † 6 For this reason the gospel was also preached to those who are now dead, † † so that, although they might be judged in the flesh according to human standards, † they might live † in the spirit according to God's standards.

END-TIME ETHICS

7 The end of all things is near; † therefore, be alert and sober-minded † for prayer. 8 Above all, maintain constant love † for one another, since love covers a multitude of sins. † † 9 Be hospitable † to one another without complaining. 10 Just as each one has received a gift, use it to serve others, † as good stewards of the varied grace of God. 11 If anyone speaks, let it be as one who speaks God's words; if anyone serves, let it be from the strength God provides, † so that God may be glorified through Jesus Christ in everything. To him be the glory and the power forever and ever. Amen.

CHRISTIAN SUFFERING

12 Dear friends, don't be surprised when the fiery ordeal comes among you to test you as if something unusual were happening to you. † 13 Instead, rejoice as you share in the sufferings of Christ, † so that you may also rejoice with great joy when his glory is revealed. † 14 If you are ridiculed for the name of Christ, † you are blessed, because the Spirit † of glory and of God † rests on you. 15 Let none of you suffer as a murderer, a thief, an evildoer, or a meddler. † 16 But if anyone suffers as a Christian, let him not be ashamed but let him glorify God in having that name. † 17 For the time has come for judgment † to begin with God's household, † and if it begins with us, what will the outcome be for those who disobey the gospel of God?

18 And if a righteous person is saved with difficulty, what will become of the ungodly and the sinner? † †

19 So then, let those who suffer according to God's will entrust themselves † to a faithful Creator while doing what is good.

4:3-4 This is a list of common sins from the Greco-Roman world. As modern culture increasingly pursues these things, believers must remember that they are nothing new for the church. We cannot accommodate such behavior any more that the first century Christians did. Believers must be prepared to be slandered for not living like the world around them.

4:6 This verse refers to Christians who heard and believed the gospel and have since died. They were judged . . . according to human standards during this life, meaning they were criticized and mocked, but they live in the Spirit.

4:9 Hospitality means providing food and accommodation to traveling Christians. Inns in the ancient world were often not safe, and were morally compromised, so believers depended on the hospitality of others.

4:12-14 In contrast to those who teach that faithful Christians will not suffer in this life, Peter warns believers not to be surprised when suffering comes. In fact, when believers are ridiculed for the name of Christ, we are blessed.

4:17 The judgment of God's household refers to the current suffering believers are undergoing (4:16). Jews believed God would judge his children: "For the Lord first judges Israel for the wrong she has committed and then he shall do the same for all the nation" (T. Benj. 100:8–9).

ABOUT THE ELDERS

5 I exhort the elders among you as a fellow elder and witness † to the sufferings of Christ, as well as one who shares in the glory about to be revealed: † 2 Shepherd God's flock among you, † not overseeing † out of compulsion but willingly, as God would have you; † not out of greed for money but eagerly; 3 not lording it over those entrusted to you, but being examples to the flock. 4 And when the chief Shepherd † appears, you will receive the unfading crown † of glory. 5 In the same way, you who are younger, be subject to the elders. All of you clothe yourselves with † humility toward one another, because

God resists the proud but gives grace to the humble. † †

CONCLUSION

6 Humble † yourselves, therefore, under the mighty hand † of God, so that he may exalt you at the proper time, 7 casting all your cares on him, because he cares about you. † 8 Be sober-minded, † be alert. † Your adversary the devil † is prowling around like a roaring lion, looking for anyone he can devour. 9 Resist him, † firm in the faith, knowing that the same kind of sufferings are being experienced by your fellow believers throughout the world.

10 The God of all grace, who called you to his eternal glory † in Christ, † will himself restore, establish, strengthen, and support you after you have suffered a little while. † 11 To him be dominion † forever. † Amen.

12 Through Silvanus, † † a faithful brother (as I consider him), I have written to you briefly in order to encourage you and to testify that this is the true grace of God. Stand firm in it! 13 She who is in Babylon, † chosen together with you, sends you greetings, as does Mark, my son. 14 Greet one another with a kiss of love. † Peace † to all of you who are in Christ. †

5:1-4 Elders are to shepherd and watch over God's flock, the church, caring for it and being examples. While having significant authority, they are not to lord this over the people and are to serve willingly. The chief Shepherd himself, Jesus Christ, will reward elders for this. While crowns awarded to athletes were made of leaves, and so would fade and perish, elders will receive the unfading crown of glory. See also "Leadership and Biblical Ethics," p. 1501.

5:8-9 Throughout the Bible the devil is taken seriously as a real being who seeks the harm of God's people. While some today discount the existence of a spiritual realm, others treat the devil as if he were equal to God. Believers should recognize the seriousness of evil in the spiritual realm while remembering that God has triumphed over it in Christ. Though the devil is a serious threat to believers (a roaring lion), he can be resisted. See "Spiritual Warfare," p. 1454; "Satan and Demons," p. 1611.

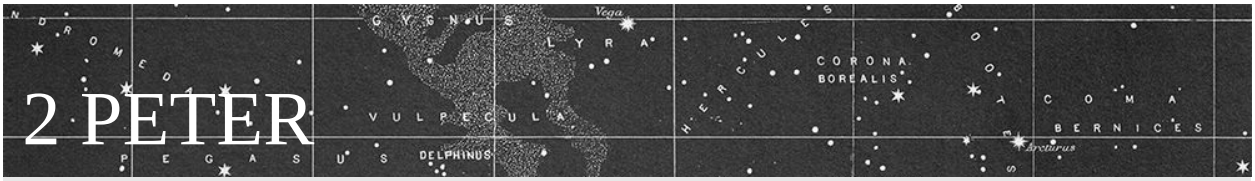
5:13 Babylon refers to Rome (Rv 17:5,9). The former represents a kingdom set against God and his people (cp. the book of Daniel), as was Rome in the first century.



2 PETER

INTRODUCTION

Second Peter, one of the General Letters, emphasizes practical Christian living. Peter wrote to warn against false teachers and the negative influence they can have on moral living.

CIRCUMSTANCES OF WRITING

AUTHOR: The author of 2 Peter plainly identified himself as the apostle Peter (1:1). He called himself "Simeon Peter" (1:1), a name not generally used of the apostle (elsewhere only in Ac 15:14). The spelling is Semitic and lends a sense of authenticity to Peter's letter. Peter designated himself as "a servant and an apostle of Jesus Christ." He viewed himself as a servant submitted to Christ's lordship and as a divinely ordained, directly commissioned, authoritative representative of the Lord Jesus himself.

The letter contains several personal allusions to Peter's life. He mentioned that his death was close (1:14), described himself as an eyewitness of the transfiguration of Jesus (1:16-18), quoted the words of the voice from heaven at this event (1:17), indicated that he had previously written to the letter's recipients (whom he called "dear friends" in 3:1), and also called Paul "our dear brother" (3:15). Such references point to Peter as the author.

Many scholars reject Peter as the author of this letter. They argue that (1) the personal references to Peter's life are a literary device used by someone who wrote under the apostle's name in order to create the appearance of authenticity; (2) the style of Greek in 2 Peter is different from that of 1 Peter; (3) the reference to Paul's letters as a collection (3:15-16) points to a date later than Peter's lifetime; and (4) 2 Peter was dependent upon Jude. If this is true, Peter's authorship is problematic.

In response to these objections, one should consider that (1) the early church soundly rejected the practice of writing under an apostolic pseudonym, regarding it as outright forgery; (2) Peter may have had help in writing 1 Peter (1Pt 5:12) and not in writing 2 Peter, which would lead to different styles in his Greek; (3) rather than the whole collection, Peter may have referred only to those Pauline letters that were known at the time of writing; and (4) Peter may have borrowed some from Jude, or both may have used a common source. All of these evidences suggest that 2 Peter should be accepted as authentic.

BACKGROUND: Unlike 1 Peter, 2 Peter does not mention specific recipients or refer to an exact destination. The apostle referred to his epistle as the "second letter" he had written to his readers (3:1). If the letter written prior to 2 Peter is 1 Peter, then he wrote to the same recipients ("exiles dispersed abroad in Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia"; 1Pt 1:1). But if the previous letter is a reference to some other epistle that is now unknown, we cannot determine with certainty to whom or to where 2 Peter was written.

Peter likely wrote 2 Peter from Rome, where church tradition placed the apostle in his latter days. Because he mentioned that his death was near (1:14), it seems the letter was written just before his death. Tradition places the date of Peter's martyrdom at about AD 67 during Nero's reign (ruled AD 54–68).

Second Peter's literary relationship with Jude is debated. What one decides about this issue inevitably affects the authorship and date of each letter. Both epistles are strikingly similar in content. Thus, if 2 Peter borrowed from Jude and the latter book was written somewhere between AD 65 and 80, the apostle Peter could not have been the author of 2 Peter. The use of 2 Peter by Jude, however, poses no problem for authorship or dating. Jude may have borrowed from 2 Peter, or both authors may have used a common source.

Peter wrote this letter to Christian friends confronted with the threat of false teachers who were denying Christ's saving work and second coming. As an eyewitness of Jesus's life (1:16-18), Peter sought to affirm for his readers the reality of Christ's return and to remind them of truths they might otherwise forget (3:1).

CONTRIBUTION TO THE BIBLE

Peter made strong connections with the OT and challenged his audience to live authentic Christian lives. Peter had been with Jesus when Jesus first spoke of his return (Mt 24–25), and he gave emphasis to the surety of the Second Coming.

It is the word of God that holds the forefront of this short letter. Peter does this in chapter 1 by emphasizing knowledge (vv. 3,5-6,8,12,20-21) and its divine origin; in chapter 2 by showing its historicity (v v. 4-8); and in chapter 3 by indicating Paul's letters are equal with "the rest of the Scriptures" (vv. 15-16).

STRUCTURE

Second Peter features of salutation, main body, and farewell. What is missing is an expression of thanksgiving. Its style is that of a pastoral letter, driven by the needs of the recipients, rather than some type of formal treatise.

CHRISTIAN WORLDVIEW ELEMENTS

TEACHINGS ABOUT GOD

God is the Father of Jesus, and he glorified his Son (1:17). God is the judge of all beings, human and superhuman (2:4). This is the only Bible book that uses the full title of "Lord and Savior Jesus Christ" (2:20; 3:18), a magnificent confession by one who knew him face to face during his earthly life. The single reference to the Holy Spirit mentions his role in the inspiration of Scripture (1:21).

TEACHINGS ABOUT HUMANITY

Second Peter shows the great evil of those who are enslaved by error and sin: "like irrational animals—creatures of instinct born to be caught and destroyed—slander what they do not understand, and in their destruction they too will be destroyed" (2:12). On the other hand, redeemed humanity can grow in every virtue (1:5-8).

TEACHINGS ABOUT SALVATION

This book provides an important definition of heresy as "denying the Master who bought them" (2:1). A heresy is a serious error about the person or work of Christ, in particular a denial that his death involved the purchase of salvation. There is little that the letter develops about Christ's work, but God's people are described as those "who have received a faith equal" to the apostle's (1:1). The future dimension of salvation will be revealed on "the day of the Lord" and the coming of "new heavens and a new earth, where righteousness dwells" (3:10,13).

GREETING

1 Simeon † Peter, † a servant and an apostle † of Jesus Christ: To those who have received a faith equal to ours through the righteousness † of our God and Savior † Jesus Christ.

2 May grace and peace be multiplied to you through the knowledge of God † and of Jesus our Lord.

GROWTH IN THE FAITH

3 His † divine power † has given us everything required for life and godliness through the knowledge † of him who called † us by † his own glory and goodness. 4 By these he has given us very great and precious promises, † so that through them you may share in the divine nature, † escaping the corruption that is in the world because of evil desire. 5 For this very reason, make every effort to supplement your faith with goodness, goodness with knowledge, 6 knowledge with self-control, † self-control with endurance, endurance with godliness, 7 godliness with brotherly affection, † and brotherly affection with love. 8 For if you possess these qualities in increasing measure, they will keep you from being useless † or unfruitful † in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. 9 The person who lacks these things is blind and shortsighted and has forgotten the cleansing from his past sins. 10 Therefore, brothers and sisters, make every effort to confirm your calling and election, † because if you do these things you will never stumble. 11 For in this way, entry into the eternal kingdom † of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ will be richly provided for you.
12 Therefore I will always remind you about these things, even though you know them and are established in the truth † you now have. 13 I think it is right, as long as I am in this bodily tent, † to wake you up with a reminder, 14 since I know that I will soon lay aside my tent, as our Lord Jesus Christ has indeed made clear to me. † 15 And I will also make every effort so that you are able to recall these things at any time after my departure. †

THE TRUSTWORTHY PROPHETIC WORD

16 For we did not follow cleverly contrived myths when we made known to you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ; † instead, we were eyewitnesses of his majesty. † 17 For he received honor and glory from God the Father when the voice came to him from the Majestic Glory, saying “This is my beloved Son, † with whom I am well-pleased! ” † 18 We ourselves heard this voice when it came from heaven while we were with him on the holy mountain. † 19 We also have the prophetic word strongly confirmed, and you will do well to pay attention to it, as to a lamp shining in a dark place, † until the day dawns † and the morning star † rises in your hearts. 20 Above all, you know this: No prophecy of Scripture comes from the prophet's own interpretation, 21 because no prophecy ever came by the will of man; † instead, men spoke from God as they were carried along by the Holy Spirit. †

1:3 Believers have all we need for life and godliness in Christ. The resources are available, coming through the knowledge of God.

1:4 Peter borrows language from the pantheistic, mystical ideas of his day. Some religions then, and now, speak of being absorbed into a god or even becoming a god. For Peter, however, sharing in the divine nature refers to union with Christ, and being indwelt by the Holy Spirit, and therefore growing in holiness (see the list of virtues in the following verses).

1:9 Forgetting that we have been forgiven is particularly destructive for Christians. Dwelling on the reality of our forgiveness in Christ is fundamental to Christian growth and perseverance.

1:10 Peter balances the election, or choosing, of God with human responsibility. To confirm your calling and election means that believers' lives will demonstrate the reality of belonging to God.

1:13 Peter refers to his physical body as a tent because it's a temporary dwelling for his soul or spirit (cp. 2Co 5:1,4). But this tent will be replaced by a house—a permanent, immortal body (1Co 15:35-46).

1:16 Myths were invented stories used by Greeks to teach religious "truths." The Christian faith does not rest on contrived stories; it is rooted in historical events for which there were ample eyewitnesses.

1:17-18 As an eyewitness of Christ's majesty (1:16), Peter recalls the transfiguration event that he witnessed (Mt 17:1-13; Lk 9:28-36). On a mountain, Jesus appeared in glorious light, talking with Moses and Elijah. From heaven, the Father's voice declared Jesus to be his beloved Son.

1:19 The ancients saw Venus as the morning star since it often appears just before daybreak. In a similar way, the coming of Christ is the harbinger of the new day. Peter might also be alluding to the star language in Numbers 24:17, which, in some Dead Sea Scrolls, was seen as a messianic text.

1:20-21 Scripture is not based on human ideas or interpretation but is the very Word of God. Men wrote it down in their own languages and styles, but God superintended the process. He directed them, so that they accurately communicated God's truths (1Pt 1:10-12). See "Biblical Authority," p. 709.

THE JUDGMENT OF FALSE TEACHERS

2 There were indeed false prophets † among the people, just as there will be false teachers † among you. They will bring in destructive heresies, even denying the Master who bought † them, and will bring swift destruction on themselves.

THE APOCALYPTIC AND THE ENVIRONMENT

Widely quoted is this quip, often attributed to J. Vernon McGee: “You don’t polish the brass on a sinking ship.” This statement succinctly summarizes the view that since in the final judgment the earth will be consumed by fire, to support conservation and environmental causes is to oppose the will of God. According to this view, Christians should devote their attention to preaching the gospel and avoid working to care for the creation.

D. L. Moody famously said, I have felt like working three times as hard ever since I came to understand that my Lord was coming back again. I look on this world as a wrecked vessel. God has given me a life-boat, and said to me, ‘Moody, save all you can.’ God will come in judgment and burn up this world, but the children of God don’t belong to this world; they are in it, but not of it, like a ship in the water. The world is getting darker and darker; its ruin is coming nearer and nearer. If you have any friends on this wreck unsaved, you had better lose no time in getting them off. (New Sermons, Addresses, and Prayers [New York: Henry S. Goodspeed, 1877], 535) Several key convictions characterize this apocalyptic worldview, for which its advocates believe they have biblical support. First, the world is declining, going from bad to worse (cp. 2Tm 3:1-5). Second, this age ends with destruction by fire (2Pt 3:7,12). When that judgment comes, the earth will be annihilated and replaced by “a new earth” (Rv 21:1). Third, the gospel is the promise of escape from the world, either through death or by deliverance from the earth before final judgment is unleashed on it (Jn 14:1-4). Finally, to care for this world would be to pour one’s efforts into a lost cause, into caring for a world that will soon pass away. It would be much better to spend limited time and resources storing up treasures in heaven (Mt 6:19-21).

WILL GOD DESTROY THE WORLD?

But are such antienvironmental attitudes really biblical? When God sent judgment on the earth in the flood (Gn 6–8), he destroyed all living creatures except those who were in the ark with Noah—and the aquatic life that survived the onslaught in the waters. When the flood receded, Noah and the rest of the inhabitants of the ark resettled the earth. Then God made a covenant with all living things in which he promised never again to destroy all life with a flood: “I establish my covenant with you that never again will every creature be wiped out by floodwaters; there will never again be a flood to destroy the earth” (Gn 9:11). Those who believe in a coming apocalyptic conflagration understand this as a promise that God will never again destroy the earth in a flood but believe that he will destroy it—completely—by fire.

Yet, when he continues, God describes the rainbow as “the sign of the covenant I am making between me and you and every living creature with you, a covenant for all future generations. . . . I will remember my covenant between me and you and all the living creatures: water will never again become a flood to destroy every living creature” (Gn 9:12,15). This everlasting covenant implies that God has promised the earth that she will endure, that the earth will not be destroyed totally in the future. Further, since the flood did not annihilate the earth—for after the flood the earth remained—the fire of the eschatological judgment need not consume the earth entirely.

The apostle Peter responds to scoffers who reject the promise of the Lord's return, rebuking them for their willful ignorance of the doctrine of creation and the judgment in the flood: "By the word of God the heavens came into being long ago and the earth was brought about from water and through water. Through these the world of that time perished when it was flooded. By the same word, the present heavens and earth are stored up for fire, being kept for the day of judgment and destruction of the ungodly" (2Pt 3:5-7).

Since the earth itself did not perish in the flood, the comparison might be that the future judgment by fire will destroy wicked people and the effects of the curse, not the earth itself. Peter is comparing the destruction of the earth in the flood to the destruction of ungodly men in the final judgment. In both cases, the earth is the locus of the judgment, not its focus. The wicked inhabitants of the earth are destroyed, not the whole planet itself.

Peter uses apocalyptic language to describe this day of judgment: "The heavens will pass away with a loud noise, the elements will burn and be dissolved, and the earth and the works on it will be disclosed" (2Pt 3:10). But rather than destroying the earth, the fire will be purifying and revelatory. It results in the works of humans being disclosed or made visible, not in the annihilation of the planet. Later, he says that "the heavens will be dissolved with fire and the elements will melt with heat" (3:12). The fire of judgment will be destructive, but that does not mean that the earth will be annihilated.

THE NEW EARTH

When the apostle John sees the heavenly city come down to earth at the end of the age, he exclaims that "the first heaven and the first earth had passed away" (Rv 21:1). This might mean that the earth will cease to exist and will be replaced by another. But, as Richard Bauckham explains, the terms "first" and "new" indicate the "qualitatively quite different life of the eternal age to come. The discontinuity is parallel, on a cosmic scale, to the discontinuity, in the case of human persons, between this moral life and the eschatologically new life of resurrection" (New Testament Theology: The Theology of the Book of Revelation, 49).

In short, in the same way that there is continuity between the human body that is buried in the ground and the body that is raised in the day of resurrection, there will be continuity between the first earth and the redeemed or recreated one. When Thomas saw the risen Lord, he recognized him (Jn 20:27-29); there was continuity between the body that died and the one that was raised. And so believers look forward to the resurrection of their bodies (1Co 15:51-57).

HOPE FOR CREATION

Finally, it is difficult to reconcile annihilation of the earth with Paul's personification of creation's hope. He writes, "Creation eagerly waits with anticipation . . . in the hope that the creation itself will also be set free from the bondage to decay into the glorious freedom of God's children" (Rm 8:19-21). Annihilation could hardly be expressed as the hope of liberation. In short, the recreation of heaven and earth fits this language better than annihilation, and it fits better with the pattern of God's redemptive work. When God redeems, he does not destroy but regenerates and recreates.

But even if the earth will be annihilated, that still does not mean that Christians should oppose environmental and conservationist efforts. Preaching the gospel is not antithetical to care of the creation. In the first place, stewardship of creation is a divine mandate that was not revoked (Gn 1:26-28; 2:5,7). In the second, since no one knows when the Lord will return (Mt 24:36-41), it makes sense to act in the knowledge that providing clean water and air preserves and extends human life. And third, since no one knows when his life will end, everyone has a vested interest in caring for the environment. In a similar way that exercise is profitable for the body, saving for retirement is wise, and caring for our earthly possessions is good stewardship, caring for the environment is wise.

GLENN R. KREIDER

2 Many will follow their depraved ways, and the way of truth will be maligned because of them. † 3 They will exploit † you in their greed † with made-up stories. Their condemnation, † pronounced long ago, is not idle, and their destruction does not sleep.

4 For if God didn't spare † the angels who sinned but cast them into hell † † and delivered them in chains † of utter darkness to be kept for judgment; † 5 and if he didn't spare the ancient world, but protected Noah, † a preacher of righteousness, and seven others, † † when he brought the flood on the world of the ungodly; 6 and if he reduced the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah † to ashes and condemned them to extinction, † making them an example of what is coming to the ungodly; † † 7 and if he rescued righteous Lot, † distressed by the depraved behavior of the immoral 8 (for as that righteous man lived among them day by day, his righteous soul was tormented by the lawless deeds he saw and heard †) — 9 then the Lord knows how to rescue † the godly from trials and to keep the unrighteous under punishment for the day of judgment, † 10 especially those who follow the polluting desires of the flesh and despise authority. †

Bold, arrogant people! They are not afraid to slander the glorious ones; 11 however, angels, who are greater in might and power, do not bring a slanderous charge against them before the Lord. † 12 But these people, like irrational animals — creatures of instinct born to be caught and destroyed — slander what they do not understand, and in their destruction they too will be destroyed. 13 They will be paid back with harm for the harm they have done. They consider it a pleasure to carouse in broad daylight. They are spots and blemishes, delighting in their deceptions † while they feast with you. 14 They have eyes full of adultery † that never stop looking for sin. They seduce unstable people and have hearts trained in greed. Children under a curse! † 15 They have gone astray by abandoning the straight path † and have followed the path of Balaam, † the son of Bosor, † who loved the wages of wickedness † 16 but received a rebuke for his lawlessness: A speechless donkey spoke with a human voice and restrained the prophet's madness. †

17 These people are springs without water, mists driven by a storm. The gloom of darkness has been reserved for them. † 18 For by uttering boastful, empty words, † they seduce, with fleshly desires and debauchery, people who have barely escaped † from those who live in error. 19 They promise them freedom, but they themselves are slaves of corruption, since people are enslaved to whatever defeats them. † 20 For if, having escaped the world's impurity through the knowledge of the Lord † and Savior Jesus Christ, † they are again entangled in these things and defeated, the last state is worse for them than the first. † 21 For it would have been better for them not to have known the way of righteousness † than, after knowing it, to turn back from the holy command † delivered † to them. † 22 It has happened to them according to the true proverb:

2:1-3 Throughout the NT, there is an inherent connection between false teaching and ungodly living (2Tm 3:1-9).

2:4 The angels here are most likely the "sons of God" referred to in Genesis 6:1-4 (see "A Biblical View of Angels," p. 1531). Hell translates a word, Tartarus, that Jewish writers had begun using to communicate a place for punishment of sin. It was a temporary holding place, not the place of final judgment. Thus, Peter says they are held here for judgment. The angels being in chains is another way of describing the spirits in prison in 1 Peter 3:19.

2:5 Noah is not called a preacher in the OT, but Jewish traditions regarded him so.

2:11 In the Jewish text of 1 Enoch (chap. 9), good angels do not directly intervene when humans are harmed by evil angels. Instead they present the matter to the Lord. So here, they do not bring a slanderous charge against false teachers.

2:15-16 Balaam (Nm 22–24) is a prophet who agrees to take money in order to curse God's people. Although God prevents Balaam from doing this, the man became an example of corruption and greed.

2:19 People are enslaved by whatever defeats them refers to the enslaving power of sin. Whatever fleshly desires (2:18) are indulged, in the end those desires become the masters of people indulging in them.

2:20 Peter may be alluding to Jesus's story about an evil spirit in Matthew 12:43-45.

THE DAY OF THE LORD

3 Dear friends, this is now the second letter † I have written to you; in both letters, I want to stir up your sincere † understanding by way of reminder, 2 so that you recall the words previously spoken by the holy prophets and the command of our Lord and Savior given through your apostles.
3 Above all, be aware of this: Scoffers will come in the last days † scoffing and following their own evil desires, 4 saying, "Where is his 'coming' that he promised? † Ever since our ancestors fell asleep, † all things continue as they have been since the beginning of creation." 5 They deliberately overlook this: By the word of God † the heavens came into being long ago and the earth was brought about from water and through water. † 6 Through these the world of that time perished when it was flooded. † 7 By the same word, † the present heavens and earth are stored up for fire, being kept for the day of judgment † and destruction of the ungodly.
8 Dear friends, don't overlook this one fact: With the Lord one day is like a thousand years, and a thousand years like one day. † 9 The Lord does not delay his promise, † as some understand delay, but is patient with you, not wanting any † to perish † but all to come to repentance. †
10 But the day of the Lord † will come like a thief; † † on that day the heavens will pass away † with a loud noise, the elements will burn and be dissolved, † and the earth and the works on it will be disclosed. † † 11 Since all these things are to be dissolved in this way, it is clear what sort of people you should be in holy conduct and godliness 12 as you wait for the day of God and hasten its coming. † † Because of that day, the heavens will be dissolved with fire and the elements will melt with heat. 13 But based on his promise, we wait for new heavens and a new earth, † where righteousness dwells. †

14 Therefore, dear friends, while you wait for these things, make every effort to be found without spot or blemish in his sight, at peace. † 15 Also, regard the patience of our Lord as salvation, just as our dear brother Paul has written to you according to the wisdom given to him. † 16 He speaks about these things in all his letters. There are some matters that are hard to understand. The untaught and unstable will twist them to their own destruction, † as they also do with the rest of the Scriptures.

17 Therefore, dear friends, since you know this in advance, be on your guard, † so that you are not led away by the error of lawless people and fall from your own stable position. 18 But grow in the grace and knowledge † of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. To him be the glory both now and to the day of eternity. † †

3:2 Peter puts in parallel the OT (the holy prophets) and the beginnings of the NT (the command of Jesus through the apostles). Peter reminds his readers of both of these sources of authoritative teaching, laying the groundwork for our understanding both testaments as Scripture.

3:5 The reference to water as an agent of creation recalls Genesis 1:2 in which the Spirit was hovering above the waters. God separated the waters to form the heavens and the earth; he gathered the waters to form dry land (Gn 1:6-10).

3:8 Peter is not giving an equation for biblical time, in which one substitutes a thousand years anytime he sees one day mentioned in a prophecy. Rather, he is alluding to Psalm 90:4, which says that since God is eternal, the duration of time is different for him than it is for humans.

3:9 The long wait for Christ's return should not cause us to doubt that he will come. Rather, it should be seen as evidence of God's desire to give time for people to repent. This is in keeping with Jewish apocalyptic tradition, which viewed God as delaying his judgment for the sake of mercy.

3:10 Peter draws on Jesus's teaching that he will come like a thief in the night (Mt 24:42-43; 1Th 5:2). The descriptions of what will happen on that day are apocalyptic in tone, indicating the grave seriousness of the day of the Lord.

3:12 The elements melting with heat recalls OT language depicting the cosmic disasters that will accompany the day of the Lord (Mc 1:3-4; Is 63:19–64:1).

3:13 The expectation of new heavens and a new earth is grounded on Isaiah 65–66, which envisages a recreation and renewal of the universe.

3:16 Peter includes the letters of Paul in the category of the Scriptures, demonstrating that the apostolic writings were seen as Scripture even in the days of the apostles. See also “Biblical Inspiration and Inerrancy,” p. XXXI.

1 JOHN

INTRODUCTION

John's first letter addresses a setting in which some people in the local church had departed the fellowship (2:19), apparently because their doctrine, ethics, devotion, or some combination of these conflicted with those of the church. John wrote in part to stabilize the situation. He reaffirmed and enlarged on key theological truths, particularly the doctrine of Christ. He extolled love and emphasized the necessity for belief to be matched by action. A personal relationship with Christ is the foundation of the Christian life, and out from this grows obedience to divine commands. True faith, proactive ethics, fervent love for God and people—most of the epistle revolves around one or more of these three emphases as the author instructed, admonished, and encouraged his readers.

CIRCUMSTANCES OF WRITING

AUTHOR: Ancient manuscripts are unanimous in naming "John" as the author of 1 John. This was understood to be John the son of Zebedee, the "beloved disciple" who was also the author of the Fourth Gospel. The style and vocabulary of 1, 2, and 3 John are so close to that of John's Gospel that they beg to be understood as arising from the same person. Some contemporary scholars theorize that an "elder John" (see 2Jn 1; 3Jn 1), not the apostle, may have written the letters. Others speak of a "Johannine school" or "circle" as the originators of the epistles of John (and perhaps Revelation too). But the view with the best support is that Jesus's disciple John was the author.

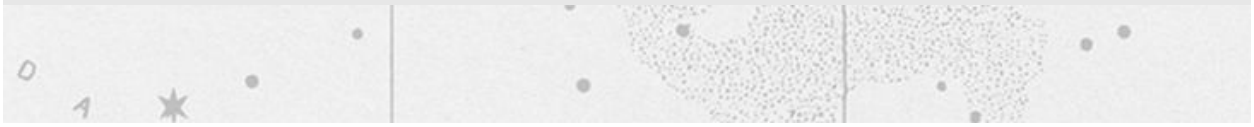
BACKGROUND: Second-century sources reported that around AD 70, the year the Romans destroyed Jerusalem and the temple, John left Jerusalem where he was a church leader and relocated to Ephesus. He continued his pastoral work in that region and lived until nearly AD 100. Ephesus is probably the place where John wrote the three NT letters that bear his name. They could have been composed at any time in the last quarter of the first century.

CONTRIBUTION TO THE BIBLE

First John maps out the three main components of saving knowledge of God: (1) faith in Jesus Christ, (2) obedient response to God's commands, and (3) love for God and others from the heart. This epistle shows how Jesus expects his followers to honor him in practical church life and wherever God calls his people to go and serve.

STRUCTURE

It is widely agreed that 1 John does not logically, methodically, or rigorously set forth and develop its arguments. For this reason scholars are divided on the best way to structurally outline the letter. It is the least letter-like of the three Johannine letters because of its lack of identification of the sender and the recipient. It is more like an unsystematic treatise. It often makes assertions along thematic lines, moves to related or contrasting themes, and then returns to the earlier topic, or perhaps takes up a different subject altogether.



CHRISTIAN WORLDVIEW ELEMENTS

TEACHINGS ABOUT GOD

God is seen especially in his relationship to Jesus Christ. Thus he is "the Father." Jesus Christ is, in perfect complement, "his Son" (1:3). He is as well "the Christ" (Messiah) (2:22) who came "in the flesh" (4:2-3). The Holy Spirit has been given to believers (3:24; 4:13), and he enables believers to recognize and reject every false spirit (4:1-6).

TEACHINGS ABOUT HUMANITY

First John recognizes only two categories of human beings: those who believe in Jesus Christ and all others (who belong to the spirit of the antichrist). Believers confess their sins, but their lives are not characterized by sin (1:7-9; 5:16-18). They live in fellowship with God and with one another. Those who continue to live in sin are giving evidence that they have never known God (3:6).

TEACHINGS ABOUT SALVATION

One of the great texts about salvation is 1 John 2:2: "He himself is the atoning sacrifice for our sins, and not only for ours, but also for those of the whole world." The term "propitiation" (KJV) or "atoning sacrifice" refers to removal of divine wrath because of sin, as also in Romans 3:25. Christ's death propitiated God's wrath not only for "our sins," referring to the people to whom John was writing, but also for persons from all ethnic, economic, and social groups (Gl 3:28; Rv 7:9-10). The benefits of Christ's death come only to those who believe (5:13).

1 JOHN TIMELINE

AD 4–33

John the apostle, son of Zebedee and Salome is born. 8?

John and his brother James are part of their father's fishing business in Capernaum, on the Sea of Galilee. 25

Jesus calls James and John to be two of his twelve disciples. 29

AD 33–44

Peter, James, and John witness Jesus's transfiguration. 32

John and Peter are asked to prepare the Passover meal Jesus shares with his disciples. 33

Peter, James, and John are with Jesus as he prays in Gethsemane. 33

As he dies, Jesus gives the care of his mother, Mary, to John. 33

John may be the first of the twelve disciples to believe that Jesus rose from death. 33

Following Pentecost, John and Peter show great courage in Jerusalem by bearing witness to Jesus's acts. 33

John's brother, James, is the first of the twelve disciples to die a martyr's death. 44

AD 45–65

John is among the pillars of the Jerusalem church who meet with Paul, Barnabas, and Titus in Jerusalem to deal with the question of whether Gentiles had to be circumcised to become Christians. 49

Paul travels through Ephesus toward the end of his second missionary journey. 52

Apollos comes to Ephesus and is mentored by Aquila and Priscilla. 52

Paul returns to Ephesus for a 2 ½ year ministry. 54

Timothy, elder of Ephesus, receives the first letter from Paul. 62

AD 60–LATE SECOND CENTURY

The Jewish War is started by zealots who drive the Romans out of Jerusalem temporarily. 66

John leaves Jerusalem for Ephesus. 66–70?

The Romans crush the Jewish rebellion and destroy Jerusalem and the temple. 70

John is spiritual leader of the church at Ephesus. 70–100

Irenaeus (140–202) affirms that the body of John's writings were composed in Ephesus.

PROLOGUE: OUR DECLARATION

1 What was from the beginning, † what we have heard, what we have seen with our eyes, what we have observed and have touched with our hands, concerning the word † of life — 2 that life was revealed, † and we have seen it and we testify and declare to you the eternal life that was with the Father and was revealed to us † — 3 what we have seen and heard we also declare to you, so that you may also have fellowship † with us; and indeed our fellowship is with the Father † and with his Son Jesus Christ. 4 We are writing these things † so that our † joy † may be complete.

FELLOWSHIP WITH GOD

5 This is the message we have heard from him and declare to you: God is light, † and there is absolutely no darkness in him. † 6 If we say, "We have fellowship † with him," and yet we walk in darkness, † we are lying and are not practicing the truth. † 7 If we walk in the light † as he himself is in the light, we have fellowship with one another, and the blood of Jesus † his Son cleanses us from all sin. 8 If we say, "We have no sin," † we are deceiving ourselves, and the truth is not in us. 9 If we confess our sins, he is faithful and righteous to forgive † us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness. 10 If we say, "We have not sinned," we make him a liar, and his word † is not in us. †

1:1-3 John stresses the historical reality of Jesus and the veracity of his report. In the ancient world, it was common for religious stories to be invented for the sake of instruction. The teaching about Jesus is radically different from such stories. Having seen with our eyes, observed, and touched refers to the historical reality of the incarnation and bodily resurrection of Jesus. See also "Hinduism," p. 1408.

1:1 This verse recalls John 1:1 and, with its reference to the beginning, alludes to Genesis 1:1. As in John 1:1, the subject is ambiguous until it is revealed that Jesus is the One being spoken of (1:3).

1:5-7 Light represents purity and holiness while darkness represents sin. The images of light and darkness are drawn from OT passages such as Micah 7:8 and Isaiah 5:20.

1:8,10 A basic biblical truth is that all have sinned (cp. Rm 3:23). If we ignore or hide our struggle with sin, we cannot be spiritually healthy and cannot find forgiveness.

1:9 Rather than hiding sin, believers ought to confess their sins. God's faithfulness guarantees forgiveness and cleansing.

2 My little children, I am writing you these things so that you may not sin. But if anyone does sin, we have an advocate † with the Father — Jesus Christ the righteous one. 2 He himself is the atoning sacrifice † † for our sins, and not only for ours, but also for those of the whole world. †

GOD'S COMMANDS

3 This is how we know † that we know him: if we keep his commands. † 4 The one who says, "I have come to know him," and yet doesn't keep his commands, is a liar, and the truth is not in him. 5 But whoever keeps his word, † truly in him the love of God is made complete. This is how we know we are in him: † 6 The one who says he remains in him † should walk just as he walked.

7 Dear friends, I am not writing you a new command † but an old command that you have had from the beginning. The old command is the word † you have heard. 8 Yet I am writing you a new command, which is true in him and in you, because the darkness is passing away † and the true light † is already shining. † 9 The one who says he is in the light but hates his brother or sister † is in the darkness until now. 10 The one who loves his brother or sister † remains in the light, and there is no cause for stumbling in him. † 11 But the one who hates his brother or sister † is in the darkness, walks in the darkness, † and doesn't know where he's going, † because the darkness has blinded his eyes.

REASONS FOR WRITING

12 I am writing to you, little children, since your sins have been forgiven on account of his name. †

13 I am writing to you, fathers, because you have come to know the one who is from the beginning. †
I am writing to you, young men, because you have conquered the evil one. †

14 I have written to you, children, because you have come to know the Father.
I have written to you, fathers, because you have come to know
the one who is from the beginning.
I have written to you, young men, because you are strong,
God's word † remains in you, and you have conquered the evil one.

A WARNING ABOUT THE WORLD

15 Do not love the world † or the things in the world. If anyone loves the world, the love of the Father is not in him. 16 For everything in the world — the lust of the flesh, † the lust of the eyes, † and the pride † in one's possessions — is not from the Father, but is from the world. 17 And the world with its lust is passing away, † but the one who does the will of God † remains forever. †

THE LAST HOUR

18 Children, it is the last hour. † And as you have heard that antichrist † is coming, even now many antichrists have come. By this we know that it is the last hour. 19 They went out from us, but they did not belong to us; for if they had belonged to us, they would have remained with us. However, they went out so that it might be made clear that none of them belongs to us.

20 But you have an anointing † from the Holy One, † and all of you know the truth. † 21 I have not written to you because you don't know the truth, but because you do know it, and because no lie comes from the truth. 22 Who is the liar, if not the one who denies that Jesus is the Christ? † This one is the antichrist: the one who denies the Father and the Son. 23 No one who denies the Son has the Father; † he who confesses the Son has the Father as well. †

REMAINING WITH GOD

24 What you have heard from the beginning is to remain in you. If what you have heard from the beginning remains in you, then you will remain in the Son † and in the Father. † 25 And this is the promise that he himself made to us: eternal life. †

26 I have written these things to you concerning those who are trying to deceive you. 27 As for you, the anointing you received from him remains in you, and you don't need anyone to teach you. Instead, his anointing teaches you about all things † and is true and is not a lie; just as it has taught you, † remain in him. †

GOD'S CHILDREN

28 So now, little children, remain in him so that when he appears † we may have confidence and not be ashamed before him at his coming. † 29 If you know that he is righteous, you know this as well: Everyone who does what is right † has been born of him. †

2:2 The meaning of the word translated atoning sacrifice (Gk hilasmos) has been the subject of much debate. In some contexts it refers to the removal of sin (or expiation; cp. 1:9). In other contexts, it refers to the diversion of God's wrath away from the guilty party, which is most likely here (in keeping with Jesus's advocacy; 2:1). This atoning sacrifice is for those of the whole world. The meaning of this phrase is also debated, but it likely means that Jesus's sacrifice is sufficient to deal with the sins of all people—even if only some will accept its benefits. See also "Ethics of Global Missions," p. 1323.

2:7-8 The old command is the command to love one another (Jn 13:34), which is rooted in the OT law. Jesus summarized the law as love for God and love for neighbor (Mt 22:34-40). This command is also new because it takes on new significance through the life and work of Jesus.

2:9-11 The absence of love indicates that a believer does not ultimately belong to the light. Hate belongs to the darkness.

2:15-17 The world refers to humanity in opposition to Christ. Allegiance to human rebellion against God spells a lack of allegiance to the Father.

2:18 Throughout the NT, the last days or the last hour is viewed as already here. The death, burial, resurrection, and ascension of Christ has ushered in the end of the age, in which we glimpse the reality of the new age and await the coming of its fullness. The antichrist in this passage is not some future person, but people in the first century who opposed the orthodox teaching about Jesus (see 2:19,22).

2:20,27 Believers have received an anointing, the Holy Spirit, and knowledge of the truth. This does not mean they no longer need teaching, since John has written this letter to instruct them (2:21).

3 See what great love † the Father has given us that we should be called God's children — and we are! The reason the world does not know us is that it didn't know him. 2 Dear friends, we are God's children now, and what we will be has not yet been revealed. † We know that when he appears, † we will be like him † because we will see him as he is. † 3 And everyone who has this hope † in him purifies himself just as he is pure. † 4 Everyone who commits sin practices lawlessness; and sin is lawlessness.
5 You know that he was revealed so that he might take away sins, † † and there is no sin in him. † 6 Everyone who remains in him † does not sin; † † everyone who sins † has not seen him or known him.
7 Children, let no one deceive you. The one who does what is right is righteous, just as he is righteous. 8 The one who commits † sin is of the devil, for the devil has sinned from the beginning. The Son of God † was revealed † for this purpose: to destroy the devil's works. 9 Everyone who has been born of God † does not sin, † because his seed † remains in him; he is not able to sin, † because he has been born of God. 10 This is how God's children and the devil's children become obvious. Whoever does not do what is right is not of God, especially the one who does not love his brother or sister. †

LOVE IN ACTION

11 For this is the message you have heard from the beginning: We should love one another, 12 unlike Cain, † who was of the evil one † and murdered his brother. And why did he murder him? Because his deeds were evil, and his brother's were righteous.
13 Do not be surprised, brothers and sisters, if the world hates † you. 14 We know that we have passed from death to life because we love our brothers and sisters. The one who does not love remains in death. † 15 Everyone who hates his brother or sister † is a murderer, † and you know that no murderer has eternal life residing in him. 16 This is how we have come to know love: He laid down his life † for us. † We should also lay down our lives for our brothers and sisters. † 17 If anyone has this world's goods † and sees a fellow believer † in need † but withholds compassion † from him — how does God's love reside in him? † 18 Little children, let us not love in word or speech, but in action and in truth. †
19 This is how we will know that we belong to the truth † and will reassure our hearts before him 20 whenever our hearts condemn us; for God is greater than our hearts, and he knows all things. †
21 Dear friends, if our hearts don't condemn us, we have confidence before God 22 and receive whatever we ask from him because we keep his commands † and do what is pleasing in his sight. 23 Now this is his command: that we believe in the name † of his Son Jesus Christ, and love one another as he commanded us.
24 The one who keeps his commands remains in him, † and he in him. And the way we know that he remains in us † is from the Spirit † he has given us.

3:2 Dear friends is literally "beloved." Throughout his letters, John uses such terms of endearment toward his readers. This is in contrast to Stoics, and other teachers of the time, who desired to keep their distance from others, avoiding attachment to anyone that they might remain undisturbed.

3:6,8-9 John is not saying Christians will reach sinless perfection in this life. Otherwise, his comments in 1:8–2:2 would not make sense. Instead, he is speaking of turning away from the truth of Christ, as some in the community have recently done (2:19).

3:12 It is perhaps strange that the only OT figure mentioned in this letter is the murderer, Cain (Gn 4:1-16). But the reference is appropriate since the author is concerned with love for brothers and sisters in Christ. Cain murdered his brother, and is thus an appropriate negative example.

3:16 The ultimate example of love is Jesus's death for sinful humans (4:9-10; Rm 5:7-8; Eph 5:2). Believers are to show the same love for our brothers and sisters.

3:17 This comment recalls Jesus's parable of the Good Samaritan (Lk 10:25-37). The connection between the two passages is tightened by the word compassion (Lk 10:33).

3:20 That God is greater than our hearts offers reassurance to believers who suffer from a burden of guilt. Regardless of how one feels, God loves us. He already knows all things: he is fully aware of the depth of our sin, and loves us anyway.

THE SPIRIT OF TRUTH AND THE SPIRIT OF ERROR

4 Dear friends, do not believe every spirit, but test the spirits † to see if they are from God, because many false prophets have gone out into the world.
2 This is how you know the Spirit of God: Every spirit that confesses that Jesus Christ has come in the flesh † is from God, † 3 but every spirit that does not confess Jesus † is not from God. This is the spirit of the antichrist, † which you have heard is coming; even now it is already in the world.
4 You are from God, little children, and you have conquered them, because the one who is in you † is greater than the one who is in the world. † 5 They are from the world. † Therefore what they say is from the world, and the world listens to them. 6 We are from God. Anyone who knows God listens to us; † anyone who is not from God does not listen to us. This is how we know the Spirit of truth and the spirit of deception. †

KNOWING GOD THROUGH LOVE

7 Dear friends, let us love one another, because love is from God, and everyone who loves has been born of God † and knows God. 8 The one who does not love does not know God, because God is love. 9 God's love was revealed among us † in this way: God sent † his one and only Son † into the world so that we might live † through him. 10 Love consists in this: not that we loved God, but that he loved us † and sent his Son to be the atoning sacrifice † † for our sins. 11 Dear friends, if God loved us in this way, we also must love one another. † 12 No one has ever seen God. † If we love one another, God remains in † us and his love is made complete in us.

JEHOVAH'S WITNESSES

The Watchtower Bible and Tract Society, also known as the Jehovah's Witnesses, was founded in 1879 by Charles Taze Russell (1852–1916). More than 7.5 million active members attend Kingdom Halls, the Jehovah's Witnesses version of local churches. Today there are approximately twelve thousand such congregations scattered throughout 239 countries and territories.

Dedicated members meet three days a week. One evening is devoted to a public lecture on a subject of general interest, followed by a Bible study that uses The Watchtower magazine as its resource material. On another night the Witnesses assemble for the Theocratic Ministry School where they are trained to present Jehovah's Witnesses doctrine. This is followed by a service meeting in which they discuss their witnessing efforts in the neighborhood. The next gathering is set aside for a small group Bible study based on lessons published in Awake! magazine; such groups meet in homes or at a Kingdom Hall.

HISTORY OF THE MOVEMENT

The roots of the Jehovah's Witnesses can be traced to the burgeoning Adventist movement of the late 1800s, when a seventeen-year-old Charles Russell embraced the Adventist doctrines of soul sleep (a rejection of life after death) and annihilation (a rejection of eternal hell). Within a year he was teaching these same ideas to others in a community Bible class he started.

In 1876, Russell came under the influence of The Herald of the Morning, an Adventist magazine published in Rochester, NY, and edited by the controversial Nelson Barbour, who two years earlier had incorrectly predicted Christ's return to earth. To justify his failed prophecy, Barbour claimed that Christ had indeed returned, but he did so invisibly. The Herald soon found itself on the verge of bankruptcy. Russell, a budding businessman, came to the rescue, infusing the magazine with needed funds in exchange for the position of assistant editor.

In 1878 Russell and Barbour clashed over doctrine, which resulted in Russell departing to begin his own magazine, Zion's Watch Tower and Herald of Christ's Presence that he mailed to all his former subscribers. He also organized thirty new Bible classes, called ecclesias, in the northeast and throughout the Ohio Valley, serving as pastor of the movement. He wed one of his students, Maria Ackley, that same year; the marriage eventually ended in divorce.

Over the next four years Russell wrote and distributed over a million booklets and tracts, and he sent two missionaries to England with the materials. In 1882, Russell wrote an article rejecting the doctrine of the Trinity. Many of his followers abandoned him, but many more embraced his views.

Russell officially incorporated the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society as a for profit entity in the state of Pennsylvania in 1884. Two years later he launched an eighteen-year, six-volume writing project—The Millennial Dawn series (now called Studies in the Scriptures)—in which he laid out his understanding of the Scriptures.

By 1888, Russell prophesied that the "time of the Gentiles" would come to an end in October 1914, leading to the battle of Armageddon and followed by Christ's earthly kingdom. He claimed his followers—the 144,000 elect of Revelation 7 and 14—would inherit the earth. Motivated by the announcement, the faithful took on the task of spreading Russell's gospel to as many people as possible before the date's arrival. In the interim, a new headquarters was built in Pittsburgh (1889); the first Watch Tower national assembly was held in Chicago in conjunction with the World's Fair (1893); a branch office was opened in London (1904) and another in Australia (1906); a world headquarters was established in Brooklyn, New York (1909); and Russell's weekly sermons were syndicated in three thousand newspapers nationwide.

With the outbreak of World War I in 1914, it looked like the end was near. When 1914 gave way to 1915 and then 1916, the faithful did not seem too concerned. In their view, the war was still raging and the kingdom was imminent.

Then on October 31, 1916, Russell died unexpectedly in Pampa, TX, on his way back to New York from a speaking engagement. His followers, the Russellites, were confused and conflicted.

Joseph Rutherford (1869–1942), legal counsel for the Society, stepped forward to fill the leadership void, despite Russell's specific instructions that upon his death the governance of the movement should be shared by a Board of Directors, which he had appointed for life. Rutherford made major changes to the organization. He appointed directors in each congregation, who were answerable to headquarters. This was a major paradigm shift, since under Russell each congregation elected its own officers. Rutherford also wrote most of the Society's new literature, publishing several new booklets and at least one new book each year. He required all members to distribute the literature door to door. Through these efforts, the ranks swelled.

In 1931, Rutherford changed the name of the organization to Jehovah's Witnesses. He declared the sect to be a theocratic organization under God with the Governing Body serving as his earthly representatives. Thus, the Jehovah's Witnesses became the repository of truth and God's channel of revelation on earth. Joseph Rutherford died on January 8, 1942.

Nathan Knorr (1905–1977) served as the next president and built the Jehovah's Witnesses into a wealthy financial empire. He commissioned the publishing of the New World Translation of the Holy Scriptures, which uses the word Jehovah in place of Lord. Knorr also banned the use of images and religious pictures, forbade the celebration of birthdays, announced Christmas and Easter to be pagan, deemed the recitation of the Pledge of Allegiance and the singing of the National Anthem to be idolatrous, and declared that no Jehovah's Witness should run for public office, vote in elections, or serve on a jury.

When Knorr prophesied that the battle of Armageddon would begin in 1975 to be followed by the reign of Christ on earth, membership increased from one hundred thousand to nearly five million as the faithful waited for the end of the age. At the failure of the forecast, however, many became disillusioned and left the Society.

With the death of Nathan Knorr in 1977, the Board named Frederick Franz (1893–1992) as its new president, but limited his powers. He served until his death on December 22, 1992, at ninety-nine years of age. Under his leadership an effort was made to rid the organization of dissenters and to take more authoritarian control of the Society.

Franz was known best for two particular doctrinal revelations. The first, based on Leviticus 17:12-14, prohibited Jehovah's Witnesses from getting blood transfusions. The second amplified Russell's teaching about the 144,000 elect. Knorr claimed that all Jehovah's Witnesses fit into one of two categories: (1) The "Bride of Christ," a born-again class, consisting of the first 144,000 members who were chosen to reign with Christ from heaven during the millennium; and (2) The "other sheep," consisting of the remainder of the members who will inherit the earth as a result of their faithful service to God's appointed organization.

Milton G. Henschel (1920–2003) was named the fifth Jehovah's Witnesses president in 1992. Under his leadership, the organization reevaluated its public image. Seeking to appeal to a new generation of potential converts, the Society made several concessions. First, it admitted that many of Russell's ideas came out of the Adventist movement and not directly from God. Second, it stopped attacking mainline churches. Third, it ended the practice of predicting end-time events. Fourth, it no longer condemned holidays as being pagan. Fifth, it softened its stance against blood transfusions. Donald Adams (1925–) took leadership in 2000.

JEHOVAH'S WITNESSES AND ORTHODOX FAITH

Besides its many unique doctrines mentioned above, the Jehovah's Witnesses differ from Orthodox faith in the following areas.

The Godhead. The Jehovah's Witnesses teach that the Father alone is God. The Holy Spirit is considered an impersonal force emanating from the Father. The Son is the first created being in the universe. In his preincarnate state the Son was Michael the archangel. Hence, the Son is inferior to God, but superior to man. This belief, known as Arianism, was prevalent in the second and third century. The Council of Nicaea (AD 325) condemned Arianism as a heresy, stating that Jesus was fully God and fully man.

The Atonement. Whereas orthodox Christianity believes that Jesus Christ atoned for all sins, Jehovah's Witnesses propose that Jesus died on a stake and atoned only for Adam's sin. Those who wish to escape death and find eternal life must work out their own salvation through dedication to Jehovah and his authorized organization.

The Bodily Resurrection of Jesus Christ. According to the Jehovah's Witnesses, Jesus was raised from the dead as an immortal spirit being, but not in bodily form. His body remained in the tomb. Yet the apostle Paul clearly teaches that without the bodily resurrection of Jesus there is no gospel, no hope for eternal life, and no meaning in the present life (1Co 15:1-8,14-19).

Eternal Judgment. According to Jehovah's Witnesses doctrine, the words hell, Sheol, and Hades do not refer to a place of conscious suffering, but to the grave where the dead are laid to rest. They reject the concept of eternal hell in which people are punished. Rather, they posit that the unrighteous eventually will be raised from the dead, judged by God, and cast into the lake of fire, in which they will be annihilated.

13 This is how we know that we remain in him † and he in us: He has given us of his Spirit. † 14 And we have seen and we testify that the Father has sent his Son † as the world's Savior. 15 Whoever confesses † that Jesus is the Son of God — God remains in him and he in God. 16 And we have come to know and to believe the love that God has for us.
God is love, and the one who remains in love remains in God, and God remains in him. 17 In this, love is made complete with us so that we may have confidence in the day of judgment, † because as he is, so also are we in this world. † 18 There is no fear in love; instead, perfect love drives out fear, † because fear involves punishment. † So the one who fears is not complete in love. † 19 We love † because he first loved us. † 20 If anyone says, "I love God," and yet hates his brother or sister, † he is a liar. † For the person who does not love his brother or sister † whom he has seen cannot love God whom he has not seen. †

21 And we have this command from him: The one who loves God must also love his brother and sister.

4:1-2 John has in view people who would speak to the community, claiming to be prompted by the Spirit (4:6). However, various spirits might prompt such speakers, so discernment is required. We must not believe everyone who claims to speak for God, but we must weigh what is said in comparison with Scriptural truth. The Spirit of God leads believers to confess that Jesus Christ has come in the flesh. This confession is relevant against an early heresy that denied that Christ was fully human (Docetism; see "The Incarnation of Jesus Christ," p. 1271).

4:3-4 A person is antichrist if he denies the truth about Jesus (2:18-19; 4:2 see also "Spiritual Warfare," p. 1454).

4:9-10 The ultimate expression of God's love is his sending of his Son to be the atoning sacrifice for our sins (3:16). On the word translated "atoning sacrifice," see the note on 2:2.

4:12 Though no one has ever seen God (Jn 1:18), his presence is assured among those who love one another.

5 Everyone who believes that Jesus is the Christ has been born of God, † and everyone who loves the Father † also loves the one born of him. 2 This is how we know that we love God's children: when we love God and obey † his commands. 3 For this is what love for God is: to keep his commands. And his commands are not a burden, † 4 because everyone who has been born of God conquers the world. This is the victory that has conquered the world: our faith.

THE CERTAINTY OF GOD'S TESTIMONY

5 Who is the one who conquers the world † but the one who believes that Jesus is the Son of God? † 6 Jesus Christ — he is the one who came by water and blood, not by water only, but by water † and by blood. † And the Spirit is the one who testifies, † because the Spirit is the truth. 7 For there are three that testify: † † 8 the Spirit, † the water, and the blood † — and these three are in agreement. 9 If we accept human testimony, God's testimony † is greater, because it is God's testimony that he has given about his Son. 10 The one who believes in the Son of God has this testimony within himself. The one who does not believe God has made him a liar, † because he has not believed in the testimony God has given about his Son. 11 And this is the testimony: God has given us eternal life, and this life is in his Son. 12 The one who has the Son has life. † The one who does not have the Son of God does not have life. 13 I have written these things to you who believe in the name † of the Son of God so that you may know that you have eternal life.

EFFECTIVE PRAYER

14 This is the confidence we have before him: If we ask † anything according to his will, he hears us. † 15 And if we know that he hears whatever we ask, † we know that we have what we have asked of him. †

16 If anyone sees a fellow believer † committing a sin that doesn't lead to death, he should ask, and God will give life to him — to those who commit sin that doesn't lead to death. There is sin † that leads to death. I am not saying he should pray about that. 17 All unrighteousness is sin, and there is sin that doesn't lead to death.

CONCLUSION

18 We know that everyone who has been born of God does not sin, but the one who is born of God keeps him, † † and the evil one does not touch him. 19 We know that we are of God, and the whole world is under the sway of the evil one. 20 And we know that the Son of God has come † and has given us understanding so that we may know the true one. † We are in the true one — that is, in his Son Jesus Christ. † He is the true God and eternal life.

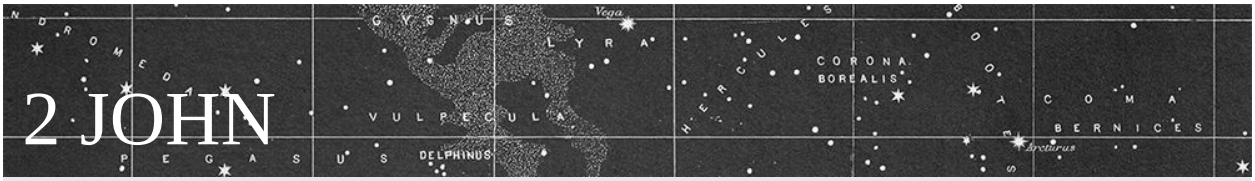
5:3 In a Christian worldview, love and obeying God cannot be divided, or set at odds with one another. God's commands do not refer to the law of Moses, but to the commands to believe in Jesus and to love one another (4:23).

5:6 There has been much discussion about the meaning of water and blood. The terms may refer to Jesus's baptism by water and his crucifixion.

5:13 The author's ultimate goal in writing is to encourage genuine belief in Christ so that people may have assurance of eternal life in him.

5:16-17 Christians have a responsibility to intercede for one another. The sin that leads to death in this context is a rejection of Christ, as described in the preceding verses (5:10-13).



2 JOHN

INTRODUCTION

The second letter of John advises “the elect lady” (either a reference to a congregation or to a woman who owned a house where the congregation met) to be fervent in Christian love (v. 5) and watchful of deceivers (vv. 7-8). The writer planned to visit the congregation soon (v. 12).

CIRCUMSTANCES OF WRITING

AUTHOR: “The elder” (v. 1) is a title that the apostle John applied to himself late in life. (The apostle Peter referred to himself the same way; 1Pt 5:1.) No one other than the apostle John was ever suggested by the early church as the writer of 1 John. Since there are so many similarities between 1 and 2 John, it is generally accepted that John also wrote the second letter.

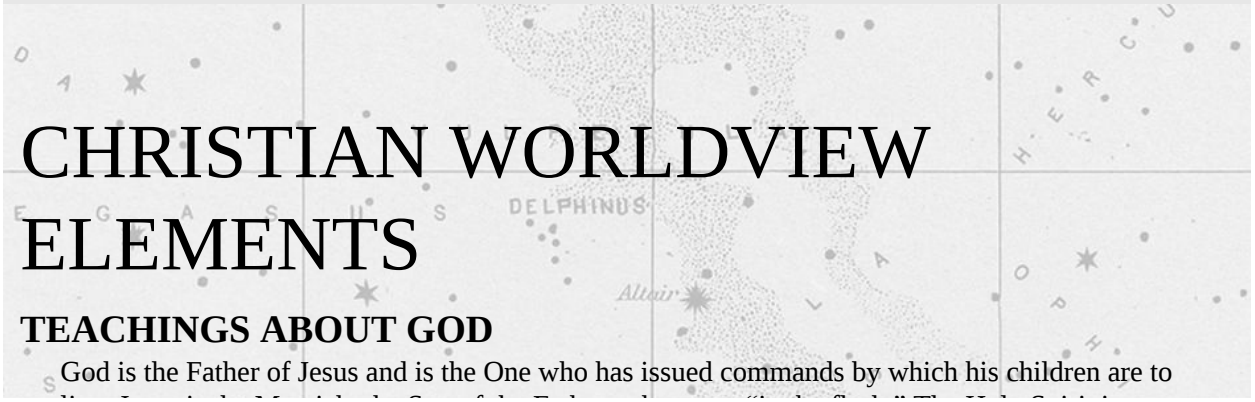
BACKGROUND: Second John likely was written during the last two decades of the first century. During this era, John gave pastoral leadership to churches in the area of Ephesus. We have no way of precisely dating 2 John, but it is reasonable that it was written around the same time as 1 John or slightly afterwards. Its tone reveals it to be a highly personal letter that reflects John’s affection for these believers and his deep concern for their welfare.

CONTRIBUTION TO THE BIBLE

It is easy for congregations to get off track. Second John reminds readers of the high priority of the most basic Christian outlook and activity—mutual love. Yet another priority is no less critical—true Christian teaching. This epistle strikes a short but strong blow for steadfastness, assuring that attentive readers would take the right steps to “receive a full reward” (v. 8).

STRUCTURE

Second John is an excellent example of hortatory or exhortation discourse, which has the intent of moving readers to action. It follows the normal NT pattern for a letter with an opening, main body, and closing. There are only two commands in this short letter: a call to “watch yourselves” (v. 8) and the command, “do not receive” those who plant false teaching (v. 10). There is the reminder to “love one another” in verse 5. This bears the force of an imperative, in part because of the close proximity of the word “command,” which occurs four times in verses 4-6.



CHRISTIAN WORLDVIEW ELEMENTS

TEACHINGS ABOUT GOD

God is the Father of Jesus and is the One who has issued commands by which his children are to live. Jesus is the Messiah, the Son of the Father, who came "in the flesh." The Holy Spirit is not mentioned.

TEACHINGS ABOUT HUMANITY

This book shows (negatively) that many deceivers and antichrists are out to oppose God's people. It also shows (positively) the great good that one Christian or one congregation ("the elect lady") can accomplish. (See also "Teachings About Humanity" in 1Tm, p. 1497.) TEACHINGS ABOUT SALVATION

The only teaching directly related to salvation is the crucial importance of the incarnation of the Son of God. Those who deny this doctrine are cut off from salvation (v. 7). Redeemed people "walk in love" and "remain in Christ's teaching" as a way of living.

GREETING

1 The elder: To the elect † lady and her children, whom I love in the truth — and not only I, but also all who know the truth † — 2 because of the truth that remains in us † and will be with us forever.
3 Grace, mercy, and peace † will be with us from God the Father and from Jesus Christ, the Son † of the Father, in truth and love. †

TRUTH AND DECEPTION

4 I was very glad to find some of your children walking in truth, † in keeping with a command we have received from the Father. 5 So now I ask you, dear lady — not as if I were writing you a new command, but one we have had from the beginning — that we love one another. † 6 This is love: † that we walk according to his commands. † This is the command as you have heard it from the beginning: that you walk in love. † 7 Many deceivers have gone out into the world; they do not confess the coming yourselves so you don't lose what we † have worked for, but that you may receive a full reward. † 9 Anyone who does not remain in Christ's teaching † but goes beyond it does not have God. † The one who remains † in that teaching, this one has both the Father † and the Son. † 10 If anyone comes to you and does not bring this teaching, do not receive † him into your home, and don't greet him; 11 for the one who greets him shares † in his evil works. †

FAREWELL

12 Though I have many things to write to you, † I don't want to use paper and ink. Instead, I hope to come to you and talk face to face so that our joy † may be complete.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

The Church of Christ, Scientist, also known as Christian Science, is an American-born religion that promotes divine healing and esoteric Christianity. Founded in 1879 by Mary Baker Eddy (1821–1910), the church has grown into a worldwide movement, attracting members mainly from the middle and upper classes.

HISTORY OF THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MOVEMENT

Mary Ann Morse Baker was born in New Hampshire in 1821 into a Congregationalist family with Calvinistic leanings. At an early age she rebelled against their theology and eventually abandoned orthodox Christianity. From childhood Mary was frail, often ill, and suffered bouts of hysteria. Whether her ailments were primarily organic or psychosomatic is debated. She missed school for prolonged periods and depended on her brother for much of her education. Confined to home, she spent her time writing poems. Many of the lyrics were later expanded into the first hymns of the Christian Science movement.

In 1843, at the age of twenty-two, she married Colonel George Washington Glover, a wealthy businessman, who died six months later while on a mission to aid victims of the yellow fever epidemic in South Carolina. Mary was pregnant at the time and became so distraught over his death that when her son George was born she gave him up to her sister Abigail to rear as her own.

The next decade was difficult. Mary received a proposal of marriage, but before the wedding date her fiancé died. Then her mother passed away unexpectedly in 1849. Mary went to live with Abigail and five-year-old George. The reunion was bittersweet.

In 1853, Mary wedded Dr. Daniel Patterson, an itinerant dentist whose fidelity was questionable. By mutual consent, the couple lived apart from each other for protracted periods of time. During one of these cycles in 1862, Mary traveled to Portland, Maine to seek pain relief from Dr. Phineas Quimby, a magnetic healer and follower of Franz Mesmer, the controversial Austrian physician and hypnotist. Among Quimby's other clients were Julius and Annetta Dresser, who later founded New Thought. Quimby placed Mary into a hypnotic trance, massaged her aching body, and commanded her pain to depart. Upon awakening, she found the discomfort was gone.

Mary became enamored with Quimby and moved into his house as a live-in patient from 1862 to 1864. During this stint, she embraced Quimby's pantheistic worldview that focused on two key principles: (1) A belief that all is God. Since God is spirit, everything that exists is spirit. Matter is an illusion. People wrongly perceive things to be material. They need to be enlightened to the truth of reality. (2) A belief that God is good. Since all is God, all is good. Sin, sickness, evil, and death are illusions or projections of an unenlightened mind. Correct thinking will cause these things to disappear. For the next two years a rejuvenated Mary Baker Glover Patterson traveled up and down the east coast lecturing on Quimby's principles.

The year 1866 was a turning point for Mary. First, Quimby died suddenly of stomach ulcers, leaving Mary as the preeminent teacher of his arcane doctrine. Second, Mary fell and severely injured herself on an icy sidewalk; the accident caused both physical and psychological side effects. Fearing her illness was incurable, she became deeply despondent. Third, she opened her Bible to Matthew 9:2-8 and read the account of Jesus telling the paralytic to "take up [his] bed and walk" (KJV). She suddenly realized that disease is an illusion that can be overcome by correct thinking. She said the fear and illness left her immediately. Fourth, Mary came to understand, in a moment of revelation, that union with the universal Mind (God) allows no room for sickness.

Between 1867–1874 Mary gave herself to "Christianizing" Quimby's philosophy. With the assistance of J. H. Wiggin, a retired Unitarian minister and ghostwriter, Mary published in 1875, Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures. Julius and Annetta Dresser accused her of lifting long sections from an unpublished work by Quimby that just so happened to bear the title Science and Health. Others suggested that she may have borrowed heavily from Francis Lieber's The Metaphysical Religion of Hegel.

With the death of Dr. Patterson, Mary's unstable marriage of twenty years ended. She soon found herself courted by Asa Gilbert Eddy, a wealthy businessman and a faithful disciple of her views, who underwrote the printing costs of Science and Health. They were married in 1877.

At the urging of her new husband and fifteen loyal followers, Baker-Eddy convened a meeting in Boston in 1879 to form and incorporate the First Church of Christ, Scientist. Two years later, she opened the Massachusetts Metaphysical College, whose graduates became Christian Science practitioners or healers. Asa Gilbert Eddy was the first of the movement's practitioners.

In 1883, Asa suffered a fatal heart attack, leaving Mary a widow. She sought relief from grief by pouring herself into work. Over the next decade, she started The Christian Science Journal, reorganized the church, and wrote the church's manual on polity. Despite success, she faced many challenges. Opponents accused her of being a witch, occultist, and plagiarist. Some of her former college students sued for fraud, claiming she offered higher levels of secret knowledge to her inner circle.

Despite setbacks, Mary forged ahead. In 1908 she founded the Christian Science Monitor, a newspaper that soon gained a national reputation. When she died on December 3, 1910, at the age of eighty-eight, The Church of Christ, Scientist had grown to include 100,000 members.

DOCTRINAL BELIEFS

- The Bible is the basis for all Christian Science beliefs. However, the Bible cannot be properly understood apart from Eddy's Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures, which offers an allegorical interpretation of Scripture. The "Key to the Scriptures" portion includes a glossary of terms with their spiritual meanings.
- God is the supreme impersonal Mind, Spirit, or Life Principle that permeates the universe.
- Christ is the Divine Idea that expels ignorance and produces correct thinking about the spiritual nature of the universe. To think correctly is to receive Christ.
- The Holy Spirit is Christian Science.
- Jesus was an historical person on whom the Divine Idea (Christ) took root. Hence, Jesus shows humankind the way of salvation through right thinking.
- Since everything is a reflection of God, sin, Satan, evil, sickness, death, judgment, heaven, and hell are illusions of an unenlightened mind. Salvation is deliverance from ignorance through correct thinking.
- Health and healing are likewise the results of right thinking. Prayer is an act of calling disease by its right name (an illusion), causing it to disappear. When illness strikes, medical assistance is discouraged. Rather, the faithful are urged to call a Christian Science practitioner to help them replace erroneous thoughts with correct thoughts.
- Worship is led by a First Reader, who reads a designated portion of the KJV Bible, and a Second reader, who reads the corresponding commentary from Science and Health. Worship also includes music, meditation, recitation of the Lord's Prayer (in which God is addressed as "Our Father-Mother"), and reading a lesson from a quarterly. No sermon is preached.
- There are no ordained or paid clergy. Mary Baker Eddy declared the movement to have only two pastors: the Bible and Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures.

STATISTICS: THE RISE AND DECLINE OF CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

The "Mother Church" of Christian Science, located in Boston, serves as the group's headquarters. It grants charters to branch churches who submit to the authority of a board of directors and follow the polity of The Manual of the Mother Church. Each branch operates a reading room, which is a combined library-bookstore, where outsiders and members alike can relax, read an authorized text, or purchase Christian Science materials. Over nine million copies of Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures have been sold through the reading rooms and commercial outlets.

Today there are approximately 1,700 Christian Science churches (down from a high of 3,000 in 1988), located in seventy countries. Membership stands at 175,000 (a decline from a million at the movement's apex). During the past twenty years over a hundred storefront reading rooms have closed their doors,

Christian Science practitioners are down in number by 300 percent, and the prestigious Christian Science Monitor, after losing five to six million dollars per year, went completely digital in 2009. The Mother Church is supported by a $1.00 per year per capita tax levied on all members worldwide. Its total assets exceed $135 million.

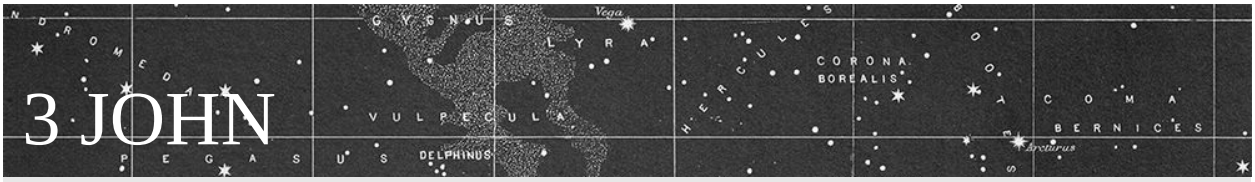
1 Elder is another term for pastor, and the apostles used it of themselves when serving in such a role (see 1Pt 5:1). Elect lady most likely refers to a local church (in the area of Ephesus). If so, her children are the members.

6 The command of God is to walk in love. The theme of command and love is explored in 1Jn 2:8-9; 4:23.

7 Antichrist here refers to anyone who denies a proper biblical understanding of who Jesus is. An early heresy was to deny that Jesus was fully human—denying that Jesus came in the flesh.

10-11 These verses are not instructing believers to be rude to false teachers; they are a warning not to support ministries that undermine the gospel. To receive people into your home in the first century meant providing them with a place to stay while engaged in their work. Since most inns at the time were neither safe nor reputable, a lack of hospitality would hinder traveling teachers from continuing their efforts.

13 The elect sister is another congregation, and her children are its members. This is likely another congregation in the area of Ephesus.



3 JOHN

INTRODUCTION

The shortest book in the NT, 3 John is a letter with a kind but businesslike tone. “The Elder” sought to encourage Gaius, who was perhaps a pastor under his oversight. The letter gives mostly positive counsel but also warns against a power-hungry leader named Diotrephes. Truth, love, and the goodness of God are predominate themes.

CIRCUMSTANCES OF WRITING

AUTHOR: Same as the author of 1 and 2 John (see Introductions there).

BACKGROUND: Same as 2 John (see Introduction there). The two short letters of 2 and 3 John are often described as “twin letters,” though they should be viewed as fraternal and not identical. There are some significant similarities worth noting. In both letters the author described himself as “the Elder” (2Jn 1; 3Jn 1), and the recipients were those whom he loved “in truth” (2Jn 1; 3Jn 1). The recipients were a cause for great rejoicing by John (2Jn 4; 3Jn 3). They were “walking in the truth” (2Jn 4; 3Jn 3), and the elder has received good reports about them (2Jn 4; 3Jn 3,5). Both letters contain a warning (2Jn 8; 3Jn 9-11), and the Elder desired to see the recipients face-to-face (2Jn 12; 3Jn 14). Finally, both letters convey greetings from others (2Jn 13; 3Jn 14).

CONTRIBUTION TO THE BIBLE

This brief letter of apostolic instruction underscores certain central Christian convictions: love, truth, faithfulness, the church, and witness. It also testifies to the God-centeredness of apostolic faith (v v. 7,11). Jesus and the Spirit are not mentioned specifically (unless “the truth itself” in v. 12 refers to Jesus; see Jn 14:6; 1Jn 5:20). But in the writer’s view, Jesus and the Spirit were undoubtedly included in the reference to “God” whose “truth” this letter appeals to so frequently (3Jn 1,3,4,8,12).

STRUCTURE

The letter follows the basic epistolary pattern with an introduction (v v. 1-4), body (v v. 5-12), and a conclusion (v v. 13-14). Though verses 1-4 clearly function as the salutation, it is also possible to outline the letter around the four personalities of the book. Verses 1-8 contain a multifold commendation of Gaius. Verses 9-10 condemn the highhanded and malicious autocracy of Diotrephes. Verses 11-12, taken as a unit, praise the godly Demetrius. Verses 13-14 close with a glimpse into the heart of the Elder. Four men and their reputations (growing out of their behavior) are the sum and substance of 3 John’s subject matter. John constructed this letter with the building blocks of key-word repetition: “dear friend” (v v. 1,2,5,11); “truth” or “true” (v v. 1,3,4,8,12). Third John provides insight into a personality conflict that arose at the end of the first century and the strategy adopted by the Elder to resolve it.

CHRISTIAN WORLDVIEW ELEMENTS

ELEMENTS

TEACHINGS ABOUT GOD

God is mentioned three times (vv. 6,11) as the source of good, not evil, who expects his people to live lives worthy of him. The essence of God's glory is summarized by calling him "the Name" (v. 7).

TEACHINGS ABOUT HUMANITY

This letter is full of contrasts. On one hand, there are several shining examples of what people committed to the truth can accomplish (Gaius, Demetrius, John himself, the traveling ministers). On the other hand, Diotrephes is a negative example of someone who obstructs the truth. (See also "Teachings About Humanity" in 1Tm, p. 1497.)

TEACHINGS ABOUT SALVATION

Salvation is addressed indirectly in John's constant use of "the truth" (vv. 1,3,4,8,12). "The truth" is evidently his paraphrase for "the gospel of Jesus Christ," thought of in broad terms. This truth is nowhere defined, but its importance is evident.

GREETING

1 The elder: †
To my dear friend Gaius, whom I love in the truth. † 2 Dear friend, I pray that you are prospering in every way and are in good health, † just as your whole life is going well. † 3 For I was very glad when fellow believers came and testified † to your fidelity to the truth — how you are walking in truth. † 4 I have no greater joy † than this: to hear that my children † are walking in truth.

GAIUS COMMENDED

5 Dear friend, you are acting faithfully in whatever you do for the brothers and sisters, especially when they are strangers. 6 They have testified to your love before the church. † You will do well to send them on their journey † in a manner worthy of God, † 7 since they set out for the sake of the Name, † accepting nothing from pagans. † † 8 Therefore, we ought to support such people so that we can be coworkers with the truth.

DIOTREPHES AND DEMETRIUS

9 I wrote something to the church, but Diotrephes, who loves to have first place among them, † does not receive our authority. † 10 This is why, if I come, I will remind him of the works he is doing, slandering † us with malicious words.
And he is not satisfied with that! He not only refuses to welcome fellow believers, but he even stops those who want to do so and expels them from the church.

11 Dear friend, do not imitate what is evil, † but what is good. The one who does good is of God; † the one who does evil has not seen God. † 12 Everyone speaks well of Demetrius — even the truth itself. And we also speak well of him, and you know † that our testimony is true. †

FAREWELL

13 I have many things to write you, but I don't want to write to you with pen and ink. 14 I hope to see you soon, and we will talk face to face.

MORMONISM

Joseph Smith, founder of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (LDS), or Mormonism, was born in Sharon, Vermont, on December 23, 1805. Smith spent much of his teenage years attempting to convince gullible people that he could uncover Captain Kidd's legendary treasure through the use of peep stones and divining rods. When the Smith family fell on hard times in 1816, they moved to a farm in Manchester, just south of Palmyra, New York.

THE ORIGINS OF MORMONISM

Joseph Smith claimed that at the age of fifteen he had entered the woods to pray for guidance about joining a local church, when he suddenly encountered two angels. They informed him that all churches were in error, and God had chosen him to restore pure Christianity to the world.

Smith had another angelic visitation in 1823 when the angel Moroni showed him the location of a set of golden plates containing the true word of God written in Reformed Egyptian. On September 22, 1827, Moroni appeared again and told him to translate the text into English. Using a set of magical stones called "Urim" and "Thummim" Smith was able to read and translate with the assistance of a friend, Oliver Cowdery. The result was The Book of Mormon.

On May 15, 1829, John the Baptist appeared to Smith and ordered him and Cowdery to baptize and ordain each other into the Aaronic Priesthood. This was followed by another visitation from the apostles Peter, James, and John on April 6, 1830. They instructed Smith and Cowdery to ordain each other into the new order called the Melchizedek Priesthood. This date marks the official birth of Mormonism. Soon others joined the new sect.

In order to escape persecution, Smith and his followers moved to Kirtland, Ohio, in 1831 and built the first Mormon temple. When word spread that Smith had received a revelation for Mormons to engage in polygamy, he was tarred and feathered and run out of town.

Smith settled in Independence, Missouri, which he declared to be the site of the original garden of Eden and the place where Christ would return to set up his kingdom. As the Mormon population grew, townspeople became suspicious of Smith and his cohorts. Hostilities soon erupted and Smith was again accused of practicing polygamy and his followers were charged with committing burglary, larceny, perjury, arson, and even murder. By order of the governor, a militia arrested the Mormon leadership. In 1839, they were ordered to surrender all land and leave the state.

Smith led his faithful followers to Commerce, Illinois, for which he sought a charter of incorporation. When that was granted, he promptly renamed the town Nauvoo and assumed the office of mayor. Mormonism prospered financially as its numbers swelled. By 1841, Smith was boldly teaching "The Principle" or doctrine of plural marriage to his most trusted members, but required that they keep it under wraps. He took multiple wives for himself, unbeknownst to his first wife Emma. In defending his actions, he said polygamy was part of God's eternal plan of salvation.

In February of 1844, Smith announced his candidacy for president of the United States. Nevertheless, his political career was short lived. When the Nauvoo Expositor reported the widespread polygamy among Mormon leadership, Smith's followers torched the newspaper office and destroyed the presses. An irate posse arrested Smith and his brother Hyrum, locking them in the Carthage Jail. An anonymous disciple somehow smuggled weapons into the jail. On June 27, 1844, a mob stormed the jail and a shootout ensued. The Smith brothers were shot dead, becoming the movement's first martyrs.

THE POST-SMITH YEARS

With Smith gone, Brigham Young, one of Smith's twelve apostles, emerged as leader. In February of 1846, Young led fifteen thousand Mormons on a fifteen-month trek westward to the valley of the Great Salt Lake, where they settled. Salt Lake City, Utah, stills serves as the international headquarters for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Under Young, polygamy became an official dogma of the church in 1852, when "The Principle" was included in Section 132 of Doctrine and Covenants, considered sacred writ among Mormons.

As the population grew, Utah applied for statehood on numerous occasions between 1849 and 1887, but was denied because of the Mormon practice of polygamy. LDS President Wilford Woodruff announced in 1890 that he received by revelation that polygamy was no longer sanctioned by the church. Six years later Utah was granted statehood.

ORGANIZATIONAL STRUCTURE

Mormon hierarchy consists of several levels beginning with the so-called Aaronic Priesthood. At ages twelve, fourteen, and sixteen, males assume the office of deacon, teacher, and priest, respectively. In these capacities they serve in practical ministries and assist their seniors by ushering, visiting the elderly, preparing the Lord's Supper, and the like. They perform their duties within the confines of a ward, the Mormon equivalent of a local church. A bishop serves as leader of the ward and supervises their priestly duties.

The so-called Melchizedek Priesthood is responsible for spiritual matters and is open to all males upon their eighteenth birthday. It consists of two offices: elders and high priests. Most adult Mormon men in good standing become elders. Their responsibilities include ordaining, baptizing, teaching, conducting sacrament services, and anointing the sick with oil. High priests are chosen from among the most active and faithful elders. They carry out most of their duties at the stake level, which is a larger geographical area composed of several wards. Jobs include serving as stake president, mission president (who supervises missionaries assigned to a particular stake), and bishop of a ward, among others.

Some men are chosen to serve at a translocal level. The first presidency, consisting of three apostles, is the highest office in the church. Today Mormon membership stands at 14.5 million worldwide.

WHAT MORMONS BELIEVE

The Scriptures. Mormons believe four standard works bear the marks of inspiration: a) The Bible, b) The Book of Mormon, c) The Pearl of Great Price, and d) Doctrine and Covenants.

God. Mormons believe a plurality of gods rule the various galaxies. Elohim is the god of our solar system, ruling from the distant planet Kolob. He is called the Father. He was once a physical man in another galaxy, but he worked his way up to godhood. Jehovah (Jesus) is the first spirit son of Elohim and a heavenly wife. Jesus, too, is considered a god. The Holy Ghost, an undefined ethereal entity, is also divine.

Humanity. Mormons believe that humans preexisted as spirit-beings on the planet Kolob before coming to earth. Like Jesus, they are the offspring of Elohim and his multiple wives, thus making them spirit brothers and sisters of Jehovah (Jesus). This preexistence was called the "first estate."

To attain exaltation or ultimate salvation humans need resurrected bodies like their heavenly Father's. Two spirit children (Adam and Eve) were sent to earth to start the process. They were changed from pure spirit beings into physical beings by eating from the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. In this "second estate," they were able to reproduce and form physical bodies for other premortal spirits to inhabit.

Satan. Lucifer, a rebellious spirit child of Elohim, gathered one-third of the preincarnate spirit beings and waged a war against their Father. They were defeated and cast to earth without the hope of ever obtaining physical bodies. As disembodied spirits, they are doomed forever.

The Incarnation. A relationship between Elohim and the Virgin Mary created a body in which the spirit child Jesus could reside. For thirty-three years Jesus walked the earth, teaching about his heavenly Father.

The Work of Christ. Mormons believe that Jesus came to earth to rescue humankind from the stain of sin and the influence of Satan. Through his death, resurrection, and ascension Christ makes immortality possible for all living beings. To attain exaltation, one must believe on the Mormon Jesus, repent, be baptized for the remission of sins, receive the Holy Ghost through the laying on of hands (called the First Principles of the Gospel), be sealed in marriage in a Mormon Temple ceremony, and keep all the statutes of Mormonism.

Eschatology. Upon death, Mormons go to Paradise awaiting Christ's second coming, the first resurrection, and the millennium of which they will partake. After the millennium, all faithful Mormons will be judged and rewarded.

Upon death, non-Mormons are consigned to spirit prison where they will be purged of sins and presented with the Mormon gospel. Those who respond positively will be transferred to paradise to await the millennium. All others must remain in spirit prison until the second resurrection that takes place at the end of the millennium, when they will be judged and rewarded accordingly.

After the millennium, three eternal states await the resurrected:

1. The telestial is reserved for the wicked of the world (liars, sorcerers, adulterers, and other sinful people) who have suffered sufficiently for their sins during their stay in spirit prison.

2. The terrestrial is reserved for inactive Mormons and honorable people who did not accept Mormonism while living on earth.

3. The celestial is reserved for Mormons only and consists of these gradations:

a.) The lowest level will be inhabited by Mormons who obeyed the First Principles of the Gospel, but were lax in other practices, such as abstaining from caffeine.

b.) The second level is reserved for good Mormons that observed the First Principles, gave 10 percent of their gross income to the LDS, observed the Word of Wisdom, and obeyed all the laws of Mormonism.

c.) The highest level is exaltation, reserved for Mormons in good standing whose marriages were eternally sealed. As exalted beings, they will be raised to godhood, inherit their own planet, produce new spirit beings, and populate a new galaxy like their Father before them.

Satan, his angels, and Mormon apostates, called Sons of Perdition, will experience the second death and be cast into outer darkness forever.

JUDE

INTRODUCTION

The letter of Jude, one of the General Letters, is very short. Until recently scholars neglected it more than any other NT book. Jude sought to protect Christian truth and strongly opposed heretics who threatened the faith. The letter's message is relevant to any age because believers should defend the gospel vigorously. Jude bears an obvious similarity in content with 2 Peter, a book that also deals firmly with false teachers who were infiltrating the church.

CIRCUMSTANCES OF WRITING

AUTHOR: Jude called himself "a servant of Jesus Christ and a brother of James" (v. 1). The James to whom Jude referred is not the son of Zebedee. He can be ruled out of consideration because he was martyred at an early date (Ac 12:1-2). The James to whom Jude refers is surely the well-known leader of the Jerusalem church (Ac 15:13-21; Gl 2:9). This is significant, for this James was the brother of Jesus (Mk 6:3). If Jude was a brother of James, then he was also a brother of Jesus. Rather than call himself Jesus's brother outright, Jude chose humbly to designate himself as Christ's servant.

BACKGROUND: Jude wrote to those who are "the called, loved by God the Father and kept for Jesus Christ" (v. 1). This designation is general enough to apply to Christian believers anywhere. But Jude clearly had a specific group in mind because he called them "dear friends" (vv. 3,17,20) and addressed a situation that affected them. The readers were probably Jewish Christians because of Jude's several references to Hebrew history. Beyond this information we do not know exactly who the recipients of the letter were.

Jude is difficult to date precisely. If Jude the brother of Jesus was the author, the letter must be dated sometime within his lifetime. Any date for the letter's writing must also allow time for the false teachings to have developed. Jude may be dated reasonably somewhere between AD 65 to 80. Nothing in the letter points to a date of writing beyond this time. A date within Jude's lifetime rules out the viewpoint that the false teaching in question was second-century gnosticism.

CONTRIBUTION TO THE BIBLE

Jude is often overlooked because of its brevity. The book is also neglected because of unexpected features such as its quotation of 1 Enoch and its allusion to the Assumption of Moses. Some readers wonder how a canonical book could cite noninspired, nonbiblical writings. Furthermore, the message of Jude is alien to many in today's world because Jude emphasized that the Lord will judge evil intruders who are attempting to corrupt the church. The message of judgment strikes many people today as intolerant, unloving, and contrary to the message of love proclaimed elsewhere in the NT.

Nevertheless, some of the Bible's most beautiful statements about God's sustaining grace are found in Jude (vv. 1,24-25), and they shine with a greater brilliance when contrasted with the false teachers who had departed from the Christian faith.

The message of judgment is especially relevant to people today. Jude's letter reminds us that errant teaching and promiscuous living have dire consequences. Jude was written so believers would contend for the faith that was transmitted to them (v. 3) and so they would not abandon God's love at a crucial time in the life of the church.

Jude's connection with 2 Peter is debated. What one decides about this issue inevitably affects one's beliefs about the authorship and dating of each letter. They are strikingly similar in content. Thus, if 2 Peter used Jude and the latter book was written somewhere between AD 65 and 80, the apostle Peter could not have been the author of 2 Peter. But the use of 2 Peter by Jude poses no such problem, allowing 2 Peter to fit within Peter's lifetime. It seems best to conclude that Jude borrowed from 2 Peter or that both used a common source.

STRUCTURE

The epistle of Jude is a vigorous and pointed piece of writing. Scholars have often remarked that its Greek is quite good and that Jude used imagery effectively. The letter bears the marks of a careful and disciplined structure and was directed to specific circumstances in the life of the church. Jude was steeped in the OT and Jewish tradition, and he regularly applied OT types and texts to the false teachers who had invaded the church (vv. 8,12,16).

Pseudepigraphal writings are noncanonical books not written by their purported authors. Jude cited from the pseudepigraphal book of 1 Enoch (1:9) in Jude 14-15. He likely also referred to an event found in the Assumption of Moses (Jd 9). But this does not mean that Jude viewed these noncanonical books as authoritative Scripture. Under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, he simply used them as illustrations.

CHRISTIAN WORLDVIEW ELEMENTS

TEACHINGS ABOUT GOD

God is referred to as Father, Savior, and Lord (vv. 1,9,25). The grace of God is the attribute that comes to the fore in this book (v. 4). Jesus is also called Lord, and he is the One who keeps his people and brings them to eternal life (vv. 1,21,25). The Spirit, never given to those who reject the truth, enables the prayers of the saints (vv. 19-20).

TEACHINGS ABOUT HUMANITY

Jude shows the great evil of those who are enslaved by falsehood: "wild waves of the sea, foaming up their shameful deeds; wandering stars for whom the blackness of darkness is reserved forever" (v. 13). On the other hand, redeemed humanity looks forward to everlasting joy: "Now to him who is able to protect you from stumbling and to make you stand in the presence of his glory, without blemish and with great joy" (v. 24).

TEACHINGS ABOUT SALVATION

Jude had intended to write about the "the salvation we share," but he wrote instead about false teachers (v. 3). He refers to God as "Savior" (v. 25). Verse 24 makes clear that salvation is God's doing from start to finish (see also v. 1).

GREETING

1 Jude, † a servant of Jesus Christ and a brother of James: To those who are the called, † loved † † by God the Father and kept for Jesus Christ. †

2 May mercy, peace, and love be multiplied to you. †

JUDE'S PURPOSE IN WRITING

3 Dear friends, although I was eager to write you about the salvation we share, † I found it necessary to write, appealing to you to contend for the faith † that was delivered † to the saints once for all. 4 For some people, who were designated for this judgment long ago, † † have come in by stealth; † they are ungodly, † turning the grace of our God into sensuality and denying † Jesus Christ, our only Master and Lord.

APOSTATES: PAST AND PRESENT

5 Now I want to remind you, although you came to know all these things once and for all, that Jesus † saved a people out of Egypt and later destroyed those who did not believe; † 6 and the angels † who did not keep their own position but abandoned their proper dwelling, he has kept in eternal chains in deep darkness for the judgment on the great day. 7 Likewise, Sodom and Gomorrah † and the surrounding towns committed sexual immorality and perversions, † and serve as an example by undergoing the punishment of eternal fire. †

8 In the same way these people — relying on their dreams — defile their flesh, reject authority, and slander glorious ones. † 9 Yet when Michael † the archangel † was disputing with the devil † in an argument about Moses's † body, he did not dare utter a slanderous condemnation against him but said, "The Lord rebuke you!" 10 But these people blaspheme anything they do not understand. And what they do understand by instinct — like irrational animals — by these things they are destroyed. 11 Woe to them! For they have gone the way of Cain, † have plunged into Balaam's error † for profit, and have perished in Korah's rebellion. †

THE APOSTATES' DOOM

12 These people are dangerous reefs † at your love feasts † as they eat with you without reverence. They are shepherds who only look after themselves. They are waterless clouds carried along by winds; † trees in late autumn — fruitless, twice dead and uprooted. 13 They are wild waves of the sea, foaming up their shameful deeds; wandering stars † for whom the blackness of darkness † is reserved forever. †

14 It was about these that Enoch, † in the seventh generation from Adam, prophesied: "Look! The Lord comes with tens of thousands of his holy ones † 15 to execute judgment on all and to convict all the ungodly † concerning all the ungodly acts that they have done in an ungodly way, and concerning all the harsh things ungodly sinners have said against him."

WORLDVIEW THINKING, THE CHRISTIAN INTELLECTUAL TRADITION, AND THE PATTERN OF CHRISTIAN TRUTH

The Christian intellectual tradition serves as a valuable resource for Christ-followers, helping them understand the way that Christians through the years have read the Bible, formulated doctrine, provided education, and engaged the culture. The apostle Paul, writing to the church at Thessalonica, urged the followers of Jesus Christ to "stand firm and hold to the traditions that you were taught" (2Th 2:15). Similarly, the apostle exhorted Timothy, his apostolic legate, to "hold on to the pattern of sound teaching" (2Tm 1:13). The history of Christianity is best understood as a chain of memory.

THE CHRISTIAN INTELLECTUAL TRADITION

Wherever the Christian faith has been found, there has been a close association with the written Word of God, with books, education, and learning. Studying and interpreting the Bible became natural for members of the early Christian community; it inherited the practice from late Judaism. The Christian intellectual tradition has its roots in the interpretation of Holy Scripture. From the church's earliest days, Christians inherited the approaches to biblical interpretation found in the writings of both intertestamental Judaism and the contemporary Greco-Roman world. From this dual heritage, there is an observable continuity with the hermeneutical methods of the rabbis and Philo as well as the followers of Plato and Aristotle. Yet, a discontinuity is also clearly evident as early Christianity established its own uniqueness by separating itself from Judaism and the surrounding Greco-Roman religions.

Since the earliest days of Christian history, Christians have drawn on the Bible in various ways. The rich heritage has shaped the Christian tradition in both individual and corporate practices. In order to recover this valuable resource for our contemporary context, we must seek to learn from interpreters of Scripture, from theologians, and from educators, as well as from other Christian leaders. We can learn to think deeply about the things of God from representatives of this tradition who have gone before us and on whose shoulders we now stand. Justin Martyr and Irenaeus were probably among the first in post-apostolic times to articulate the importance of thinking in Christian categories. In Alexandria in the third century, both Clement and Origen instructed their converts not only in doctrine, but also in science, literature, and philosophy. Augustine in the fifth century, in On Christian Doctrine, penned the thought that every true and good Christian should understand that wherever we find truth, it is the Lord's.

Similar patterns may be found throughout history, for wherever the gospel has been received, educational entities and Christian literacy have generally followed. This legacy can be traced not only though Bernard of Clairvaux and Thomas Aquinas, but also Erasmus, Luther, Calvin, and Melanchthon. We learn much from post-Reformation philosophers, scientists, theologians, and literary scholars like Pascal, Kepler, Edwards, Washington, Lewis, Sayers, and numerous others. This pattern of Christian truth lies at the heart of the Christian intellectual tradition; it is a pattern that is both shaped and informed by our confession of the Christian faith. As we learn from the tradition, we will see our faith strengthened and will experience a renewal of our orthodox commitments to the divine nature and authority of God's written Word, to the deity and humanity of Jesus Christ, to a heartfelt confession regarding the holy Trinity, to the uniqueness of the gospel message and the enabling work of God's Holy Spirit, to salvation by grace through faith, to the global church, to the hope of the coming kingdom, and to the sacredness of life and family.

Thoughtful Christians will work to develop a model of dynamic orthodoxy in conversation with Nicaea, Chalcedon, Augustine, Bernard, Luther, Calvin, Wesley, the Pietists, and the influential global Christian leaders of the twenty-first century in order to reclaim and build upon the great Christian intellectual tradition. The great tradition of Christian thinking not only helps to shape our biblical and theological understanding, but also provides a vast resource for philosophy, art, music, literature, drama, architecture, law, political and social thought, and other forms of cultural and academic engagement. Interestingly, Christian reflection and devotional practices were influenced by the work of this significant heritage. It is our hope that as we wrestle with the many challenges facing Christ-followers in our day, the great tradition of Christian thinking will provide valuable resources and examples to encourage our faith and shape significant ecclesiastical, educational, and cultural pursuits—even as we grow in our appreciation for and commitment to thinking Christianly for the glory of God.

THE PATTERN OF CHRISTIAN TRUTH

The gospel, the Christian faith, becomes the interpretive framework with which to make sense of all other knowledge and experience. This interpretive framework, which guides the Christian in worldview thinking, —in thinking Christianly— is shaped by primary Christian doctrines, what H. E. W. Turner has referred to as "the pattern of Christian truth," those key doctrines believed consistently and in consensus by Christians throughout the centuries, which have informed and shaped the best of the Christian intellectual tradition. We now turn our attention to these important doctrines that significantly inform all aspects of Christian thinking.

1. CREATION: THE WORK OF THE CREATOR GOD

Christian thinking recognizes two broad dimensions of reality: God, the Creator, and the world, his creation. Scripture teaches that God, without the use of any preexisting material, brought into being everything that is. Both the opening verse of the Bible and the initial sentence of the Apostles' Creed confess God as Creator. The doctrine of creation contains truth of utmost importance: everything that is, was created by God. The world, which was created by him, has been made for the good of men and women, who have been created in God's image (Gn 1:26-28).

This world is distinct from its Creator, the Triune God. The significance of the Trinitarian understanding of creation recognizes that it is not just any god who created the world; it is the Triune God who is Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. The great thinkers of the early church wrote numerous commentaries on the creation story of Genesis 1–3, more so than any other part of the Bible, because they understood that it contradicted the fundamental beliefs of their inherited pagan culture and challenged them to replace it with something that was true to reality.

2. HUMANITY AND THE FALL

Men and women are the highest form of God's creation. The primary reason for stressing the importance of humans in God's plan for creation, over against the rest of God's creation, relates to the distinctive description regarding humanity in God's image (Gn 1:26-27). Because they are created in the image of God, men and women have dignity, rationality, morality, spirituality, and personality.

Even though men and women are created in God's image, the entrance of sin into the world has resulted in negative influences on God's creation, especially humans. As a result of sin, they are separated from God, having fallen short of his glory (Rm 3:23). Nevertheless, the image of God, even though tainted, tarnished, and marred by sin, has not been lost (Gn 9:6; Jms 3:9). The role of exercising stewardship over the earth (Gn 1:28) has been drastically disturbed by the effects of sin on humans. The ability to live in right relationship with God, with others, with nature, and with our own selves has now been corrupted.

The impact of sin is significant when reflecting on the matters of our relationship to God. Because of the entrance of sin into the world and our inheritance of Adam's sinful nature (Rm 5:12-19), we are by nature hostile to God and estranged from him (Rm 8:7; Eph 2:1-3). We thus have wills that do not obey, eyes that do not see, and ears that do not hear because spiritually we are dead to our Creator. Because of sin, all dimensions of humans, including our thinking, have been distorted. The effects of sin, brokenness, and depravity, involve our total, willful rejection of the will and glory of God.

3. SALVATION IN CHRIST

Because of sin, all in this world are estranged from God, but the biblical answer for that problem is that Jesus Christ has regained what was lost in Adam (Rm 5:12-21). The grace of God has provided our restoration and brought about a right relationship with God, with one another, with nature, and with ourselves. Grace declares that salvation is not the culmination of humanity's quest for God but that it resides in the initiative of God toward men and women (Eph 1:4-7). Grace comes to us while we are still in our sins and brings spiritual transformation based on the accomplished cross-work of Jesus Christ. Grace is, as B. B. Warfield observed, God's "free sovereign favor to the ill-deserving." God does not graciously accept us because he sees our change for the better, as if conversion were the basis for receiving God's grace. Instead the Bible pictures God's coming into our lives and taking us just as we are because he is abundantly merciful (Eph 2:1-10).

As a result of God's grace, believers experience salvation from sin, which involves conversion to God. All of salvation is of God, yet we respond in faith and commitment. The Bible expresses these truths in various pictures, underscoring throughout that God is the author and finisher of our salvation (Heb 12:2). These various themes of regeneration, justification, adoption, and forgiveness are presented as the new sphere of union with Christ for all who have placed their faith in him (Jn 15; Rm 6:1-11; Eph 1-3-14). Our union with Christ presents us in a new position before God. Experientially, the union of believers with Christ is one of the most beautiful and tender concepts expressed in Scripture.

We recognize that this gift of salvation rests in what Jesus Christ has done for fallen people. Christ's life and death exemplified the love of God and exerted an influence for good by providing a model of servanthood and sacrifice. More importantly, Christ's death provided for sinners a sinless substitutionary sacrifice that satisfies divine justice, an incomprehensibly valuable redemption delivering sinners from estrangement to full fellowship and inheritance in the household of God.

We trustingly confess and affirm that Jesus Christ as the God-Man has fully revealed God to men and women. Having lived a sinless life, Christ died in our place for our sins. He now sits exalted at God's right hand, a position of honor and exaltation, exercising his rule and dominion. Those who have placed their trust in Jesus Christ for salvation gladly acknowledge Jesus as Lord; he is our Prophet, Priest, and King, who has completely revealed God, reconciled humankind with God, and who sits enthroned as Ruler of God's kingdom and head of his church. In him, we place our trust and hope, offering our thanksgiving for the salvation he has provided for us.

4. THE HOLY SPIRIT: RENEWAL AND COMMUNITY

With the coming of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost (Ac 2), there was a universalizing of the ministry and mission of Jesus. Jesus was God's final Word to humanity, and the Spirit's role was not to bring some new revelation of his own, but to bear witness to Jesus and to interpret and explicate the full implications of God's final Word. The Spirit came in order to enable and unite believers in an unparalleled manner. The ultimate purpose of the Spirit was to bring life and renewal to Christ-followers, drawing them together into the new community, the church of Jesus Christ, and to empower this community for mission, which was the spreading of good news and exalting the name of Christ. Life in the Spirit energizes and enables the new community of faith.

The basis for life in the Spirit must never be forgotten. Through the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ, the Spirit applies justification, regeneration, sanctification, and ultimate glorification to the lives of believers. Life in the Spirit is living out, by the Spirit's empowerment, what believers are because of Christ, exalting him in the expansion of the church's worship, ministry and mission, which includes conversion, evangelism, fellowship, renewal, and holiness.

5. ESCHATOLOGY: GOD'S RULE AND REIGN

God's final rule and reign will bring victory when Christ returns to establish and consummate his kingdom. Regardless of the diligent and industrious attempts by men and women to bring about righteousness and peace to earth, true peace and righteousness will take place only when Jesus Christ comes again. The agelong quest of the nations can only be fulfilled by the work of Christ. Sincere believers differ over their understanding of the nature and chronology of Christ's return as well as their expectations for the kingdom itself. Yet all orthodox Christians believe that following Christ's return, the dead will be raised, both the righteous and the wicked, leading to judgment and then to the eternal state.

The eternal climax of redemptive history is seen in the description of the new Jerusalem (Rv 21–22). The general image of a future Jerusalem symbolizes the fulfillment of many of God's promises to his people (Is 2:1-5; 49:14-18; 52; 54; 60–62; 65:17-25; Jr 31:38-40; Mc 4:1-4; Zch 14). As is true of Christ's return and other features of his rule and reign, the trustworthiness of Scripture underscores our confidence that these prophecies are indeed true. The picture of the new Jerusalem emphasizes that the people of God will be a universal community of redeemed individuals living together in love.

For all eternity the redeemed of the Lord will worship the triune God supremely without impurity. We will enjoy fellowship with him without conflict. We will serve the living God forever. Worldview Christians, with eagerness and expectancy, hope for that day.

DAVID S. DOCKERY

16 These people are discontented grumblers, living according to their desires; † their mouths utter arrogant words, flattering † people for their own advantage.
17 But you, dear friends, remember what was predicted by the apostles of our Lord Jesus Christ. 18 They told you, "In the end time † there will be scoffers † living according to their own ungodly desires." 19 These people create divisions and are worldly, † not having the Spirit.

EXHORTATION AND BENEDICTION

20 But you, dear friends, as you build yourselves up in your most holy faith, praying in the Holy Spirit, † 21 keep yourselves in the love of God, † waiting expectantly for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ for eternal life. 22 Have mercy on those who waver; 23 save others by snatching them from the fire; † have mercy on others but with fear, † hating † even the garment † defiled by the flesh.

24 Now to him † who is able to protect you from stumbling † and to make you stand in the presence of his glory, without blemish † and with great joy, 25 to the only † God our Savior, through Jesus Christ our Lord, † be glory, majesty, power, and authority before all time, † now and forever. Amen.

1 Jude was a brother of James—the same James who was a half brother of Jesus. Referring to himself in this way, rather than as a brother of Jesus, is probably a mark of humility. His brotherly relationship with Jesus is only biological; it does not in itself give Jude special status.

3 The faith that was delivered to the saints once for all indicates that the apostolic message about Christ is the final authoritative message. It should not to be changed over time.

4 People . . . designated for this judgment long ago suggests that false teachers were assigned their fate, just as those called were (v. 1). To have come in by stealth means that they dwelt among the fellowship of believers, but did not truly belong to the church. Their problem is that they turn the grace of our God into sensuality. That is, they treat God's grace as an excuse for indulging in immoral behavior.

5 God's rescue of his people out of Egypt recalls the great salvation event of the OT—the exodus (Ex 6–14). It is striking that Jude regards this salvation as performed by Jesus, indicating his participation in the actions of God in times past.

6 Jude refers to Genesis 6:1-4, in which the "sons of God" are the angels mentioned here (See "A Biblical View of Angels," p. 1531). Jude seems to be alluding to a discussion of this text in 1 Enoch, an ancient Jewish writing. It too uses the imagery of chains and deep darkness to indicate the angels' captivity while awaiting God's final judgment.

7 The cities of Sodom and Gomorrah are commonly used as an example of extreme ungodliness that received God's just judgment (Gn 19). Eternal fire is the judgment that awaits those who deny Jesus Christ (v. 4).

8 The slander of glorious ones most likely refers to the rejection of angels. It is unclear what this means, but one possibility is that in Jewish tradition, angels were seen as participating in God's final judgment of humanity. By rejecting angels, the false teachers mock final judgment.

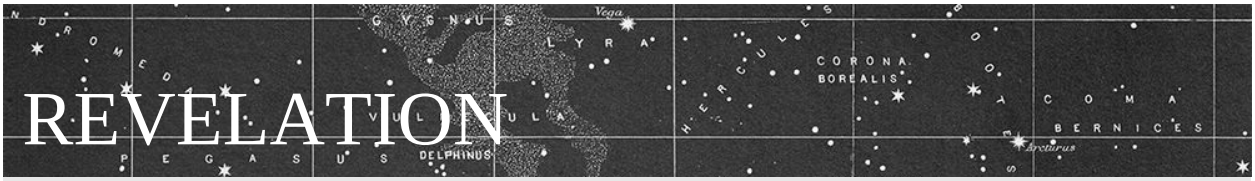
9 Michael the archangel is mentioned in Daniel 10:13,21; 12:1 and Revelation 12:7. The story about a dispute over Moses's body does not occur in the OT or elsewhere in the NT. Several early church fathers claimed it was contained in a book titled The Assumption of Moses. It is unclear whether Jude considers this story factual or is simply alluding to a well-known fable to make a point.

11 In Jewish literature, Cain and Balaam had become chief examples of wickedness. Korah led a rebellion against Moses (Nm 16); he was thus an example of rebellion against proper authority and subsequent judgment.

14-15 Enoch was an early descendant of Adam who did not die, but was translated directly to heaven (Gn 5:18-24). He became the focus of much interest in Jewish literature. Jude quotes from 1 Enoch 1:9, it's a book ascribed to this Enoch.

18 Consistent with the rest of the NT, Jude regards the current period as the end time. The presence of scoffers and false teachers in this period ought not be surprising since it was predicted by the apostles (v. 17).

22-23 Christians in the community of faith are expected to watch over, care for, and protect one another's spiritual health. Mercy for those who waver requires compassion for believers who experience doubt. Doubt is not to be treated harshly, or with judgment, but as a normal struggle believers will face.



REVELATION

INTRODUCTION

The resurrected, glorified Son of Man (Jesus Christ) revealed himself to the apostle John, who had been imprisoned "on the island called Patmos" (1:9). Christ's twofold purpose was (1) to "unveil" a spiritual diagnosis for seven of the churches in Asia Minor with which John was familiar (chaps. 2–3), and (2) to reveal to John a series of visions setting forth events and factors related to the end times (chaps. 4–22).

CIRCUMSTANCES OF WRITING

AUTHOR: The traditional view holds that the author of Revelation is the apostle John, who wrote the Fourth Gospel and the three letters of John. Evidences for this view include: (1) the writer referred to himself as "John" (1:4,9; 22:8); (2) he had personal relationships with the seven churches of Asia Minor (1:4,11; chaps. 2–3); (3) his circumstances at the time of writing (1:9) matched those of John the apostle (who was placed in Asia Minor from about AD 70 to 100 by reliable historical sources from the second century AD); and (4) the saturation of the book with OT imagery and echoes implies a Jewish writer, like John, operating in overwhelmingly Gentile Asia Minor.

BACKGROUND: The initial audience that received the book of Revelation was a group of seven local churches in southwest Asia Minor (1:11; chaps. 2–3). Some of these congregations were experiencing persecution (2:9-10,13), probably under the Roman emperor Domitian. Others had doctrinal and practical problems (2:6,13-15,20-23). Also behind these surface problems was the backdrop of unseen but powerful spiritual warfare (2:10,14,24; 3:9).

Though some scholars have dated the book later and a few have dated it earlier, commonly held dates of Revelation among evangelical scholars are the mid-90s and the late 60s of the first century AD. The mid-90s view is the stronger view, and it is held by majority opinion. Each view gives a different account of the persecution portrayed in the letters to the churches (2:9-10,13). Substantial historical evidence shows that some of the churches were persecuted intensely by Nero in the late 60s. But the reference in 17:10 to seven kings, five of whom have fallen, supports a date in the mid-90s, during the reign of Domitian.

While a case can be made for a late-60s date based on the Nero-related inferences and a possible reference to the Jerusalem temple in 11:1-2 (which may imply that the temple had not yet been destroyed, as it was by the Romans in AD 70), all other factors favor a date of about AD 95. Most notable among these factors is the tradition that John the apostle was exiled to Patmos during a period of intensifying local persecution of Christians by the Emperor Domitian (ruled AD 81–96).

CONTRIBUTION TO THE BIBLE

The book of Revelation provides an almost complete overview of theology. There is much in this book about Christ, mankind and sin, the people of God (both the church and Israel), holy angels, and Satan and the demons. There is important material on God's power and tri-unity (i.e., Trinity), plus aspects of the work of the Holy Spirit and the nature of Scripture.

STRUCTURE

The book of Revelation previews its sequential structure in 1:19: "Therefore write what you have seen, what is, and what will take place after this." From the apostle John's vantage point in being commanded to "write," he had already seen the vision of the exalted Son of Man (chap. 1). Next, he was told to "write" letters to the seven churches, telling each the state of their spiritual health (chaps. 2–3). Lastly comes the body of the book (4:1–22:5), which covers all the events that would "take place after this."

CHRISTIAN WORLDVIEW ELEMENTS

TEACHINGS ABOUT GOD

Revelation teaches the supremacy and glory of God in all things. God is the primary mover who will bring about the return of Christ and the end of the world. The righteous wrath of a holy God is fully displayed in Revelation. The book teaches about the Trinity and contributes greatly to an understanding of the deity of Christ.

TEACHINGS ABOUT HUMANITY

Revelation shows the sinfulness of humans in stark terms. There are only two kinds of people in Revelation: those who follow the Lamb (and bear his special mark) and those who follow the beast (and bear his mark). Those who follow the Lamb are given unimaginably great blessings, but they are a minority. The majority that follows evil is destined for eternal damnation.

TEACHINGS ABOUT SALVATION

Salvation from sin in Revelation is presented mainly in terms of something God purchased through the death of the Lamb (the first coming of Christ). Those who are saved oppose evil "by the blood of the Lamb and by the word of their testimony; for they did not love their lives to the point of death" (12:11). Final salvation after the resurrection is presented mainly in terms of "the holy city, the new Jerusalem" (21:2).

PROLOGUE

1 The revelation of † Jesus Christ that God gave him to show his servants † what must soon take place. † He made it known by sending his angel † to his servant John, † 2 who testified to the word of God and to the testimony † of Jesus Christ, † whatever he saw. † 3 Blessed is the one who reads aloud the words of this prophecy, † and blessed are those who hear the words of this prophecy and keep † what is written in it, because the time is near.

4 John: To the seven churches in Asia. Grace and peace † to you from † the one who is, who was, and who is to come, † and from the seven spirits † † before his throne, 5 and from Jesus Christ, the faithful witness, † the firstborn from the dead † and the ruler of the kings of the earth. †

To him who loves us and has set us free † from our sins by his blood, † 6 and made us a kingdom, † priests † † to his God and Father — to him be glory and dominion forever and ever. Amen. †

7 Look, he is coming with the clouds, † and every eye will see him, even those who pierced him.
And all the tribes † of the earth † † will mourn over him. † † †
So it is to be. Amen.

8 "I am the Alpha and the Omega," † says the Lord God, "the one who is, who was, and who is to come, the Almighty."

JOHN'S VISION OF THE RISEN LORD

9 I, John, your brother and partner in the affliction, † kingdom, † and endurance † that are in Jesus, was on the island called Patmos because of the word of God and the testimony of Jesus. † 10 I was in the Spirit † † on the Lord's day, and I heard a loud voice behind me like a trumpet † 11 saying, "Write † on a scroll † what you see and send it to the seven churches: Ephesus, Smyrna, Pergamum, Thyatira, Sardis, Philadelphia, and Laodicea."

12 Then I turned to see whose voice † it was that spoke to me. When I turned I saw seven golden lampstands, † 13 and among the lampstands was one like the Son of Man, † † dressed in a robe † and with a golden sash wrapped around his chest. † 14 The hair of his head was white as wool — white as snow † — and his eyes like a fiery flame. † 15 His feet were like fine bronze as it is fired in a furnace, † and his voice like the sound of cascading † waters. † 16 He had seven stars in his right hand; a sharp double-edged sword came from his mouth, † and his face was shining like the sun at full strength. †

17 When I saw him, I fell at his feet like a dead man. † He laid his right hand on me and said, "Don't be afraid. I am the First and the Last, † 18 and the Living One. † I was dead, but look — I am alive forever and ever, † and I hold the keys † of death and Hades. 19 Therefore write what you have seen, † what is, and what will take place after this. 20 The mystery † of the seven stars you saw in my right hand and of the seven golden lampstands is this: The seven stars are the angels † of the seven churches, and the seven lampstands † are the seven churches. †

1:1 The mediation of angels is often found in prophetic and apocalyptic literature (Ezk 40–48; Dn 7–12; Zch 1–6). Since the first century, it has been debated which John authored the book. The earliest tradition is that this John is the same as the author of the Gospel of John and 1, 2, and 3 John. He is the apostle known as John the son of Zebedee and brother of James (Mt 4:21).

1:4 The region of Asia is modern Turkey. The seven churches and their cities are listed at 1:11 (and in chaps. 2–3). That the phrase seven spirits (or "sevenfold spirit") is placed between God the Father and Jesus Christ suggests that it refers to the Holy Spirit.

1:7 The language of this verse is drawn from Daniel 7:13 and Zechariah 12:10. John uses these images to depict the nature of Jesus's return, or second coming—a major theme of the book.

1:8 Alpha is the first letter of the Greek alphabet and Omega is the last letter. Thus, the phrase is used to indicate that the Lord God is "the First and the Last" (1:17) or "the beginning and the end" (21:6). This title will later be assumed by Jesus (22:13).

1:9 Patmos is an island in the Aegean Sea, off the coast of Asia Minor (Turkey). Banishment to such islands was a common Roman punishment.

1:10 Being in the Spirit is mentioned four times in the book, each in relation to seeing a vision (1:10; 4:2; 17:3; 21:10). This is the first recorded use of the Lord's day to refer to Sunday. The usage became more common in later writings.

1:17 In the Scriptures, falling to the ground is a typical response to an encounter with God (see Is 6).

1:18 Death and Hades are near synonyms for the place of the dead. To hold the keys of a place is to have authority over it. In contrast to Greek religious ideas, Jesus—not some other deity like the god named Hades—rules over death. In Jewish thought, God held this authority, so here Jesus is identified with God.

1:20 The presence of angels at congregations was assumed by the early church (1Co 11:10). The lampstand (menorah) was an important feature in the tabernacle and temple. The symbolism of the seven golden lampstands conveys that the seven churches are vessels of spiritual light.

THE LETTER TO EPHESUS

2 "Write to the angel † of the church in Ephesus: Thus says the one who holds the seven stars in his right hand and who walks among the seven golden lampstands: † 2 I know your works, your labor, and your endurance, † and that you cannot tolerate evil people. You have tested those who call themselves apostles and are not, † and you have found them to be liars. † 3 I know that you have persevered and endured hardships for the sake of my name, † and have not grown weary. 4 But I have this against you: You have abandoned the love you had at first. † 5 Remember then how far you have fallen; repent, and do the works you did at first. † Otherwise, I will come to you † and remove your lampstand from its place, unless you repent. 6 Yet you do have this: You hate the practices of the Nicolaitans, which I also hate.

7 “Let anyone who has ears to hear listen to what the Spirit says to the churches.
To the one who conquers, I will give † the right to eat from the tree of life, which is in † the paradise of God. †

THE LETTER TO SMYRNA

8 “Write to the angel of the church in Smyrna: Thus says the First and the Last, † the one who was dead and came to life: 9 I know your † affliction and poverty, but you are rich. I know the slander of those who say they are Jews and are not, but are a synagogue of Satan. † 10 Don’t be afraid of what you are about to suffer. Look, the devil † is about to throw some of you into prison to test you, and you will experience affliction for ten days. † Be faithful to the point of death, † and I will give you the crown † of life. † 11 “Let anyone who has ears to hear listen to what the Spirit says to the churches. The one who conquers will never be harmed by the second death. †

THE LETTER TO PERGAMUM

12 “Write to the angel of the church in Pergamum: Thus says the one who has the sharp, double-edged sword: † 13 I know † where you live — where Satan’s throne is. Yet you are holding on to my name and did not deny your faith in me, † † even in the days of Antipas, my faithful witness † who was put to death among you, where Satan lives. 14 But I have a few things against you. You have some there who hold to the teaching of Balaam, † who taught Balak to place a stumbling block † in front of the Israelites: to eat meat sacrificed to idols † and to commit sexual immorality. † 15 In the same way, you also have those who hold to the teaching of the Nicolaitans. † 16 So repent! Otherwise, I will come to you quickly † and fight against them with the sword of my mouth. †
17 “Let anyone who has ears to hear listen to what the Spirit says to the churches. To the one who conquers, I will give some of the hidden manna. † † I will also give him a white stone, and on the stone a new name † is inscribed that no one knows except the one who receives it.

THE LETTER TO THYATIRA

18 “Write to the angel of the church in Thyatira: Thus says the Son of God, † the one whose eyes are like a fiery flame and whose feet are like fine bronze: † 19 I know your works — your love, faithfulness, † service, and endurance. † I know that your last works are greater than the first. 20 But I have this against you: You tolerate the woman Jezebel, † who calls herself a prophetess and teaches and deceives my servants to commit sexual immorality and to eat meat sacrificed to idols. † 21 I gave her time to repent, † but she does not want to repent of her sexual immorality. † 22 Look, I will throw her into a sickbed † and those who commit adultery with her † into great affliction. † Unless they repent of her † works, 23 I will strike her children dead. † † Then all the churches will know that I am the one who examines minds and hearts, † and I will give to each of you according to your works. † 24 I say to the rest of you in Thyatira, who do not hold this teaching, who haven’t known “the so-called secrets † † of Satan” † — as they say — I am not putting any other burden on you. † 25 Only hold on to what you have until I come. † 26 The one who conquers and who keeps my works to the end: I will give him authority over the nations —
27 and he will rule † † them with an iron scepter;
he will shatter them like pottery † † — 28 just as I have received this from my Father. I will also give him the morning star. †

2:4 Love, for God and others, is essential to Christianity. Even vigilance for orthodoxy and perseverance under persecution cannot make up for its lack (see also 1Co 13).

2:5 Since the lampstand represents the church, what is threatened is the removal of the church.

2:6-7 Little is known about the Nicolaitans. From the mention of them in 2:15, it seems they encouraged accommodation to pagan society by eating meat sacrificed to idols and engaging in sexual immorality. The tree of life in paradise brings to mind Eden (Gn 2–3). The Lord promises eternal life to those who overcome.

2:9 Though the Jews in Smyrna claimed to worship God in the synagogue, they became in fact a synagogue of Satan when they rejected Jesus and persecuted his followers. This is not anti-Semitism, as it is not a denunciation of all Jews as Jews (Jesus and John were both Jews). Rather, it is a rebuke of those who think they are serving God by persecuting his people.

2:10 The crown of life is promised for those who endure persecution unto death. Reward for faithfulness is therefore eschatological, not received in this life.

2:11 The second death is defined in chapter 20.

2:13 The identity of Satan's throne is debated. Some have suggested the altar of Zeus or temples in Pergamum. The primary earthly enemy of the church in Revelation, however, is Rome. The first temple dedicated to emperor worship was in Pergamum in 29 BC.

2:14 Balaam is the prophet who told Balak, the Moabite king, the way to overcome the Israelites. He suggested seducing them to idolatry and sexual immorality, which would lead to God's wrath falling on them (Nm 23–25).

2:17 Hidden manna probably refers to the manna that had been preserved in the ark of the covenant but was lost when the temple was destroyed. This is a symbolic promise of eternal life. White stone[s] were used for a variety of things, including admission. Receiving a new name is often associated with a new life.

2:18 Eyes like a fiery flame and . . . feet like fine bronze apparently recalls the local deity, Helius Pythius Tyrimnaeus Apollo, a sun god.

2:20 Jezebel was the wicked queen of Israel who promoted immorality and the worship of Baal (1Kg 16–23). This name is applied to a woman in Thyatira, who similarly encouraged the people of God to compromise with the world by engaging in idolatry and sexual immorality.

2:24 The so-called secrets of Satan are apparently "divine mysteries" promoted by Jezebel and her followers.

2:28 The morning star probably alludes to Numbers 24:17: "A star will come from Jacob." In second temple Judaism, this image was associated with the coming Messiah (1Pt 1:19).

THE LETTER TO SARDIS

3 "Write to the angel † of the church in Sardis: Thus says the one who has the seven spirits of God † and the seven stars: † I know your works; † you have a reputation † for being alive, but you are dead. †

2 Be alert † and strengthen † what remains, which is about to die, † for I have not found your works complete before my God. 3 Remember, then, what you have received and heard; keep it, and repent. If you are not alert, I will come † like a thief, and you have no idea at what hour I will come upon you. † 4 But you have a few people † in Sardis who have not defiled † their clothes, † and they will walk with me in white, because they are worthy.
5 "In the same way, the one who conquers † will be dressed in white clothes, † and I will never erase his name from the book of life † but will acknowledge his name before my Father and before his angels. † 6 "Let anyone who has ears to hear listen † to what the Spirit says † to the churches.

THE LETTER TO PHILADELPHIA

7 "Write to the angel of the church in Philadelphia: Thus says the Holy One, the true one, † the one who has the key of David, who opens and no one will close, and who closes and no one opens: † 8 I know your works. Look, I have placed before you an open door that no one can close because you have but little power; yet you have kept my word and have not denied my name. † 9 Note this: I will make those from the synagogue of Satan, who claim to be Jews and are not, but are lying — I will make them come and bow down at your feet, † and they will know that I have loved you. † 10 Because you have kept my command to endure, I will also keep you from the hour of testing † that is going to come on the whole world to test those who live on the earth. † 11 I am coming soon. †
Hold on to what you have, † so that no one takes your crown. † 12 "The one who conquers I will make a pillar † in the temple of my God, and he will never go out again. I will write on him the name of my God and the name of the city of my God — the new Jerusalem, † which comes down out of heaven from my God — and my new name. † 13 "Let anyone who has ears to hear listen to what the Spirit says to the churches.

THE LETTER TO LAODICEA

14 “Write to the angel of the church in Laodicea: Thus says the Amen, † the faithful and true witness, the originator † † of God’s creation: 15 I know your works, that you are neither cold nor hot. I wish that you were cold or hot. 16 So, because you are lukewarm, and neither hot nor cold, I am going to vomit † you out of my mouth. 17 For you say, ‘I’m rich; I have become wealthy and need nothing,’ † and you don’t realize that you are wretched, pitiful, poor, blind, and naked. 18 I advise you to buy from me gold refined in the fire so that you may be rich, † white clothes so that you may be dressed and your shameful nakedness not be exposed, † and ointment to spread on your eyes so that you may see.
19 As many as I love, I rebuke and discipline. † So be zealous and repent.
20 See! I stand at the door and knock. If anyone hears my voice and opens the door, I will come in to him and eat with him, and he with me. † 21 “To the one who conquers I will give the right to sit with me on my throne, † just as I also conquered and sat down with my Father on his throne.
22 “Let anyone who has ears to hear listen to what the Spirit says to the churches.”

3:1 On the seven spirits of God, see the note on 1:4.

3:3 The imagery of a thief who will come at an unexpected hour recalls the teaching of Jesus (Mt 24:42-44; also 1Th 5:2; 2Pt 3:10).

3:4-5 In this book, the imagery of white clothing is used to depict moral purity (Dn 7:9; 10:5).

3:5 The book of life is a record of God’s covenant people (Ex 32:32-33; Is 4:3; Dn 12:1). To be erased from it means losing covenant status.

3:7 The key of David is a symbol of authority, drawn from Isaiah 22:15-22.

3:9 On the synagogue of Satan, see the note on 2:9.

3:15-16 Laodicea had a problem with its water supply. Nearby Hierapolis had soothing hot springs, while neighboring Colossae had refreshing cold water. Laodicea had to pipe in its water, and it arrived lukewarm and nauseating. Jesus alludes to this, saying that the church in Laodicea—like its water supply—was useless and sickening.

3:17-18 Laodicea was known for being rich, for its high quality clothing industry, and for its medical school, recognized particularly for treating ailments involving the eyes. Jesus alludes to these sources of pride, turning them upside down in his rebuke of the church.

3:20 The imagery of standing at the door and knocking recalls Jesus's parable of watchfulness (Lk 12:35-40).

THE THRONE ROOM OF HEAVEN

4 After this I looked, and there in heaven was an open door. The first voice that I had heard speaking to me like a trumpet † said, "Come up here, † and I will show you what must take place after this." † 2 Immediately I was in the Spirit, † and there was a throne in heaven † and someone was seated on it. 3 The one seated † there had the appearance of jasper and carnelian stone. † A rainbow that had the appearance of an emerald surrounded the throne. † 4 Around the throne were twenty-four thrones, and on the thrones sat twenty-four elders † dressed in white clothes, † with golden crowns on their heads. † 5 Flashes of lightning and rumblings and peals of thunder came from the throne. † Seven fiery torches were burning before the throne, which are the seven spirits of God. † 6 Something like a sea of glass, similar to crystal, was also before the throne. † Four living creatures covered with eyes in front and in back were around the throne on each side. 7 The first living creature was like a lion; the second living creature was like an ox; the third living creature had a face like a man; and the fourth living creature was like a flying eagle. † 8 Each of the four living creatures had six wings; † they were covered with eyes around and inside. Day and night † they never stop, † saying,

Holy, holy, holy,
Lord God, the Almighty,

who was, who is, and who is to come. †

9 Whenever the living creatures give glory, honor, and thanks to the one seated on the throne, the one who lives forever and ever, † 10 the twenty-four elders fall down before the one seated on the throne † and worship the one who lives forever and ever. They cast their crowns before the throne and say,

11 Our Lord and God, †
you are worthy † to receive glory and honor and power, † because you have created all things, † and by your will they exist and were created.

4:2 See the note on 1:10.

4:4 The number twenty-four may allude to the orders of priests in the OT (1Ch 24–25), or to the combination of the twelve tribes and the twelve apostles, representing the people of God from the old and new covenants (see Rv 21:12-14).

4:5 On the seven spirits of God, see the note on 1:4.

4:6-8 The four living creatures are drawn from Ezekiel 1:10 and 10:12, and their speech is from Isaiah 6:3. They represent God's created order—humankind is head of all creation; the lion is the king of wild animals; the ox is the strongest of domesticated animals; and the eagle dominates birds of the air.

THE LAMB TAKES THE SCROLL

5 Then I saw in the right hand of the one seated on the throne a scroll with writing on both sides, sealed with seven seals. † 2 I also saw a mighty angel † proclaiming with a loud voice, "Who is worthy to open the scroll and break its seals? " 3 But no one in heaven or on earth or under the earth was able to open the scroll or even to look in it. 4 I wept and wept because no one was found worthy to open † the scroll or even to look in it. 5 Then one of the elders said to me, “Do not weep. Look, the Lion from the tribe of Judah, † the Root of David, † has conquered † so that he is able to open the scroll and † its seven seals.”

6 Then I saw one like a slaughtered lamb † standing in the midst of the throne and the four living creatures and among the elders. He had seven horns and seven eyes, which are the seven spirits of God † sent into all the earth. 7 He went and took the scroll out of the right hand of the one seated on the throne.

THE LAMB IS WORTHY

8 When he took the scroll, the four living creatures and the twenty-four elders fell down before the Lamb. Each one had a harp † and golden bowls † filled with incense, † which are the prayers of the saints. 9 And they sang a new song: †

You are worthy to take the scroll and to open its seals, because you were slaughtered, and you purchased † people † for God by your blood from every tribe and language and people and nation. † 10 You made them a kingdom † and priests to our God, † and they will reign on the earth.

11 Then I looked and heard the voice of many angels around the throne, and also of the living creatures and of the elders. Their number was countless thousands, plus thousands of thousands. † 12 They said with a loud voice,

Worthy is the Lamb who was slaughtered to receive power and riches and wisdom and strength and honor and glory and blessing!

13 I heard every creature in heaven, on earth, under the earth, † on the sea, and everything in them say, †

Blessing and honor and glory and power be to the one seated on the throne, and to the Lamb, forever and ever!

14 The four living creatures said, “Amen,” and the elders fell down and worshiped.

5:1 Ezekiel saw a two-sided scroll that spoke of lament and mourning (Ezk 2:9-10). A sealed scroll could not be read unless opened by someone with appropriate authority.

5:5 The Lion from the tribe of Judah recalls Jacob’s blessing of his son Judah (Gn 49:9). The lion became a symbol of messianic hope in Jewish literature.

5:6 A lamb is the most common image used of Jesus in Revelation; it appears twenty-eight times. It recalls the Passover lamb slaughtered for each captive Israelite household in Egypt (Ex 12:21). Horns symbolize power (Ps 75:10). The number seven conveys completion or perfection.

5:8-9 See “A Biblical View of Music,” p. 727.

5:9 Because Jesus has purchased (redeemed) people from every tribe and language and people and nation, the church cannot be limited to any certain group. THE FIRST SEAL ON THE SCROLL

6 Then I saw the Lamb open one of the seven † seals, and I heard one of the four living creatures say with a voice like thunder, † “Come!” 2 I looked, and there was a white horse. † Its rider held a bow; † a crown † was given to him, and he went out as a conqueror in order to conquer. †

THE SECOND SEAL

3 When he opened the second seal, I heard the second living creature say, “Come!” 4 Then another horse went out, a fiery red one, † and its rider was allowed to take peace from the earth, so that people would slaughter one another. And a large sword was given to him. †

THE THIRD SEAL

5 When he opened the third seal, I heard the third living creature say, “Come! ” And I looked, and there was a black horse. † Its rider held a set of scales in his hand. † 6 Then I heard something like a voice among the four living creatures say, “A quart of wheat for a denarius, † and three quarts of barley for a denarius, † but do not harm the oil and the wine.” †

THE FOURTH SEAL

7 When he opened the fourth seal, I heard the voice of the fourth living creature say, “Come! ” 8 And I looked, and there was a pale green † horse. Its rider was named Death, and Hades was following after him. † They were † given authority † over a fourth of the earth, to kill by the sword, by famine, by plague, and by the wild animals of the earth. †

THE FIFTH SEAL

9 When he opened the fifth seal, I saw under the altar the souls of those who had been slaughtered because of the word of God and the testimony they had given. † † 10 They cried out with a loud voice: “Lord, † the one who is holy and true, † how long until you judge those who live on the earth and avenge our blood? † ” 11 So they were each given a white robe, and they were told to rest a little while longer until the number would be completed of their fellow servants and their brothers and sisters, who were going to be killed just as they had been.

THE SIXTH SEAL

12 Then I saw him open † the sixth seal. A violent earthquake occurred; † the sun turned black like sackcloth † made of hair; the entire moon † became like blood; † 13 the stars † of heaven fell to the earth as a fig tree drops its unripe figs when shaken by a high wind; 14 the sky was split apart like a scroll being rolled up; † and every mountain and island was moved from its place. †

15 Then the kings of the earth, the nobles, the generals, the rich, the powerful, and every slave and free person hid in the caves and among the rocks of the mountains. † 16 And they said to the mountains and to the rocks, “Fall on us and hide us † from the face of the one seated on the throne and from the wrath of the Lamb, 17 because the great day of their † wrath has come! And who is able to stand? ” †

6:1-8 These four horsemen are portraits of divine judgment, recalling Zechariah’s riders on colored horses sent into the earth (Zch 1:8-11). Each color is symbolic of the actions of each rider: white is for victory; red for blood; black for famine; and pale green for death.

6:9 Since the blood of sacrifices was poured out at the base of the altar, the martyrs are presented as sacrificial offerings.

6:11 The message of this seal is that more believers will be martyred, but God will ultimately avenge them.

6:12-17 With allusions to various OT prophecies (consult the cross-references), the sixth seal portrays the coming of the end of the age (e.g., Is 13:10; Jl 2:10-11,31).

THE SEALED OF ISRAEL

7 After this I saw four angels † standing at the four corners of the earth, restraining the four winds of the earth † so that no wind could blow on the earth or on the sea or on any tree. 2 Then I saw another angel rising up from the east, † who had the seal of the living God. † He cried out in a loud voice to the four angels who were allowed to harm the earth and the sea:
3 “Don’t harm the earth or the sea or the trees † until we seal the servants of our God on their foreheads.” † 4 And I heard the number of the sealed:

144,000 sealed from every tribe of the Israelites: †

5 12,000 sealed from the tribe of Judah,
12,000 † from the tribe of Reuben,
12,000 from the tribe of Gad,
6 12,000 from the tribe of Asher,
12,000 from the tribe of Naphtali,
12,000 from the tribe of Manasseh,
7 12,000 from the tribe of Simeon,
12,000 from the tribe of Levi,
12,000 from the tribe of Issachar,
8 12,000 from the tribe of Zebulun,
12,000 from the tribe of Joseph,
12,000 sealed from the tribe of Benjamin.

A MULTITUDE FROM THE GREAT TRIBULATION

9 After this I looked, and there was a vast multitude from every nation, tribe, people, and language, † which no one could number, † standing before the throne and before the Lamb. They were clothed in white robes with palm branches in their hands. † 10 And they cried out in a loud voice:

Salvation belongs to our God, † who is seated on the throne, and to the Lamb!

11 All the angels stood around the throne, and along with the elders and the four living creatures they fell facedown before the throne and worshiped God, 12 saying,

Amen! Blessing and glory and wisdom and thanksgiving and honor and power and strength be to our God forever and ever. † Amen.

13 Then one of the elders asked me, “Who are these people in white robes, and where did they come from? ”

WHAT IS GLOBALIZATION?

Globalization is not merely an abstract notion used by economic and political analysts to make hypothetical claims about the world today. It has profound effects on the man in the street. Consider these examples from everyday life: • An American restaurant chain has become more popular (and profitable) outside the US.

- The latest American Idol winner is a global phenomenon, as is the top UK boy band, as is the most popular K-pop star.
- When you get on a subway train, you regularly hear languages that you cannot identify. You learn later that these languages originate from halfway around the world.
- Your child’s classmates come from many different cultural or ethnic heritages; and they are not international students.
- When you have an Internet problem and you call your service provider, the call is attended to by someone at a call center in India or the Philippines. The call is either free or charged based on your local rates.

We are regularly reminded that the physical distances that separate people have shrunk, as though the world has been compressed. We also sense that changes are taking place much faster than before. Twenty years ago, the media spoke of a globalizing world. Today we speak of a globalized world.

WHAT IS GLOBALIZATION?

Globalization is a continuing movement in which economic, technological, political, and cultural trends interpenetrate on a worldwide scale, moving the world toward the reality of becoming connected at every level. It is not an entirely new phenomenon. In the past, people living under a far-reaching governing authority such as the Roman Empire quickly developed a transnational mindset and traded with people who lived far beyond their borders. What is new today is the scale and speed of globalization.

The acceleration of globalizing tendencies became evident in the 1980s when several phenomena happened concurrently: the burgeoning of international trade, mass migration of people from poorer to richer nations, and rapid improvements in communication technology—especially the beginning of the widespread use of the Internet. These soon converged with other worldwide trends such as the deregulation of international trade and developmental efforts aimed at reducing the inequality gap between rich and poor nations.

These powerful movements have created a world in which political or geographical borders have much less impact on how people live and think. Traditional boundaries that separate countries and continents are becoming less meaningful. Although immigration authorities can still prevent a person from crossing into another country, the exchange of ideas and technologies are freed from past constraints of state control.

TECHNOLOGICAL AND ECONOMIC GLOBALIZATION

We can speak of technological, economic, ideological, cultural, and religious globalizations. Technological globalization involves universal access to communication technology. Easier access to new means of communication has flattened traditional economic inequalities. Developing nations can access such technologies, reducing the advantage of developed nations in the global economy.

Economic globalization involves the movement of capital, production, and labor across borders. Often the main players in such movements are large companies or conglomerates, rather than governments. Although there is no consensus on whether or not economic globalization has helped to reduce the wealth gap between developed and developing nations, most economists agree that globalization has helped to reduce the poverty level of many populations.

On the other hand, economic globalization is viewed by many as a threat because it is sometimes experienced as "global capitalism." This happens when those with better access to financial resources exploit the benefits of globalization, resulting in power being concentrated in the hands of large corporations.

GLOBALIZATION'S IMPACT ON CULTURE AND THE CHRISTIAN WORLDVIEW

Although the effects of technological and economic globalizations are far-reaching, ideological, cultural, and religious globalizing can change our lives in even more profound ways. For the first time, all the major ideologies of the world are experiencing a kind of "ideological tsunami," an overpowering wave of global trends that do not originate from any single location. While Christianity has long been assaulted by secularizing influences, the current scale of assault is unprecedented.

In the various strands of globalization we can discern the emergence of a new public ethos that could surpass all previous ideological, ethnic, or nationalistic codes. This new ethos is sometimes called "global hyperculture," a powerful homogenizing influence that is capable of eroding local cultures, while replacing communities with individualistic consumers. This hyperculture can impact our worldview in several ways. It can lead to the fragmentation of communities, since it pays scant attention to issues of ethnicity, and does not promote moral responsibility for one's place of belonging. It can produce a globalized spirituality in which everything is indiscriminately accepted and ethics is attempted without absolutes. Not least, it can propagate a utopian vision that celebrates human accomplishment—a vision at odds with the Christian view of the future.

Although the concept of globalization is descriptive rather than prescriptive, it must be assessed in light of the biblical worldview. We must avoid the denunciation of globalization as immoral, capitalist exploitation, but also not embrace its full acceptance that may confuse it with the promised Christian future.

RESPONDING POSITIVELY TO THE TIMES

While we are cautious about the homogenizing tendencies of globalization, we can also respond positively to the opportunities that it presents. Just as missionaries in the Age of Discovery took advantage of the infectious spirit of exploration that took hold of Europe from the fifteenth to seventeenth centuries, boarding the ships that were heading to Africa, the Americas, Asia, and Oceania, Christians can find new ministry opportunities in the twenty-first century.

First, as we enjoy the benefits of local, regional, and global connectedness, we can gain a sense of human solidarity. The (re)discovery that we are one global family leads us to ponder our basic humanity under the lordship of the one God and Father from whom and for whom all things exist (1Co 8:5-6).

Second, we can engage with the exciting challenge of understanding old truths in new ways. For instance, what does the word "neighbor" mean in globalized living (Lk 10:25-29)? What does it mean when we pray for our debts to be forgiven as we forgive our debtors (Mt 6:12)?

Third, globalization weakens the cultural and social domination of the West, since it exposes the consumer to many different cultures. For instance, informed comparison can help African or Asian Christians to become less enamored of Americanized or Europeanized Christianity, which can pave the way for a more indigenized, but globally integrated, Christianity.

Finally, global culture can complement a worldwide view of missions. Unprecedented cross-cultural contact and instantaneous communication have made it possible for Christians to share the gospel and to equip workers for the spiritual harvest in new and innovative ways. We can engage in missions from everywhere to everywhere. Urban missions and ministry can gain fresh impetus, as the massive global migration of peoples presents new opportunities to do missions at your doorstep.

CONCLUSION

A rapidly changing world is not a runaway world that is no longer in the hands of the sovereign God. He continues to sit enthroned above the earth and has the power to reduce princes to nothing (Is 40:22-23). What is more, the Christian faith is well suited to a globalized world because of its global missionary vision.

14 I said to him, "Sir, † you know."
Then he told me: These are the ones coming out of the great tribulation. † They washed their robes and made them white † in the blood of the Lamb.

The one seated on the throne will shelter † them: † 16 They will no longer hunger; they will no longer thirst;
the sun will no longer strike them, nor will any scorching heat. † 17 For the Lamb who is at the center of the throne will shepherd them; † he will guide them to springs of the waters of life, † and God will wipe away every tear from their eyes. †

7:3 The seal for servants finds its background in Ezekiel 9, functioning to separate God's servants from the faithless to protect them from the coming judgment.

7:4-8 The number 144,000, with multiples of twelve and multiples of ten (completeness), is symbolic of the entire people of God. That the tribe of Dan is missing while Joseph as well as Manasseh (Joseph's son) are listed further supports the symbolic nature of the list (see 7:9).

7:14 Daniel warned of a great tribulation to be endured when the end comes (Dn 12:1), as did Jesus (Mt 24:21).

THE SEVENTH SEAL

8 When he opened the seventh seal, there was silence † in heaven for about half an hour. 2 Then I saw the seven angels who stand in the presence of God; † seven trumpets were given to them. † 3 Another angel, with a golden incense burner, came and stood at the altar. He was given a large amount of incense to offer with the prayers of all the saints on the golden altar in front of the throne. † 4 The smoke of the incense, with the prayers of the saints, went up in the presence of God from the angel's hand. 5 The angel took the incense burner, filled it with fire from the altar, † and hurled it to the earth; there were peals of thunder, rumblings, flashes of lightning, and an earthquake. †

THE SEVEN TRUMPETS

6 And the seven angels who had the seven trumpets prepared to blow them.

THE FIRST TRUMPET

7 The first angel blew his trumpet, and hail and fire, mixed with blood, were hurled to the earth. † So a third of the earth was burned up, a third of the trees were burned up, and all the green grass was burned up. †

THE SECOND TRUMPET

8 The second angel blew his trumpet, and something like a great mountain ablaze with fire was hurled into the sea. † So a third of the sea became blood, †
9 a third of the living creatures in the sea died, and a third of the ships were destroyed.

THE THIRD TRUMPET

10 The third angel blew his trumpet, and a great star, blazing like a torch, fell from heaven. † It fell on a third of the rivers and springs of water. 11 The name of the star is Wormwood, † and a third of the waters became wormwood. So, many of the people died from the waters, because they had been made bitter.

THE FOURTH TRUMPET

12 The fourth angel blew his trumpet, and a third of the sun was struck, a third of the moon, and a third of the stars, so that a third of them were darkened. A third of the day was without light and also a third of the night. † 13 I looked and heard an eagle † flying high overhead, crying out in a loud voice, "Woe! † Woe! Woe to those who live on the earth, because of the remaining trumpet blasts that the three angels are about to sound! "

8:3-5 OT sacrificial imagery is used to portray the prayers of all the saints as a sacrifice to God (consult cross-references).

8:6 Trumpets played various roles in the life of Israel. The Jewish New Year began with the Feast of Trumpets (Lv 23:23-25), and they were used in warfare for signaling (Nm 10:8-9). Seven trumpets were used in the destruction of Jericho (Jos 6:4-20).

8:7-12 These incidents echo the plagues on Egypt during the exodus (Ex 7:14–10:29) and portray God's judgment on the earth. Wormwood, a poison or embittering agent, is used in the OT to portray judgment (Jr 9:15; 23:15; Lm 3:19) as well as the harmful effects of adultery (Pr 5:4).

THE FIFTH TRUMPET

9 The fifth angel blew his trumpet, and I saw a star that had fallen from heaven to earth. † The key for the shaft to the abyss † was given to him.
2 He opened the shaft to the abyss, and smoke came up out of the shaft like smoke from a great † furnace † so that the sun and the air were darkened by the smoke from the shaft. † 3 Then locusts came out of the smoke on to the earth, † and power † was given to them † like the power that scorpions have on the earth. † 4 They were told not to harm the grass of the earth, or any green plant, or any tree, † but only those people who do not have God's seal on their foreheads. † 5 They were not permitted to kill them but were to torment them for five months; their torment is like the torment caused by a scorpion when it stings someone. 6 In those days people will seek death and will not find it; they will long to die, but death will flee from them. †
7 The appearance of the locusts was like horses prepared for battle. † Something like golden crowns was on their heads; their faces were like human faces; [8] they had hair like women's hair; their teeth were like lions' teeth; † [9] they had chests like iron breastplates; the sound of their wings was like the sound of many chariots with horses rushing into battle; [10] and they had tails with stingers like scorpions, so that with their tails they had the power to harm people for five months. [11] They had as their king † the angel of the abyss; his name in Hebrew is Abaddon, † † and in Greek he has the name Apollyon. † [12] The first woe has passed. There are still two more woes to come after this. †

THE SIXTH TRUMPET

[13] The sixth angel blew his trumpet. From the four † horns of the golden altar † that is before God, I heard a voice [14] say to the sixth angel who had the trumpet, "Release the four angels † bound at the great river Euphrates." † [15] So the four angels who were prepared for the hour, day, month, and year † were released to kill a third † of the human race. [16] The number of mounted troops was two hundred million; † I heard their number. [17] This is how I saw the horses and their riders in the vision: They had breastplates that were fiery red, hyacinth blue, and sulfur yellow. The heads of the horses were like the heads of lions, and from their mouths came fire, smoke, and sulfur. † [18] A third of the human race was killed by these three plagues — by the fire, the smoke, and the sulfur that came from their mouths. [19] For the power of the horses is in their mouths and in their tails, because their tails, which resemble snakes, have heads that inflict injury.
[20] The rest of the people, who were not killed by these plagues, did not repent of the works of their hands † to stop worshiping demons † and idols of gold, silver, bronze, stone, and wood, † which cannot see, hear, or walk. † [21] And they did not repent of their murders, their sorceries, their sexual immorality, or their thefts.

The feared Barbarians, like the Parthians, on the edges of the Roman Empire were known for their long hair. The sting of scorpions was among the most intense pains known. Abaddon is a Hebrew name for the realm of the dead, and Apollyon means "destruction" in Greek.

9:14-17 The river Euphrates was commonly regarded as the boundary between Roman territory and that of the Parthians—the most feared enemy of Rome at this time. The Parthians were well known for their horse riders.

THE MIGHTY ANGEL AND THE SMALL SCROLL

10 Then I saw another mighty angel † coming down from heaven, wrapped in a cloud, with a rainbow † over his head. † His face was like the sun, his legs † were like pillars of fire, † 2 and he held a little scroll opened in his hand. He put his right foot on the sea, his left on the land, 3 and he called out with a loud voice like a roaring lion. When he cried out, the seven thunders raised their voices. 4 And when the seven thunders spoke, I was about to write, but I heard a voice from heaven, saying, "Seal up what the seven thunders said, † and do not write it down! " 5 Then the angel that I had seen standing on the sea and on the land raised his right hand to heaven. 6 He swore by the one who lives forever and ever, † who created heaven and what is in it, the earth and what is in it, and the sea and what is in it: "There will no longer be a delay, 7 but in the days when the seventh angel † will blow his trumpet, then the mystery of God † will be completed, as he announced to his servants the prophets." † 8 Then the voice that I heard from heaven spoke to me again and said, "Go, take the scroll that lies open in the hand of the angel who is standing on the sea and on the land."
9 So I went to the angel and asked him to give me the little scroll. He said to me, "Take and eat it; it will be bitter in your stomach, but it will be as sweet as honey in your mouth." †
10 Then I took the little scroll from the angel's hand and ate it. It was as sweet as honey in my mouth, but when I ate it, my stomach became bitter. † 11 And they said to me, “You must prophesy again about † many peoples, nations, languages, and kings.” †

10:4 While John has been permitted to record the contents of his visions, he is not allowed to write down what the seven thunders said. Not everything can be revealed yet.

10:8-11 This draws largely from Ezekiel 2:8–3:3, in which Ezekiel is also called to eat a scroll with similar results. John’s message is bitter because it is about judgment.

THE TWO WITNESSES

11 Then I was given a measuring reed † like a rod, † with these words: “Go † and measure the temple of God and the altar, and count those who worship there. 2 But exclude the courtyard outside the temple. † Don’t measure it, because it is given to the nations, † † and they will trample the holy city † for forty-two months. † 3 I will grant † my two witnesses authority to prophesy for 1,260 days, dressed in sackcloth.” † 4 These are the two olive trees and the two lampstands that stand before the Lord † of the earth. † 5 If anyone wants to harm them, fire comes from their mouths and consumes their enemies; † if anyone wants to harm them, he must be killed in this way. 6 They have authority to close up the sky so that it does not rain during the days of their prophecy. † They also have power over the waters to turn them into blood † and to strike the earth with every plague whenever they want. †

THE WITNESSES MARTYRED

7 When they finish their testimony, the beast † that comes up out of the abyss † will make war on them, conquer them, and kill them. 8 Their dead bodies † † will lie in the main street † of the great city, † which figuratively † is called Sodom † and Egypt, † where also their Lord was crucified. 9 And some of † the peoples, tribes, languages, and nations † will view their bodies for three and a half days and not permit their bodies to be put into a tomb. † 10 Those who live on the earth will gloat † over them and celebrate and send gifts to one another because these two prophets had tormented those who live on the earth.

THE WITNESSES RESURRECTED

11 But after three and a half days, the breath † of life † from God entered them, and they stood on their feet. Great fear fell on those who saw them. 12 Then they heard † a loud voice from heaven saying to them, "Come up here." They went up to heaven in a cloud, while their enemies watched them. † 13 At that moment a violent earthquake took place, † a tenth of the city fell, and seven thousand people were killed in the earthquake. The survivors were terrified and gave glory to the God of heaven.

14 The second woe † has passed. Take note: The third woe is coming soon!

THE SEVENTH TRUMPET

15 The seventh angel blew his trumpet, † and there were loud voices in heaven saying,

The kingdom of the world has become the kingdom of our Lord and of his Christ, and he will reign forever and ever. †

16 The twenty-four elders, who were seated before God on their thrones, fell facedown and worshiped God, 17 saying,

We give you thanks, Lord God, the Almighty, who is and who was, † † because you have taken your great power and have begun to reign. †

18 The nations were angry, † but your wrath has come.
The time has come for the dead to be judged and to give the reward to your servants the prophets, † to the saints, and to those who fear your name, both small and great, † and the time has come to destroy those who destroy the earth.

19 Then the temple of God in heaven was opened, and the ark of his covenant † appeared in his temple. There were flashes of lightning, rumblings and peals of thunder, † an earthquake, † and severe hail.

11:1 In biblical times, a reed was used as a measuring rod. Like Ezekiel, John sees a vision of the temple (Ezk 8:1–11:25) and is instructed to measure it.

11:4 This imagery is drawn from Zechariah 4:2–3, in which the prophet saw two lampstands and two olive trees which here represent two who stand before the Lord. The identity of these two is debated, but in Zechariah they are the two anointed to serve (Zch 4:14): the Davidic descendent Zerubbabel and the priest Joshua. These two figures are probably meant to symbolize the kingship and priesthood themes of the NT.

11:6 The powers mentioned here recall Elijah, who called down drought (1Kg 17:1), and Moses, who turned the waters of Egypt to blood (Ex 17:14-25). The Messiah was expected to be like both of these figures (Dt 18:15-18; Mal 4:5).

11:8-9 The great city refers to the home of the ungodly, in contrast to the holy city (11:2). It figuratively is called Sodom and Egypt—a city of great wickedness (Gn 19:24) and the place of Israel's oppressive slavery (Ex 3:7–9). In the ancient mind, refusing to bury the dead was one of the greatest cruelties.

11:11 God breathed the breath of life into humanity (Gn 2:7), and Ezekiel looks to the resurrection of Israel in the valley of dry bones when God will put breath in them (Ezk 37:6).

11:17-18 The certainty of a final judgment in which the people of God are vindicated, and the wicked are punished, is foundational to Christian belief. One implication of this judgment is to call Christians to faithfulness despite current persecution and suffering. See also "The Bible and Creation Care," p. 24.

THE WOMAN, THE CHILD, AND THE DRAGON

12 A great sign † appeared in heaven: † a woman clothed with the sun, with the moon under her feet and a crown of twelve stars on her head. † 2 She was pregnant and cried out in labor and agony as she was about to give birth. † 3 Then another sign † appeared in heaven: There was a great fiery red dragon † having seven heads and ten horns, † and on its heads were seven crowns. †

SATAN AND DEMONS

One of the most elucidating passages regarding Satan and demons is Revelation 12:9, which speaks of war in heaven and the ejection of the fallen angels: “The great dragon was thrown out—the ancient serpent, who is called the devil and Satan, the one who deceives the whole world. He was thrown to earth, and his angels with him.” This text comprehensively informs us from a biblical perspective of, first, who Satan and his demons are, second, what he is currently doing, and third, it foreshadows their ultimate end. This article will summarize a biblical view of Satan and demons from that threefold structure.

WHO ARE THEY?

It must be clearly and categorically affirmed that Satan is a creature, as are all demons. He is an angelic creature, a spiritual being with great power like other angels, but he is not to be confused in any way with God himself. While Job 1:6 and 2:1 refer to Satan as coming into the heavenly throne room among “the sons of God,” the phrase indicates not filial generation but fashioned subservience. To speak of the sons of God is to speak of the “heavenly army” (1Kg 22:19), who are also referred to as “angels” (Gn 32:1-2; Ps 103:20) and “spirits” (1Kg 22:21-23). The qualitative distinction between an angelic “spirit” and “the Spirit of the Lord” is both moral and dynamic (1Kg 22:24-25).

These angels are, on the one hand, “servants” (Ps 103:21), and, on the other, powerful beings (Ps 82:1; Is 14:12; Ezk 28:14). Yet, in spite of being included in the “divine assembly” (Ps 82:1) or the “assembly of the holy ones” (Ps 89:5), and thus being able to appear in his presence, the distance between God and these “sons” is infinitely qualitative. They cannot even compare to the Lord (Ps 89:6), a fact that evokes great fearfulness within them. The Lord is “more awe-inspiring than all who surround him” (Ps 89:7), exceeding them in strength as well as moral virtue (Ps 89:8). The angels are limited, so any power they have is what God has given to them (Jb 1:12; 2:6-7). The angels, as invisible creatures, are created through Jesus Christ, and given their powers by him (Col 2:16). Of course, the use or the abuse of such grants of authority to intelligent, willing creatures are two different matters, and all authorities shall one day be corrected by Jesus Christ (1Co 15:24-28).

The angels in God’s heaven are included within the “everything” that he has created (Ps 89:11). They are among his works over which he rules. Satan, under the type of the king of Tyre, himself is described as having been “created” by God (Ezk 28:15), and the term used here is bara’, which is also used in Genesis 1 to describe God’s original creative activity. The “sons of God,” among whom appears Satan, are specifically instructed to ascribe glory to God and worship him (Ps 29:1-2). Their desire to obtain such glory for themselves is at the root of the fallen angels’ expulsion from heaven. It was such arrogant pretense to worship that prompted the final break between Satan, this rebellious one among the created servile "sons of God," and Jesus Christ, the eternally generated and subsequently incarnate Son of God (Mt 3:8-11). In falling from heaven, Satan took many angels with him. They are known under the general terminology of "demons" (Gk daimonioi) and are subject to the power of Jesus Christ, who in turn granted such authority to his disciples (Lk 10:17-20).

WHAT ARE THEY DOING?

The apostle John identified the apocalyptic "dragon" with the "ancient serpent" and "Satan" and "the devil" (Rv 12:9; 20:2). With a study of the occurrence of these names in Scripture alongside the apostles' overarching description of his activity as "the one who deceives the whole world," it becomes clear what Satan and his demons have been doing and continue to do.

The first appearance of this evil one in Scripture is in the garden of Eden, where he takes on the form of a serpent (Gn 3:1). His deceptive character is immediately displayed during his conversation with the woman. He first casts doubt on the word of God (Gn 3:1), then he outright denies it (Gn 3:4), and finally he does what he can to tempt humanity to rebel against God's word (Gn 3:5). While God allowed humanity to choose to succumb to Satan's deception, he promised that the seed of the woman would crush the head of the seed of the serpent (Gn 3:15). Based on NT allusions (Rm 16:20; Rv 12:9; 20:2), this promise has often been called the protoevangelium, the first gospel promise foreshadowing the coming of the Messiah, who would overcome the serpent and sin and death, thereby providing redemption to fallen humanity (e.g., Derek Kidner, Genesis: An Introduction and Commentary [IVP, 1967], 70-71).

The Hebrew noun, satan, indicates an adversary. The verb means "to accuse." In Job 1–2, Satan adopts the role of an adversary in the heavenly court to accuse Job of following God only because God had blessed Job richly. God allows Satan power, within limits, to harm Job, in order to vindicate God's claim about Job. In Zechariah 3:1-2, Satan appears again in the courtroom of God, this time in order to accuse the high priest, Joshua, of being unfit to represent the people of God.

However, in a messianic vein, the Lord calls on the Lord's own name to rebuke Satan and remove Joshua's guilt in order to give human priests a place in the heavenly court. In 1 Chronicles 21:1, Satan incited David to take a census and prompt God's anger, while 2 Samuel 24:1 says that God was behind the event. This demonstrates that although Satan and demons are responsible for their own evil, God may sovereignly use them for his own holy purposes (cp. 1Kg 22:19-25).

The Septuagint, the Greek version of the OT, often translates the Hebrew satan with diabolos, which means "slanderer, accuser." The NT, in almost equal numbers, either transliterates the Hebrew satan or uses the Greek diabolos, which has been translated into English as "devil." Sixteen other terms for Satan have also been discovered in the NT, including Beelzebul (e.g. Mt 12:24), Belial (2Co 6:15), and Apollyon (Rv 9:11). Among the terms used to identify Satan are those that imply some authority: "ruler of the power of air" (Eph 2:2), "dominion of darkness" (Lk 22:53), and "god of this age" (2Co 4:4) (D. P. Fuller, "Satan," in International Standard Bible Encyclopedia [Eerdmans, 1988], vol. 4, 342).

Jesus Christ taught that Satan ruled this world with his demons through his deception of humanity, comparing Satan and the demons to a kingdom (Mt 12:25). The devil's falsehoods were even embraced by the Israelites. Jesus divided humanity into those who believe in him as the Word of God and those who reject him. The latter are children of "[their] father the devil" who is a "murderer" and the "father of lies," because they reject the truth of Jesus as the One who is from God the Father (Jn 8:42-47). The kingdom of God as ruled by Christ is directly opposed to the kingdom of this world as ruled by the devil.

The proper identification of each kingdom is a matter fraught with eternal importance. The blasphemy of the Holy Spirit, an unforgiveable sin, is to ascribe the work of the Holy Spirit in Christ to the devil (Mt 12:24-32). Jesus, therefore, repeatedly manifested his affinity with God and his opposition to the devil through casting out demons and healing the blind among other things (e.g., Mt 12:22-23; Jn 10:19-21). Until a person is born again, he is ruled by the spirit of Satan and remains within the kingdom of the devil (Eph 2:2). Nevertheless, the devil and his kingdom of death and Hades cannot stand against the church's assault as it proclaims to people the liberating gospel that Jesus is the Son of God who has brought God's kingdom (Mt 16:16-19).

Jesus Christ demonstrated his power over Satan and demons through his earthly ministry, but it was on the cross that he won the ultimate victory. At the cross, even while we were bound to death and ruled by Satan, Jesus paid the debt that was ours. God now delivers us into life through faith (Col 2:12-14). At the cross, Christ took away the power of the demonic authorities and disgraced them publicly, having won the victory over them on our behalf (Col 2:15; Eph 1:21-22), as permanently demonstrated in his resurrection (1Tm 3:16).

Although decisively defeated, Satan continues his work through deception, "prowling around like a roaring lion" (1Pt 5:8) and disguising himself as "an angel of light" (2Co 11:14). Even now, Satan is trying his hardest to keep people from hearing and receiving the Word of God (Mt 13:19). Moreover, Satan schemes to keep Christians from living victoriously in Christ, but God equips us to withstand demonic assaults (Eph 6:11-17) and we are called to resist the devil and stand firm in the faith (1Pt 5:9).

WHAT WILL HAPPEN TO THEM?

Although Satan and his demons have been decisively conquered by Jesus Christ, they will still do all they possibly can to persecute the church and to conquer the world, even into the last day. The book of Revelation prophesies a vivid series of apocalyptic battles that will result in the overthrow of the dragon and his imprisonment in the abyss for a thousand years (Rv 20:1-3). At the end of the millennium, Satan will be let loose for a short time to deceive the nations again, but he will be fully and completely defeated (Rv 20:7-9). His end is presented verbally as an accomplished fact: "The devil who deceived them was thrown into the lake of fire and sulfur where the beast and the false prophet are, and they will be tormented day and night forever and ever" (Rv 20:10). The hurtful deception of humanity that began in Genesis with a denial of the word of God will end with the eternal punishment of that false demonic trinity led by Satan. And the One who has accomplished that victory over Satan and his demons is Jesus Christ.

MALCOLM B. YARNELL III

4 Its tail swept away a third of the stars in heaven and hurled them to the earth. † And the dragon stood in front of the woman who was about to give birth, so that when she did give birth it might devour her child. † 5 She gave birth to a Son, a male who is going to rule † all nations with an iron rod. † Her child was caught up to God and to his throne. 6 The woman fled into the wilderness, where she had a place prepared by God, † to be nourished there † for 1,260 days. †

THE DRAGON THROWN OUT OF HEAVEN

7 Then war broke out in heaven: Michael † and his angels fought against the dragon. The dragon and his angels also fought, 8 but he could not prevail, † and there was no place for them in heaven any longer. † 9 So the great dragon was thrown out — the ancient serpent, † who is called the devil and Satan, † the one who deceives the whole world. † He was thrown to earth, and his angels with him. † 10 Then I heard a loud voice in heaven say,

The salvation and the power and the kingdom of our God and the authority of his Christ have now come, † because the accuser † of our brothers and sisters, who accuses them before our God day and night, has been thrown down.
11 They conquered him by the blood of the Lamb † and by the word of their testimony; † for they did not love their lives to the point of death. †
12 Therefore rejoice, you heavens, and you who dwell in them! †
Woe to the earth and the sea, because the devil has come down to you with great fury,
because he knows his time is short.

THE WOMAN PERSECUTED

13 When the dragon saw that he had been thrown down to the earth, he persecuted † the woman who had given birth to the male child. 14 The woman was given two wings of a great eagle, † so that she could fly from the serpent's presence to her place in the wilderness, where she was nourished for a time, times, and half a time. † 15 From his mouth the serpent spewed water like a river flowing after the woman, to sweep her away with a flood. 16 But the earth helped the woman. The earth opened its mouth and swallowed up the river that the dragon had spewed from his mouth. 17 So the dragon was furious with the woman and went off to wage war † against the rest of her offspring † † — those who keep the commands of God † and hold firmly to the testimony about Jesus. †

12:1-6 Greek, Roman, and Egyptian mythologies contained stories about a woman giving birth to a god and a dragon opposing them. Thus, this picture would be familiar in its basic outline. This story, however, draws directly from the OT. Israel is represented by the woman who gives birth to the Messiah, while the devil seeks to destroy the Messiah.

12:1 Being clothed with the sun represents the woman's heavenly nature (1:16; 10:1). The crown of twelve stars represents the twelve tribes of Israel.

12:3 The imagery of the red dragon recalls Daniel's vision of the fourth beast (Dn 7:7), and is often understood to represent the Roman Empire. The dragon's ten horns represent satanic power, since only God's enemies are associated with the number ten.

12:4 This image seems to parody a Greek myth about the dragon Python, who chased the goddess Leto, pregnant with Apollo. Four days after his birth, Apollo slayed the dragon.

12:5 Psalm 2:7-9 looks to the anointed Son (the Messiah) who will rule the nations with an iron rod.

12:7 See "A Biblical View of Angels," p. 1531.

12:9 Satan is introduced (though already mentioned in 2:9-10,24; 3:9), revealing the identity of the great dragon. The imagery of the ancient serpent comes from Genesis 3, in which the serpent deceives Eve.

12:10 The name Satan means "adversary," and he is depicted as a prosecuting attorney in several OT scenes (e.g., Jb 1:6-12). He is the accuser of believers.

12:11 Victory over the accuser is achieved since Satan can no longer accuse those who have been washed clean by the blood of the Lamb (7:14). The word of their testimony confirms that they belong to the Lamb, Jesus Christ. See "Speaking to a Non-Christian about Jesus," p. XXXV.

12:14 The woman's escape to the wilderness recalls Israel's exodus from Egypt on eagles' wings (Ex 19:4). Time, times, and half a time is a phrase taken from Daniel 12:7. It is an unspecified period.

12:17 This verse shows that the woman represents Israel, since her other children (in addition to the Messiah) are those who believe in the Messiah, Jesus.

13 And I saw a beast coming up out of the sea. † It had ten horns and seven heads. On its horns were ten crowns, † † and on its heads were blasphemous names. † † 2 The beast I saw was like a leopard, its feet were like a bear's, and its mouth was like a lion's mouth. † The dragon gave the beast his power, his throne, and great authority. 3 One of its heads appeared to be fatally wounded, but its fatal wound was healed.

The whole earth was amazed and followed the beast. † 4 They worshiped the dragon † because he gave authority to the beast. And they worshiped the beast, saying, “Who is like the beast? † Who is able to wage war against it? ”

5 The beast was given a mouth to utter boasts and blasphemies. † It was allowed to exercise authority † † for forty-two months. † 6 It began to speak † blasphemies against God: to blaspheme his name and his dwelling — those who dwell in heaven. 7 And it was permitted to wage war against the saints and to conquer them. † It was also given authority † over every tribe, people, language, and nation. † 8 All those who live on the earth will worship it, everyone whose name was not written from the foundation of the world in the book † of life † of the Lamb who was slaughtered. † †

9 If anyone has ears to hear, let him listen. †

10 If anyone is to be taken captive, into captivity he goes.
If anyone is to be killed † with a sword, with a sword he will be killed. †

This calls for endurance † and faithfulness from the saints. †

THE BEAST FROM THE EARTH

11 Then I saw another beast coming up out of the earth; it had two horns like a lamb, † † but it spoke like a dragon. 12 It exercises all the authority of the first beast on its behalf and compels the earth and those who live on it to worship the first beast, whose fatal wound was healed. 13 It also performs great signs, † even causing fire to come down from heaven to earth in front of people. † 14 It deceives those who live on the earth † because of the signs that it is permitted to perform in the presence of the beast, † telling those who live on the earth to make an image † of the beast who was wounded by the sword and yet lived. 15 It was permitted to give breath † to the image of the beast, so that the image of the beast could both speak and cause whoever would not worship the image of the beast to be killed. † 16 And it makes everyone — small and great, rich and poor, free and slave — to receive a mark on his right hand or on his forehead, † 17 so that no one can buy or sell unless he has the mark: the beast's name or the number of its name.

18 This calls for wisdom: † † Let the one who has understanding calculate † the number of the beast, because it is the number of a person. Its number is 666. †

13:1-3 The description of this beast draws from the four beasts described in Daniel 7:3-8. Its blasphemous names would have evoked the image of the Roman Empire for John's readers, since Roman emperors such as Domitian demanded to be called "Lord and God." Its seven heads represent rulers of the beast's kingdom. The head with the fatal wound that had healed parodies the Lamb (5:6). Also, many at that time expected Nero, who had died earlier, to return. In fact, several imposters arose claiming to be Nero.

13:5-8 The beast is described in terms that point to the complete authority and false worship of the Roman Empire.

13:11-12 If the first beast refers to Roman power (13:5-8), this second beast represents the imperial cult that called for the worship of the emperor. It compels all people to worship the first beast.

13:14-15 The image of the beast recalls Nebuchadnezzar's command to worship an image he established in Babylon (Dn 3:1-7). As with Nebuchadnezzar's image, whoever would not worship the image of the beast would be killed.

13:16-17 A mark commonly indicated ownership of a slave or devotion to a religion. Participation in the imperial cult was required in order to do business in various parts of Asia Minor.

13:18 Various ideas have been suggested for the meaning of 666, but it is difficult to be certain. The number could be a parody of the use of seven in this book for the things of God, or it could allude to the common first-century practice of calculating numeric values for words or names (gematria). In the latter case, the number could refer to Nero.

THE LAMB AND THE 144,000

14 Then I looked, and there was the Lamb, standing on Mount Zion, † and with him were 144,000 who had his name and his Father's name written on their foreheads. † 2 I heard a sound † from heaven like the sound of cascading waters † and like the rumbling of loud thunder. The sound I heard was like harpists playing on their harps. † 3 They sang † a new song † before the throne and before the four living creatures and the elders, † but no one could learn the song except the 144,000 who had been redeemed from the earth. 4 These are the ones who have not defiled themselves with women, since they remained virgins. † These are the ones who follow the Lamb wherever he goes. They were redeemed † from humanity as the firstfruits † for God and the Lamb. 5 No lie was found in their mouths; they are blameless. †

THE PROCLAMATION OF THREE ANGELS

6 Then I saw another angel † flying high overhead, † with the eternal gospel to announce to the inhabitants of the earth — to every nation, tribe, language, and people. † 7 He spoke with a loud voice: † "Fear God † and give him glory, † because the hour of his judgment has come. † Worship the one who made heaven and earth, † the sea and the springs of water."

8 And another, a second angel, followed, saying, "It has fallen, Babylon the Great † has fallen. † She made all the nations drink the wine of her sexual immorality, † which brings wrath." †

9 And another, a third angel, followed them and spoke with a loud voice: "If anyone worships the beast and its image and receives a mark on his forehead or on his hand, 10 he will also drink the wine of God's wrath, which is poured full strength into the cup of his anger. † He will be tormented with fire and sulfur † in the sight of the holy angels and in the sight of the Lamb, 11 and the smoke of their torment will go up forever and ever. † There is no rest † † day or night for those who worship the beast and its image, or anyone who receives the mark † of its name. 12 This calls for endurance from the saints, † who keep God's commands and their faith in Jesus." †

13 Then I heard a voice from heaven saying, "Write: Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord from now on." †

"Yes," says the Spirit, "so they will rest from their labors, since their works follow them."

REAPING THE EARTH'S HARVEST

REAPING THE EARTH'S HARVEST

14 Then I looked, and there was a white cloud, and one like the Son of Man † † was seated on the cloud, with a golden crown on his head and a sharp sickle in his hand. 15 Another angel came out of the temple, crying out in a loud voice to the one who was seated on the cloud, "Use your sickle and reap, for the time to reap has come, since the harvest of the earth is ripe." † 16 So the one seated on the cloud swung his sickle over the earth, and the earth was harvested.
17 Then another angel who also had a sharp sickle came out of the temple in heaven. 18 Yet another angel, who had authority over fire, came from the altar, and he called with a loud voice to the one who had the sharp sickle, "Use your sharp sickle and gather the clusters of grapes from the vineyard of the earth, because its grapes have ripened." 19 So the angel swung his sickle at the earth and gathered the grapes from the vineyard of the earth, and he threw them into the great winepress of God's wrath. † 20 Then the press was trampled outside the city, and blood flowed out of the press up to the horses' bridles for about 180 miles. † †

14:1 Mount Zion is the temple mount. On the 144,000, see the note on 7:4-8. These people have the name of the Lamb and his Father's name on their foreheads, in contrast to those who have the mark of the beast on their foreheads (13:16; 14:9).

14:2-3 See "A Biblical View of Music," p. 727.

14:4 According to Deuteronomy 23:9-10 and 1 Samuel 21:5, Israelite soldiers were instructed to maintain ritual purity before going into battle, which included abstaining from sex. Those who follow the Lamb are pure for spiritual holy war. It does not mean that the followers of the Lamb are literally virgins.

14:8 Babylon was the capital of the Persian Empire that overthrew Jerusalem in 586 BC. The city symbolizes rebellion against God at the level of political institutions, i.e., the empire. Here the symbol points to Rome (cp. 1Pt 5:13). The fall of Babylon the Great occurs in chapter 18, making this statement a forecast of its demise.

14:14-16 The one like the Son of Man clearly refers to Jesus (1:13; Dn 7:13). The harvest imagery is used in the OT as a symbol for judgment (Jl 3:13; Jr 51:33).

PREPARATION FOR THE BOWL JUDGMENTS

15 Then I saw another great and awe-inspiring sign † in heaven: † seven angels with the seven last plagues; for with them God's wrath will be completed. † 2 I also saw something like a sea of glass † mixed with fire, and those who had won the victory over the beast, its image, † and the number of its name, were standing on the sea of glass with harps from God. † 3 They sang the song of God's servant Moses † and the song of the Lamb:

Great and awe-inspiring are your works,
Lord God, the Almighty;
just and true † are your ways, King of the nations. † †
4 Lord, who will not fear and glorify your name?
For you alone are holy. †
All the nations will come and worship before you † because your righteous acts have been revealed.

5 After this I looked, and the heavenly temple — the tabernacle of testimony † — was opened. † 6 Out of the temple came the seven angels with the seven plagues, dressed in pure, bright linen, with golden sashes wrapped around their chests. 7 One of the four living creatures gave the seven angels seven golden bowls filled with the wrath of God who lives forever and ever. † 8 Then the temple was filled with smoke from the glory of God and from his power, † and no one could enter the temple until the seven plagues of the seven angels were completed.

15:3 Two songs of Moses are known in the OT (Ex 15:1-18; Dt 32:1-43). This song is described as the song of God's servant Moses and the song of the Lamb, indicating the unity of old and new covenants.

15:6 The seven angels are described as wearing priestly attire in the heavenly temple.

15:8 In the OT, the tabernacle and the temple were filled with the glory of God in the form of a cloud, such that people could not enter (Ex 40:34-35; 1Kg 8:10-11).

THE FIRST BOWL

16 Then I heard a loud voice from the temple saying to the seven angels, † "Go and pour out the seven † bowls † of God's wrath on the earth." 2 The first went and poured out his bowl on the earth, and severely painful sores † broke out on the people who had the mark of the beast and who worshiped its image.

THE SECOND BOWL

3 The second † poured out his bowl into the sea. It turned to blood like that of a dead person, and all life in the sea died. †

THE THIRD BOWL

4 The third † poured out his bowl into the rivers and the springs of water, and they became blood. † 5 I heard the angel of the waters say,

You are just,
the Holy One, † who is and who was, † because you have passed judgment on these things.
6 Because they poured out the blood of the saints and the prophets, † you have given them blood to drink;
they deserve it! †

7 I heard the altar say,

Yes, Lord God, the Almighty, true and just are your judgments. †

THE FOURTH BOWL

8 The fourth † poured out his bowl on the sun. It was allowed to scorch people with fire, 9 and people were scorched by the intense heat. So they blasphemed the name of God, † who has the power † over these plagues, and they did not repent and give him glory. †

THE FIFTH BOWL

10 The fifth † poured out his bowl on the throne of the beast, † and its kingdom was plunged into darkness. † People † gnawed their tongues because of their pain 11 and blasphemed the God of heaven † because of their pains and their sores, but they did not repent of their works.

THE SIXTH BOWL

12 The sixth † poured out his bowl on the great river Euphrates, † and its water was dried up † to prepare the way for the kings from the east. 13 Then I saw three unclean spirits like frogs † coming from the dragon's mouth, † from the beast's mouth, † and from the mouth of the false prophet. † 14 For they are demonic spirits performing signs, † who travel to the kings of the whole world to assemble them † for the battle on the great day of God, the Almighty. † 15 "Look, I am coming like a thief. Blessed † is the one who is alert and remains clothed † † so that he may not go around naked and people see his shame." † 16 So they assembled the kings at the place called in Hebrew, Armageddon. † †

THE SEVENTH BOWL

17 Then the seventh † poured out his bowl into the air, † and a loud voice came out of the temple † † from the throne, saying, "It is done!" 18 There were flashes of lightning, rumblings, and peals of thunder. And a severe earthquake occurred like no other since people have been on the earth, so great was the quake. † 19 The great city † split into three parts, and the cities of the nations † fell. Babylon the Great was remembered in God's presence; he gave her the cup filled with the wine of his fierce anger. † 20 Every island fled, and the mountains disappeared. † 21 Enormous hailstones, each weighing about a hundred pounds, † fell from the sky on people, and they blasphemed God † for the plague of hail because that plague was extremely severe. †

16:2 Like the trumpet plagues, the bowl plagues borrow imagery from the plagues inflicted on Egypt during the exodus. Painful sores recalls the sixth Egyptian plague (Ex 9:8-11).

16:3-4 The sea turning to blood recalls the first Egyptian plague (Ex 7:17-21).

16:10-11 Darkness recalls the ninth Egyptian plague (Ex 10:21-23). It was also an eschatological image used by Jesus (Mt 25:30).

16:12 For John's readers, the kings from the east would naturally refer to the Parthians, the greatly feared people who lived just beyond the Euphrates.

16:13 Frogs recall the second Egyptian plague, which the Egyptian magicians were able to replicate through occult practices (Ex 8:1-14). The three unclean spirits are a false trinity coming from the mouths of the dragon, the beast, and the false prophet.

16:15 On the thief imagery, see the note on 3:3.

16:16 The gathering of the nations against God is a common OT theme (see Ps 2). The referent of Armageddon is debated, but most likely it refers to the valley of Megiddo, a key crossing point in northern Israel and the location of several significant OT battles.

16:21 Hailstones recall the seventh Egyptian plague (Ex 9:22-26).

THE WOMAN AND THE SCARLET BEAST

17 Then one of the seven angels who had the seven bowls † came and spoke with me: "Come, I will show you the judgment of the notorious prostitute † † who is seated on many † waters. † 2 The kings of the earth † committed sexual immorality with her, and those who live on the earth became drunk on the wine of her sexual immorality.” † 3 Then he carried me away in the Spirit † † to a wilderness.

I saw a woman sitting on a scarlet beast that was covered † with blasphemous names and had seven heads and ten horns. † 4 The woman was dressed in purple and scarlet, adorned with gold, jewels, and pearls. † She had a golden cup in her hand filled with everything detestable † and with the impurities of her † prostitution. 5 On her forehead was written a name, a mystery: † Babylon the Great, the Mother of Prostitutes and of the Detestable Things of the Earth. 6 Then I saw that the woman was drunk with the blood of the saints and with the blood of the witnesses to Jesus. † When I saw her, I was greatly astonished.

THE MEANING OF THE WOMAN AND OF THE BEAST

7 Then the angel said to me, “Why are you astonished? I will explain to you the mystery of the woman and of the beast, with the seven heads and the ten horns, that carries her. 8 The beast that you saw was, and is not, and is about to come up from the abyss † and go to destruction. † Those who live on the earth whose names have not been written in the book of life from the foundation of the world † will be astonished when they see the beast that was, and is not, and is to come. † 9 This calls for a mind that has wisdom. † † “The seven heads are seven mountains on which the woman is seated. They are also seven kings: 10 Five have fallen, one is, the other has not yet come, and when he comes, he must remain for only a little while. 11 The beast that was and is not, is itself an eighth king, but it belongs to the seven and is going to destruction. 12 The ten horns you saw are ten kings † who have not yet received a kingdom, but they will receive authority as kings with the beast for one hour. † 13 These have one purpose, and they give their power and authority to the beast. 14 These will make war against the Lamb, but the Lamb will conquer them because he is Lord of lords and King of kings. † Those with him are called, chosen, and faithful.” † 15 He also said to me, “The waters you saw, † where the prostitute was seated, are peoples, multitudes, nations, and languages. † 16 The ten horns you saw, and the beast, will hate the prostitute. † They will make her desolate and naked, devour her flesh, and burn her up with fire. † 17 For God has put it into their hearts to carry out his plan by having one purpose † and to give their kingdom † to the beast until the words of God are fulfilled. † 18 And the woman you saw is the great city that has royal power over the kings of the earth."

17:1-6 The OT used the image of a prostitute for powerful, rich pagan nations that oppressed people (Is 23:17-18; Nah 3:4). John's readers would understand this as Rome, though it can apply to other oppressive regimes throughout history.

17:4 Being dressed in bright, expensive clothes and precious jewels is a standard expectation of a prostitute in the ancient world.

17:5 Babylon was the capital of the Persian Empire, which captured Jerusalem in 586 BC. It became a symbol of institutional rebellion against God, and here the word is understood to point to Rome (14:8; cp. 1Pt 5:13).

17:8 That the beast . . . was, and is not, and is about to come parodies the eternal God who is and was and is to come (1:4,8).

17:9 It was well known that Rome had been founded on seven hills (mountains). The identity of the seven kings is problematic, and it may be symbolic. The number seven is frequently used symbolically in the book.

17:10 See the note on 17:8.

17:18 In John's day, the great city would clearly refer to Rome.

THE FALL OF BABYLON THE GREAT

18 After this I saw another angel with great authority coming down from heaven, † and the earth was illuminated by his splendor. 2 He called out in a mighty voice:

It has fallen, †

Babylon the Great has fallen! †
She has become a home for demons, a haunt for every unclean spirit,
a haunt for every unclean bird, and a haunt † for every unclean and despicable beast. † † 3 For all the nations have drunk † the wine of her sexual immorality, which brings wrath. †
The kings of the earth have committed sexual immorality with her, and the merchants of the earth have grown wealthy from her sensuality and excess. †

4 Then I heard another voice from heaven:

Come out of her, my people, so that you will not share in her sins † or receive any of her plagues.
5 For her sins are piled up † to heaven, † and God has remembered her crimes. † 6 Pay her back the way she also paid, † and double it according to her works. † In the cup in which she mixed, † mix a double portion for her.
7 As much as she glorified herself and indulged her sensual and excessive ways, give her that much torment and grief.
For she says in her heart,
“I sit as a queen;
I am not a widow,
and I will never see grief.” † 8 For this reason her plagues will come in just one day — death and grief and famine. †
She will be burned up with fire, † because the Lord God who judges † her is mighty. †

THE WORLD MOURNS BABYLON'S FALL

9 The kings of the earth who have committed sexual immorality and shared her sensual and excessive ways will weep and mourn over her when they see the smoke from her burning. 10 They will stand far off in fear of her torment, † saying,

Woe, woe, the great city, †
Babylon, the mighty city!
For in a single hour your judgment has come.

11 The merchants of the earth will weep and mourn over her, because no one buys their cargo any longer — 12 cargo of gold, silver, jewels, and pearls; fine linen, purple, silk, and scarlet; all kinds of fragrant wood products; objects of ivory; objects of expensive wood, brass, † iron, and marble; 13 cinnamon, spice, † incense, myrrh, † and frankincense; wine, olive oil, fine flour, and grain; cattle and sheep; horses and carriages; and slaves — human lives. †

14 The fruit you craved has left you.
All your splendid and glamorous things are gone; they will never find them again.

15 The merchants of these things, who became rich from her, will stand far off in fear of her torment, weeping and mourning, 16 saying,

Woe, woe, the great city,
dressed in fine linen, purple, and scarlet, adorned with gold, jewels, and pearls; † 17 for in a single hour such fabulous wealth was destroyed!

And every shipmaster, seafarer, the sailors, and all who do business by sea, stood far off 18 as they watched the smoke from her burning and kept crying out:
"Who was like the great city?" † 19 They threw dust on their heads and kept crying out, weeping, and mourning, †

Woe, woe, the great city, †

where all those who have ships on the sea became rich from her wealth; for in a single hour she was destroyed.
20 Rejoice over her, heaven, and you saints, apostles, and prophets, † because God has pronounced on her the judgment † she passed on you!

THE FINALITY OF BABYLON'S FALL

21 Then a mighty angel † picked up a stone like a large millstone and threw it into the sea, saying,

In this way, Babylon the great city will be thrown down violently † and never be found again. † 22 The sound of harpists, musicians, flutists, and trumpeters will never be heard in you again; †
no craftsman of any trade will ever be found in you again;
the sound of a mill
will never be heard in you again;
23 the light of a lamp will never shine in you again;
and the voice of a groom and bride
will never be heard in you again. †
All this will happen because your merchants were the nobility of the earth, because all the nations were deceived by your sorcery.
24 In her was found the blood of prophets and saints, † and of all those slaughtered on the earth. †

18:3 Sexual immorality is here associated with wealth and excess, drawing a connection between luxury and sensuality (18:7,9). It was well known that many Caesars indulged in luxury and debauchery, for which Nero was especially notorious.

18:4-8 Though institutions of rebellion against God may seem stable and triumphant at certain times, judgment will come for those who flaunt God's ways. The current illusion of success must not tempt God's people to share in her sins.

18:13 Rome was the center of slave trafficking in the first century.

18:16-17 All of Rome's wealth will not help on the day judgment comes. So will it be for all who rise up against God, who trust in earthly security and treasure.

18:19-24 In many ways, Rome represented the height of human accomplishment by that point in history. Yet, like the tower of Babylon (Gn 11:1-9), it stood in opposition to God and was brought low. Human might and achievement is fleeting; it cannot thrive in opposition to God.

CELEBRATION IN HEAVEN

19 After this I heard something like the loud voice of a vast multitude † in heaven, saying,

Hallelujah! †
Salvation, glory, and power belong to our God, † 2 because his judgments are true † and righteous, † because he has judged the notorious prostitute † who corrupted the earth with her sexual immorality; and he has avenged the blood of his servants that was on her hands. †

3 A second time they said,

Hallelujah!
Her smoke ascends forever and ever! †

4 Then the twenty-four elders and the four living creatures fell down and worshiped God, † who is seated on the throne, saying,

Amen! Hallelujah! †

5 A voice came from the throne, saying,

Praise our God,
all his servants, and the ones who fear him, both small and great! †

6 Then I heard something like the voice of a vast multitude, like the sound of cascading waters, † and like the rumbling of loud thunder, saying,

Hallelujah, because our Lord God, the Almighty, reigns! † 7 Let us be glad, rejoice, and give him glory, † because the marriage of the Lamb has come, and his bride has prepared herself. †
8 She was given fine linen to wear, bright and pure. †

For the fine linen represents the righteous acts of the saints. †
9 Then he † said to me, † "Write: Blessed are those invited to the marriage feast † of the Lamb!" He also said to me, "These words of God are true." †
10 Then I fell at his feet to worship him, but he said to me, "Don't do that! † I am a fellow servant with you and your brothers and sisters who hold firmly to the testimony of Jesus. † Worship God, because the testimony of Jesus is the spirit † of prophecy."

THE RIDER ON A WHITE HORSE

11 Then I saw heaven opened, † and there was a white horse. Its rider is called Faithful and True, † and he judges and makes war with justice. † 12 His eyes were like a fiery flame, † and many crowns † were on his head. † He had a name written that no one knows except himself. † 13 He wore a robe dipped in blood, † and his name is called the Word of God. † 14 The armies that were in heaven followed him on white horses, wearing pure white linen. 15 A sharp † sword † came from his mouth, so that he might strike the nations with it. † He will rule † them with an iron rod. † He will also trample the winepress of the fierce anger of God, † the Almighty. 16 And he has a name written on his robe and on his thigh: KING OF KINGS AND LORD OF LORDS. †

THE BEAST AND ITS ARMIES DEFEATED

17 Then I saw an angel standing in the sun, and he called out in a loud voice, saying to all the birds flying high overhead, "Come, gather together for the great supper of God, 18 so that you may eat the flesh of kings, the flesh of military commanders, the flesh of the mighty, the flesh of horses and of their riders, and the flesh of everyone, both free and slave, small and great." †

19 Then I saw the beast, the kings of the earth, and their armies † gathered together to wage war † against the rider on the horse and against his army.
20 But the beast was taken prisoner, and along with it the false prophet, who had performed the signs in its presence. He deceived those who accepted the mark of the beast and those who worshiped its image with these signs. † Both of them were thrown alive into the lake of fire that burns with sulfur. † 21 The rest were killed with the sword that came from the mouth of the rider on the horse, and all the birds ate their fill of their flesh.

19:1-5 The people of God rejoice in the vindication of God's judgment because wickedness is finally brought to an end. Hallelujah is a Hebrew word found in the Psalms, meaning "praise the Lord."

19:3 The smoke that ascends forever and ever indicates the eternal nature of Babylon's judgment.

19:7-8 The purity of the bride of the Lamb stands in direct contrast to the immorality of the prostitute in chapter 18. Those who hoped in the prostitute mourned, while those who hope in the Lamb celebrate as the Lamb now receives his bride. The image of marriage commonly refers to God's relationship with his people (Is 49:18; Jr 2:2). This image is transfigured in the NT with Jesus as the groom and the church as his bride (Eph 5:23). See also "A Biblical View of Marriage," p. 1449.

19:10 Angelic beings throughout Scripture are careful not to receive worship. This makes Jesus's willingness to receive worship all the more significant (1:17; Jn 20:28-29). See "A Biblical View of Angels," p. 1531.

19:11-16 This is the final invasion, for which the other battles are precursors. The KING OF KINGS now appears to bring all to its proper conclusion.

19:11 A white horse represented victory in the ancient world.

19:13 The name Word of God recalls the personified Word in John 1:1,14.

19:15 Isaiah 11:4 depicts the Messiah killing the wicked with a scepter from his mouth, while Psalm 2:9 says that God's Son will break the nations with an iron scepter.

19:17-18 The great supper of God involves carnivorous birds that will eat the flesh of God's conquered enemies.

19:21 The rider's sword slays his enemies, resembling the slaughter of Gog's destruction, after which God invited carnivorous birds to eat their fill of riders and soldiers (Ezk 39:20).

SATAN BOUND

20 Then I saw an angel coming down from heaven holding the key to the abyss † and a great chain † in his hand. 2 He seized the dragon, that ancient serpent who is the devil and Satan, † † and bound † him for a thousand years. 3 He threw him into the abyss, closed it, and put a seal on it † so that he would no longer deceive the nations † until the thousand years were completed. After that, he must be released for a short time.

THE SAINTS REIGN WITH CHRIST

4 Then I saw thrones, and people seated on them who were given authority to judge. † I also saw the souls of those † who had been beheaded because of their testimony about Jesus † and because of the word of God, who had not worshiped the beast or his image, and who had not accepted the mark on their foreheads or their hands. † They came to life † and reigned with Christ for a thousand years. † 5 The rest of the dead did not come to life until the thousand years were completed.

This is the first resurrection. 6 Blessed † and holy is the one who shares in the first resurrection! The second death † has no power † over them, but they will be priests of God and of Christ, and they will reign with him for a thousand years. †

SATANIC REBELLION CRUSHED

7 When the thousand years are completed, Satan will be released from his prison
8 and will go out to deceive the nations † at the four corners of the earth, † Gog and Magog, to gather them for battle. † Their number is like the sand of the sea. † 9 They came up across the breadth of the earth and surrounded the encampment of the saints, the beloved city. † Then fire came down from heaven † and consumed them. † 10 The devil who deceived them was thrown into the lake of fire and sulfur where the beast and the false prophet are, † and they will be tormented day and night forever and ever. †

THE GREAT WHITE THRONE JUDGMENT

11 Then I saw a great white throne and one seated on it. Earth and heaven fled from his presence, and no place was found for them. † 12 I also saw the dead, the great and the small, standing before the throne, and books were opened. † Another book was opened, which is the book of life, † and the dead were judged according to their works † by what was written in the books. 13 Then the sea gave up the dead that were in it, and death and Hades † gave up the dead that were in them; each one was judged according to their works. 14 Death and Hades were thrown into the lake of fire. † This is the second death, the lake of fire. † 15 And anyone whose name was not found written in the book of life was thrown into the lake of fire.

20:1-3 See “A Biblical View of Angels,” p. 1531.

20:2 The imprisoning of rebellious angelic beings was commonly described in Jewish literature (e.g., 1 Enoch). On the ancient serpent, see the note on 12:9. The interpretation of the thousand years has been debated since the early centuries of the church. It may be symbolic for the final period of divine activity. See also “Satan and Demons,” p. 1611.

20:4-5 Those who had not worshiped the beast are raised with Christ and reign with him for a thousand years. Described as the first resurrection, this is the resurrection of the righteous. A second resurrection is thereby implied, which will see the unrighteous raised for the purpose of judgment (Jn 5:28-29).

20:6 The reign of the righteous was seen by Daniel: "The kingdom, dominion, and greatness of the kingdoms under all of heaven will be given to the people, the holy ones of the Most High" (Dn 7:27).

20:8 Gog, the prince of Magog, appears in Ezekiel 38–39 as the final enemy of Israel. Thus, Gog and Magog appear in many Jewish texts. It is not certain who John has in mind here; perhaps it is simply an image for the last enemy.

20:9-10 No uncertainty surrounds the final outcome of the rebellion against God. The finality of God's victory, and the destruction and torment of the devil and those who follow him, offers hope to oppressed people to persevere. Isaiah states that the wicked will burn, and no one can quench the fire (Is 1:31; 66:24; cp. Mk 9:48). See also "Spiritual Warfare," p. 1454.

20:11 This judgment scene recalls Daniel 7:9-10, in which the Ancient of Days executes judgment as the heavenly books are opened.

20:12 The idea of records of human deeds was common in Jewish literature (e.g., Dn 7:10). Daniel speaks of the book of life, which records the names of those who will be delivered (Dn 12:1). The opening of the books means that all will be revealed, as judgment is executed according to their works by what was written in the books.

20:14 Death and Hades themselves will be destroyed (cp. 1Co 15:26). The second death is an eternal lake of fire and is the fate of the wicked (Jn 5:28-29).

20:15 The Bible is clear about the reality of hell. Its lake of fire is a sobering reminder of the necessity of evangelism and a reminder of what believers have been rescued from.

THE NEW CREATION

21 Then I saw a new heaven and a new earth; † for the first heaven and the first earth had passed away, † and the sea was no more. † 2 I also saw the holy city, † the new Jerusalem, coming down out of heaven from God, † prepared like a bride adorned for her husband. † 3 Then I heard a loud voice † from the throne: † † Look, God's dwelling † is with humanity, and he will live with them. They will be his peoples, † † and God himself will be with them and will be their God. † 4 He will wipe away every tear from their eyes. † Death will be no more; † grief, crying, and pain will be no more, † because the previous things † have passed away. † 5 Then the one seated on the throne said, "Look, I am making everything new."
He also said, "Write, because these words † are faithful and true." † 6 Then he said to me, "It is done! † I am the Alpha and the Omega, † the beginning and the end. † I will freely give to the thirsty † from the spring of the water of life. † 7 The one who conquers † will inherit these things, and I will be his God, and he will be my son. † 8 But the cowards, faithless, † detestable, murderers, sexually immoral, sorcerers, idolaters, and all liars † — their share will be in the lake that burns with fire and sulfur, † which is the second death." †

THE NEW JERUSALEM

9 Then one of the seven angels, who had held the seven bowls filled with the seven last plagues, † came and spoke with me: "Come, I will show you the bride, the wife of the Lamb." 10 He then carried me away in the Spirit † † to a great, high mountain † and showed me the holy city, Jerusalem, coming down out of heaven from God, 11 arrayed with God's glory. † Her radiance was like a precious jewel, like a jasper stone, clear as crystal. 12 The city had a massive high wall, with twelve gates. Twelve angels were at the gates; the names of the twelve tribes of Israel's sons were inscribed on the gates. 13 There were three gates on the east, three gates on the north, three gates on the south, and three gates on the west. † 14 The city wall had twelve foundations, and the twelve names of the twelve apostles of the Lamb were on the foundations.

15 The one who spoke with me had a golden measuring rod † to measure the city, its gates, and its wall. † 16 The city is laid out in a square; its length and width are the same. He measured the city with the rod at 12,000 stadia. † Its length, width, and height are equal. 17 Then he measured its wall, 144 cubits according to human measurement, which the angel used. 18 The building material of its wall was jasper, and the city was pure gold clear as glass. 19 The foundations of the city wall were adorned with every kind of jewel: † the first foundation is jasper, the second sapphire, the third chalcedony, the fourth emerald, 20 the fifth sardonyx, the sixth carnelian, the seventh chrysolite, the eighth beryl, the ninth topaz, the tenth chrysoprase, the eleventh jacinth, the twelfth amethyst. 21 The twelve gates are twelve pearls; each individual gate was made of a single pearl. The main street † of the city was pure gold, transparent as glass.

THE ETERNAL STATE

The reigning worldview of contemporary secularism—rooted in Darwinian naturalism—assumes that death is itself natural and that it is a final end. The biblical perspective is startlingly different, revealing that death is an unnatural enemy, a predator stalking a human race meant to live forever. In the crucified and resurrected Jesus of Nazareth, death is undone and the cosmos redeemed.

The biblical story tells us that God imposed the curse of death as a result of the insurrection of the primal human pair, Adam and Eve (Gn 3:8). God had instructed Adam not to partake of "the tree of the knowledge of good and evil" (Gn 2:17), so when Adam and Eve rejected this prohibition and ate, God exiled them from his presence. He placed a fiery sword at the entrance of the garden precisely so that the sinful human race would no longer have access to the tree of life and thus be consigned forever to their devil-imaging, walking death (Gn 3:22-24).

After the fall, the entire universe revolted at its created kings and queens, no longer obediently heeding the reign of humanity. Disease, natural disaster, animal attack, and the like seem normal to us now; such is the only reality we've known, but the Bible says this reign of death is not natural, and it is not permanent. What seems to be normal is not actually how things are supposed to be.

Some religions have asserted that humans are reincarnated in a cycle of lives. Some have taught that the final goal of human existence is a personality-nullifying absorption into the cosmos itself. Others have envisioned a shadowy, otherworldly existence beyond the grave. Atheistic systems see human consciousness ending, like that of an animal, with the cessation of bodily life. The gospel of Jesus Christ, however, teaches that every human will end up in one of two possible eternal states: that of blessing or that of curse (Mt 13:41-43).

HELL

The Bible speaks of hell as a reality of indescribable torment. This place was not created initially for humanity, but instead, as Jesus puts it, for the devil and his angels (Mt 25:41). Those who choose the headship of Satan as their god and who share in his nature will join the devil in his inheritance. The Bible says that this is the fate of all of us if we are left to ourselves (Eph 2:1-3). It is not possible for us to earn salvation through good works (Gl 2:16).

The Bible uses various images to convey the horror of hell. In his Patmos vision, John sees it as a "lake of fire" (Rv 20:14). Jesus called hell a place of "outer darkness" filled with "weeping and gnashing of teeth" (Mt 8:12). He also compared it to a Middle Eastern trash heap, a place where there is no end to the torment of the damned, for "their worm does not die, and the fire is not quenched" (Mk 9:48).

Those outside of Christ find themselves in punishment immediately upon death, as pictured in Jesus's account of the rich man and Lazarus (Lk 16:19-31). This intermediate state of torment, awful as it is, is not the final accounting, however. At the end of the age, the damned are resurrected and face trial before the great white throne of Christ himself (Rv 20:11-15). The sinner will give an account for every idle word, thought, and deed, as well as his or her response to Jesus himself (e.g., Mt 12:36). Sinners are then sentenced to the judgment they have already pronounced on themselves—exile from the presence of God and into the lake of fire. This eternal curse means suffering that is corporeal as well as spiritual, emotional, and psychological. Hell is not something that humans create for themselves on this earth. Hell is the reality of God's justice and wrath, and it reflects the dignity of the human: each person must be held accountable for decisions made.

HEAVEN

The distinction between those who inherit damnation and those who, as the Bible puts it, "inherit the earth," is found in obedience to the will of God, summed up in loving the Lord and loving neighbor (Mk 12:28-31). Nevertheless, the depravity of humanity is such that every human, with the exception of Jesus, is found guilty as a lawbreaker, and is thus deserving of hell (Rm 3:10-18). Unlike the rest of us, Jesus of Nazareth lived a life of obedience to the law of God. He did this for our sake and died under the curse of the law for our sins, so that the punishment that was due to us fell on him instead, securing salvation for all who place their faith in him. At his resurrection and ascension, Jesus was crowned the rightful King of the universe. Those who approach God, hidden in Jesus by faith, are already judged righteous; thus, their sentence to hell is cancelled and God's justice is reconciled to his mercy. Those in Christ also now share in his life, in his resurrection, and in his inheritance.

Immediately after death, believers find themselves in the presence of God, a present reality known by Christians as "heaven" (see Jesus's words to the repentant thief on the cross in Lk 23:43 and Paul's comments about his desires in Php 1:23). This disembodied existence of blessedness is not, however, the eternal state of those in Christ. God did not send Christ into the world to condemn the world, but to save it (Jn 3:17). The final state of redeemed humanity is life in a renewed cosmos, free from the curse and under the reign of Christ and his joint-heirs (Rv 21).

THE NEW EARTH

At the resurrection from the dead, believers join Jesus in his resurrection life—including the restoration of their bodies. This doctrine was doubted by the Sadducees in Jesus's era, and he refuted their stance in a memorable encounter (Mk 12:18-27). At the end times heaven and earth are joined in a new earth that is transfigured by the presence and glory of God in Christ. This eternal reality is not merely a restoration of Eden, but a glorious civilization with a city in which the glory of the nations redeemed are brought into it. This presumably means that every aspect of culture will be present there. We reasonably may imagine this means music, painting, literature, architecture, commerce, agriculture, and any other worthy aspect of human endeavor will be practiced there and freed from sin, made holy in undiluted service to God.

While the Bible keeps much of the future from us, presumably because our minds at this point could not comprehend it, we know that the eternal state of those in Christ is one that includes work and labor (though freed from the frustration of the curse), personal relationships, worship, and ruling and reigning with Christ. The Bible uses the imagery of a wedding feast to signify the feasting and celebrating of the age to come (Rv 19:6-9).

In this everlasting age, God's covenants will be seen to have come to a climax in the identity and mission of Christ Jesus, and his reign will be all encompassing. The kingdoms of this world, as the apostle John was shown in the Revelation vision, will become the kingdom of our Lord and of his Christ, and he shall reign forevermore (Rv 11:15).

22 I did not see a temple in it, because the Lord God the Almighty and the Lamb are its temple. 23 The city does not need the sun or the moon to shine on it, because the glory of God illuminates it, and its lamp is the Lamb. † 24 The nations † will walk by its light, † and the kings of the earth will bring their glory into it. † † 25 Its gates will never close by day because it will never be night there. † 26 They will bring the glory and honor of the nations into it. † †

27 Nothing unclean will ever enter it, † nor anyone who does what is detestable or false, but only those written in the Lamb's book of life. †

21:1 The first beast had come out of the sea, which represented the chaotic forces of evil for Israel, a non-seafaring people. The new heaven and new earth (Is 65:17; 66:22) have no place from which such evil can arise since the sea was no more. See also "The Apocalyptic and the Environment," p. 1565.

21:3-4 That God's dwelling is with humanity is the fulfillment of the plan of redemption, the purpose of the tabernacle and temple, and what the prophets foretold (Ezk 37:27; Zch 2:11). What was lost in Eden is now restored and the effects of the fall (death, grief, crying, and pain) are no more. See "Fall and Redemption," p. 12.

21:6 See the note on 1:8.

21:7 This is the only reference to inheritance and sonship in the book, but these are prominent themes elsewhere in the NT (Rm 8:17; Gl 4:76). Inheritance was a matter of great seriousness in the ancient world.

21:8 These sins relate to the moral climate faced by the churches in Asia Minor. Sexual immorality and idolatry were advocated by the Nicolaitans and by Jezebel (2:14,20-21). Some believers may have compromised with their unbelieving community; here they are warned of the consequences.

21:9-11 The wife of the Lamb, arrayed with God's glory, stands in stark contrast to the great prostitute of chapter 18.

21:12-14 The bride is called a city because she represents not one person but a people. The reference to both the twelve tribes and the twelve apostles indicates that the people of God across both covenants are in view.

21:15-16 The measuring of the city alludes to Ezekiel 40. The city is a cube (equal in length, width, and height), thus corresponding to the holy of holies in the temple, where the presence of God dwelt. Now the whole city, the area in which all the people live, will house the full manifest presence of God.

21:19-20 The use of twelve jewels was common in the OT and later Jewish literature for referring to the twelve tribes of Israel (e.g., Ex 28:17-20; 39:10-13). Also, the use of precious stones depicts the majestic glory of the city.

THE SOURCE OF LIFE

22 Then he showed me the river † of the water of life, † clear as crystal, † flowing from the throne of God and of the Lamb † 2 down the middle of the city's main street. The tree of life was on each side of the river, bearing twelve kinds of fruit, producing its fruit every month. † The leaves of the tree are for healing the nations, † 3 and there will no longer be any curse. †
The throne of God and of the Lamb will be in the city, and his servants will worship him. 4 They will see his face, † and his name will be on their foreheads. † 5 Night will be no more; † people will not need the light of a lamp or the light of the sun, because the Lord God will give them light, † and they will reign forever and ever.

THE TIME IS NEAR

6 Then he said to me, "These words are faithful † and true. † The Lord, the God of the spirits of the prophets, † has sent his angel to show his servants what must soon take place." †

7 "Look, I am coming soon! † Blessed is the one who keeps the words of the prophecy of this book." †

8 I, John, am the one who heard and saw these things. When I heard and saw them, I fell down to worship at the feet of the angel who had shown them to me.
9 But he said to me, "Don't do that! I am a fellow servant with you, your brothers the prophets, and those who keep the words of this book. Worship God! " †

10 Then he said to me, "Don't seal up the words of the prophecy of this book, because the time is near. † 11 Let the unrighteous go on in unrighteousness; let the filthy still be filthy; let the righteous go on in righteousness; let the holy still be holy." †

12 "Look, I am coming soon, and my reward is with me † to repay each person according to his work. † 13 I am the Alpha and the Omega, † the first and the last, † the beginning and the end. †

14 "Blessed † are those who wash their robes, † so that they may have the right to the tree of life and may enter the city by the gates. 15 Outside are the dogs, †

the sorcerers, the sexually immoral, the murderers, the idolaters, and everyone who loves and practices falsehood. †

16 "I, Jesus, have sent my angel to attest these things to you for the churches. I am the root † and descendant of David, † the bright morning star." †

17 Both the Spirit and the bride say, "Come!" Let anyone who hears, say, "Come!" Let the one who is thirsty come. Let the one who desires take the water of life freely. †

18 I testify to everyone who hears the words of the prophecy of this book: If anyone adds to them, God will add to him the plagues that are written in this book. 19 And if anyone takes away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God will take away his share of the tree of life and the holy city, which are written about in this book. †

20 He who testifies about these things † says, "Yes, I am coming soon."

Amen! Come, Lord Jesus! †

21 The grace of the Lord Jesus † be with everyone. † Amen. †

22:1 The river of the water of life recalls the river that flowed from Eden (Gn 2:10).

22:2 The tree of life was restricted from human access after Adam and Eve sinned in the garden (Gn 3:22), thus preventing eternal life. Now the tree is restored to human access and provides healing for the nations.

22:3 The curse laid on Adam and Even after their sin is now lifted (Gn 3:16-19).

22:10 Sometimes prophetic books were to be sealed so that they could not be read until later (e.g., Dn 12:4,9). However, this book is to be made available to all people now.

22:13 See the note on 1:8.

22:14 Those who wash their robes contrast those who defiled their garments (3:14; 14:4). Their robes are washed in the blood of the Lamb (7:14).

22:17 This powerful book closes with an evangelistic plea: Come! Those who are cleansed have the right to enter into this blessedness, but those who remain outside face judgment (22:14-15). The water of life recalls Isaiah 55:1, now symbolizing life for the members of the new covenant.

22:18-19 In an age without copyright laws, warning formulas were common in ancient sacred texts (cp. Dt 12:32).
